THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE,

The Firſt Part.

WHEREIN IS FIRST GENERALLY SHEWED THE MALICE, POWER AND THE POLITIKE STRATAGEMS OF THE ſpirituall Enemies of our ſaluation, Satan and his Aſsiſtants, the World and the Fleſh, with the meanes alſo whereby the Chriſtian may withſtand and defeat them.

AND AFTERWARDS MORE SPECIALLY THEIR PARTICVLAR TENTATIONS, againſt the ſeuerall cauſes and meanes of our Saluation, whereby on the one ſide, they allure vs to Securitie and Preſumption, and on the other ſide, draw vs to Doubting and Deſperation; are expreſſed and anſwered.

TO THE RIGHT REVEREND FATHER IN GOD

GEORGE,

LORD BISHOP OF DERIE,

in the Realme of IRELAND, I.D. his only and moſt louing Brother wiſheth all preſent happineſſe and future bleſſedneſſe.

T*He life of a true Chriſtian (Right Reuerend) is full of labour and trouble, and this accompanied with daily dangers. And as it is truly ſaid of all the ſonnes of* Adam, that man is borne to labour and trouble, as the ſparkes flie vpward, Iob 5.7 hauing (as it were) by inheritance from their great Grand-father his toilſome ſweat, as well as his ſinfull corruption; ſo is it in more ſpeciall manner the lot and portion of the ſecond Adam, and of all the children which God hath giuen him, according to the Heb.2.13 new Birth by ſpirituall Regeneration. For as himſelfe was worne out with labours, loaded with afflictions, tried and almoſt tired with tentations and troubles; and purſued, euerie day, and in euery place, with bitter perſecutions, euen to the taking away of his precious life, and ſo by his Croſſe paſſed to his Crowne: ſo he hath appointed that all his redeemed ſhould tract him in the ſame afflicted way, and pledge him in the ſame bitter Cup; only with this difference, that he drunke of it a deeper draught, euen to the very dregs, and hath left vnto vs a leſſer quantity and better relliſhed. For his was ſo imbittered with his Fathers wrath due to our ſins, that he may truly put to vs that queſtion (as of a thing impoſsible) which hee once asked of his Math.20.22. two Diſciples, Are yee able to drinke of that Cup which I ſhall drinke of? But ours is ſweetned with the infuſion of his Merits, which taketh death out of the pot, euen the bitterneſſe of ſin, and with the influences of his Fathers fauour which conuerteth all our afflictions to our good, and maketh of theſe deadly poyſons, ſoueraigne cordials, by tempering them with the bloud of this innocent Lambe. Howbeit ſome remain- Col.1.24. ders there are behind of the afflictions of Chriſt, that we alſo with the Apoſtle muſt fill vp in our fleſh, which though they be ſmall and light, being compared with the ſufferings of our Head, yet are they many and heauy, in reſpect of our abilities to beare them, cauſing vs oftentimes to ſweat vnder our burthen, and in our preſent ſenſe, to complaine with the Apo- 2.Cor.1.8. ſtle, that we are preſſed out of meaſure and aboue ſtrength, in ſo much as we deſpaire of life. And theſe are the lot and portion not only of ſome of Gods children, but of all who either will imbrace holineſſe in this life, or expect happines in the life 2.Tim.3.14. to come; For all that will liue Godly in Chriſt Ieſus ſhall Acts44.22. ſuffer perſecution; and wee muſt by much tribulation enter into the Kingdome of God. Of all which labours, and troubles; afflictions and perſecutions incident (as it were) in a ſpeciall manner to the faithfull, as wee haue had the experience of all former ages; ſo haue we not only predictions of the like for future times to the very end of the World in the holy Scriptures, ſhewing that they ſhall be, but alſo diuers compariſons illuſtrating their nature, and qualities, and the ſtate and condition of thoſe that beare them. For our liues are compared to the dayes of an hireling, or mercenary labourer, who taketh great paines, and toileth from morning to night, not like a Free-holder, who ſuiteth his worke according to his owne will, but like a ſeruant who denying himſelfe is in all things to ſubmit Iob 7.1. and 14.6. to his Maſters pleaſure. Neither are their labours like thoſe of ſome Artificers, who though they take but ſlight paines Pſal.126.5, 6. and by fits, are able to ſubſiſt and to maintaine their charge liberally with their eaſie gettings: But like the Husbandmans, which as it is toileſome and troubleſome, ſo tedious and neuer at an end. Neither doth the Chriſtian take this paines amongſt his Domeſtiques and familiar Friends, whoſe ſweet ſocietie might lighten his labours, but farre abſent from home among Gen.47.9. Pſal.119.54. and 39.12. 1.Pet.2.11. ſtrangers. In regard whereof the Chriſtian in the Scriptures is compared to a Pilgrime or Trauailer, and his life to a tedious and painfull pilgrimage; in which he meeteth with few friends and many dangers, finding in all places harſh vſage and hard entertainment, and running many hazards by reaſon of Theeues and Robbers that lie in his way. Yea, hee trauaileth not only like a Pilgrime amongſt ſtrangers; but alſo like a Souldier through the thickeſt of his mortall enemies, who daily encounter him, and with their continuall aſſaults on all ſides labour to hinder him in his Chriſtian march, all which he muſt conquer before he can obtaine the Crowne of victorie.

Eſay 41.2. 2.Cor.10.4. 1.Tim.1.18. And in this reſpect the Chriſtians life is compared to a Warfare, in which he acteth the part both of a painfull pioner in toileſome labour, and of the valiant Souldier in a dangerous fight, herein like vnto Nehemiah's Builders, who were equally prepared to doe the Lords worke and to fight his battailes. For hee is aſſaulted on all ſides, with many and mighty enemies, who with might and mayne indeuour his deſtruction. The Deuill 1.Pet.5.8. (with whole Legions of infernall ſpirits) goeth about like a roaring Lion ſeeking to deuoure him, and caſts continually againſt him his fiery darts of tentations which would mortally pierce and wound him, if they were not quenched and beaten backe with the ſhield of faith. The World joyneth with him in this fight, and miniſtreth vnto him his moſt preuayling weapons:
yea, it ſelfe furiouſly aſſaulteth euery true Chriſtian both on the right hand with tentations of proſperity, and on the left with afflictions and perſecutions. The Fleſh like a ſecret Traytour is ready to betray him, and to ſet open the gates of his ſoule to let in thoſe profeſſed Enemies, when as they come againſt him and giue the aſſault. The which as it ſhould moue euery Chriſtian to ſhake off ſecurity, and ſtanding vpon his continuall watch to be prepared for the fight, ſeeing there is no time for eaſe and retchleſneſſe, where there is no place free from danger; ſo ſhould it ſtirre vp Gods faithfull Miniſters who are appointed Captaines ouer the Lords Armies, to traine vp all thoſe committed to their charge in this Military Diſcipline, whereby they may be fitted for this Chriſtian Warfare; and to teach them the nature of their ſpirituall Enemies, their power and policies, and how they may ſo put on their Armour and vſe their Weapons, that they may ſtand with courage and comfort in the day of battaile, in hope and aſſurance of obtaining victorie. This I haue indeauoured in this Worke, to traine vp others that are vnskilfull in this Militarie Diſcipline, and to arme the weake Chriſtian againſt the aſſaults of theſe perni-Iob 4.3,4. cious Enemies, ſtrengthening the weake hands and feeble knees, and vpholding him who is ready to fall; and that I may by this eſſay (not vndertaken heretofore by any that I know of) ſtirre vp ſome other of the Lords greateſt Worthies who are of farre better abilities, to vndertake this profitable, yet difficult taske, and to bring what I haue begun to greater perfection. The which my Labours in their ſeuerall Parts, I haue in their firſt publiſhing, dedicated to ſeuerall Patrones, as their worth deſerued, and my particular obligations bound me; and now comming againe to the Preſſe to bee publiſhed ioyntly in one Volume, I haue made choice of your Lordſhip my only and moſt deare Brother, to bee the Patrone of the whole Worke, and thoſe new Additions annexed vnto it. For to whom is it better due than vnto your ſelfe, by whom as Gods chiefeſt meanes and inſtrument I haue obtained all my poore abilities of effecting this or any other worke of my Miniſterie. For when God inclined my heart to follow my ſtudies, who was deſtinated by my Friends to another calling, you chiefly encouraged and enabled me in this courſe of comming to the Vniuerſitie, where you became my louing, carefull and painfull Tutour (as you were to many others;) and ſhining vnto vs not only in the light of Learning, but alſo of a Religious life and Chriſtian conuerſation, you did not only inlighten our vnderſtandings with humane knowledge, but alſo were a notable inſtrument, through Gods bleſſing, to worke our hearts to a loue of all goodneſſe by Your inſtructions, gouernment, and exemplary vertues. Yea, after I came to more maturitie, You were my chiefeſt helpe to direct me in my ſtudies of Diuinitie, and afterwards my principall, if not only, pattern and precedent in the exerciſe of my Miniſterie, whom I propounded for imitation, though in a great diſtance, being neuer able with my beſt endeuours to attaine vnto the leaſt part of Your perfections. All which I ingenuouſly, and with a ſingle and ſimple heart, without the leaſt deſire of inſinuation or affectation of Flatterie (as God knoweth) publiſh vnto the World, that being otherwiſe vnable to pay the leaſt part of my debts, I may leaue them vpon this my accompt by an humble and thankefull acknowledgement, vntill the reckoning of that laſt and great Audit, when as our Supreame Soueraigne ſhall giue you a full recompence of reward for all the good, which he by your meanes hath communicated to my ſelfe and many others. In the meane time I hauing by your helpe and aſſiſtance (next vnder God) beene enabled to worke, doe gratefully dedicate vnto you theſe fruits of my Labours, as being not only moſt worthie of this reſpect, but alſo beſt able to defend that which is true and right, and to amend whatſoeuer is amiſſe; earneſtlie deſiring of our gracious and good God the long continuance of your happie daies, that you may ſtill remaine a notable Inſtrument of his Glorie, and the Churches good in this World, that ſo after this life ended you may bee crowned with glorie and immortalitie in the life to come, when as wee ſhall be no more ſeparated by Land and Water, but ſhall for euer and euer enjoy one anothers ſocietie withall other the bleſſed Saints and Angels, and be eternally happie in the Viſion and Fruition of the bleſſed Trinitie; To whom I giue all glorie and praiſe for making Mee a poore Inſtrument of his Glorie in this and other my Labours, and vouchſafing mee the honour of being,

Your Lordſhips louing and moſt reſpectiue Brother,

IOHN DOWNAME.

TO THE ZEALOVS, AND SINCERE PROFESSORS OF GODS
TRVE RELIGION,

S. THOMAS SMITH,
Knight,
Gouernour of the Muſcouie and Eaſt Indie Companies, and Treaſurer of the new Plantation in Virginea; Sir
IOHN SCOT, Knight, and their Ladies; ROBERT CHAMBERLAINE Eſquire, and ANNE his Wife, his welbeloued and moſt reſpected friends: I. D. wiſheth the fruition of all true comforts of this life, and eternall happines in the life to come.

MAnifold (Right Worſhipfull) and moſt dangerous are the tentations and aſſaults of our ſpirituall enemies, whereby they labour to hinder the ſaluation of Gods Elect, and to increaſe the greatnes of their helliſh Dominions, by withdrawing (if it were poſsible) Gods ſeruants from their Subiection and Allegeance, and making them their ſlaues and perpetuall Vaſſals. To this end they take indefatigable paines; going continually about ſeeking whom they may deuoure; ſometime like roaring Lions, compelling by violent force, and ſometimes like old Serpents, alluring and deceiuing with treacherous policies. Neither doe they reſt in the time of our reſt, but waking and ſleeping they ſet vpon vs, one while inticing vs to ſwallow the poyſon of ſinne, with the ſugred baits of worldly vanities; and another while driuing vs into their ſnares of perdition, with the ſharpe pricking goads of miſery and affliction. Before vs they ſet carnall pleaſures, deceiuing riches, and vaine Honours, to allure vs to come into the broad way that leadeth to deſtruction: and behind vs they hold the three-ſtringed Whip of Loſſe, Shame, and Puniſhment, to keepe vs from going backe, and to haſten vs with winged ſpeed to run forward in this helliſh iournie. Neither doe they greatly care what path we chuſe in this common way of perdition; whether the ſpacious way of ſecurity and preſumption, or the ſtrait path of horrour and deſperation; whether the toyling way of vnſatiable couetouſneſſe; or the ſoft faire way of bewitching pleaſures; whether the open way of Worldlineſſe and Atheiſme, or through the hidden thickets of Hypocriſie and diſsimulation: in a word, they regard not in what way we walke, ſo we goe forward in the wayes of ſinne; for though they ſeeme diuers and contrarie one to another, yet they haue all the ſame end, meeting together in Hell and Deſtruction. And howſoeuer they cannot with all their malice, power, and policies, attaine vnto their deſires by bringing Gods Elect and faithfull ones to perdition and endleſſe miſery; becauſe God their heauenly Father who hath taken vpon him their protection fruſtrateth all their ſubtill policies with his All-ſeeing Wiſdome, and withſtandeth all their might with his Almightie power; yet doe they exceedingly with their aſſaults and tentations, foile, vexe and trouble them; by working in ſome, forgetfulneſſe of God and of themſelues, ſecurity, and careleſſe retchleſneſſe; and turmoyling others with horrible feares, deſperate doubtings, and bitter agonies. Whereby it commeth to paſſe, that the one ſort ſecurely go on in ſin, forgetting the end of their Creation, Redemption, and holy Vocation, vnto which God hath called them, vntill with Salomon they haue found in the end of their Worldly delights, nothing but vanitie and vexation of ſpirit: and the other are ſo affrighted, aſtoniſhed, and continually tormented with doubtings, feares, and the continuall aſſaults of their ſpirituall Enemies, that they goe mourning all the day long, pining away in griefe and anguiſh of minde, till at laſt they grow weary of their liues, thinking their ſoules an intolerable burthen to their bodies, and their bodies to the earth. The conſideration of which lamentable and too too miſerable effects, as it ſhould moue all Chriſtians to ſtand vpon their guard, and to arme themſelues with the ſpirituall Armour, that they may not be ouercome of their tentations, and fall into theſe great miſchiefes: ſo ſhould it moue Gods faithfull Miniſters (whoſe dutie it is, not only themſelues to walke in the wayes of righteouſneſſe, but alſo as ſpirituall guides to lead others with them) in diſcharge of their conſcience before God, and in Chriſtian commiſeration and compaſsion towards their Brethren, to vſe all good meanes both by ſpeaking and writing, whereby they may be preſerued and freed from theſe ſnares which their ſpirituall enemies doe lay to intrap them; by beating downe with the Cannon-ſhot of Gods threatnings, the high forts of their proud preſumption, and rouzing them out of the deepe ſlumber of retchleſſe ſecuritie; as alſo by raiſing vp and comforting thoſe that mourne in Sion, ſtooping, yea, lying groueling vnder the heauy burthen of their ſinnes. The which howſoeuer it is performed by many in reſpect of their ſeuerall charges committed to them; and ſome alſo haue briefly touched ſome points in writing, which concerned the comforting and raiſing vp of their priuate friends; yet not any (that I know of) haue in our language largely and generally handled theſe Controuerſies, and ſpirituall Conflicts betweene the Chriſtian and the enemies of his ſaluation, for the common good of the whole Church. And therefore hauing with Elihu long waited to ſee if thoſe who were more ancient, better experienced, and more richly furniſhed with Gods Gifts and Graces than my ſelfe, would vndertake this Worke, which is to God moſt acceptable, and to his Saints and Children ſo profitable and neceſſarie: at length after others long ſilence, I reſolued to ſpeake, and no longer to conceale ſuch true comforts, as God hath reuealed vnto mee; to the end that hereby I might releeue and comfort thoſe who are poore in ſpirit, and humbled in the ſight of ſinne; or at leaſt by offering willingly to this vſe my ſmall Mite, I might giue an occaſion vnto others better able, to vnlocke and open their rich treaſuries, that they may beſtow vpon their poore Brethren their great Talents and Gifts of better value. The which my Labours as I did not raſhly vndertake, ſo I haue not ſuddenly finiſhed them; for almoſt three yeeres ſince, I purpoſed to take this Worke in hand, which I haue now, by Gods aſſiſtance, finiſhed; but at firſt (I confeſſe) I intended not that it ſhould come into publike view; but onely (as others before mee) propounded as the end of my Labours, the comforting and raiſing vp of a moſt faithfull Seruant of God, and my moſt deare Friend, who hath bound mee with many benefits to the performance of all Chriſtian duties. But afterwards finding it to grow to ſuch a Volume, that it was too great to paſſe in a written Copie; and hoping that that which was profitable for one might be beneficiall vnto many, at length I reſolued to make my Labours publike by committing them to the Preſſe. The principall things that I propounded to my ſelfe in this Treatiſe are theſe; firſt and ſpecially I endeauour to comfort thoſe who are afflicted in conſcience, in the ſight and ſenſe of their ſinnes by offering vnto them certaine aſſurance, that their ſinnes are remitted, and that themſelues are elected to eternall life, in the ſtate of Grace, reconciled vnto God in Chriſt, and receiued into his loue and fauour. Secondly, I labour to lead the Chriſtian in an euen courſe, vnto the Hauen of eternall Happineſſe; that he may not runne aſide, neither on the right hand, and ſo falling vpon the rocks of preſumption make ſhipwracke of his ſoule; nor yet on the left hand, and ſo plunge himſelfe into the Gulfe of deſperation. Wherein I haue purpoſely and aduiſedly auoided their practice, who ſcatter their conſolations they know not where, to be applied they care not by whom; whereof it commeth to paſſe that thoſe that are moſt ſecure and preſumptuous arrogate them, to whom they doe not appertaine; and thoſe that are afflicted and humbled dare not appropriate them to themſelues; becauſe they are deliuered indefinitely to all, without all caution or any condition, whereby they might be reſtrained rather to them than any other in whom ſinne yet liueth and raigneth. Wherein they reſemble negligent Phyſicians, who hauing made a good medicine for a ſicke man, doe not giue it vnto him, but caſt it careleſly into ſome corner, whither the ſicke patient in reſpect of his faintneſſe and weakneſſe is likely neuer to come: which being found and greedily drunken vp by thoſe who haue no need of it, in ſteed of doing them good doth turne to their bane and vtter deſtruction. Laſtly, I haue deſired to giue ſolid and ſubſtantiall Conſolations, which are firmely grounded vpon Gods vndoubted Truth, and ſuch infallible reaſons as cannot be gain-ſaid; and haue withall deliuered the conditions, vpon which they are to be receiued, and the vndoubted ſignes and markes of thoſe, to whom of right they appertaine; to the end that thoſe who find theſe things in themſelues, may not doubt to apply them to their wounded Conſciences, whereby they may bee ſoundly cured and throughly comforted; and that thoſe who find no ſuch condition obſerued by them, nor any ſuch ſigne or marke in them, may be debarred from participating of theſe Conſolations, which would nouriſh in them Security and Preſumption; and contrariwiſe examining themſelues according to theſe Rules, and finding no correſpondencie between themſelues and them, may hereby be awakened out of their Lethargie of Securitie, and attaining vnto a ſight and ſenſe of their miſerable eſtate may neuer be at reſt, till by vſing all good meanes for this purpoſe, they may find theſe markes and ſignes of their Election, Vocation, Iuſtification, and Sanctification in them, that ſo they may boldly and fitly apply vnto themſelues theſe comforts and conſolations as rightly and truly appertaining vnto them. All which my Labours I thought good to dedicate vnto your Worſhips, partly, becauſe I deſired to giue this teſtimony of my true thankfulneſſe, for thoſe manifold benefits which from ſome of you I haue receiued, and of mine vnfained loue which I beare to you all, for your Vertues and approued Godlineſſe; and partly becauſe I thought none fitter to whom I might commend this Diſcourſe of the Chriſtian Warfare, than your Selues who are old experienced Souldiers in fighting theſe Spirituall battailes, and therefore haue iudiciall feeling and ſenſible apprehenſion of thoſe things which I haue written and commended to your Patronage. Now the Lord our God, who is the Fountaine of all goodneſſe, and the Sole Giuer of all true Conſolation, increaſe in you more and more the Gifts and Graces of his Sanctifying Spirit, and ſo fill your hearts with all ſound Spirituall Comfort, and the Ioy in the Holy Ghoſt, that you may through the courſe of your whole liues, cheerefully goe forward in the profeſſion and ſincere practice of his Religion and true Godlineſſe, and after this life may receiue that Crowne of Righteouſneſſe, which is prepared and laid vp for you in his Kingdome of eternall Glorie. Amen.

Your Worſhips in the Lord

moſt aſſured,

Iohn Downame.

TO THE CHRISTIAN READER.

CHriſtian Reader, hauing beene incouraged by diuers, no leſſe godly than iudicious, who haue peruſed theſe my poore labours, and giuen them their approbation; and not a little comforted in my ſelfe, in that, through Gods bleſſing, I haue beene a meanes of comforting others, for the refreſhing of whoſe fainting ſoules I chiefly intended all my paines; I was made the more willing this fourth time to reuiew them, for thy further benefit, and not onely to purge them from many faults which eſcaped in the three former impreſſions, but alſo to adde ſome things which ſeemed wanting in the former Editions, as diuers other ſtrategems of Sathan vſed in his aſſaulting weake Chriſtians. As alſo certaine generall meanes whereby the weake Chriſtian may bee enabled to withſtand our ſpirituall enemies, added to the two & twentieth Chapter of the firſt Booke; & ſome comfortable preſeruatiues againſt deſperation, added to the thirtie ſixt Chapter of the ſecond Booke, beſides many other enlargements of particular points not before ſo fully handled; which in the table of the Contents are thus marked. * Now if any ſhall complaine, that theſe many editions and additions, doe make the Booke too chargeable to ſuch buyers as deſire to haue the beſt; to ſuch I anſwere that in this reſpect I were worthy blame, if by my greateſt labour and ſtudy I could haue perfected this worke at the firſt: but ſeeing this practicall and experimentall diuinitie needeth not ſo much reading and ſtudying, (eſpecially there being ſo little written of this argument) as conference, obſeruation and experience; I hope I ſhall not deſerue to be cenſured, if vſing theſe helpes, I haue laboured to bring this worke to more perfection, which without them were altogether impoſſible. Eſpecially conſidering that though this be better, yet the former editions are not in themſelues, or for their vſe that haue them, worſe than they were before. Neither did I thinke it fit to deferre the ſetting forth of this treatiſe, till by putting my laſt hand vnto it, I ſhould haue brought it to the greateſt perfection I was able, ſeeing I did write as well for the comfort of thoſe then liuing (many of which might dye before the worke could be perfected) as of thoſe who are yet vnborne; vnto whom if I might by my labours deriue any ſpirituall good, and ſo further the ſaluation of any one ſoule; I ſhould thinke it a matter of much more worth and importance, than the ſparing of a little corruptible coyne: eſpecially ſeeing there are few ſo poore that haue bought the former editions, who haue not ſome poorer friend vpon whom they may beſtow them. But now Chriſtian Reader know, that I haue put to this worke my laſt hand, hauing no purpoſe (in reſpect of my age, weakeneſſe and many imployments) any more to inlarge or alter it, and the rather becauſe I haue taken great paines both in adding many things which by experience I found neceſſarie, for the comforting of afflicted conſciences, and ſtrengthning them againſt Sathans tentations, and in correcting the whole worke and purging it from many faults which were crept into the former editions. All which my labours I commend to the good bleſſing of our gracious God, and both thee and my ſelfe to his mercifull and al-ſufficient protection.

Thine in the Lord,

§ 6. That wee muſt pray earneſtly, and with feruency of ſpirit, ibid.
§ 7. That wee muſt pray in humility, whereby wee ſubmit our wils to the will of God, p.822
§ 8. That we muſt vſe perſeuerance in prayer, p.823

Chap. VI.

That God is the chiefe cauſe and principall authour of all our afflictions.

§ 1. That God pre-ordaineth vs to ſuffer afflictions, p.824
§ 2. That God executeth this decree, and actually layeth theſe afflictions vpon vs, p.825
§ 3. That it ought much to comfort vs, in that our afflictions come from God, the chiefe goodneſſe, p.826
§ 4. That we muſt not looke onely to inferior cauſes, but principally to God, p.827

Chap. VII.

That all our afflictions are ruled and diſpoſed by Gods moſt wiſe, juſt, and gracicious prouidence, and of the comfort which ariſeth from this conſideration.

§ 1. That all things befall vs by Gods appointment, p.829
§ 2. 3. That Gods prouidence doth rule all inferiour cauſes of our afflictions both vnreaſonable and reaſonable, p.830
§ 4. That Gods prouidence ouerruleth the actions and intentions of wicked men, p. 831
§ 5.6. Why God rather vſeth wicked inſtruments, than correcteth by his owne hand, p.832
§ 7. How it will ſtand with Gods juſtice to puniſh wicked men for hauing beene his inſtruments in executing his judgements, p.833
§ 8. That we are not vtterly to neglect the inferiour cauſes of our afflictions, p.834
§ 9. That the Lord ſo diſpoſeth the ends of inferiour cauſes, that he maketh them ſerue for his ſupreme ends, namely his glory and our ſaluation, p. 835
§ 10. That Gods prouidence ordereth and diſpoſeth of all our afflictions, both in reſpect of their manner, meaſure and continuance. p.836

Chap. VIII.

Of the meritorious cauſe of our afflictions which is our ſinne.

§ 1. That ſinne is the deſeruing cauſe of all our afflictions, p.837
§ 2. That though God doe not alwayes afflict vs for ſinne; yet this is the beſt vſe which we can make of afflictions to aſcribe them to our ſinnes. p.838
§ 3. That all our afflictions muſt bring vs to a ſight of ſin and repentance for it, not onely in generall but alſo in particular, p 839
§ 4. That much comfort ariſeth from the conſideration of the meritorious cauſe of afflictions, firſt becauſe wee haue no juſt cauſe of mourning, ſeeing Gods juſtice and truth is manifeſted, and wee receiue no wrong, p.840
§ 5. Their objection anſwered, who ſay that they ſuffer as innocents, ibid.
§ 6. That God inflicteth on vs farre lighter puniſhments than our ſinnes deſerue, p.842
§ 7.8. Of the hainouſneſſe of ſinne, ibid.
§ 9.10. That ſinne is moſt odious to God, and contrary to his pure nature, p.845
§ 11. That wee are guilty of all manner of ſinne, ibid

§ 12. That

§ 12. That the ſmalneſſe of our afflictions, being compared with the greatneſſe of our ſinnes, ſhould much increaſe our patience and comfort, ibid.
§ 13. That others greater puniſhments, who haue leſſe offended compared with our lighter afflictions ſhould make vs patient, p.846
§ 14. They anſwered, who ſay that they are more grieuouſly afflicted than others who haue more hainouſly offended, p.848

Chap. IX.

That our afflictions are not ſignes of Gods hatred, nor the puniſhments of a righteous judge, but the chaſtiſments of a gracious Father,

§ 1. That we can haue no true patience, vnleſſe we be aſſured that all our afflictions doe ſpring from Gods loue, p.849
§ 2. That the world judgeth of Gods loue or hatred by the outward eſtate, ibid.
§ 3 That this conceit is the ground of a moſt dangerous tentation, p.850
§ 4. That afflictions are not ſignes of Gods hatred, p.851
§ 5. In what ſenſe Gods is ſaid to be angry with the faithfull and to puniſh their ſins, ibid.
§ 6. That the afflictions of the faithfull are not properly puniſhments, but fatherly Chaſtiſements, proued by many reaſons; and the contrary objections anſwered, from Sect. 6. to 15. p.852 to 858
§ 15. Of the manifold differences betweene the afflictions of the faithfull and the puniſhments of the wicked, p.858.859
§ 16. That there were no comfort in afflictions, if they were puniſhments, p.860

Chap. X.

That all our afflictions proceed from Gods meere loue, and that this loue appeareth firſt in the meaſure of our afflictions, both in reſpect of their quantity and time.

§ 1.2. That God loueth his children wiſely like a Father, and not cockeringly like a mother, p.861
§ 3. That there is appointed to euery one a certaine meaſure of afflictions which cannot bee exceeded, p.863
§ 4. That our afflictions are in their quantity ſmall and light, p.864
§ 5. That our afflictions are ſhort and momentany, p.865
§ 6. They anſwered, who ſay that their afflictions are long and tedious, p.866

Chap. XI.

That God ſo meaſureth our afflictions vnto vs, as that they doe not exceed our ſtrength.

§ 1. That our afflictions exceed not our ſtrength: proued by Scriptures, p.867
§ 2. That Chriſt tempereth our cup, and therefore wee may bee aſſured that hee will fit it to our ſtrength, p.868
§ 3.4. That the holy Ghoſt aſſiſteth and comforteth vs in all our afflictions, p.869.870
§ 5. That God mingleth comforts and benefits with our afflictions and croſſes, p.871
§ 6. They anſwered, who complaine that their croſſes exceed their comforts, p.872
§ 7. That wee muſt comfort our ſelues in our wants, by conſidering what benefits wee ſtill injoy, p.873
§ 8. That God moderateth our griefe for worldly Croſſes by giuing vnto vs ſpirituall comforts, p.874
§ 9. That Paul was not afflicted aboue his ſtrength, as his words ſeeme to ſignifie, 2.Cor.1.8. p.875
§ 10. They anſwered, who object the impatiency of ſome of the faithfull, p.876
§ 11. They anſwered, who object the example of ſome who fall away in the time of affliction, p.877
§ 12. That the former conſideration is full of comfort, ibid.

Chap. XII.

That God afflicteth vs no more than is neceſſary, for his owne glory and our ſaluation.

§ 1. That our eſtate of corruption neceſſarily requireth affliction, p.878
§ 2. That the Lord taketh no delight in our ſmart, but vſeth all meanes to preuent our puniſhment, p. 879
§ 3. That the meaſure of our afflictions exceedeth not neceſſity, ibid.
§ 4.5. That wee may by the greatneſſe of Gods corrections gheſſe at the grieuouſneſſe of our faults, p.880.881

Chap. XIII.

That Gods loue appeareth in the ends of our afflictions. Firſt, as he vſeth vs as inſtruments in them to ſet forth his glory.

§ 1. THat God is glorified in the fight of his Souldiers, and in the corrections of his children, p.882
§ 2. That he is glorified in the manifeſtation of his power and goodnes aſsiſting vs in our afflictions, p.883
§ 3. That he is glorified in our afflictions, as they are trials of his ſpirituall graces, p.884
§ 4. That it is a great comfort in afflictions to conſider that God is glorified by them, ibid.

Chap. XIV.

That God by our afflictions doth much aduance the good of our Neighbours.

§ 1. THat our Neighbours receiue good by our afflictions: Firſt, as by them they learne to ſeare God in his judgements, p.885
§. 2. Secondly, as they reſtraine them from committing the ſame ſinnes which they ſee puniſhed in vs, p.886
§ 3. Thirdly, as they ſerue to manifeſt Gods graces in vs for their good example, p.887
§ 4. Fourthly, as we are examples of humane frailty, p.888
§. 5. Fifthly, as by them they are brought to ſee Gods perfections in our imperfections, that they may glorifie him in them, ibid.
§ 6. Sixtly, as by our afflictions we are made more compaſsionate, ready and able to comfort others, p.889
§ 7. That the good of our brethren ſhould much comfort vs in affliction, p.890

Chap. XV.

That afflictions doe not hurt the faithfull, nor bring vnto them any graet euill.

§ 1. THat though afflictions be euill in their owne nature, yet their nature is changed to the faithfull, p.891
§ 2. 3. Reaſons why worldly afflictions cannot hurt the faithfull. Firſt, becauſe they doe not depriue vs of bleſsings which are of greateſt worth, but rather increaſe them, p.891
§. 4. That afflictions bring not vpon vs the chiefeſt euils, but rather the contrary good, p.892
§ 5. That it is a great euill to be exempted wholy from afflictions, p.893

Chap. XVI.

That God aduanceth the good of the faithfull by their afflictions, and firſt as they are trials of their ſpirituall graces.

§ 1. THat God in afflicting vs aymeth at our good, p.893
§ 2. That our afflictions are ſometime tryals of Gods graces, and not chaſtizements for our ſins, in reſpect of their mayne and chiefe end, p.894
§ 3. 4. That God trieth vs, not to better his owne knowledge, but to make vs knowne both to our ſelues and others, p.894 895
§ 5. That God tryeth vs by afflictions, firſt, whether we are true Chriſtians indued with ſauing grace or no, p.896
§ 6. 7. Secondly, vnto what meaſure of grace we haue attained, p.897
§ 8. That God tryeth vs principally for his owne glory, and then for the aduancing of our good Name through the manifeſtation of his graces in vs, p.898. 899
§ 9. That God alſo by affliction diſcouereth our infirmities and corruptions for our humiliation, ibid.

Chap. XVII.

That the former conſideration to wit, that our croſſes are trials tending to Gods glory and our good, may much comfort vs in enduring of them.

§ 1. THat wee ought to reioyce in our afflictions in that by theſe trials God is glorified, and we aſſured of our adoption, p.900
§ 2. How wee may know when our afflictions are trials, and when chaſtiſements for ſin, p. 901
§ 3. That we may be comforted in our trials, in that they haue alwayes a good iſſue, and tend to our great profit, ibid.
§ 4. They anſwered who obiect the greatneſſe of their trials, and the ſmalneſſe of their ſtrengh, p.902
§ 5. That our greateſt trials ſhould bring greateſt comfort, becauſe they are ſignes of greateſt grace, ibid.
§ 6. That God much honoureth vs in this firy triall, p 903

Chap. XVIII.

That God vſeth our afflictions as effectuall meanes to further our conuerſion.

§ 1. 2. THe former point prooued by Scripture, & illuſtrated by examples, ib.

§ 3. That God by afflictions fitteth and prepareth vs for the hearing of his Word, p.906
§ 4. That by afflictions he worketh in vs contrition and humiliation, ibid.
§ 5. That afflictions ordinarily are the laſt meanes which God vſeth to conuert obſtinate ſinners, p.907
§ 6. That thoſe afflictions bring much comfort which further our conuerſion. ibid.

CHAP. XIX.

That God vſeth afflictions as an effectuall meanes to preuent vs from falling into ſinne, as alſo to mortifie and ſubdue our corruptions.

§ 1. That it is one maine end why God afflicteth vs, to preſerue vs from falling into ſins, when we are naturally inclined to commit them, p.908
§ 2. That this conſideration ſhould worke in vs patience in afflictions, p.909
§ 3. That God firſt vſeth meanes for the preuention of ſin, and then for the mortifying and ſubduing it, p.910
§ 4. That afflictions effectually mooue vs to forſake ſin, and to leaue our wicked courſes, ibid.
§ 5. That afflictions make vs carefully vſe all good meanes for the mortifying of our ſins, p.911
§ 6. That God by afflictions eſpecially mortifieth our pride, carnall concupiſcence, ſelfe-loue, and loue of the World, p.912
§ 7. That wee would immoderately loue the World, if we were not weaned from it by afflictions, p.913
§ 8. That the Lord in great mercy weaneth vs by afflictions from the loue of the world, ibid.
§ 9. That we dote vpon the World though it be miſerable, and therefore much more would we fondly affect it, if we found in it nothing but proſperitie, p.914
§ 10. That the loue of the World, if it were not mortified, would betray vs to the Deuill, p.916
§ 11. That we are much to reioyce in afflictions, ſeeing God vſeth them as meanes to mortifie our ſins, ibid.
§ 12. That our grieuous afflictions argue our grieuous ſins, p.917
§ 13. That if we indure much with patience to be eaſed of temporall euils, much more ſhould we willingly beare to be freed from thoſe which are euerlaſting, p.918

CHAP. XX.

That God by afflictions increaſeth in vs all his ſpirituall graces, and firſt thoſe which are ſeated in the vnderſtanding.

§ 1. That afflictions exerciſe, and by exerciſing, preſerue in vs Gods ſauing graces, p.919
§ 2. That afflictions increaſe and multiply in vs Gods ſauing graces, p.920
§ 3. That God by afflictions increaſeth in vs ſauing knowledge and ſpirituall wiſdome, ibid.
§ 4. That the benefit of ſpirituall wiſdome much exceedeth our hurt by afflictions, p.922
§ 5. That afflictions are notable means to put vs in remembrance of God, p.923

CHAP. XXI.

That God by afflictions doth much confirme, ſtrengthen and increaſe our faith.

§ 1. That afflictions ſtrengthen our faith by making vs more carefull in the vſe of the meanes, and by exerciſing it with theſe trials, p.924
§ 2. That our faith is ſtrengthened in afflictions, firſt, through the experience which we haue of the truth both of Gods threatnings and gracious promiſes, p.925
§ 3. Secondly, by cauſing vs to renue our repentance, and by aſſuring vs that our ſinnes thus corrected ſhall not come into condemnation, ibid.
§ 4. Thirdly, as they are ſignes of our election, ibid.
§ 5. Fourthly, as they are ſignes of our effectuall calling, p.926
§ 6. Fiftly, that afflictions ſtrengthen our faith as they are ſignes of our Adoption, ibid.

CHAP. XXII.

That God by our afflictions confirmeth and increaſeth in vs, our affiance, hope, loue, feare, and humilitie, p.928. to 932

CHAP. XXIII.

That God by our afflictions worketh and increaſeth in vs repentance and new obedience,

§ 1. That by afflictions wee come to examine our wayes, to ſee our ſins, & to bewaile them, p.932
§ 2. That by afflictions we are moued to hate our ſins, to confeſſe them vnto God, to flee and and forſake them, and to ſerue the Lord in the duties of holines & righteouſnes, p.933

§ 3. 4. That by afflictions God worketh and increaſeth in vs new obedience, p.934.935
§ 5. That theſe fruits of new obedience ſpringing from afflictions, ſhould moue vs to beare them with patience, ibid.
§ 6. That God by afflictions maketh vs more zealous in the duties of his ſeruice, p.936
§ 7. 8. 9. That God by afflictions maketh vs to performe more frequently and feruently vnto him the duty of prayer, 937. to 940
§ 10. That by our afflictions wee are made more ſincere in our confeſsion of ſinne, and more earneſt in our petitions, ibid.
§ 11. That by them wee are moued more frequently and heartily to giue thankes vnto God, ibid.
§ 12. That the former conſideration may much comfort vs in affliction, p.941
§ 13. That God by our afflictions worketh and increaſeth our patience, ibid.

CHAP. XXIV.

That God by afflictions worketh and increaſeth in vs all thoſe vertues which concerne either our neighbours or our ſelues.

§ 1. THat by afflictions wee are mooued to doe juſtice vnto all men, p.942
§ 2. Secondly, to be more mercifull and compaſsionate towards others in miſery, p.943
§ 3. Thirdly, to be more meeke, humble, and courteous towards our Neighbours, ibid.
§ 4. That by afflictions we attaine vnto the knowledge of our ſelues, p.944
§ 5. That the exerciſe of afflictions increaſeth our ſtrength to beare them, p.945
§ 6. That God by afflictions increaſeth our courage and Chriſtian fortitude, p.946. 947
§ 7. That thereby hee increaſeth in vs temperance, ſobriety, modeſtie, and chaſtitie, ibid.

CHAP. XXV.

That the Lord vſeth our afflictions as means to conuey vnto vs diuers worldly benefits.

§ 1. THat by afflictions we profit much in worldly wiſdome and policie, p.948
§ 2. That by afflictions wee are enabled to diſcerne our friends from Flatterers, p.949
§ 3. That afflictions crowne vs with a good Name, whileſt they diſcouer our ſpirituall graces, ibid.

THE Apoſtle hauing ſhewed the myſterie of our ſaluation and the cauſes thereof for the confirmation of our faith, in the three firſt Chapters of his Epiſtle to the Epheſians, and afterwards in the other Chapters hauing ſet downe diuers duties both generally belonging to all Chriſtians, and alſo particularly appertaining to men of ſundry conditions, that he might moue them to repentance and amendment of life; in the next place, like the Lords Centinell, doth diſcouer and giue vs warning of the approach of mightie enemies, willing vs to arme our ſelues at all points in our owne defence, and couragiouſly to ſtand vnder the ſtandard of Chriſt Ieſus, that wee may be continually in readineſſe to endure the encounter, Chap. 6. 10, 11, &c. Whereby hee giueth vs to vnderſtand, that as ſoone as we ſeeke for aſſurance of ſaluation in Chriſt, and endeauour to ſerue the Lord in a holy and Chriſtian life, wee are to prepare our ſelues for a combat, vnleſſe we would ſuddenly be ſurpriſed. For the ſpirituall enemies of our ſaluation bandie themſelues againſt vs as ſoone as we haue giuen our names vnto God, and taken vpon vs the profeſſion and practice of Chriſtianitie, which are the liuerie and cogniſance of our heauenly Lord and Maſter. And this is manifeſt by the example of Gods children from time to time, who although they liued in peace and ſecuritie before they were intertained into Gods family, yet no ſooner were they admitted to be of Gods houſehold ſeruants but Satan and the World haue raged againſt them, labouring both by inward temptations aud outward furie, either to withdraw them from Gods ſeruice by flattering inticements, or vtterly to deſtroy and ouerthrow them by open violence. No ſooner ner had Abel offered a ſacrifice of ſweete ſmelling ſauour vnto God, but Satan ſtirreth vp Cain to become his Butcher. Whileſt Moſes was contented to be reputed the ſonne of Pharaohs daughter he enioyed all proſperitie, but as ſoone as he ioyned himſelfe to Gods people and Church, Pharaoh ſeeketh his life. As long as the Iſraelites worſhipped the Egyptian Idols, they ſate by their fleſh-pots in peace & quietly enioyed the fruits of the Land; but as ſoon as they made but a motion of ſeruing the Lord, the King ſtirred vp by the Deuill, doth rage againſt them with more then barbarous crueltie. Whileſt Paul perſecuted the Church of God, Satan did not ſo much trouble him either outwardly in bodie or inwardly in mind; but no ſooner was he truly conuerted to the faith and preached the Goſpell, but preſently he ſetteth his wicked Impes on worke to take away his life; which the Lord not permitting, hee moueth them to perſecute him by impriſoning, whipping, and ſtoning him; and not content with theſe outward afflictions, hee ſendeth his meſſenger to buffet him, that hee might bee no leſſe vexed inwardly in minde then outwardly in bodie. Yea he ſpared not our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, but as ſoone as he began to ſhew himſelfe to be the Sonne of God and Redeemer of Mankind, in performing the duties of his calling, then eſpecially he bendeth all his force againſt him, hee tempteth and aſſaulteth him fortie dayes together, and taking the foyle himſelfe, hee ſtirreth vp his wicked inſtruments to perſecute him, and at length to take away his life.

*Nehem.*4.17.

Whoſoeuer therefore reſolue to be Gods ſeruants, muſt make account to be his Souldiers alſo; & whilſt with Nehemiahs followers, with one hand they performe the works of their callings and Chriſtianity, they muſt with the other hand hold their weapons to repel their ſpiritual enemies, who continually labour to hinder the Lords buildings. For no ſooner do we become friends to God, but preſently Satan aſſaulteth vs as his enemies. No ſooner do we receiue the Lords preſſe-mony and ſet foot into his Campe, but Satan aduanceth againſt vs his flagges of defiance, labouring both by ſecret treacherie, and outward force, to ſupplant and ouercome vs.

§. *Sect.*2.
The twofold vſe of this doctrine.

Here therefore is inſtruction for ſecure Worldlings, and conſolation and incouragement for Gods children. Worldly men in ſtead of fighting the Lords battailes, ſpend their time in chambering and wantonneſſe, in luſts and vncleanneſſe, in Muſicke and dalliance, in ſurfetting and all voluptuouſneſſe, in careleſneſſe and idleneſſe, as though there were no enemie to aſſault them, and as if Satan were ſome meeke Lambe and not a roring Lion readie to deuoure them. So that good Moſes comming neere them cannot heare the noyſe of them that haue the victory, nor the noyſe of them that are ouercome, but the noyſe of ſinging and merriment, for they are not fighting the battailes of the Lord of Hoſts, but ſolemnizing a Sabbath to the golden Calfe, ſitting downe to eat and drinke, and riſing vp to play. The ſpirituall Cananites are quite forgotten, and they remember not the bleſſed Land of Promiſe, whereunto like Pilgrimes they ſhould bee trauelling, but make this World, this Wilderneſſe of ſinne, the place of their ioy and delight. In a word, they flouriſh in their outward ſtates, and neuer in their mindes feele any vexation of Sathans temptations. And what is the cauſe of all this? If you aske them, they will ſay, that they haue ſuch a ſtrong faith and peace of conſcience, that Sathans temptations haue no power ouer them; neither were they euer troubled with any of his encounters. And not content with theſe bragges of their owne happie eſtate, they cenſure and condemne Gods children, accounting their ſtate moſt deſperate who are moleſted with Satans temptations, and goe mourning vnder the burthen of ſin all the day long; ſuppoſing either that they are in Sathans power, and haue more grieuouſly ſinned then other men, or that they are mad and franticke ſo to vexe themſelues with ſuch needleſſe ſorrow. But let ſuch men know, that of all others their ſtate is moſt dangerous, for they are grieuouſly ſicke, and haue no ſenſe of their diſeaſe; their wounds are ſo mortall that they depriue them of all feeling; they are aſſaulted, yea taken priſoners whileſt they ſleepe ſoundly in ſecuritie, and diſcerne not the approach of the enemie. They make therefore no reſiſtance, becauſe they are ignorant of the aſſault. And what can be more dangerous then to haue the enemie approach and lay hands on vs before we be aware? But this is the ſtate of thoſe men: for as one ſaith, They are moſt aſſaulted, when they feele no aſſault. Let them know, that they are not the Lords Souldiers but the Deuils Reuellers, and therefore hee fighteth not againſt them becauſe they are his friends. For there was neuer any of Chriſts ſouldiers in the Militant Church which haue not been exerciſed in this warfare; there was neuer any ſo ſtrong in faith but Satan durſt encounter him, euen the Apoſtles, yea Adam in the ſtate of innocency, yea our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe. There were neuer any ſo conſtant in the courſe of Chriſtianitie, but the World hath ſought to draw them out of the right way by her baits of proſperitie, or to force them to ſin by threatning aduerſitie. There were neuer any that haue had in them one ſparke of Gods Spirit (Chriſt excepted) who haue not felt it aſſaulted and often foiled by the fleſh. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, and they are contrarie the one to the other. Yea the

It is not therefore their ſtrength of faith, but their carnall ſecuritie, which ſo lulleth them aſleepe in the cradle of worldly vanities that they cannot diſcerne this fight; it is not their peace with God nor the peace of conſcience which makes them thus quiet, for there is no (ſuch) peace ſaith my God, to the wicked, but it is peace which they haue made with Satan, a couenant with death and an agreement with hell, as the Prophet ſpeaketh: *Eſa.*28.15. When the ſtrong armed man Satan (quietly) keepes the houſe, the things that he poſſeſſeth are in peace; but when a ſtronger then hee commeth to diſpoſſeſſe him, he will neuer loſe his poſſeſſion without a fight, and wee cannot chuſe but feele the blowes in ſo ſharp an encounter, * *Luk.*11.21 If a man neuer enter the field to fight againſt Satan, or if at the firſt encounter hee yeeld himſelfe priſoner, and be content to be tied in the pleaſing fetters of ſinne, it is no maruaile that he doth not rage in his conſcience, when as alreadie he is in his captiuitie readie to performe all thoſe works of darknes wherein he imployeth him: but if when Chriſt the Redeemer is preached vnto him by his Ambaſſadours, hee would ſhew any deſire of comming out of his thraldome, ſurely this ſpirituall Pharaoh would neuer loſe his ſeruice but by force and compulſion, neither can ſo ſtrong a man be forced but we muſt needs feele the conflict. While the priſoner lieth in the dungeon, loaded with bolts and tied in chaines, the keeper ſleepeth ſecurely, becauſe he knoweth he is ſafe; but if his bolts being filed off and his chaines looſed, he haue eſcaped out of priſon; then the Iaylor beginneth to buſtle, and purſueth him ſpeedily with Hue and Cry: ſo whileſt Satan holdeth vs impriſoned in the darke dungeon of ignorance, loaded and tied with the heauie bolts and chaines of ſinne, he is retchleſſe and ſecure; but if our Sauiour by his Ambaſſadours in the preaching of the Word, looſe and vnburthen vs of theſe chaines, and by the light of his Spirit ſo illuminate the eyes of our vnderſtanding, that we ſee the way out of Satans dungeon of ignorance, and ſo eſcape out of his captiuitie, then he rageth againſt and purſueth vs, as Pharaoh did the Iſraelites, that either he may bring vs backe againe into his bondage, or elſe deſtroy vs, if wee make reſiſtance. Laſtly, they feele not any fight betweene the fleſh and the Spirit, becauſe the fleſh wholly ruleth them, and like a floud with a cleere current carrieth them wholy into a ſea of ſinne without any ſtop or reſiſtance, and therefore no maruaile they feele not this fight, when the ſpirit which is one of the Combatants hath no force nor reſidence in them.

That the true Chriſtian may receiue comfort by feeling the ſpirituall conflict.

Secondly, Gods children who continually feele the aſſaults of their ſpirituall enemies, and ſee the breaches which are made in their ſoules with the continuall batterie of their temptations, may receiue no ſmall conſolation hereby, when as they conſider that all who profeſſe themſelues Gods ſeruants, and reſolue to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, are thus tempted and tried. For the Dragon is wroth with the woman (that is, Gods Church) and her ſeed which keepe the Commandements of God, and haue the teſtimony of Ieſus Chriſt; and like a roring Lion ſeeketh their deſtruction, becauſe they haue renounced him, and fight vnder the Standard of the Lord of Hoſts whom he maligneth. And hence it is that whileſt we liue without ſenſe of ſinne, wee eate and drinke and take our eaſe without diſturbance, but after wee make any conſcience of our wayes, and endeuour to ſerue the Lord, then Satan caſteth againſt vs the fierie darts of his temptations and wee feele many conflicts betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, with which the worldly man is neuer troubled. Whileſt we are poore and beggerly in Gods graces, and be content to reſt in the earth as vpon our owne natiue ſoyle, Satan letteth vs alone as hauing nothing to looſe: but if once wee enrich our ſelues with the vnualuable treaſures of Gods ſpirituall graces, and make the World a paſſage or place of pilgrimage, and deſire to ſaile through this dangerous Sea into our owne heauenly Countrie; then this Arch-pyrate Satan will ſet vpon vs, and diſcharge againſt vs a whole volley of tentations, that ſo hee may ſpoile vs of this rich fraught, and ſinke our ſoules in bottomleſſe perdition. Neither will hee euer giue ouer this fight till wee ſafely arriue in the Hauen of reſt, when as being out of his reach we ſhall be quite freed from the danger of his encounters. So that when we are thus tempted and aſſaulted by Sathan, the World, and our corrupt fleſh, it is a ſtrong argument to perſwade vs that wee are entertained for Gods Souldiers, and haue receiued the preſſe money of his Spirit; for Satans Kingdome is not diuided, neither doth hee fight againſt thoſe who are his friends and ſeruants, but them who wage warre againſt him, and fight vnder the Lords Standard. True it is that when his ſeruants haue committed ſuch abominable and grieuous ſinnes, as haue made deepe wounds in their ſeared conſciences, whereby they are awakened out of their ſleepie lethargie of ſecuritie, then Satan filleth them with horrour and deſpaire, that hee may keepe them from true repentance, when he can hide from them their ſinnes no longer; and the Lord in his iuſt iudgement and for the example of others, doth ſuffer Sathan to begin in them the torments of Hell in this life; but if hee can by any meanes hide their ſinnes and keepe them quietly in his Kingdome, hee will neuer vexe them. And hence it is that whereas one periſheth through deſpaire, many thouſands periſh through preſumption and ſecuritie. Let all thoſe therefore who feele the burthen of their ſinnes, and are vexed with the continuall aſſaults of their ſpirituall enemies, comfort themſelues; for hereby they haue aſſurance that they are members of the Church Militant, into which none but Souldiers are entertained, and that now they begin to be Gods friends and ſeruants, when as Satan oppoſeth himſelfe againſt them.

*Reuel.*12.17.

Chap. II.

Why God ſuffereth his ſeruants to bee exercised in the ſpirituall conflict of temptations.

§. Sect. 1. God ſuffereth his ſeruants to be tempted & firſt for his owne glory.

BVt here it may be demanded, why the Lord will ſuffer his ſeruants to be thus tempted & aſſaulted, whereas the wicked are free from ſuch conflicts. I anſwere, firſt for his owne glory, for whereas our enemies are ſtrong and mightie, and we weake and feeble, hereby is the Lords Omnipotent power manifeſted to all the World, by whoſe aſſiſtance ſuch impotent wretches conquer and ſubdue ſuch furious and puiſſant enemies.

§. Sect. 2. Secondly, for the manifeſting of his ſpirituall graces in them.

Secondly, God ſuffereth his children to be tempted, that ſo thoſe ſpirituall graces which he hath beſtowed vpon them may the more cleerly ſhine to his glory. For who can know whether they be Gods golden veſſels before they be brought to the touchſtone of temptation? Who could know the faith, patience and valour of Gods Souldiers, if they alwayes lay quietly in Garriſon and neuer came to the skirmiſh? Who could feele the odoriferous ſmell of theſe aromaticall ſpices, if they were not punned and bruiſed in the morter of afflictions? For example, who would haue diſcerned Abrahams faith, Daniels pietie, Iobs patience, Pauls courage and conſtancie, if they had beene neuer tempted, which now to the glorie of God ſhine to all the World?

§. Sect. 3. God ſuffereth his ſeruants to be tempted for their ſpirituall good, and firſt to bring them to repentance. Iob 13.26.

And as the Lord ſuffereth Satan & his Imps to trie his children for his owne glory, ſo alſo for their ſpirituall and euerlaſting good: for firſt hereby hee chaſtiſeth them for their ſinnes paſt, and recalleth them to their remembrance, that ſo they may truely repent of them. And this cauſe Iob ſpeaketh of: Iob 13.26. Thou writeſt (ſaith hee) bitter things againſt me, and makeſt mee to poſſeſſe the iniquities of my youth.

Secondly, hereby he manifeſteth vnto vs our ſecret and hidden ſinnes, which the blind eyes of our iudgement would not diſcerne, if their ſight were not quickned with this ſharp water of temptation. For ſo long as we liue in peace, our ſecure conſciences neuer ſummon vs to the barre of Gods iudgement; but when wee are rouſed vp by temptation, wee enter into a more ſtrait examination of our ſelues, and ſearch what ſecret ſinnes lie lurking in the hidden corners of our hearts, that ſo we may repent of them and make our peace with God, without whoſe aſſiſtance wee can haue no hope to ſtand in any temptation.

Thirdly, the Lord hereby preuenteth our ſinnes to come: for when wee haue experience, that the moſt ſharpe weapons, which Satan vſeth to inflict deepe wounds in our conſciences, are our ſinnes, this will make vs moſt carefull to abſtaine from them, leſt thereby we ſtrengthen him for our owne ouerthrow. And as theſe temptations of Satan are in this regard ſo many bridles to reſtraine vs from ſinne; ſo alſo they are ſo many prickes to let out the wind of vain-glory, wherewith like bladders we be puffed vp, as we may ſee in the example of Paul, who leſt he ſhould be exalted out of meaſure through the abundance of reuelations receiued a pricke in the fleſh, the meſſenger of Satan to buffet him: 2.*Cor.*12.7.

2.*Cor.*12.7.

§. Sect. 4. By tentations God diſcouereth vnto vs our infirmities.

Fourthly, the Lord ſuffereth Satan to aſſault vs, that wee may hereby come to the ſight of our owne weakneſſe and infirmities, when wee haue receiued many foiles; and learne to relie vpon his helpe and aſſiſtance in all our dangers; for ſo proud wee are by nature, that before we come to the fight wee thinke that wee can repell the ſtrongeſt aſſaults, and ouercome all enemies which oppoſe themſelues againſt vs by our owne power; but when wee ſee our ſelues vanquiſhed and foiled with euery ſmall temptation, wee learne to haue a more humble conceit of our owne abilitie, and to depend wholy vpon the Lord. And this end is ſet downe, *Deut.*8.2. and 13.3.

*Matth.*26.33.

*Deut.*8.2.& 13.3.

§. Sect. 5. That God ſuffereth Satan to aſſault vs, that wee may be moued to put on the ſpirituall armour.

Fiftly, the Lord permitteth Sathan continually to aſſaile vs with his temptations, to the end we may continually buckle vnto vs the whole armour of God, that wee may be readie for the battaile. For as thoſe who haue no enemies to encounter them, caſt their armour aſide and let it ruſt, becauſe they are ſecure from danger; but when the enemies are at hand and ſound the alarme, they both wake and ſleepe in their armour readie for the aſſault: ſo, if wee ſhould not continually skirmiſh with our ſpirituall enemies, wee would lay aſide the ſpirituall armour; but when we haue continuall vſe of it, both day and night wee keepe it faſt buckled vnto vs, that being armed at all points, wee may bee able to make rereſiſtance that wee be not ſurpriſed at vnawares.

§. Sect.6.
God by tentations increaſeth in vs his ſpirituall graces.

Rom.5.3,4.

1.Sam.17.37.
Pſal.27.9.
2.Cor.1,10.

Laſtly, by this conflict the Lord ſtrengthneth and increaſeth all his graces in vs: for as by exerciſe the ſtrength of the bodie is preſerued and augmented, and in ſhort time decayeth through idleneſſe and ſloth; ſo the gifts of Gods Spirit, faith, affiance, hope, patience and the reſt languiſh in vs, if they be not exerciſed with temptations. For tribulation bringeth forth patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not aſhamed, as it is *Rom.*5.3,4 5. For when once wee haue beene tempted and tried, and the Lord hath mercifully deliuered vs from the temptation, afterwards being ſo aſſaulted we patiently endure it, hoping for the Lords aſſiſtance, beleeuing and aſſuring our ſelues, that the Lord who hath deliuered vs, will againe deliuer vs, as it is *Pſal.*27.9. Moreouer, when wee ſee the great need of the graces of Gods Spirit this will as a ſtrong motiue intice vs to a carefull vſe of all good meanes whereby we may attaine vnto them, whereas if wee were free from this ſpirituall conflict; wee ſhould not ſo cleerely ſee nor apprehend the vſe and neceſſitie of them.

Chap. III.

Arguments whereby wee may be encouraged to enter into this ſpirituall conflict.

§. Sect.1.
That the cauſe of our warre is iuſt.

Epheſ.6.10.

Iam 4.7.
1.Pet.5.8.

ANd thus haue I ſhewed that all that will be Gods ſeruants muſt fight his battailes againſt his and our ſpirituall enemies, and the cauſes why the Lord preſſeth vs to this ſeruice. Now that wee may goe couragiouſly into the field, let vs conſider of ſome reaſons and motiues which may make vs reſolute and valiant. The firſt is the iuſtneſſe of our cauſe: For though ſouldiers be neuer ſo ſtrong and well furniſhed, yet if their conſciences tell them that they fight in a bad quarrell, it will much abate their courage, and make them cowardly and timerous. But our cauſe is moſt iuſt, and our warre moſt lawfull, for God who is iuſtice it ſelfe hath proclaimed it by his Heraulds the Apoſtles. So *Eph.6.*10. Finally my brethren be ſtrong in the Lord, & in the power of his might. 11. Put on the whole armour of God that yee may be able to ſtand againſt the aſſaults of the deuil, &c. And *Iam.*4.7. Reſiſt the deuil and he wil flie from you. And 1.*Pet.*5.8. Be ſober and watch, for your aduerſary the Deuill as a roaring Lion walketh about ſeeking whom he may deuoure: 9. Whom reſiſt ſtedfaſt in the faith.

The cauſe of our ſpirituall warre of great importance.

Gen.3.4,5.

Iohn 8.44.

Secondly, the cauſe of our warre is of great weight, as namely for the glory of God and our owne ſaluation; for in all Satans skirmiſhes, he ſeeketh to impeach Gods glory with falſe imputations, and to bring vs to vtter deſtruction. And this may appeare by his firſt conflict with our mother *Eue, Gen.*3.4,5. where hee accuſeth God of a lie, who is truth it ſelfe; and of impotencie and enuious diſdaine, ſaying, that the cauſe why he did forbid them to eate of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and euill, was not (as he had ſaid) becauſe they ſhould die, but becauſe hee knew that when they ſhould eate thereof, their eyes ſhould bee opened, and they ſhould bee as Gods, knowing good and euill. Where firſt he ſeeketh to dimne the beames of Gods glory by accuſing him of a lie, and to perſwade them that he was not omnipotent, ſeeing that he was not able to hinder them from being Gods, if they taſted of this fruit: laſtly, that he therefore forbad them to eate thereof, becauſe hee enuied them ſo glorious an eſtate. And ſecondly hee laboureth to deſtroy our firſt Parents both bodie and ſoule, by tempting them to diſobedience and the tranſgreſſion of Gods Commandement: and therefore our Sauiour Chriſt, doth very fitly ioyne theſe two together, ſaying, that hee was a lier and a man-ſlayer from the beginning. A lier, in that he falſely accuſed God of lying; a man-ſlayer, becauſe hee did it to this end, that he might murther our firſt parents and all their poſteritie both bodie and ſoule. So that you ſee that the end of Satans fight is to diſhonour God and deſtroy vs, and therefore if we haue any regard of Gods glory (which ſhould bee more deere vnto vs then our owne ſoules) or any reſpect of our owne ſaluation, if wee would not treacherouſly betray them both by our ſlothfulneſſe or cowardize into the hands of Gods and our enemie; let vs valiantly enter the field, and neuer ceaſe our couragious fight till we haue obtained a full victorie.

§. Sect.2.
The profit of this ſpirituall fight.

Pax belli filia.

Eſa.57.21.

The ſecond reaſon to moue vs to vndertake this fight, is the profit which wil accrew vnto vs thereby: for if the getting of ſome bootie and prize, or the receiuing of ſome trifling pay will moue the ſouldiers of earthly Princes to vndergoe all dangers, and with wonderfull perill of life to fight euen at the Cannons mouth; how much more ſhould the ſtipend of our heauenly King moue vs to fight this combat how terrible ſoeuer it ſeemeth to fleſh and bloud? For firſt, that is truly here verified, Peace is the daughter of warre: neither can wee ſooner enter the field to fight againſt theſe enemies, but preſently we ſhall haue peace with God, and ſoone after the fruit thereof the peace of conſcience. Whereas if we betray Gods cauſe to Satan, and our ſoules to ſinne, well may we be lulled aſleepe in carnall ſecuritie, but wee ſhall neuer enioy this peace with God, and peace of conſcience: for there is no peace, ſaith my God, to the wicked, Eſay 57. And whoſoeuer uer haue taken this trecherous truce with Satan, ſhall find that hee will breake it for his beſt aduantage, if not in the whole courſe of their liues, yet at the houre of death when as they ſhall be able to make no reſiſtance.

Promiſes made to thoſe that fight. Apoc.2.& 3.

1.Cor.2.9.

Breuis eſt labor, præmium verò æternum.

Rom.6.23.

Secondly, if wee fight againſt theſe enemies and valiantly ouercome, the Lord hath promiſed to giue vs to eate of the tree of life which is in Paradiſe, and the Manna that is hid, and that he will write our names in the Booke of Life, that is, hee will in this life beſtow on vs all his ſpirituall graces, and in the life to come repleniſh vs with ſuch ioyes as neither eye hath ſeene, nor eare heard, nor heart of man conceiued. Let vs therefore ſtriue that we may ouercome. For our labour is but ſhort, but our reward ſhall be eternall. On the other ſide, if we conſider Satans pay which he giueth vnto his ſouldiers, we ſhall find that it is nothing but the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon, and in the end euerlaſting death and deſtruction of bodie and ſoule: For the wages of ſinne is death, as it is Rom. 6.23. Who therefore is ſo ſlothfull and cowardly that would not be encouraged, to fight the Lords battailes againſt our ſpirituall enemies, with ſuch promiſes made by him who is truth it ſelfe and cannot deceiue vs? Who is ſo deſperate and foole-hardie as to fight vnder Satans banner, ſeeing the pay which hee giueth is euerlaſting death, and vtter confuſion?

§. Sect.3. The honour that will accompany our victorie,

The third reaſon to moue vs to this fight, is the honour which will accompany this victory: for if earthly ſouldiers will purchaſe honour with the loſſe of life, which is nothing elſe but the commendation of the Prince, or applauſe of the vaine people; what hazard ſhould wee not vndergoe in fighting the ſpirituall combat, ſeeing our grand Captaine the Lord of hoſts, and infinite multitudes of bleſſed Angels looke vpon vs & behold our combat, whoſe prayſe and approbation is our chiefe felicitie? What perill ſhould wee feare, to obtaine a crowne of glory which is promiſed to all that ouercome, and to become heires apparent of Gods Kingdome? On the other ſide, the ſhame and confuſion of face which ſhall ouertake them who cowardly forſake the Lords ſtandard and yeeld vnto Satan, when as they ſhall not dare to looke the Lord in the face whoſe cauſe they haue betrayed, ſhould ſerue as a ſtrong motiue to encourage vs to the fight.

§. Sect.4. The neceſſitie of vndertaking this warfare.

The fourth reaſon to perſwade vs, is the neceſſitie of vndertaking this combat. There is no man ſo cowardly that will not fight when there is no hope in flight, no mercie to be expected in the enemie, no outrage and crueltie which will not be committed. But ſuch is our enemie that wee cannot poſſibly flee from him, his malice is vnreconcileable, his crueltie outragious; for hee fighteth not againſt vs, to the end that hee may obtaine ſoueraigntie alone, abridge vs of our liberty, ſpoile vs of our goods; but hee aimeth at our death and deſtruction of bodie and ſoule. If therefore we ſo carefully arme our ſelues againſt earthly enemies, who when they haue done their vttermoſt rage can but ſhorten a miſerable life, how much more carefully ſhould we reſiſt this enemy, who ſeeketh to depriue vs of euerlaſting life, and to plunge vs into an euer dying death?

Secondly, this fight is neceſſary becauſe in our Baptiſme wee haue taken a military Sacrament, and promiſed faithfully vnto the Lord, that wee will continue his faithfull ſouldiers vnto the end fighting his battailes againſt the fleſh, the World, and the Deuill. There we haue giuen our names vnto Chriſt, to whom wee owe our ſelues and liues by a double right, both becauſe hee hath giuen them vnto vs, and alſo reſtored them the ſecond time when we had loſt them. There we are put in mind of his bloudſhed for our redemption, which ſhould encourage vs to fight couragiouſly, that wee may be preſerued from falling againe into the cruell ſlauery of ſinne and Satan.

2.Tim.2.5.

Iames 1.12.

Thirdly, vnleſſe wee fight this ſpirituall combat, and in fighting ouercome, we ſhall neuer be crowned with the crowne of glory: for it is not giuen vnto any to triumph, who haue not fought valiantly and ſubdued their enemies. The euerlaſting peace of Gods Kingdome is not promiſed to ſuch cowards as neuer entred the field, or being entred haue preſently yeelded themſelues to be the captiues of Satan: but vnto thoſe that fight couragiouſly and glorjouſly ouercome. If any man (ſaith the Apoſtle) ſtriue for a maſterie, hee is not crowned except he ſtriue as he ought to doe: So the Apoſtle Iames pronounceth the man bleſſed that endureth tentation; for when he is tried (or rather as the words are, when by triall he ſhall be approued) he ſhall receiue a crowne of life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that loue him. Whereby it appeareth, that none are crowned vnleſſe they ſtriue as they ought, and therefore much leſſe they which ſtriue not at all; that none are bleſſed but thoſe who are tempted, and being tempted endure the temptation; that firſt wee muſt be tried, and by triall approued, before we can receiue the crowne of life.

§. Sect.5. Thoſe that wil fight againſt our ſpirituall enemies, are ſure of victory.

Laſtly, wee may be encouraged to this fight by certaine hope of victorie, for wee fight vnder the Standard of Chriſt Ieſus, who alone is mightier then all our enemies that aſſault vs. If we did indeed regard our enemies ſtrength and our owne weakeneſſe onely, we might well be diſcouraged from vndertaking this combat; but if wee looke vpon our grand Captaine Chriſt, whoſe loue towards vs is no leſſe then his power, , and both infinite, there is no cauſe of doubting, for he that exhorteth vs to the fight, will ſo helpe vs that we ſhall obtaine victory. When we faint he ſuſtaineth vs, and crowneth vs when we ouercome. He hath alreadie vanquiſhed our enemies to our hand, and hath cooled their courage and abated their force. He hath bruiſed the Serpents head, ſo that he ſhall not be able to ouercome the leaſt of his followers, well may hee hiſſe againſt them, but he cannot hurt them, for his ſting is taken away. Sathan was the ſtrong man who poſſeſſed all in peace, but our Sauiour Chriſt who was ſtronger then hee, comming vpon him hath ouercome him, and taken from him all his armour wherein he truſted, and diuided his ſpoyles, Luke 11.21,22. We fought againſt mightie enemies and great Potentates, but our Sauiour hath ſpoyled principalities and powers, and hath made a ſhew of them openly, and hath triumphed ouer them vpon the Croſſe, and ſo through death hath deſtroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the Deuill, that hee might deliuer all them which for feare of death were all their life ſubiect to bondage, as it is, Heb. 2. 14,15. Hee was indeed a mightie Prince of this wordly Canaan, but our good Ioſhua hath ſubdued him, and hath left nothing for vs to doe who are his ſouldiers & followers, but to tread in his necke in token of victory. But we alaſſe are faint hearted, like vnto Iether the firſt borne of Gedeon, for though our Sauiour Chriſt hath conquered theſe our ſpirituall enemies, and hath put the Sword of his Spirit into our hands, wherewith wee might alſo vanquiſh them: yet we are afraid to draw the ſword, becauſe we are but freſh water ſouldiers and white-liuered; and therefore wee had need to encourage our ſelues, not onely by looking on the victory of our chiefe Captaine, but alſo on the conqueſt of our fellow ſouldiers, who were weake and fraile like our ſelues. So likewiſe Chriſt hath ouercome the World, and willeth vs to be of good comfort, ſeeing wee ſhall be partakers with him in his triumph, if we will ioyne with him in his fight. And though our fleſh be a treacherous enemie and ſtronger to vs then the ſpirit, yet ſo wee will fight againſt the luſts thereof wee ſhall be ſure of victory, for he will aſſiſt vs with his holy Spirit, and therewith enable vs more and more to mortifie this old man and body of ſinne. Well may wee take a foyle in this ſpirituall combat, but the Lord will raiſe vs vp againe; For though wee fall, yet ſhall wee not be caſt off, becauſe the Lord putteth vnder his hand, as it is Pſal. 37.24. And the Lord hath promiſed, that he will not ſuffer vs to be tempted aboue our power, but will giue the iſſue with the tentation, that we may be able to beare it, as it is 1.*Cor.*10.13. and hee that hath promiſed is faithfull and true, yea truth it ſelfe, and therefore hee will be as good as his word. Though therefore Satan encounter vs with all furie, let vs not be faint-hearted, but couragiouſly endure his aſſaults, and ſo in the end the victorie will be ours: for if we reſiſt the Deuill, he will flie from vs, if we fight the Lords battels valiantly, the God of peace ſhall tread Satan vnder our feet ſhortly. For the promiſe of bruiſing the Serpents head doth belong not onely to Ieſus Chriſt our head, but alſo to all thoſe who are members of his bodie.

Let vs not therefore feare to fight againſt beaten and conquered enemies, ſlothfully pretending our weakneſſe to withſtand theſe ſonnes of Anakim: for as one ſaith; Euery one ſhall be a conquerour who deſireth the conqueſt. For if we will be the Lords ſouldiers, hee will not ſuffer himſelfe to bee ſo much diſgraced, as to let vs be ouercome by his mortall enemies. He hath armed vs himſelfe with his owne armour, and ſent vs out to fight his battailes, and therefore hee will not haue vs vanquiſhed, being fortified with his ſtrength, for ſo ſhould himſelfe be ouercome in vs, and his weapons would be eſteemed weake and inſufficient. Yea hee hath ingrafted vs into his owne bodie, and we are liuely members thereof, and therefore let vs neuer thinke that all the power of Hell ſhall be able to ouer-come vs: for what head can with patience ſuffer his ſound members to be pulled from his bodie, if he be able to defend them?

CHAP. IV.

Of the malice of our ſpirituall enemy Satan.

ANd ſo much concerning the reaſons which may incourage vs to vndertake this combat. Now wee are to ſpeake of the ſpirituall warfare it ſelfe, wherein (as in all other wars) we are to conſider of our preparation to the conflict, & the conflict it ſelfe. In our preparation: we are firſt to conſider of the ſtate, qualitie, and condition of our enemies, and of the meanes whereby wee may withſtand and ouercome them. Concerning the firſt, in an enemie who proclaimeth warre againſt vs, wee are to conſider two things: firſt, of his will, and ſecondly, of his power. For if he haue will to hurt vs and no power, he is not to bee greatly regarded; if power and no malicious and vnreconcileable will, he is not ſo much to bee feared; but if his power bee great and puiſſant, and his will malicious, then is it time to looke about vs, and to muſter all our forces, that we may be readie to endure the encounter. Firſt, therefore concerning the will of our grand and arch-enemie Satan, if we conſider thereof aright, we ſhall find that it is moſt maliciouſly bent againſt vs, ſo that §. Sect. 4. The neceſſitie of vndertaking this warfare.

The fourth reaſon to perſwade vs, is the neceſſitie of vndertaking this combat. There is no man ſo cowardly that will not fight when there is no hope in flight, no mercie to be expected in the enemie, no outrage and crueltie which will not be committed. But ſuch is our enemie that wee cannot poſſibly flee from him, his malice is vnreconcileable, his crueltie outragious; for hee fighteth not againſt vs, to the end that hee may obtaine ſoueraigntie alone, abridge vs of our liberty, ſpoile vs of our goods; but hee aimeth at our death and deſtruction of bodie and ſoule. There we are put in mind of his bloudſhed for our redemption, which ſhould encourage vs to fight couragiouſly, that wee may be preſerued from falling againe into the cruell ſlauery of ſinne and Satan.

§. Sect. 5. Thoſe that wi fight againſt our ſpirituall enemies, are ſure of victory.

Laſtly, wee may be encouraged to this fight by certaine hope of victorie, for wee fight vnder the Standard of Chriſt Ieſus, who alone is mightier then all our enemies that aſſault vs. If we did indeed regard our enemies ſtrength and our owne weakeneſſe onely, we might well be diſcouraged from vndertaking this combat; but if wee looke vpon our grand Captaine Chriſt, whoſe loue towards vs is no leſſe then his power, and both infinite, there is no cauſe of doubting, for he that exhorteth vs to the fight, will ſo helpe vs that we ſhall obtaine victory. When we faint he ſuſtaineth vs, and crowneth vs when we ouercome. He hath alreadie vanquiſhed our enemies to our hand, and hath cooled their courage and abated their force. He hath bruiſed the Serpents head, ſo that he ſhall not be able to ouercome the leaſt of his followers, well may hee hiſſe againſt them, but he cannot hurt them, for his ſting is taken away. Sathan was the ſtrong man who poſſeſſed all in peace, but our Sauiour Chriſt who was ſtronger then hee, comming vpon him hath ouercome him, and taken from him all his armour wherein he truſted, and diuided his ſpoyles, Luke 11.21,22. We fought againſt mightie enemies and great Potentates, but our Sauiour hath ſpoyled principalities and powers, and hath made a ſhew of them openly, and hath triumphed ouer them vpon the Croſſe, and ſo through death hath deſtroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the Deuill, that hee might deliuer all them which for feare of death were all their life ſubiect to bondage, as it is, Heb. 2. 14,15. Hee was indeed a mightie Prince of this wordly Canaan, but our good Ioſhua hath ſubdued him, and hath left nothing for vs to doe who are his ſouldiers & followers, but to tread in his necke in token of victory. But we alaſſe are faint hearted, like vnto Iether the firſt borne of Gedeon, for though our Sauiour Chriſt hath conquered theſe our ſpirituall enemies, and hath put the Sword of his Spirit into our hands, wherewith wee might alſo vanquiſh them: yet we are afraid to draw the ſword, becauſe we are but freſh water ſouldiers and white-liuered; and therefore wee had need to encourage our ſelues, not onely by looking on the victory of our chiefe Captaine, but alſo on the conqueſt of our fellow ſouldiers, who were weake and fraile like our ſelues. So likewiſe Chriſt hath ouercome the World, and willeth vs to be of good comfort, ſeeing wee ſhall be partakers with him in his triumph, if we will ioyne with him in his fight. And though our fleſh be a treacherous enemie and ſtronger to vs then the ſpirit, yet ſo wee will fight againſt the luſts thereof wee ſhall be ſure of victory, for he will aſſiſt vs with his holy Spirit, and therewith enable vs more and more to mortifie this old man and body of ſinne. Well may wee take a foyle in this ſpirituall combat, but the Lord will raiſe vs vp againe; For though wee fall, yet ſhall wee not be caſt off, becauſe the Lord putteth vnder his hand, as it is Pſal. 37.24. And the Lord hath promiſed, that he will not ſuffer vs to be tempted aboue our power, but will giue the iſſue with the tentation, that we may be able to beare it, as it is 1.Cor. 10.13. and hee that hath promiſed is faithfull and true, yea truth it ſelfe, and therefore hee will be as good as his word. Though therefore Satan encounter vs with all furie, let vs not be faint-hearted, but couragiouſly endure his aſſaults, and ſo in the end the victorie will be ours: for if we reſiſt the Deuill, he will flie from vs, if we fight the Lords battels valiantly, the God of peace ſhall tread Satan vnder our feet ſhortly. For the promiſe of bruiſing the Serpents head doth belong not onely to Ieſus Chriſt our head, but alſo to all thoſe who are members of his bodie.

Let vs not therefore feare to fight againſt beaten and conquered enemies, ſlothfully pretending our weakneſſe to withſtand theſe ſonnes of Anakim: for as one ſaith; Euery one ſhall be a conquerour who deſireth the conqueſt. For if we will be the Lords ſouldiers, hee will not ſuffer himſelfe to bee ſo much diſgraced, as to let vs be ouercome by his mortall enemies. He hath armed vs himſelfe with his owne armour, and ſent vs out to fight his battailes, and therefore hee will not haue vs vanquiſhed, being fortified with his ſtrength, for ſo ſhould himſelfe be ouercome in vs, and his weapons would be eſteemed weake and inſufficient. Yea hee hath ingrafted vs into his owne bodie, and we are liuely members thereof, and therefore let vs neuer thinke that all the power of Hell ſhall be able to ouer-come vs: for what head can with patience ſuffer his ſound members to be pulled from his bodie, if he be able to defend them?

CHAP. IV.

Of the malice of our ſpirituall enemy Satan.

§. Sect. 1.
The generall parts of the booke.

AND ſo much concerning the reaſons which may incourage vs to vndertake this combat. Now wee are to ſpeake of the ſpirituall warfare it ſelfe, wherein (as in all other wars) we are to conſider of our preparation to the conflict, & the conflict it ſelfe. In our preparation: we are firſt to conſider of the ſtate, qualitie, and condition of our enemies, and of the meanes whereby wee may withſtand and ouercome them. Concerning the firſt, in an enemie who proclaimeth warre againſt vs, wee are to conſider two things: firſt, of his will, and ſecondly, of his power. For if he haue will to hurt vs and no power, he is not to bee greatly regarded; if power and no malicious and vnreconcileable will, he is not ſo much to bee feared; but if his power bee great and puiſſant, and his will malicious, then is it time to looke about vs, and to muſter all our forces, that we may be readie to endure the encounter. Firſt, therefore concerning the will of our grand and arch-enemie Satan, if we conſider thereof aright, we ſhall find that it is moſt maliciouſly bent againſt vs, ſo that there

Satans will moſt malicious.

there is no hope of truce or reconciliation with him, though wee could finde in our cowardly hearts to labour and ſue for a diſhonorable peace with Gods and our enemy. For his malice is not newly conceiued but inueterate, euen as ancient, within a few dayes as the World it ſelfe, and much more durable; for the World ſhall haue an end, but Satans malice to mankind is endleſſe, becauſe the cauſe thereof, namely, the loue and fauour of God toward the faithfull (whoſe eſtate hee doth enuy and maligne, himſelfe being eternally reprobated) ſhall be endleſſe and eternall. And this appeareth in the example of our firſt parents, who were no ſooner placed in the garden of pleaſure, and poſſeſſed of Paradiſe, but Satan being almoſt burſt with enuie to ſee their happy eſtate, neuer reſted till hee had diſgorged his malice, and diſpoſſeſſed them of that happineſſe which they enioyed. Neither doth hee leſſe maligne and hate thoſe who being falne in Adam are raiſed vp in Chriſt, and haue the fee ſimple of euerlaſting glory, purchaſed by Chriſts merit, ſealed and aſſured vnto them by the Spirit of God and a liuely faith. And hence it is that the Lord (knowing Satans malice towards his children, and that whether hee fawneth or frowneth, hee alwayes ſeeketh their deſtruction) hath proclaimed open warres betweene vs, that wee may alwayes ſtand vpon our guard, and not be ſurpriſed at vnawares; that alſo we may not entertaine a thought of peace, though Satan offer it on whatſoeuer conditions: for what peace can there be betweene the children of God and the children of Belial, betweene the ſeed of the Woman and the ſeed of the Serpent, ſeeing God himſelfe from the beginning hath put enmitie betweene them?

Gen. 3.15.

§. Sect. 2.
Satans malice ioyned with violence.

But as the malice of Satan is inueterate, ſo alſo it is mortall and deadly, not to be ſatisfied by offering a ſmall iniurie, by taking away our goods and good name, or afflicting vs with ſickneſſe, no not by taking away our liues; for nothing will ſatisfie him but our finall deſtruction of bodie and ſoule. And this his malice is liuely deciphered vnto vs by diuers names which are giuen him in the Scriptures. For he is called Satan, that is, an aduerſarie, ſtill readie to croſſe vs in all our ſuits which wee make vnto God, as hee did Iehoſhua the high Prieſt, Zach. 3.1. Hee is called an enemie, and that a malicious one; for where Chriſt the good husbandman ſoweth wheate, there he ſoweth tares, that is, Hypocrites amongſt true profeſſors, to the diſhonour of God, the diſcredit of the Goſpell, and the reproch of the true profeſſours thereof. And leſt we ſhould thinke that hee is ſome milde natured enemie who will bee ſatisfied with ſome ſmall reuenge, he is called a murtherer and a man-ſlayer, as though this were his profeſſion and occupation. And leſt we ſhould imagine him to be one lately falne to this trade, our Sauiour telleth vs that he hath beene ſo from the beginning, ſo that like an olde hangman hee is fleſht in bloud and crueltie; and therefore ſeeing wee can hope for no mercy at his hands, let vs ſo much the more couragiouſly oppoſe our ſelues againſt him. But for as much as the moſt ſauage man hath ſome reliques of humanitie left in him, therefore the holy Ghoſt compareth him to beaſts, that wee may expect nothing from him but brutiſh cruelty; as firſt to a Lion, yea a Lion roring after his prey, who is ſo hungry and rauenous, that he deſireth nothing more then to ſeaze vpon that which hee purſueth, 1.*Pet.*5.8. Now who would not be moſt carefull to keepe himſelfe out of the pawes of ſuch a rauenous beaſt? or if hee were encountred by him, who would not reſiſt him if hee had any hope of victorie? But in truth Satan is farre more cruell then the roaring Lion, who (if wee may giue credit to Hiſtories) ſpareth thoſe that fall down flat before him; whereas if he ſhould get vs at ſuch aduantage, hee would proudly trample vs vnder foot, and make vs ſure for euer riſing. And therefore leſt wee ſhould looke for any mercie at his hands by ſubmiſſion, the Holy Ghoſt calleth him the great red Dragon, Apoc. 12.3. which beaſt beareth ſuch naturall malice to mankinde, that he deuoureth them not onely for hunger, but alſo for ſport or hatred, in ſatisfying whereof he taketh great delight; ſuch a beaſt is our enemie, who is ſo fleſht in bloud and crueltie, and ſo ouer-carried with malice and hatred, that hee eſteemeth it his chiefe ſport and paſtime to deſtroy vs. Yea hee is farre more dangerous, for the other rageth but againſt the bodie, this againſt both body and ſoule; that beaſt wee may eaſily auoide, but it is impoſſible to flie from this winged Dragon, and therefore there is no other meanes to eſcape his furie, but by arming our ſelues ſtrongly, and fighting valiantly till we haue put him to flight.

§. Sect. 3.
Satans malice ioyned with treacherous falſehood.

And thus you ſee Satans malice ioyned with crueltie and raging violence, which he vſeth when hee hath any hope of ſurpriſing vs by aſſault; but if he find vs ſtrongly fortified with Gods graces, and at all points armed with the compleat armour of a Chriſtian; if hee perceiue that wee are hedged in and fenced on all ſides (as hee ſpeaketh of Iob) that is, guarded and protected by Gods almightie and all-ruling prouidence, ſo that hee hath no hope of ouercomming vs by aſſault and force; then he ſheweth no leſſe malice and more ſubtiltie in ſeeking our deſtruction, by fauning vpon vs, and alluring vs to ſinne, by offering the baites of honour, pleaſure and commoditie, that ſo hee may make entrance (as it were by a poſterne gate) and ſubdue vs while wee are abandoned ned of the Lords aſſiſtance, and diſarmed of our ſpirituall weapons, whereby we ſhould make reſiſtance. And thus he dealt with our firſt Parents, who being inticed to ſinne, and alſo yeelding to the inticement, and ſo being depriued of Gods protection, and the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, were laid open to thoſe deadly wounds which hee inflicted on them. For aſſoone as they had taſted of the forbidden fruit, they perceiued their nakedneſſe, and therefore couered themſelues with figge leaues; too weake an armour to repell the fierie darts of Satan. Thus he diſarmed the Iſraelites, by tempting them to worſhip the golden Calfe, ſo that Moſes ſaw that they were naked, that is, diſarmed of Gods fauour and protection, *Exod.*32.25. And this his policy he taught his ſeruant Balaam, who when hee could not curſe them whom God had bleſſed, gaue this curſed counſaile to Balaak, that the Moabitiſh women ſhould intice the Iſraelites to commit with them firſt carnall, and then ſpirituall whoredome, knowing that to be the onely meanes to bring Gods curſe vpon them. As we may ſee if wee compare *Numb.*25.1,2. with the 31. Chapter and 16. Verſe, and *Apoc.*2.14. So alſo this wilde Boare would haue broken downe the hedge which defended Iob by tempting him to blaſpheme God. And thus our ſubtill enemie Sinon-like inticeth vs with deceiuing allurements, euen with our owne hands to breake downe the wall of our defence, and to make an open paſſage for whole troupes of ſinnes to enter and ſurprize vs, whileſt wee (ouercome with a falſe ioy) glut and make our ſelues drunke with the cup of voluptuous pleaſures, and lie ſnorting in the dead ſleepe of carnall ſecuritie, not ſo much as once dreaming of our approching ruine and deſtruction.

Iob. 1.10.

§. Sect. 4.
That Satan is a tempter and an accuſer of the faithfull.
*Matth.*4.2.
1.*Theſ.*3.5.

And hereof he hath the name of tempter giuen him, yea, hee is not onely called a tempter, but, κατ' ἐξοχὴν, ὁ πειράζων, the tempter, becauſe he is a tempter of tempters, & as it were a tempter by profeſſion, *Mat.*4. 2. 1.*Theſ.*3.5. The conſideration whereof ſhould make vs moſt carefull to withſtand all his temptations, whereby hee allureth vs vnto ſinne. For if we yeeld unto them, hee will ſurely diſarme vs of Gods fauour and protection, and ſo deadly wound our ſoules when hee hath made them naked. There is no wiſe man will put off his armour and caſt away his weapons in the preſence of his cruell enemie, though hee perſwade him thereto with many flattering ſpeeches and faire promiſes; and ſhall wee let Satan diſarme vs, becauſe he allureth vs thereto, by promiſing ſome vnlawfull profit or vaine pleaſure, eſpecially ſeeing we know him to be an enemie no leſſe treacherous then malicious? But as hee is a tempter to intice vnto ſinne, ſo alſo he is our accuſer after that wee haue ſinned, requiring of God that hee will execute his iuſtice vpon the offenders who haue deſerued puniſhment. Of this there needs no further proofe then his owne teſtimonie, Iob 1.7. where he profeſſeth that he had beene compaſſing the earth about, like a Promoter to ſpie out faults, that hee might informe againſt the offenders. But becauſe wee will not reſt in his teſtimonie, who is the father of lies, wee will adde thereunto another of vndoubted authoritie: for *Apoc.*12.10. it is ſaid, that the Saints reioyce becauſe Satan, who was the accuſer of their brethren, was caſt downe, which accuſed them before God day and night. So that Satan can ſpare no time, from accuſing vs for ſinne, but that which he imployeth in tempting vs thereunto, or in inflicting thoſe puniſhments which God permitteth him to lay vpon vs. Whereby we may perceiue the malice & treachery of our enemy, who though hee be the chiefe cauſe which moueth vs to ſinne, yet himſelfe is the firſt that accuſeth vs for it, and that vnceſſantly. Which may ſerue as a ſtrong argument to make vs warie of our wayes, leſt falling into ſinne, we giue Satan occaſion to inſult ouer vs, and to preferre bils of inditement before our heauenly Iudge, whoſe exact iuſtice will not let ſinne goe vnpuniſhed. If there were a Promoter continually prying into all our actions who were moſt maliciouſly diſpoſed againſt vs, and readie to informe of all our miſdemeanours vnto the Magiſtrate, how fearefull would we be to doe any thing which would bring vs within the compaſſe of the Law? But ſuch an Informer continually obſerueth all our behauiour, euen in our ſecret chambers; who will not faile to accuſe vs euen of thoſe ſinnes which he himſelfe hath tempted vs vnto: and therefore ſeeing this malicious blab ſtill prieth into our actions, this ſhould be of more force to with-hold vs from all ſinne, then if all the World did looke vpon vs.

Iob 1.7.

*Apoc.*12.10.

But he is not only an accuſer, but a ſlanderer alſo, and thereof hee hath his name διάβολος. If therefore hee can ſpie but an apparance of euill in vs, he will not ſticke to ſay, that wee haue or will commit that euill which he ſuſpecteth vs of: for he will wreſt and miſconſtrue all we do to the worſt ſenſe, and make of euery mole-hill an huge mountaine. Thus wrongfully did hee ſlander Iob, that hee ſerued God for that end for which Demetrius ſerued his Goddeſſe, namely for aduantage, becauſe hee preſerued him and bleſſed all he had; affirming that if he would take away his goods, and a little afflict his bodie, hee would blaſpheme him to his face, Iob 1.10. And this alſo teacheth vs to looke warily to our actions, abſtaining not onely from euill, but alſo from all appearance thereof, as the Apoſtle exhorteth, that ſo

Acts 19.25.

Iob 1.10.

1.Theſ.5.21.

we giue not to our malicious enemie the leaſt aduantage. Neither is Satan only an accuſer and ſlanderer, but alſo an executioner or hangman, readie, with all alacritie and ſauage crueltie to inflict that puniſhment the which the Lord adiudgeth vs vnto, as wee may ſee in the hiſtorie of Iob. And this alſo ſheweth vnto vs the extreame malice of our enemie, which maketh him to forget that glorious ſtate wherein he was created, and with all willingneſſe to execute ſo baſe an office.

§.Sect.5. That Satans malice ſhould increaſe our reſolution to withſtand him.

Ephes.6.12.

By all which it appeareth that our enemie Satan is moſt malicious, yea maliciouſneſſe it ſelfe, as he is called Epheſ.6.12. that is, the father and author of all malice and enuie, who laboureth might and maine to diſhonor God and worke our deſtruction. The conſideration whereof ſhould rouze vs out of our carnall ſecurity (whereby men behaue themſelues, as though either they had no enemie at all, or elſe ſuch a gentle natured one, that they may haue peace with him at their owne pleaſure) ſeeing there is no hope of peace and truce, vnleſſe we can be content to liue in his thraldome to our vtter deſtruction: for whomſoeuer hee keepeth as his priſoners in this life, hee will at the houre of death and iudgement bring out to execution. Let vs therefore oppoſe againſt Sathans malice, Chriſtian reſolution; ſtedfaſtly purpoſing and endeuouring to continue our fight in reſiſting Sathan to our liues end, how troubleſome ſoeuer it ſeemeth to fleſh and bloud. For ſeeing there is no truce to be hoped for, nor to be deſired if it were offered, by reaſon of the enmitie which is betweene vs and our enemie; ſeeing his malice is ſo inueterate and mortall, that there is no mercie to be expected, but all barbarous and raging cruelty; ſeeing alſo we fight the Lords battailes, who hath aſſured vs of victorie in the end: This ſhould make vs ſo reſolute, that though wee be foiled, wounded, and as it were beaten downe on our knees, yet wee ſhould neuer yeeld, but make reſiſtance euen to the laſt gaſpe. For what more honourable death then to die in fighting the Lords battailes? What death more profitable, ſeeing by dying we ſhall ouercome, and obtaine a finall victorie ouer all our enemies, and receiue the crowne of glorie, euerlaſting happineſſe, promiſed to all thoſe who fight valiantly in this combat vnto the end?

Apoc.14.13.

Apoc.2.10.

Chap. V.

Of the ſtrength of our ſpirituall enemie Satan.

§.Sect.1. Of Satans ſtrength conſidered in himſelfe.

ANd thus haue I ſhewed the malicious wil of our enemie. Let vs now conſider of his power. For though he be moſt malicious, yet if hee wanted power to execute his malice, wee might well contemne him, and reſt ſecure, making no great preparation to reſiſt his weake aſſault. But with our enemie it is far otherwiſe: for as his will is moſt maliciouſly bent to hurt, ſo is he ſtrong and mightie to effect his will. And this his power and abilitie, conſiſteth partly in his ſtrength, and partly in his skill and warlike policie, wherby hee imployeth all his ſtrength to his beſt aduantage. His ſtrength may be conſidered both in himſelfe and in his aides. In reſpect of his owne ſtrength he is very mightie, ſo that if the Lord permitteth him, hee is able to raiſe the winds, ſtirre vp tempeſts, bring downe fire from Heauen, and vtterly deſtroy vs in a moment. And this his ſtrength the holy Ghoſt expreſſeth, by comparing him to things moſt ſtrong, either in the Sea or on the Land, that ſo wee may be more carefull to arme our ſelues againſt him. He is compared to the great Leuiathan or Whale, whoſe inuincible force is deſcribed by the Lord himſelfe, Iob.41. He is compared to a Lion, yea to a roaring lion, which rauenouſly hunting after his prey hath his force redoubled with his hunger. And alſo to a great red Dragon, hauing ſeuen heads and tenne hornes, whoſe ſtrength is ſo great, that with his very taile hee drew the third part of the ſtars of Heauen, and caſt them to the earth, that is, hee vanquiſheth and ſubdueth many in the viſible Church, which make ſome profeſſion of Religion, but in their liues denie the power thereof. And this his ſtrength is ſo much the more dangerous, by reaſon of his mortall malice and deadly poyſon which he caſteth out of his mouth in great abundance.

And leſt we ſhould contemne this brutiſh might, which a weake man may with policie defeate, therefore hee is compared to a ſtrong armed man, who keepeth in peace all that he poſſeſſeth. And leſt wee ſhould deſpiſe him becauſe hee is but one, the holy Ghoſt telleth vs that he is a mightie Prince, not of one Land or Countrie but of the whole World, who therefore hath infinite multitudes at his commandement: neither is there one of theſe Princes alone, but huge multitudes; and therefore the holy Ghoſt ſpeaking of them, vſeth the plurall number, ſaying, that wee fight againſt principalities, againſt powers, and againſt the worldly gouernors, &c. Whereas therefore the holy Ghoſt doth call him the ſtrong man, Satan, and the Deuill in the ſingular number; hee would not haue vs to conceiue that there is onely one, but it is partly to note the chiefe of the kingdome of darkneſſe, according to that, Matth.25.41. Depart from me yee accurſed into euerlaſting fire, which is prepared for the Deuill and his Angels. And in this ſenſe he is called Beelzebub the Prince of Deuils,

2.Cor.4.4.

Otherwiſe the Scriptures euidently ſhew vs, that there is not one alone, but many to aſſault vs. Our Sauiour telleth vs, that one Spirit taketh vnto him ſeuen more, and they all enter into one man. It is ſaid alſo that Chriſt had caſt out of Mary Magdalen ſeuen, that is, many Deuils. And Luke 8.30. there is mention made of a man poſſeſſed with an whole legion, that is with an huge multitude. So that as our enemies are powerfull in ſtrength, they are alſo in numbers numberleſſe, enow to beſet vs all on all ſides, and in all places, and therefore our fight muſt needs be dangerous; which danger the Apoſtle aggrauateth, by telling vs that they are the Princes of darkneſſe, and therefore as well able to aſſault vs in the night as in the day; which fight of all other is moſt terrible, when we cannot ſee our enemies, and therefore can not tell on which ſide to defend our ſelues. Secondly, he telleth vs that wee wraſtle not with enemies of fleſh and bloud like vnto our ſelues, but with ſpirituall wickedneſſe, which are moſt dangerous; becauſe being ſpirits they can with incredible ſwiftneſſe paſſe from place to place which are farre diſtant, and therefore the more fitly take all aduantages, either in aſſaulting vs at their pleaſure, or withdrawing themſelues when they find reſiſtance. Being ſpirits they can lie ſecretly in ambuſhment, euen in our bedchambers, and ſo ſurprize vs when they find vs moſt wretchleſſe and ſecure; for wee can not diſcouer them before we feele their aſſaults. Thirdly, hee ſaith that they are in high places, to note vnto vs that they haue gotten the aduantage of the vpper ground; and therefore the fight muſt needs be dangerous, when our enemie fighteth againſt vs from an high place or fort, we ſtanding ſo low that wee are ſcarce able to reach him. But becauſe earthly things cannot ſufficiently ſhew the power of our enemie Satan, therefore he is called the God of this world; to note vnto vs, that in reſpect of worldly ſtrength and humane reſiſtance, hee is after a ſort omnipotent, that is, able to doe what he liſt, if hee were not reſtrained by Gods diuine power, who alone is truely omnipotent, and ouer-ruled by no ſuperiour.

And thus you ſee the puiſſant power of this our ſpirituall enemie. But though hee were ſtrong, yet if withall hee were a daſtard and void of courage, he were the leſſe to be feared; but as he is very ſtrong, ſo alſo he is exceeding deſperate and audacious, for there was neuer man that liued, whom he durſt not encounter, yea and that after (by Gods aſſiſtance) he had taken many ouerthrowes. Though Dauid were a moſt holy man and according to Gods owne heart, yet hee aſſaulted him, and gaue him diuers foiles, by tempting him to adulterie, murther, and in pride of heart to number the people. Though Iob was by Gods owne teſtimonie the iuſteſt man on earth, and therefore the beſt armed with the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe: yet Satan durſt encounter him as long as God would ſuffer him. Hee reſiſted Iehoſhua the good high Prieſt, Zach. 3.1. He buffetted Paul the choſen veſſell of the Lord, 2.*Cor.*12.7. Yea ſo ventrous he is, that he aſſaulted our firſt Parents in the ſtate of innocencie, when they were armed with free will, and might if they would haue reſiſted his temptations. Nay, ſo deſperately audacious is this our enemie that hee durſt encounter our grand Captaine Chriſt Ieſus, who was God and man, able to deſtroy him with a word of his mouth; and that not once but many times, after hee was ſhamefully foiled and ouerthrowne. Yea ſo inſolent and foole-hardie hee is, that hee did not onely aſſault him here on earth when hee was in the ſhape of a ſeruant, and whereas in reſpect of his outward ſtate hee might haue ſome hope of preuailing; but alſo hee wageth warre againſt him in Heauen, ſitting at the right hand of his Father in all glorie, power and maieſtie, when as he hath no appearance of hope to preuaile, but is moſt ſure that hee ſhall haue the ouerthrow. And this appeareth, *Apoc.*12.7. And there was a battaile in Heauen: Michael and his Angels fought againſt the Dragon; and the Dragon fought and his angels, but they preuailed not, &c. Whereby Michael wee are to vnderſtand Chriſt himſelfe, for hee onely is the Prince of Angels; and this name ſignifying ſuch an one as is equall with God Almightie, can agree to no other but vnto Chriſt alone. And by the Dragon we are to vnderſtand Satan, as appeareth Verſe 9. who fought againſt our Sauiour, though he preuailed not. If then he durſt encounter the moſt valiant Souldiers that euer fought the Lords battailes, yea if he durſt ſet vpon our Sauiour Chriſt himſelf; then ſurely there is no doubt but that he hath courage enough to ſet vpon vs who are weake and feeble, altogether vnable in our ſelues to make reſiſtance.

Satans power ſhould make vs arme our ſelues againſt his encounters.

Seeing therefore our enemies are ſo puiſſant in ſtrength, ſo innumerable in multitude, ſo dangerous and ſo audacious, let vs ſhake off all ſecuritie, and continually ſtand in readineſſe to endure the encounter: for what folly is it for vs with ſecure Worldlings to contemne and make no reckoning of ſuch enemies? Seeing euery one of vs muſt reſiſt a huge multitude, ſeeing we which are weak and feeble are to withſtand thoſe which are ſtrong and mightie; ſeeing wee which are fleſh & bloud muſt enter combat with thoſe which are ſpirituall wickedneſſes, principalities, powers, and Princes of darkneſſe; ſeeing wee who are cowardly and fearefull muſt ſuſtaine the encounter of thoſe who are deſperate and audacious; laſtly, ſeeing wee haue in our ſelues no aduantages againſt them, & they want no aduantages againſt vs, let vs not therefore fooliſhly contemne ſuch puiſſant enemies; but with all care and diligence let vs arme our ſelues againſt them, and worke out our ſaluation with feare and trembling, as the Apoſtle exhor- *Phil.*2.12.

*Phil.*2.12.

§. *Sect.*5. Conſolations againſt the feare of Satans power.

But as wee are not ſecurely to contemne theſe enemies: ſo wee are not faintly to yeeld vnto them, nor cowardly to deſpaire of victory. For as all thoſe who ſecurely contemning them neuer ſtand vpon their guard, are moſt ſure to be ſurpriſed & ouerthrowne; ſo whoſoeuer arme themſelues againſt them, and enter into the ſpirituall combat with a deſire to ouercome, ſhall moſt certainly obtaine victorie. For though their power be great, yet it is not infinite, and that which they haue, it is not from themſelues, but from the Lord, who ſo curbeth them with his all-ruling prouidence, that they are not able to goe one iot further then hee looſeth out the raines; as it plainly appeareth both by examples and teſtimonies of Scripture. Though Satan were moſt maliciouſly diſpoſed againſt Iob, ſo that hee did with all extremitie execute that which God ſuffered him to doe, yet he could not goe one iot further then his commiſſion. Hee could not touch his ſubſtance till the Lord had ſaid, All that he hath is in thy hand. And then not preuailing againſt him by depriuing him of his goods, hee commeth againe to the Lord to haue his commiſſion inlarged, and when he had got authoritie to afflict his bodie, he could not touch his life, becauſe the Lord had not giuen him ſo much libertie. Though Saul were a wicked man, yet Satan could not hurt or vexe him, till the Lord ſent him. And hence it is that hee is called the ſpirit of God, becauſe hee is Gods ſlaue and wholly at his appointment. So he could not deceiue the falſe prophets of Ahab, till hee had gotten licenſe of the Lord, 1.King.22.22. Nay, ſo farre is Satan from hauing abſolute authoritie and power ouer the faithfull, that it is limited and reſtrained in reſpect of the meaneſt creatures; for a whole legion of Deuils could not ſo much as enter into one herd of ſwine, till by earneſt intreatie they had obtained leaue of our Sauiour Chriſt. And therefore much leſſe can they preuaile againſt any of Gods children, ſeeing the very haires of their head are numbred. Well may Sathan maligne vs and earneſtly deſire our ruine and deſtruction, well may hee ſeeke to ſift vs like wheate, as hee did Peter; but our Sauiour Chriſt maketh interceſſion for vs, ſo that our faith ſhall neuer faile, Luke 22.31. This alſo is manifeſt by plaine teſtimonies, Iude 6. it is ſaid, that the Lord hath reſerued the wicked angels in euerlaſting chaines vnder darkneſſe, vnto the iudgement of the great day, 2.Pet.2.4. God ſpared not the Angels that had ſinned; but caſt them downe into Hell, and deliuered them into the chaines of darkneſſe to be kept vnto damnation. And Apoc. 20.2. Satan is ſaid to haue beene bound by the Angel of the Lord for a thouſand yeeres, ſo that he could not ſtirre till the Lord ſuffered him to be looſed. By all which the holy Ghoſt noteth vnto vs, that Satan is no more able to doe vs hurt, then a malefactour who being bound hand and foot is faſt tied vp in ſtrong chaines, till the Lord looſeth him and giueth him leaue.

§. *Sect.*6. How Satan is ſaid to reſiſt God.

But here ſome man may obiect, that Satan is ſaid in the Scriptures, to reſiſt God and to oppoſe himſelfe againſt him, and euen to fight a battaile againſt our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe and his bleſſed Angels, Apoc.12.7. I anſwere, that this reſiſtance and fight dependeth on Gods permiſſiue prouidence, neither could he ſo much as ſtirre againſt God, if he did not ſuffer him. Hee is indeed moſt maliciouſly diſpoſed againſt the Lord, and by this his malice is ſtirred vp to doe thoſe things which hee thinketh moſt diſpleaſant in Gods eyes: but becauſe the Lord chaineth and curbeth him in with his omnipotent power, hee is onely able to doe thoſe things that God permitteth him, and, will he nill he, he is conſtrained to obey his Creator, and to be at his commandement.

§. *Sect.*7. That the Lords ouer-ruling power giueth vs aſſurance of victorie.

Seeing therefore Satans power is reſtrained by the omnipotent power of God, this may ſerue as a ſtrong reaſon to ſtrengthen our faith in the aſſurance of victorie; eſpecially conſidering that the Lord is not only omnipotent in power, but alſo in reſpect of his will moſt readie to aide and ſupport vs in all our conflicts. For hee hath promiſed vs, that we ſhal not be tempted aboue our power, and that hee will giue a good iſſue to the temptation, though the beginning and middle are dangerous and troubleſome, 1.Cor.10.13. And that if we will but reſiſt the Deuill, we ſhall put him to flight, Iam.4.7. Though therefore in our ſelues wee are very weake, yet God will aſſiſt vs in this combat, which as well concerneth his owne glorie as our good, and being armed with his power, the gates of Hell cannot preuaile againſt vs. Well may the Lord ſuffer vs to take a foile, that thereby learning to know our owne weakneſſe, wee may the more carefully reſt on his power, and more earneſtly craue his aſſiſtance, but then hee will raiſe vs vp though wee be neuer ſo feeble; for the more apparent our infirmities are, the more cleerly will the omnipotent power of the Lord ſhine vnto all the World, when by his helpe we haue obtained victorie.

1.Cor.10.13.
Iames 4.7.

§. Sect. 8.
If we will ouercome we muſt wholly relie on the Lord.

Would wee therefore reſiſt Satans force and ſtrength? then let vs not goe armed in our owne power, for wee are ſo weakened with ſinne and corruption, that wee are not able to withſtand his leaſt aſſault; but deſpairing in our owne abilitie, let vs relie our ſelues wholly on the Lord: for we are ſtrengthened with all might through his glorious power, as it is Col. 1.11. and though in our ſelues we are able to doe nothing, yet we are able to doe all things through the helpe of Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth vs, as it is Phil. 4.13. Of our ſelues we are not able to endure the leaſt encounter of our ſpirituall enemies, but yet if we truſt in the Lord, hee will giue vs victorie through Ieſus Chriſt, 1. Cor. 15.57. And hence it is that the Apoſtle preparing vs for this ſpirituall combat, doth exhort vs to be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might; and to put on the whole armour of God, that we may be able to ſtand againſt the aſſaults of the Deuill, Epheſ. 6.10,11. If then wee would be ſafely protected from the furie of Satans power, let vs not oppoſe againſt it our owne ſtrength, for then ſurely wee ſhall be ouercome, but let vs relie our ſelues on the almightie power of God, profeſſing with the Prophet Dauid, Pſal. 18.2. that the Lord is our rocke and fortreſſe, and hee that deliuereth vs; our God and our ſtrength, in him will wee truſt; our ſhield, the horne of our ſaluation and our refuge. Let vs with him call vpon God which is worthy to be praiſed, and ſo ſhall wee bee ſafe from all our enemies, Verſe 3.

Conſolations againſt the feare of the multitude of our enemies.

In like manner when wee conſider of the infinite number of our enemies, which daily aſſault euery one of vs, let vs thereby be awakened out of the ſlumber of careleſſe wretchleſneſſe, and bee ſtirred vp to ſtand vpon our guard more carefully: but yet let not this diſcourage vs from the fight, becauſe there are many to one, for the Lord is with vs whileſt we fight his battailes, and therefore what mattereth it who oppoſe themſelues againſt vs? Rom. 8.31. The Lord will fight for vs, therefore let vs hold our peace, Exod. 14.14. The battell is not ours but Gods, and therefore let vs not be afraid of this great multitude, as it is 2. Chron. 20.15. for the greater the number is which fighteth againſt vs, the more will the Lord glorifie himſelfe in our victorie, the greatneſſe of his power ſhining ſo much the more cleerely in the weakneſſe of the meanes, and our infirmities ſeruing as a foile, to make the riches of his omnipotencie and glory appeare more glorious. So that the Lord ſtanding on our ſide, it is not materiall how many wicked ſpirits aſſaults vs, if hee take vpon him our preſeruation, wee need not care though the whole power of Hell ſeeke our deſtruction. But if ſuch be the frailtie of our faith, that wee would oppoſe number againſt number, let vs conſider that if we will fight the Lords battailes, hee will ſend as many bleſſed Angels to our aide and reſcue, as there are wicked ſpirits which aſſault vs; for the Angels of the Lord pitch their tents round about them that feare him, and deliuer them, as it is Pſal. 34.7. So that if the Lord open our eyes, as he did the eyes of Eliſhaes ſeruant, wee ſhall plainly perceiue that there are more with vs then againſt vs, 2. King. 6.16.

Conſolations againſt the feare of our enemies, becauſe they are ſpirituall.

So when we conſider that wee wreſtle not againſt fleſh and bloud, but againſt ſpirituall wickedneſſes, this ſhould make vs labour that our care and diligence may counteruaile the diſaduantage which we haue in the fight. But wee are not to be diſcouraged hereby from entring the combat: for though we be but fleſh and bloud, yet the Spirit of God dwelling in vs, can eaſily diſcerne and defeate all Satans ambuſhments; for light and darkeneſſe are to him alike. And whereas Satan can with great agilitie giue the aſſault and retire backe for his beſt aduantage, Gods Spirit farre excelleth him, for hee is preſent in all places at all times; ſo that Satan can no ſooner offer to ſtrike, but Gods Spirit is readie to defend; no ſooner can the Deuill tempt, then the Lord enableth vs to endure the temptation. And though Satan fighteth from high places, and ſo taketh the aduantage of the vpper ground, yet let not this diſmay vs in our fight, for there is one higher then he who laugheth him to ſcorne, and maketh fruſtrate all his enterpriſes.

§. Sect. 11.
Satans audaciouſneſſe ſhould make vs more valiant.

Laſtly, when we conſider that our enemy is deſperate and audacious, wee are not to caſt away our ſpirituall weapons and forſake the field, but let it rather ſerue as a ſtrong motiue to make vs arme our ſelues with Chriſtian reſolution: for ſeeing Satan is ſo audacious and venturous in the aſſault, ſurely wee ſhould be as valiant and bold in giuing him the repulſe; if he be deſperate in ſeeking our deſtruction, it behoueth vs to be reſolute in ſeeking our preſeruation, ſeeing this much more concerneth vs then the other him; eſpecially conſidering that though wee take many foiles, and be often beaten downe with the violent blowes of his tentations, yet in the end we ſhall haue aſſured victory. And why therefore ſhould Sathan ſhew more reſolution when hee is ſure to bee vanquiſhed, then wee who are ſure of conqueſt, if wee doe not cowardly yeeld?

CHAP. VI.

Of Satans aides: and firſt of the World.

¶. Sect. 1.
Of the world the ſecond enemy of our ſaluation, and how it tempteth vs by proſperitie.

AND ſo much concerning Sathans ſtrength, being conſidered in himſelfe. But beſides himſelfe hee hath the aide of other enemies to ſupplant vs, who though they doe not make ſo terrible a ſhew, yet they are no leſſe dangerous; and all theſe are led vnder the conduct of two Captaine Generals, the World and the Fleſh.

By the World I vnderſtand impious, carnall and vnbeleeuing men, with all their baites and inticements vnto vanitie, and all their diſcouragements, afflictions and miſeries, wherewith they hinder Gods children in trauelling the path of righteouſneſſe which leadeth to Gods Kingdome. This wicked World, the Deuils Darling and chiefe Champion, doth aſſault vs on both ſides. On the right hand it encountreth vs with proſperitie, offering vs the bait of pleaſure, that thereby it may allure vs to ſwallow the hooke of ſinne; it caſteth before vs the golden apples of riches, that by ſtooping downe to gather them, wee may be hindred in running the Chriſtian race, and ſo loſe the goale and garland of euerlaſting glorie; it tempteth vs with the honours and glory thereof to diſhonour God, and to fall before Satan, worſhipping him by our ſinnes; in a word, it promiſeth whatſoeuer our corrupt minds deſire, if wee will liue in ſinne, and turne aſide out of the narrow path into the broad way, which leadeth to deſtructiō. And how prone wee are to liſten to theſe Syrens ſongs, it is but too manifeſt by lamentable experience. For doth not our firſt loue waxe cold, and our former zeale of Gods glorie freeze, as ſoone as the World fauneth vpon vs, and quencheth in vs the heate of Gods Spirit, by caſting on vs the watriſh vanities of pleaſures, honours and riches? Doe not hereby religious ſeruants become irreligious maſters? and young Saints in ſhew, olde Deuils in truth? Doe wee not ſee that as ſoone as Demas hath imbraced the World, he forſaketh Chriſt? yea that Peter himſelfe denieth his Maſter, when hee hath baſted himſelfe by the fire of this wicked Caiphas? Are there not many who haue beene forward Profeſſors in the time of their aduerſitie and want, which caſt off the cloake of their profeſſion as ſoone as the warme ſunne of proſperitie hath ſhined vpon them? Are there not many amongſt vs who in the time of affliction could not be inforced with torments to prophane Gods Name by ſwearing an idle oath; or his Sabbaths by following their pleaſures, or by doing the workes of their callings; and yet the ſame men after they haue fallen into wicked company, who haue inticed them by their words and euill examples to taſte of the World and the vanities thereof, will not ſticke to ſweare with the ſwearer, and follow their pleaſures on the Lords Day with the moſt prophane? ſo hard a thing it is to reſiſt the World when it fauneth on vs.

¶. Sect. 2.
How wee muſt reſiſt the temptations of proſperitie.

But how hard ſoeuer it ſeemeth to fleſh and bloud, yet muſt wee oppoſe our ſelues againſt this enemie alſo: for without a fight we can neuer obtaine victorie, and without victorie we ſhall neuer receiue the crowne of glory. And to the end that wee may be prouoked to fight againſt the World and the vanities thereof, wee are to know, that though it faune vpon vs, yet it is our mortall enemie; though it flatteringly profeſſe it ſelfe our friend, yet in truth it fighteth againſt our ſoules vnder Satans Banner, for hee is the Prince thereof; though it haue honie in the mouth, yet there is deadly poyſon in the taile, for the end thereof bringeth deſtruction; though it offer vs many pleaſing things to allure vs, yet they are but baites which intice vs to come within the compaſſe of Satans nets of perdition. Let vs conſider, that though it make a ſhew, and ſeemeth a pleaſant place like the Paradiſe of God, yet it is a Sodome of ſinne which one day the Lord will deſtroy, with fire and brimſtome: and therefore let vs with righteous Lot haſte out of it, neuer turning back with a deſire to enioy the vanities thereof, for the World wholly lieth in wickedneſſe, as it is 1. Iohn 5.19. Let vs remember that it is impoſſible to ſerue God and this Mammon, *Mat.*6.24. to loue the World and God alſo: For if any man loue the World, the loue of the Father is not in him, 1. Iohn 2.15. and as the Apoſtle Iames telleth vs, The amitie of the World is enmitie with God: and whoſoeuer will be a friend of the World, maketh himſelfe the enemy of God, Iam.4.4. Neither let vs deſire the loue of the World, for it loueth thoſe onely which are her owne, as for thoſe whom Chriſt hath choſen out of it, thoſe the World hateth: nay, therefore hateth them becauſe Chriſt hath choſen them, as it is, Iohn 15.19.

Let vs remember that it wil be to ſmal purpoſe to enioy theſe wordly pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon, and in the end plunge our ſelues into euerlaſting death; that the Worlds Muſicke is but the Syrens ſong, which allureth vs to make ſhipwracke of our ſoules on the rockes of ſinne, and while it tickleth the eare it woundeth vs to the very heart; that though the cup which it offereth be of gold, and the drinke ſweet in taſte, yet it is deadly poyſon in operation; for they that drinke thereof are ſo lulled aſleepe in pleaſures and ſecuritie, that they neuer awake out of their ſpirituall lethargie; or if they doe, yet like Sampſon, without ſtrength to reſiſt the ſpirituall tuall Philiſtines, after the world (like Dalila) hath lulled them a while in her lap of carnall pleaſures. Let vs remember, that they who drinke of this cup of voluptuous vanities, muſt afterwards drinke of that cup ſpoken of *Pſal.*75.8. that is, the cup of Gods wrath; and ſhall be tormented in fire and brimſtone for euermore, as it is expounded, *Apoc.*14.10. Let vs remember that the Worlds chiefe good is vncertaine in getting, & momentanie & mutable in the poſſeſſion, it being euery day ready to leaue vs, or wee to leaue it. Laſtly, let vs call to minde, that for this ſhort, inconſtant, and vaine ioy, we loſe an eternall waight of vnſpeakeable glorie, and plunge our ſelues into grieuous and endleſſe miſerie. What therefore will't profit vs to gaine the whole World, and loſe our owne ſoules? as our Sauiour ſpeaketh, Marke 8.36.

*Pſal.*75.8.

*Apoc.*14.10.

Marke 8.36.

And if wee haue theſe meditations continually running in our minds, then ſhall wee eaſily ſtop our eares at the hearing of this Syrens ſong; then ſhall wee conſtantly goe forward in our pilgrimage towards our heauenly home: and though Honours ſtand before vs, riches on the one hand, and pleaſures on the other, alluring vs to enter into the broad way which leadeth to deſtruction; yet ſhall wee not forſake the ſtrait path which leadeth vnto life euerlaſting, how vnpleaſant ſoeuer it ſeemeth to fleſh and bloud.

§. *Sect.*3.
How the world tempteth by aduerſitie.

But if the World cannot thus preuaile, then doth ſhe turne her ſmiles into frownes, her allurements into threats, her beds of pleaſures, into miſeries and afflictions, her glorious offers of Honours and Riches, to proud menacings of pouertie and ignominy; all which being terrible in the eyes of fleſh and bloud ſo farre preuaile with ſome, that they moue them to make ſhipwracke of faith and a good conſcience; and being wearie in trauailing thorow this deſart and vnpleaſant Wilderneſſe vnto the Land of Promiſe, they deſire to returne backe into the bondage of the ſpirituall Pharaoh, that they may quietly ſit by the fleſh-pots of Egypt, and glut themſelues with the Cucumbers and Pepons of carnall pleaſures: that is, they chuſe rather to walke in the broad way which leadeth to deſtruction, becauſe it is delightfull, then in the narrow way, which leadeth to euerlaſting life, becauſe they muſt paſſe thorow the briars of affliction and thornes of tribulation, before they can receiue the Crowne of glory; they preferre the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon, before the recompence of reward, which God hath promiſed, euen the eternall ioyes of the Kingdome of glorie. So vnpleaſant a thing it is for fleſh and bloud to denie it ſelfe, and to take vp the Croſſe and follow Chriſt.

*Numb.*11.5.

§. *Sect.*4.
That the world is leſſe dangerous when it frowneth then when it frowneth.

Yet though the World be farre more terrible to looke vpon when it frowneth, then when it fawneth, yet is it farre leſſe dangerous. For oftentimes this poyſon of aduerſitie is ſo tempered and corrected with thoſe wholſome preſeruatiues of Faith, Hope, Patience and Humilitie, that in ſtead of killing vs, it doth but purge away our corrupt humours of ſinne; though the World whip vs, yet thereby God correcteth vs, and makes vs better; though it burne vs in the fire of afflictions, yet it doth not conſume, but rather refine vs from our droſſe; though like a ſtormie wind it ſhaketh vs, yet in ſtead of blowing vs downe, it cauſeth vs to take more deepe root in all vertue and goodneſſe: in a word, as it playeth the ſchoolemaſter in ſcourging vs, ſo alſo in inſtructing and teaching vs to know God and to know our ſelues; to know the vanitie of the World, and to labour after a more permanent felicitie.

§. *Sect.*5.
How we are to arme our ſelues againſt aduerſitie.

Notwithſtanding, howſoeuer by the grace and bleſſing of God, aduerſitie (the Worlds churliſh ſonne) oftentimes worketh theſe good effects; yet in it ſelfe it is a temptation, and that a ſtrong one, to draw vs from God, by cauſing vs to murmure and repine; yea (as Satan ſaid of Iob) to curſe God to his face, to enuie all who ſeeme vnto vs more happy then our ſelues, to deſpaire of Gods mercie, and to vſe vnlawfull meanes, that thereby wee may better our eſtate. And therefore it behoueth vs to arme our ſelues againſt the violence of this enemie alſo, leaſt building our houſes vpon the ſands of ſecuritie they be ouer-turned, when the winds of afflictions and flouds of aduerſitie and perſecution blow and beate againſt vs. And to this end wee are to remember, firſt, that theſe fatherly corrections are euident teſtimonies to aſſure vs that wee are not baſtards, but Gods deare children, whom hee gently chaſtiſeth, that wee may not be deſtroyed with the World; that how Chriſt hath choſen vs out of the World, ſeeing the World hateth vs; that now wee are the friends of God, when the World (Satans eldeſt ſonne) becommeth our enemie: for ſo long as wee are of the World the World loueth vs, for it loueth her owne. Secondly, let vs continually remember the recompence of reward, and then ſhall wee with Moſes uoluntarily chuſe rather to ſuffer aduerſitie with the people of God, then to enioy the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon; eſteeming the rebuke of Chriſt greater riches, then the treaſures of Egypt, as it is *Heb.*11.25,26. Then ſhall wee endure to bee tried and purified in the furnace of afflictions, if wee know that after we are found to be pure gold, the Lord will lay vs vp in his treaſury of euerlaſting happineſſe. Laſtly, let vs remember, that eternall bleſſedneſſe is promiſed to thoſe that mourne with a godly ſorrow, and eternall

Why therefore ſhould this little ſpot of foule way cauſe vs to ſtand ſtill, or goe out of our courſe, which leadeth to euerlaſting happineſſe? Of the Fleſh, and the ſtrength thereof.

§. Sect.1.
Of the fleſh the third enemie of our ſaluation, and what it is.

THe ſecond enemy which aſſiſteth Satan againſt vs, is the fleſh, that inborne traitour which we nouriſhing in our ſelues, doth open a gate in our ſoules, into which Satan and the World may eaſily ſend whole troupes of temptations to enter and ſurprize vs. By the fleſh wee are not to vnderſtand the bodie alone and the fleſh thereof, but that corruption of nature which hath defiled both body and ſoule, being ſpread and mixed with euery part of both, euen as the light is mingled with darkneſſe in the twilight or dawning of the day, whereby we are made prone to all ſinne, and readie to entertaine all temptations, which promiſe the ſatisfying of any of the luſts thereof. This ſecret traitour conſpiring with Satan and the World to worke our deſtruction, doth entertaine & further all their temptations; it fighteth and luſteth againſt the ſpirit, it rebelleth againſt the law of our minds, and leadeth vs captiue to the law of ſinne; it hindreth vs from doing the good wee would, and maketh vs commit the euill which we hate, as it is notably ſet downe, Rom.7. So Gal.5.17. The fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, and theſe are contrarie the one to the other, ſo that yee cannot doe the ſame things that yee would.

§. Sect.2.
The diuers names which in the Scriptures are giuen to the fleſh.

This enemie the holy Ghoſt in the Scriptures deciphereth by diuers names; for it is called the olde man, the old Adam, the earthly, carnall, and naturall man, the ſinne which is inherent and dwelleth in vs, the adioyning euill, the law of the members, the luſts of the fleſh which fight againſt the ſoule; by all which is ſignified our corruption of nature, which is deriued from our firſt parents, whereby wee are made backward vnto all good, and prone vnto all euill, vnapt to entertaine any good motions of Gods Spirit, but moſt readie to receiue and imbrace all the ſuggeſtions and temptations of the World and the Deuill, as the wax the print of the ſeale, or the tindar fire. And this the Apoſtle Iames ſheweth Chap.1.14. Euery man is tempted when he is drawne away by his owne concupiſcence and is enticed: verſ.15. Then when luſt hath conceiued, it bringeth forth ſinne, and ſinne when it is finiſhed bringeth forth death. So that as Satan is the father, ſo the fleſh is the mother of ſinne, which receiuing Satans temptations, as it were, into a fruitfull wombe, doth conceiue, nouriſh, and bring forth ſinne, which no ſooner is borne, but like a deadly ſtinging Serpent, it bringeth death to bodie and ſoule, vnleſſe the poyſon thereof be ouercome and taken away by the precious bloud of Chriſt.

Iames 1.14,15.

§. Sect.3.
The treachery and dangerouſneſſe of this enemy the fleſh.

And thus you ſee what the fleſh is, and how it conſpireth with Satan in ſeeking our deſtruction; whereby appeareth the treacherie and dangerouſneſſe of this our enemy. The treacherie thereof is hereby manifeſt, in that being in outward ſhew a deare friend, and more neere then an alter idem, another ſelfe, it notwithſtanding aideth Satan to our owne ouerthrow. So as we may complaine with Dauid, Pſal.41.9. My familiar friend whom I truſted, which did eat my bread, hath lift vp the heele againſt mee. For this Iudas which daily followeth vs, and eateth, and drinketh and ſleepeth with vs, doth betray vs into the hands of thoſe enemies who ſeeke our life, and that, when it ſeemeth louingly and kindly to imbrace and kiſſe vs. And as it is moſt treacherous, ſo alſo moſt dangerous, and hard to be ouercome, for as much as it is in our ſelfe, and the greateſt part of our ſelfe, and therefore we cannot forſake it, vnleſſe wee forſake our ſelues; wee cannot fight againſt it, vnleſſe we raiſe inteſtine and ciuill warres in our owne bowels; we cannot vanquiſh it, vnleſſe wee ſubdue our ſelues; and if wee ſeeke to runne away from it, wee might as eaſily flee from our own ſhadowes, yea from our ſelues, for wee carrie it in our owne boſomes. How hard therefore is this enemie to be ouercome? how dangerous and irkeſome muſt this fight needes be, wherein our ſelues muſt be enemie to our ſelues? So that we cannot obtaine the victory, vnleſſe we be ouercome; wee cannot be ſure of life, vnleſſe wee mortifie and kill our greateſt part; we cannot ſuſtaine our ſelues, but wee nouriſh

Pſal.41.9.

Marke 8.34.

nouriſh our enemie; wee cannot famiſh our enemy, but wee our ſelues ſhall pine with hunger. Who would not thinke the eſtate of thoſe Citizens to be moſt dangerous, who being beſieged by forraigne forces, harbour amongſt them more Traitours which are hourely in readineſſe to open the gates and betray the Citie into their enemies hands, then true ſubiects and loyall Citizens to ſtand in their defence? But this is our caſe, wee are beſieged with forreigne forces, the World and the Deuill; and we nouriſh in vs ſecret Traitors, euen the fleſh, with whole legions of the luſts thereof, which are continually ready to open the gates of our ſoules, euen our ſenſes of Seeing, Hearing, Touching, Taſting, Smelling, whereby whole troupes of temptations enter and ſurprize vs.

§. Sect. 4.
How the fleſh is to be weakned.

The conſideration whereof ſhould make vs moſt watchfully to ſtand vpon our guard, and to vſe ſuch Christian policie to withſtand our enemies, and preuent their treacherous attempts, as true-hearted Citizens would vſe in the like caſe; who if they were beſieged with forraigne forces, and knew that they harboured Traitors, who ſought all opportunities of betraying their Citie into their enemies hand, they would if they were ſtrong enough lay hand on them, draw them to the place of iudgement, condemne and put them to death; but if they found them too great and ſtrong a partie, then they would vſe all good policie to make them weaker, by depriuing them of their food and prouiſion, weapons, armour & munition, and all other means wherin conſiſted their chiefe ſtrength; and then they would ſet vpon them being thus diſabled, and proceed in the courſe of iuſtice before mentioned: ſo we being in continuall danger to haue the Citie of our ſoules ſacked through the treacherouſneſſe of our fleſh, muſt, if wee be ſtrong enough and powerfull through Gods Spirit, mortifie, kill, and aboliſh the fleſh, and the luſts thereof; but if we find the ſpirit weake and the fleſh ſtrong, we are to diſable it by faſting and watchfulneſſe in prayer, by withdrawing from it the food with which it is nouriſhed, that is, voluptuous pleaſures and worldly delights. But eſpecially being weake in our ſelues, we are to implore the aide and aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, whereby wee may be ſtrengthened and enabled to ſubdue and mortifie the luſts of the fleſh, which rebell and fight againſt our ſoules, being aſſured by Gods mercifull promiſe, that if we aske and deſire his Spirit, he will giue it vs, and hauing the Spirit of God to aſſiſt vs, wee ſhall be ſure of victory. But if in ſtead of mortifying and taming the fleſh and the luſts thereof, wee pamper them like Epicures with all vaine delights, we ſhal but ſtrengthen our enemies to cut our owne throats: if we delicately bring vp this ſeruant, which wee ſhould vſe as a ſlaue, at length it will be not onely as our ſon, but a tyrannous Lord and Maſter, which will binde vs hand and foot in the fetters of ſinne, and caſt vs into the priſon of Hell. What folly therefore is it to nouriſh and arme our enemy to our own deſtruction? But of this enemy I haue written at large in the fourth part of my Chriſtian Warfare, vnto which I refer the Reader who deſireth to be better informed of this enemie, and to be inſtructed in the manner whereby he may reſiſt and ouercome him.

CHAP. VIII.

Of Satans policie.

§. Sect. 1.
That Satan is a moſt ſubtill and politicke enemie.

ANd thus much alſo concerning the firſt part of our enemies power, which conſiſteth in the ſtrength either of himſelfe or of his aides. Now wee are to conſider of the ſecond part, which conſiſteth in his warlike policie and skill in imploying this his ſtrength to his beſt aduantage. For if our enemie had great ſtrength, and yet wanted policie, hee might the more eaſily be reſiſted, and the ſooner vanquiſhed; for ſtrength without wit, is like a Giant without eyes. But as our enemie is exceeding ſtrong, ſo is he alſo no leſſe ſubtil & politike, in imploying all his ſtrength to his beſt aduantage, and therefore as in regard of his ſtrength he is called in the Scriptures a Lion, and a mightie Dragon; ſo in reſpect of his ſubtiltie and wilineſſe he is called a Serpent; yea an old Serpent, which being the ſubtileſt of beaſts, hath his craft redoubled by his age and experience, Apoc.12.9. and hereof hee is called in the Scriptures, δαίμων and δαιμόνιον quaſi δαήμων, to ſignifie vnto vs his great knowledge. No maruaile therefore though Satan be an expert-ſouldier, ſeeing he is not only of wonderfull ſtrength, but alſo of great knowledge by creation; which though in reſpect of good things it was much decreaſed by his fall, yet in ſleights and ſtratagems it is much increaſed by his long experience from the beginning of the World, euen almoſt ſix thouſand yeeres; which is ſufficient to make one wiſe that is by nature fooliſh and ſimple, and therefore much more Satan, who is naturally very politicke; being alſo a ſpirit, and hereby fit to diue as it were into the ſecrets of nature, and with incredible ſwiftneſſe to paſſe from place to place, ready to intrude himſelfe into all companies ſecretly, and to learne the nature, qualities and diſpoſitions of all men, againſt whom he fighteth. And though he cannot know our thoughts directly and certainly (for this is proper to God alone to be the ſearcher of hearts) yet hee hath ſuch intelligence from our affections, luſts, inclinations and outward actions, that hee can ſhrewdly gheſſe at them, if hee doe but a while keepe vs company, and ſee our diſpoſition and conuerſation. So that we cannot giue Satan the leaſt aduantage, but hee is readie to take it and make vſe thereof to our ouerthrow; we can lay no plot againſt him but he diſcerneth it, and is readie to preuent it. And therefore in this reſpect our ſtate is like the King of Arams, 2. King.6.12. for Satan our enemie knoweth all our counſailes and conſultations which wee take and hold in our moſt ſecret chambers.

2.King.6.12.

§. Sect.2.
How we may defeat Satans policie.

And thus you ſee what Sathans policie is: againſt which wee muſt oppoſe no leſſe wiſdome and skill, if we will haue the victorie. And becauſe we are fooliſh by nature, or wily to beguile our ſelues (that wiſdome which wee haue naturally being worldly and carnall, which is enmitie againſt God, and therefore more fit to betray vs into the hands of our enemie, then to defend vs from him) it behoueth vs to goe out of our ſelues into the Lords treaſurie of wiſdome, and there to furniſh our minds with ſuch ſpirituall ſauing wiſdome, as ſhall be fit to oppoſe againſt the ſubtill policie of our ſpirituall enemie. That is, wee muſt continually heare and meditate in Gods Word, which will make vs wiſe and skilfull in deſcrying all Satans ſtratagems and alſo in preuenting them being diſcouered. For howſoeuer in the darke night of ignorance and errour wee may eaſily fall into his ambuſhments, yet the light of Gods Word ſhining vnto vs, will plainly diſcloſe them to the eyes of the moſt ſimple. But beſides this theoreticall wiſdome ſeated in the vnderſtanding, there is alſo a practicall or operatiue wiſdome required in Gods Word, which ſheweth it ſelfe in our affections and actions. And this conſiſteth in the feare of the Lord, that is, true godlineſſe and ſinceritie of heart. Of which Iob ſpeaketh, Chap. 28. Verſe 28. The feare of the Lord is wiſdome, and to depart from euill is vnderſtanding. So Pſal.111.10. The feare of the Lord is the head or beginning of wiſdome. And Prou.28.7. hee is called a wiſe ſonne which keepeth the Law. So that our chiefe wiſdome conſiſteth in the feare of the Lord, and in a godly endeuour of performing obedience to his Commandements. If therefore wee would attaine vnto ſuch ſpirituall wiſdome that wee may reſiſt our ſpirituall enemie, wee muſt be conuerſant in hearing and reading the Word of God, meditating therein with the Prophet Dauid both day and night; and withall wee muſt by all meanes ſeeke the feare of the Lord, labouring to lead our liues in a conſtant courſe of true godlineſſe. And though we are full of infirmities, yet at leaſt let vs haue an holy endeuour to performe ſeruice vnto God, in truth, vprightneſſe, and integritie of heart. And ſo wee may aſſure our ſelues that though we be neuer ſo ſimple and fooliſh by nature, yet ſhall wee be wiſe enough to withſtand and ouercome our ſpirituall enemies: for the Lord who is wiſdome it ſelfe will direct vs in our wayes, and he alſo will ſo infatuate this curſed Achitophel, and turne his wiſdome into fooliſhneſſe, that wee ſhall neuer thereby be hurt or circumuented.

§. Sect.3.
That worldly wiſdome cannot free vs from the danger of Satans policies, but rather expoſes vs to them.

But on the other ſide, though we be neuer ſo wiſe in carnall wiſdome, and though our heads be a ſtore-houſe of politicke ſtratagems, if yet wee neglect Gods Word, and voluntarily giue our ſelues ouer vnto ſinne and diſobedience, wee ſhall be ſo beſotted with folly, that Satan will eaſily deceiue and circumuent vs. An example whereof wee haue in our firſt parents, who though they were more wiſe by creation then euer were liuing (Chriſt excepted) yet when they caſt the Word of God behinde their backe, giuing more credit to Satans ſuggeſtions, and withall tranſgreſſed Gods commandement; their wiſdome was turned into ignorance and folly, and they became an eaſie prey to their malicious enemie. And whereas they thought by that meanes to haue gone beyond the Lord in policie, and to haue obtained a farre greater meaſure of knowledge and glory, they were in ſtead thereof beſotted with folly, and ouer-whelmed with ignominie and ſhame, by being made the bondſlaues of ſinne and Satan. And thus alſo the Heathen neglecting the true worſhip of God, and giuing themſelues to idolatrie, became fooles, whileſt they profeſſed themſelues very wiſe, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth. Rom.1.22. for the Lord deſtroyeth the wiſdome of the wiſe, and caſteth away the vnderſtanding of the prudent, as it is, 1. Cor.1.19.

§. Sect.4.
Wherein our chiefe wiſdome conſiſteth.

Seeing then our chiefe wiſdome conſiſteth in the ſtudie of Gods Word, and in vprightneſſe of heart, integritie, Chriſtian ſinceritie and ſimplicitie, and in a holy care of performing obedience to Gods will, let vs therefore continually meditate in Gods Word, and with the Prophet Dauid make it our counſellor. And whenſoeuer Sathan doth aſſault and tempt vs to ſinne, let vs haue recourſe to this our Counſellour the Word of God, there inquiring whether that whereunto we are tempted be lawfull or no; and if it tell vs that it is a ſinne, let vs with all care and conſcience auoide it: for though Sathan lay ouer it neuer ſo faire a gloſſe, and intice vs to the committing thereof, by offering vnto vs the greateſt pleaſures, riches and honours of the World, yet let vs aſſure our ſelues that he thereby ſeeketh to circumuent vs; and to purchaſe worldly vanities, he inticeth vs to ſell our ſoules; and therefore in Chriſtian wiſdome let vs auoide his ſtratagems.

CHAP. IX.

Of the ſpirituall armour deſcribed, Epheſ.6.

§.*Sect.*1. That the weapons of our Chriſtian warfare muſt be ſpirituall.

AND thus haue I ſhewed the nature and qualitie of our enemie againſt whom wee muſt fight; both in reſpect of his will, & alſo his power conſiſting in his ſtrength & policy, & alſo ſome means which in our preparation againſt him we muſt vſe carefully, that wee may withſtand him; namely, by oppoſing againſt his malicious will, Chriſtian reſolution; againſt his ſtrength, the omnipotent power of Gods might; againſt his ſubtill policie, Chriſtian wiſdome, conſiſting in the knowledge of Gods Word, and true integritie and ſimplicitie of heart. Now wee are to ſpeake of the laſt meanes which wee are to vſe in our preparation immediatly before our combat; that is, the Chriſtian armour wherewith we are to arme our ſelues againſt the encounter: and to this end (becauſe wee are but freſh-water-ſouldiers and of ſmall experience) let vs take the counſaile and aduice of the Apoſtle Paul, one of Gods chiefe Champions and expert Captaines, as he ſetteth it downe, Epheſ.6.11,12,13,14. &c. where firſt he deſcribeth the qualitie, and as it were the metall of our armour in which reſpect he telleth vs, that we muſt put on the armour of God which is ſpirituall, and that our weapons and armour muſt not be carnall. For being of this nature though they were neuer ſo ſtrong, they were to no purpoſe, ſeeing our enemie is ſpirituall: neither doe we wreſtle againſt fleſh and bloud, but againſt principalities, powers and ſpirituall wickedneſſes, as it is Epheſ.6.12. In vaine therefore it were with the Papiſts to ſeeke to defend our ſelues with holy Water, or Crucifixes, or ragges and reliques of Saints, from the violent aſſaults of this our enemie; or elſe with deſperate Hackſters to truſt in our Sword, Buckler and Speare: for well is that verified of this ſpirituall Leuiathan, which the Lord ſpeaketh of the earthly Leuiathan, Iob 41.17,26. When the ſword doth touch him, he will not riſe vp, and he laugheth at the ſhaking of the ſpeare. And therefore when we are to encounter this great Goliah, wee are to lay aſide the carnall weapons of Saul, which are altogether vnfit for a Chriſtian, ſeruing rather to burthen and hinder him, than to defend and further him in this ſpirituall combate; and wee are to goe againſt him in the Name of the Lord, ſtrengthened in the power of his might, putting on vs the armour of God, that is, ſuch diuine and ſpirituall armour as the Lord hath giuen and appointed vs to vſe. For it is not ſufficient that we prepare vs this armour, if wee let it lie by vs, or ſuffer it (as it were) to hang vpon the walls, there to ruſt without vſe; but we are to put it on, and keepe it faſt buckled vnto vs both night and day, that we may be alwayes in a readineſſe to endure the aſſault of our enemies.

Epheſ.6.12.

Iob 41,17,20.

1.*Sam.*17.36,44.

§.*Sect.*2. That wee muſt put on the whole armour of God.

Neither is it enough that wee put on one peece of the armour, and like young ſouldiers leaue off the reſt for lightneſſe ſake, or elſe through foole-hardinſſe to ſhew needleſſe valour; wee muſt not put on the helmet of ſaluation, and leaue off the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, nor take vnto vs the girdle of veritie and the ſhield of faith, and caſt away from vs the ſword of the Spirit; but wee are to put on the whole armour of God, and like valiant ſouldiers, who meane indeed to ſtand to it, we are to arme our ſelues at all points in compleat armour of proofe, which will keepe vs from fleeing, and our enemie from ouercomming. For if we take none of the Chriſtian armour, or but ſome of the lighteſt parts, if we take the ſhield of faith, and leaue behind vs the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, wee ſhall either deſperately fight and be ouerthrowne in the battaile, or elſe cowardly runne away and forſake the field. But on the other ſide, if wee buckle vnto vs the whole armour of God, wee ſhall not need to flee away for feare, being ſo well defended; nor to doubt of victory, for wee ſhall ſurely ouercome; the Lord hauing giuen, and wee hauing receiued this armour to this end, as the Apoſtle noteth vnto vs in theſe words; that you may be able to ſtand againſt the aſſaults of the Deuill, or his treacherous ambuſhments, as the word here vſed, ſignifieth. So that the Lord hath giuen vs this armour, aud wee put it on, to the end that wee may be enabled to reſiſt Satan; and therefore ſeeing it is armour of Gods owne making and beſtowing, wee may aſſure our ſelues that hee will not ſuffer his workmanſhip and gift to be ſo much diſgraced, as that Satan ſhould pierce thorow it and wound vs. For the Lord knoweth the force of Satans darts, and bullets of temptation, and he hath made his armour high proofe, and therefore ſtrong enough to repell all the batterie of Satans ſuggeſtions.

§.*Sect.*3. The neceſſitie of the ſpirituall armour.

And that we may be the rather ſtirred vp with all care and diligence to prouide and buckle faſt to vs the armour which hee after deſcribeth, he ſheweth the neceſſitie thereof, by deſcribing the dangerouſneſſe of our enemies, who, being not fleſh and bloud, but principalities, powers, worldly gouernours, princes of the darkneſſe of this World, and ſpirituall wickedneſſes, which are in high places, cannot poſſibly be reſiſted by our owne ſtrength and meanes. And therefore for this cauſe hee willeth vs to take vnto vs the whole armour of God, that wee may be able to reſiſt in the euill day, that is, the time of temptation; which is therefore called the euill day, partly becauſe therein Satan tempteth vs vnto euill, and partly becauſe it is a time of trouble, aduerſitie and affliction, when Satan ſifteth vs with his temptations. And thus the euill day is taken, Pſal.41.1. The Lord will deliuer him in the euill day, (that is, as our tranſlation alſo reades it) in the time of trouble. And thus alſo it is vſed, Epheſ.5.16. Redeeming the time, becauſe the dayes are euill, that is, full of troubles and afflictions. And therefore Beza doth tranſlate in this place ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ πονηρᾷ, tempore aduerſo, the time of aduerſitie. By which we learne not to eſteeme our ſpirituall fight as a May-game, but as a time of trouble and aduerſitie, wherein we are aſſaulted by mightie enemies, and oftentimes foiled and wounded; and therefore wee muſt not voluntarily runne into temptations, ſeeing the time of them is euill and full of trouble; but rather feruently pray vnto the Lord that he will not leade vs into temptation, conſidering our owne weakneſſe and our enemies power; or if it pleaſe him to make triall of vs, that hee will not ſuffer vs to fall therein, but that he will deliuer vs from euill, for as much as the kingdome and power and glory is his alone, and therefore hee is of power ſufficient to ſaue and deliuer vs.

Pſal.41.1.

Ephes.5.16.

That we muſt not cowardly flie in the ſpirituall conflict.

But as we are not ſecurely to ruſh into the field of temptation againſt our ſpirituall enemies, ſo wee are not when they ſound the alarum to battaile, and aſſault vs, cowardly to caſt downe our weapons and runne away: for the Apoſtle would not take away from vs true valour and Chriſtian fortitude, but carnall ſecuritie and wretchleſneſſe; and therefore though our enemies bee mightie, and the time of temptation full of trouble, yet he biddeth vs not to caſt off our armour and to runne away, wholly deſpairing of victorie, but hee exhorteth vs for this cauſe, to take vnto vs the whole armour of God, that we may be able to reſiſt in the euill day, and hauing finiſhed all things may ſtand faſt; that is, hauing put our enemies to flight and obtained the victory, we may like conquerours ſtand laſt in the field, as it were triumphantly inſulting ouer them: whereby hee intimateth thus much, that if wee will take vnto vs the whole armour of God, how weake ſoeuer wee be in our ſelues, yet ſhall wee bee enabled to reſiſt our ſpirituall enemies in the euill day; and not onely ſo, but alſo obtaine victorie and triumph ouer them.

§. Sect.4. That euery one muſt abide in his vocation,

And therefore he willeth vs not to bee diſmayed, neither with our enemies power, nor our owne trouble, but to ſtand to it, ſaying, Verſ.14. Stand therefore: by which word hee intimateth vnto vs diuers duties; firſt, as in the Campe euery man hath his place appointed him, and his proper colours vnder which he is to keepe him; ſo all Chriſtian ſouldiers haue their ſtations, that is, their vocations whereunto they are called of God, within the limits whereof they are to containe themſelues. And theſe are firſt their generall calling whereby they are entertained into the Church Militant, which is Gods Campe or Army, where they are to fight vnder the Standard of their Captaine Chriſt: and ſecondly their ſpeciall callings, whereby there is appointed to euery member of the Militant Church, a certaine ſtanding, and particular and proper duties and functions which hee is to execute, as it is in the Armies of earthly Princes. Firſt, therefore we muſt containe our ſelues within our generall vocation and ſtation, that is, we muſt keepe vs in Gods Army and Campe, the Church Militant: for as thoſe ſtragling ſouldiers who depart from the Armie, and range abroad to forrage, or get ſome bootie, are eaſily vanquiſhed by their enemies; ſo thoſe who depart and make an apoſtaſie from Gods Church, to gaine or retaine their pleaſures and worldly preferments, are eaſily ouerthrowne, falling into Satans ambuſhments. And ſecondly, euery one is to containe himſelfe within the limits of his ſpeciall vocation, and to keepe his peculiar ſtanding appointed him by God: for as there is nothing more pernicious to an Army then diſorder, when as ſome intrude themſelues into others place, as when the common Souldier will be an Officer, the Lieutenant, Captaine, and the Captaine, Generall of the Army; ſo nothing is more hurtfull to the Church Militant than when diſorderly one vſurpes anothers place and office, as when the Miniſters will be Magiſtrates, and the Magiſtrates Miniſters, and when the common people vſurpe the office of them both. Secondly, when as hee biddeth vs ſtand in our places, hee reſtraineth vs from two extreames: the one, that wee doe not wilfully thruſt our ſelues into the combat of temptations before we be aſſaulted, and ſo as it were runne out of our ſtanding to ſeeke an enemy; and ſecondly, that when we are aſſaulted we doe not flee away, but ſtand to it valiantly and endure the violence of the aſſailants. Laſtly, he exhorteth vs to watchfulneſſe and painfull diligence, for we muſt not drowſily and ſecurely lay vs downe and giue our ſelues to ſleepe, nor yet ſit idlely as though we had nothing to doe; but wee are to ſtand vpon our guard, and to watch continually, that wee may alwayes be in readineſſe to withſtand the aſſaults of our enemies; otherwiſe if wee ſleepe in ſecuritie, they will ſuddenly ſet vpon vs and ſurprize vs at vnawares.

CHAP. X.

Of the particular parts of the Chriſtian armour: and firſt of the girdle of veritie.

§. Sect. 1.
Of the girdle of veritie, and what we are to vnderſtand thereby.

THe Apoſtle hauing taken away all wretchleſſe ſecuritie and foole-hardineſſe, and alſo ſtrengthened vs with true valour and Chriſtian fortitude, in the next place deſcribeth the armour of God which we are to buckle vnto vs. Where firſt wee are generally to obſerue, that wee are not curiouſly and ſcrupulouſly to ſearch out the reaſon why ſuch and ſuch vertues are likened to theſe or thoſe peeces of armour: as for example, why he calleth Truth a Girdle, Righteouſneſſe a Breſtplate, Faith a Shield, &c. for it was not the Apoſtles purpoſe ſo exactly to fit the ſimilitudes, as may appeare, 1. Theſſ. 5.8. where he indifferently aſcribeth the name of Breſtplate both to Faith and Charitie, by which here hee vnderſtandeth righteouſneſſe; but onely briefly and generally to ſhew what vertues and graces of Gods Spirit are moſt neceſſary for a Chriſtian, wherewith hee may be enabled to reſiſt his ſpirituall enemies, continuing his former allegorie taken from warres. But let vs come to the armour it ſelfe, which is both defenſiue and offenſiue: the firſt part is the Girdle of Veritie. The word here vſed ſignifieth a broad ſtudded Belt vſed in warres in ancient times, wherewith the ioynts of the Breſt-plate and that Armour which defended the belly, loynes and thighes were couered. And by this, truth is reſembled: whereby ſome vnderſtand the truth of Religion and of the doctrine which wee profeſſe; others vnderſtand hereby truth and vprightneſſe of heart, or the integrity of a good conſcience, whereby wee performe all duties of Religion belonging to God and our Neighbour in ſimplicitie, without all hypocriſie and diſſimulation. But becauſe both are notable and neceſſary parts of our Chriſtian armour, I ſee no reaſon why wee may not take it in both ſenſes, ſeeing the Apoſtle doth of purpoſe ſet downe vnder theſe metaphoricall words, the chiefe vertues and graces wherewith wee are to arme our ſelues againſt our ſpirituall enemies. Firſt, therefore here is required truth of our Religion which wee profeſſe: and ſecondly that wee profeſſe it truly; that is, with vpright and ſimple hearts.

1.*Theſ.*5.8.

§. Sect. 2.
That our Religion muſt be grounded on Gods Truth.

For the firſt: it is the foundation vpon which all other duties to God or Man are to be built; for if they be not grounded on Gods truth, but deuiſed by mans braine, they are but humane dotages which the Lord will not accept; neither is it to any purpoſe that we ſhew our ſelues earneſt and forward in Religion; vnleſſe it be true and conſonant to Gods Word. For as the faſter that thoſe trauaile which are out of the way, the further they are from their iournies end; ſo the more earneſt and forward that wee are in trauelling the by-paths of errour, the further wee are from Gods Kingdome. And therefore Sathan careth not greatly whether we be of no Religion or of a falſe Religion; whether wee worſhip no God at all, or a falſe God, or at leaſt the true God after a falſe manner; whether we performe no duties vnto God, or ſuch as being not agreeable to his truth are abominable vnto him. Firſt, then we muſt containe all our actions within the compaſſe of Gods Word, and whatſoeuer we profeſſe and practiſe, it muſt haue its ground and warrant from his truth, if we will bee accounted true members of Gods Militant Church, which is therefore called the pillar of truth, becauſe contemning all errours and doctrines of men, it faithfully keepeth the truth of Gods Word. And as ſouldiers were girt about with that ſtrong and broad ſtudded Belt, wherewith their loynes were ſtrengthned, and ſo enabled to ſuſtaine the fight without wearineſſe; ſo wee are to compaſſe our ſelues about with truth, whereby wee may be ſtrengthened, when as we know that we fight in a iuſt quarrell; neither ſhall wee eaſily be deceiued with Satans temptations and falſe ſuggeſtions, if wee be girt about with the Girdle of Veritie. And hereby appeareth the neceſſitie of this piece of armour: for ſeeing Sathan is a lier from the beginning, it behoueth vs to be compaſſed about with truth, that the bright beames thereof may diſcouer and diſperſe all the foggie miſts of Satans errours and lies.

§. Sect. 3.
That we muſt profeſſe the truth, in truth and ſimplicitie of heart.

But it is not ſufficient that we profeſſe the truth, vnleſſe it be in truth, that is, in integritie and ſimplicitie of heart, without all hypocriſie and diſſimulation. For how glorious ſoeuer our profeſſion euen of the true Religion be before men, yet it is abominable in the eyes of God, if it be not in truth and from an vpright heart, but counterfeit and hypocriticall. Whatſoeuer duties and good workes we performe, though neuer ſo excellent in themſelues, yet are they not acceptable in Gods ſight, if they bee not ioyned with integritie and ſimplicitie. For example, Prayer is a notable part of Gods worſhip; but if we doe not call vpon God in truth, but with fained and deceitfull lips, that we may haue the prayſe of men, our Prayers are odious and Phariſaicall, Matth. 6. Thankſgiuing is an excellent dutie, but if with the Phariſie wee giue thankes rather to boaſt of our gifts, then to ſhew true thankfulneſſe to the giuer, we ſhall not be approued of God. Giuing of almes is a worke acceptable vnto God, for it is a ſacrifice wherewith hee is well pleaſed, but if they be not giuen in ſimplicitie of heart, but in hypocriſie, that we may may be ſeene of men, they ſhall haue the hypocrites reward, Matth.6. In a word, this truth and ſimplicitie of heart is ſo neceſſary, that without it, whatſoeuer we doe it is not regarded; for God is a ſpirit, and hee will be worſhipped in ſpirit and in truth, Iohn 4.24. According to that, *Ioſh.*24.14. Feare the Lord, and ſerue him in vprightneſſe and in truth. Which if we performe, our ſeruice of God, will be acceptable in his ſight, though performed in great weakneſſe, and mingled with many imperfections: otherwiſe, though we offer thouſands of Rams, and whole Riuers of oyle, that is, omit no outward coſt and labour in Gods worſhip, yet will it be abominable in his eyes, *Mich.*6.7,8. Let vs therefore with our Sauiour pray vnto God, that wee may bee ſanctified with his truth, that not onely whatſoeuer we do may be grounded on Gods truth, but that we may doe it in truth and vprightneſſe of heart.

Chap. XI.

Of the Breaſt-plate of Righteouſneſſe.

§. Sect.1. Of the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, and the excellency thereof.

*Rom.*7.15,22.
*Rom.*7.17.
1.Iohn 3.9. and Verſe 6.8.
*Pſal.*119.

The ſecond part of our armour is the Breaſt-plate of Righteouſneſſe; whereby wee are to vnderſtand a good conſcience, true ſanctification and a godly life, which alſo we are to put on according to the example of our grand Captaine Chriſt, Eſay 59.17. He put on righteouſneſſe as an Habergeon, and an Helmet of ſaluation vpon his head. And then ſhall not Sathans darts pierce vs, ſo long as we are armed with a good conſcience, and a godly and innocent life. Yea as long as our breaſts and hearts are armed with righteouſneſſe, though our other members fall into ſinne, our wounds ſhall not be mortall: for as the breaſt-plate doth defend the breaſt and vitall parts of a ſouldier: ſo the ſtudie and holy endeuour of a Chriſtian to liue in righteouſneſſe and true ſanctification, doth ſo arme his mind, that Satan cannot deadly wound the heart with any of his temptations. True it is that the Saints doe receiue wounds and foiles, when as Satan hath drawne them to commit ſinne, but they are not wounded at the heart, becauſe they doe not ſinne with full conſent of will; for they allow not that which they doe, neither doe they what they would, but what they hate, and they delight in the Law of God concerning the inner man, when the fleſh leadeth them captiue to the law of ſin. And hence it is that Paul ſaith hee did not tranſgreſſe Gods Law, but ſinne that dwelled in him, Rom. 7.17. And the Apoſtle Iohn affirmeth, that they who are borne of God ſinne not, 1.Iohn 3.9. and that they who are in Chriſt ſinne not: and that whoſoeuer ſinneth is of the Deuill, Verſe 6.8. Not that Gods children are exempted from all ſinne, but becauſe they ſinne not with the full conſent and ſwinge of their will; and when they doe fall, their hearts are defended with the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, that is, with an holy endeuour and deſire of ſeruing God. Dauid, a man according to Gods owne heart, may be a notable example hereof; for euen after he was indued with the knowledge of truth, and had this godly endeauour of ſeruing God, hee notwithſtanding fell grieuouſly many times, and was wounded often with Satans darts; but his wounds were not mortal, neither did they pierce the heart, becauſe he was armed with the breſt-plate of righteouſnſſe, for he kept Gods law in his heart, and it was ſweeter than hony vnto his mouth, he meditated therein, and ſought after it continually, as appeareth Pſal. 119. Would wee therefore be preſerued from the deadly wounds of Satans darts of temptation? then let vs ſtudie and labour after true holineſſe, let vs keepe a good conſcience; and howſoeuer we fall often through infirmitie, yet let the heart alwayes be armed with the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, that is, with an earneſt deſire and holy indeauour of ſeruing God; and ſo ſhall Sathan neuer mortally wound vs.

§. Sect.2. That the lack of this armou is moſt pernicious.

But on the other ſide, if we once lay aſide the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, not ſo much as endeuouring to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe of life, but imbrace ſinne with full conſent of will, wee ſhall lay our breaſts open and naked to all Satans thruſts, yea, and as it were put ſwords in his hands wherwith hee may wound and murther vs: for vntill we diſarme our ſelues, and put weapons into the hands of Satan by our ſinnes, he cannot hurt vs; as we may ſee in the example of our firſt Parents, who whileſt they continued in their righteouſneſſe and integritie, Satan could not offer them any violence by aſſault and force, and therefore hee allured them to entertaine a treacherous parley, wherein hauing inticed them to diſarme themſelues of this breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, by wilfull tranſgreſſing Gods Commandement, he inflicted on them deadly wounds, piercing them thorow to the very heart; and ſo like Ioab whileſt hee ſeemed louingly to imbrace them, hee did moſt treacherouſly ſtab them. The conſideration whereof ſhould make vs repell moſt carefully all Satans temptations, whereby he inticeth vs to ſinne; but eſpecially let vs neuer be allured to put off the breſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, and then though Satan wound our ſoules with ſinne, yet his wounds will not be mortall ſo long as we doe not fall into ſinne with full conſent of will, but through infirmitie; in the meane time loathing the ſinne which wee commit, and delighting our ſelues in the Lavv of God, in reſpect of the inner man; for though we fall, yet the Lord will raiſe vs vp by vnfained repentance, and though ſinne dwell in vs, yet ſhall it neuer raigne in our mortall bodies, that wee ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof.

m.6.12.

CHAP. XII.

Of the preparation of the Goſpell of peace.

Sect.1. hat the ſpell of peace is.

THe third part of our Chriſtian armour is, that wee haue our feete ſhod with the preparation of the Goſpel of peace; where hee alludeth to the cuſtome of ſouldiers in former times, who going into the field ſtrongly armed their legges and feete with legge-harneſſe, war-graues or buskins to preſerue them from the iniurie of the weather, the piercing of briars, thornes, and ſuch other things as might hurt them in their way as they marched, and from the violence alſo of their enemies blowes when they were encountred. For all which vſes the Goſpell ſerueth in our ſpirituall warfare; for they who are armed with the true knowledge thereof; and are aſſured of the mercifull promiſes therein contained, they will walke and march valiantly in the wayes of godlineſſe and Chriſtianitie, though they are full of the briars and thornes of afflictions and perſecution; preferring the rebuke of Chriſt before the riches of Egypt, becauſe they haue an eye to the recompence of reward, which they ſhall receiue at the end of their iournie. And this maketh them little to regard the fouleneſſe and vnpleaſantneſſe of the way, and though Sathan trouble them in their march, ſetting vpon and aſſaulting them, yet they eaſily reſiſt the furie of his temptations, and goe on forward in the profeſſion and practice of Chriſtianitie, if they be armed with the knowledge of the Goſpel of peace; for it is therefore called the Goſpel of peace, becauſe it bringeth peace to our ſoules, not onely as it is the ambaſſage of God, whereby we being reconciled vnto him, haue peace with him, from the aſſurance whereof wee haue the peace of conſcience, but alſo becauſe if we be armed therewith, we ſhall obtaine a finall victorie ouer our ſpirituall enemies, after which ſhall follow euerlaſting peace, which ſhall not ſo much as be diſturbed with the attempts of any enemies.

Sect.2. at it is to repared this ſpell.

But it is not ſufficient that wee know and beleeue this Goſpel of peace, vnleſſe wee be alwayes prepared to make confeſſion and profeſſion thereof, though thereby wee incurre worldly ſhame, loſſes, afflictions and perſecution. And this the Apoſtle ſignifieth, by telling vs that our feet muſt be ſhod with the preparation of the Goſpel of peace; that is, as thoſe who are well ſhod are in readineſſe to goe thorow rough and vnpleaſant wayes; ſo thoſe that are indued with the knowledge of the Goſpel, muſt alwayes be in readineſſe to make profeſſion thereof in the middeſt of affliction and perſecution. For as with the heart man beleeueth vnto righteouſneſſe, ſo with the mouth hee muſt confeſſe vnto ſaluation, Rom. 10.10. And this the Apoſtle Peter requireth of vs; that wee doe not onely ſanctifie the Lord in our hearts, but alſo that we be readie alwayes to giue an anſwere to euery man that asketh vs a reaſon of the hope that is in vs. But if wee lay aſide this armour, wee ſhall be as vnfit to trauell in the afflicted way which leadeth to Gods Kingdome, as thoſe ſouldiers who are barefoot be vnfit to march thorow wayes which are full of briars and thornes; neither ſhall wee be readie to make confeſſion and profeſſion of our faith in the time of perſecution and trouble, but rather to ſlide backe into a generall apoſtaſie from all Religion, vnleſſe wee be confirmed and comforted with the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpel, made to thoſe who ſuffer affliction for Chriſts ſake, namely, that *if wee confeſſe him before men, hee will confeſſe vs before his Father in heauen, Mat.*10.32. CHAP. XIII.

Of the Shield of Faith.

§. Sect.1. That the ſhield of faith is moſt neceſſarie.

THe fourth piece of the Chriſtian armour which the Apoſtle exhorteth vs aboue all to put on, is the ſhield of faith, which of all other parts is moſt neceſſarie, becauſe how weake ſoeuer it be in it ſelfe, yet it doth defend and protect vs againſt all the temptations of Satan; for hee that putteth on faith, doth put on Ieſus Chriſt alſo, it being a propertie inſeparable of faith, to apply vnto vs Chriſt Ieſus and all his benefits, that is, his merits and righteouſneſſe, and euerlaſting life it ſelfe. And this will be not onely a glorious garment to couer our deformitie out of Gods ſight, to preſerue vs from the heate of his wrath, and to obtaine the euerlaſting bleſſing of our heauenly Father, but alſo it is armour of proofe to defend vs from the violent aſſaults of our ſpirituall enemies. Let vs therefore take vnto vs the ſhield of faith, that we may alſo put on the Lord Ieſus Chriſt,

Rom.13.14.

Chriſt, as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, *Rom.*13. 14. for hauing him we ſhall want nothing, which may either defend our ſelues or offend our enemies; the Lord himſelfe will bee our ſhield and buckler, and therefore it will be impoſſible for our foes to preuaile againſt vs.

§. *Sect.*2. What is meant by quenching Satans firie darts.

But let vs conſider further of the excellency and neceſſity of this ſhield of faith, which appeareth by the vertue thereof in repelling all the fierie darts of Satan. The Apoſtle ſaith, that thereby wee may quench his fierie darts, alluding to the cuſtome of ſouldiers in ancient time, who maliciouſly poyſoned their darts, whereby the bodies of thoſe who were wounded were ſo inflamed, that they could hardly be cured, or eaſed of their raging and burning paine. And ſuch darts are all Satans temptations, whereby we are wounded with ſinne; for if they be not expelled & quenched with the ſhield of faith, they will inflame our luſts to ſinne, and one ſinne will inflame our hearts to another, till there be kindled in vs a world of wickedneſſe. And this we may ſee in the example of Dauid, who after that hee gaue himſelfe to idl neſſe and ſloth, and ſo was pierced with one of Satans firie darts, is preſently inflamed his heart to commit adulterie, and hauing giuen place to that, he was prouoked to murther; ſo that if wee admit one of theſe fierie darts, it will inflame vs to receiue another, and ſo our burning wounds wil torment our conſciences, and moſt hardly admit of any cure.

§. *Sect.*3. Why the ſhield of faith is ſaid rather to quench then to repell Satans darts.

* I call it an improper ſpeech, not becauſe it is vnfit to expreſſe the Apoſtles minde and meaning, The which it doth in moſt liuely manner but becauſe it is metaphoricall or allegoricall conſiſting of borrowed ſpeeches and words drawne from their naturall ſignification. For faith in proprietie of ſpeech, cannot be called a ſhield, nor Satans tentations fiery darts. Neither is it properly the nature of the ſhield to quench but to repell darts which light vpon it. Howſoeuer therefore it is a moſt elegant and ſignificant ſpeech: yet ſtil I affirme with Caluin, that it is tropicall and improper.

And therefore it behoueth vs to take vnto vs the ſhield of faith, whereby wee may quench theſe fierie darts. But why doth the Apoſtle vſe this * improper ſpeech, ſeeing the ſhield doth not quench, but repell the darts that beat vpon it? I anſwere, partly to ſhew the nature of our enemies temptations, namely, that they are fierie, mortall, raging, and pernicious (as before I ſaid) and partly to ſet forth a double vertue of faith; for firſt thereby we repell and beate backe his temptations, and ſo reſiſt him ſtedfaſtly in the faith, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1.*Pet.*5.9. And ſecondly, if Satans darts haue pierced and wounded vs, faith alſo doth coole the ſcorching heate of ſinne, by applying vnto vs the precious balme of Chriſts bloud, ſo that our wounds are not mortall vnto vs, though mortall in themſelues, if they were not cured by this ſoueraigne ſalue of ſinne, which being applied by Faith, doth eaſe the burning torments of our euill conſciences; and preſerueth vs from all danger of death. The firſt of theſe vertues is ſignified hereby, in that hee calleth faith a ſhield, which repelleth Satans temptations, as the ſhield doth the darts that are caſt againſt it: the ſecōd by the word (quenching) namely, that as water quencheth the fire, ſo faith quencheth the fiery darts of Satans temptations, as is aforeſaid.

§. *Sect.*4. Why Satan i called the wicked one,

*Matth.*6.13, and 13.38. Iohn 8.44.

Laſtly, we are to note that he calleth Satan the wicked one, to ſhew vnto vs that he is the Father and authour of all wickedneſſe and ſinne, both by ſinning himſelfe, and prouoking others to ſinne by his temptations. And therefore he is called the wicked or euill one both here, and *Matth.*6.13. But deliuer vs from the euill one. So *Matth.*13.38. The tares are the children of the wicked one, as alſo Iohn 8.44.

CHAP. XIIII.

Of the Helmet of Saluation.

Eſay 59.17. *Rom.*8.24. 1.*Theſ.*5.8.

Hope the He met of ſalu tion,

THe fiſt piece of our Chriſtian armour is the helmet of ſaluation, which is ſo called by a Metonymy of the effect, becauſe it bringeth ſaluation to them that weare it, for wee are ſaued by hope, as it is *Rom.*8.24. which wee are to vnderſtand by the helmet of ſaluation, as appeareth 1.*Theſ.*5.8. where hee exhorteth vs to put on the hope of ſaluation for an Helmet. As therefore ſouldiers when they goe into the field put on their helmet, that thereby they may defend their head, which is their chiefe part, from the cruell blowes of the enemie; ſo we being to fight the ſpirituall battell muſt put on hope both of victorie, and the glorious Crowne belonging thereunto, and ſo ſhall wee neuer turne our backes when we are aſſaulted, ſeeing by the Lords aſſiſtance wee doe aſſuredly hope for victory, and through his mercie and the merits of Chriſt doe expect after our combat is finiſhed, the garland of euerlaſting happineſſe, promiſed to all that ouercome. For though Satan aſſault vs on the one ſide, by offering vnto vs the riches, honours and pleaſures of the World, that thereby hee may intice to ſinne, and ſo yeeld our ſelues his captiues, he ſhall not preuaile againſt vs, if we be armed with this helmet of ſaluation. For as no man in his right wits would ſel his certaine intereſt vnto a goodly inheritance for a bright ſhining counter; ſo much leſſe will any man, who is not ſtarke mad, ſell his aſſured hope of the eternall Kingdome of glorie, by yeelding himſelfe the ſlaue of ſinne and Sathan, to purchaſe for the preſent the Worlds counterfeit ſhining excellencies, which are in truth but mutable, or at leaſt momentanie vanities. And though he aſſault vs on the other ſide with afflictions, croſſes, and perſecutions, as he did Paul, yet we will with him, for the hope of Iſrael, be content to be bound in the chaines of miſerie and affliction. For the heauieſt croſſe will ſeeme tolerable, yea an eaſie yoke and a light burthen,

Acts 28.20.

2.*Cor.*4.17.

then, to thoſe who doe expect and hope for a farre moſt excellent and an eternall waight of glorie; neither can the ſtrait way and the narrow gate diſcourage thoſe, that in the end of their iournie aſſuredly expect a place of pleaſure and neuer fading felicitie. But on the other ſide, if wee doe not put on this helmet, we ſhall not dare to lift vp our heads in the day of battell: for as thoſe who are encouraged with hope of victorie and the ſpoyle enſuing, doe fight valiantly; ſo thoſe who are quite forſaken of hope, doe forſake alſo the field, and caſting downe their armour and weapons, doe either runne away, or cowardly yeeld vnto the enemie.

CHAP. XV

Of the Sword of the Spirit.

§. *Sect.*1. Of the ſword of the ſpirit.

AND ſo much for the defenſiue armour which wee muſt put on. That which followeth is both defenſiue and offenſiue, fit to defend our ſelues, and repell and foile the enemy. And this is the ſword of the ſpirit, the Word of God. This the Apoſtle calleth the ſword of the Spirit, becauſe it is a ſpirituall, and not a carnall weapon, which the Spirit of God himſelfe hath as it were tempered, made, ſharpened, and put into our hands, to repell our ſpirituall enemies whenſoeuer they aſſault vs. If therefore wee would defend our ſelues and driue backe Satan, wee muſt not onely buckle vnto vs the defenſiue armour before ſpoken of (for hee that ſtandeth altogether vpon defence, ſtandeth vpon no defence) but we muſt take vnto vs the ſword of the Spirit, wherewith we may repell and deadly wound our ſpirituall enemies. Wherein we are to imitate the example of our chiefe Captaine Ieſus Chriſt, who though hee was able to haue confuted Satan by other arguments, or to haue confounded him by the omnipotent power of his Deitie, yet as hee ſuffered himſelfe to be tempted in all things like vnto vs, ſo he vſed alſo the ſame weapons, which hee hath appointed vs to vſe in this ſpirituall combate of temptations, to the end that wee might bee taught how to handle them, hauing his example for our imitation, and alſo may conceiue aſſured hope of victorie, conſidering that our Captaine ſubdued Satan with the ſelfe-ſame weapons.

§. *Sect.*2. That the ſword of the ſpirit is a moſt fit weapon to repell Satans temptations.

Whenſoeuer therefore we are aſſaulted by Satan, let vs draw out the ſword of the Spirit, that we may defend our ſelues, and giue him the foile, as being the moſt fit weapon for this purpoſe: for if Satan ſeeke to blinde the eyes of our vnderſtanding with ignorance, that thereby he may lead vs as it were hood-winkt into ſinne, the Word of God is a lampe to our feet, and a light vnto our paths to diſcouer Satans darke illuſions and ſecret ambuſhments, and to guide our feet in the way of peace. If he ſeeke to deceiue vs with his lies, and to ſeduce vs into errours; the Word of God is the Touch-ſtone of truth, by which we diſcerne the pure golden veritie from the droſſie conceits of humane inuentions; and the ſubtill deluſions of Satans probable falſhoods, from the vndoubted certaintie of Gods infallible truth. If he transforme himſelfe into an angell of light, Gods Word doth pull off his vizard, and maketh him appeare in his owne likeneſſe: if he come vpon vs like a roring Lion to deuoure vs, it protecteth vs from danger, and maketh vs ſtrong enough to withſtand his violence.

§. *Sect.*3. How we are to vſe the ſword of the ſpirit in the conflict of temptations.

Seeing therefore this weapon is ſo excellent, let vs moſt highly eſteeme it, and manfully vſe it whenſoeuer Sathan doth aſſault and tempt vs vnto ſinne. For example, when he inticing vs to commit ſin, doth extenuate and mince it as though it were but a May-game, and a tricke of youth which God regardeth not; let vs draw out the ſword of the Spirit, ſaying, it is written, that all they are accurſed who continue not in all that is written in the booke of the law to doe it, *Gal.*3.10. that they who liue according to the fleſh, cannot pleaſe God, *Rom.*8.8. that the burthen of ſinne cannot be light, ſeeing it preſſed out of Chriſt himſelfe a bloudie ſweate, &c.

*Gal.*3.10.
*Rom.*8.8.

On the other ſide, if he aggrauate the hainouſneſſe of our ſinnes, to the end hee may draw vs into deſpaire of Gods mercie; let vs ſay, it is written, I will not the death of a ſinner (ſaith the Lord) but that hee repent and liue, *Ezec.*18.23,32. And, that Ieſus Chriſt came into the World to ſaue ſinners, 1.*Tim.*1.15. And that he came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance, *Matth.*9.13. Iohn 3.16. If he tempt vs to the loue of the World, and to the ſeruice of this vnrighteous Mammon; let vs anſwere him, that it is impoſſible to ſerue two maſters of ſuch contrary diſpoſition, as it is written, *Mat.*6.24. That if wee loue the World, the loue of the Father abideth not in vs, 1.Iohn 2.15. That the amity of the World is enmity againſt God, *Iam.*4.4. Contrariwiſe, if renouncing the World, and endeuouring to ſerue the Lord in vprightneſſe and in truth, hee ſeeke to draw vs from our integrity, by threatning afflictions and perſecution; we are to ſtrengthen our ſelues and reſiſt him with the ſword of the Spirit, remembring that they are bleſſed which ſuffer perſecution for righteouſneſſe ſake, for theirs is the Kingdome of Heauen. *Ma.*5.10. That al that will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus ſhal ſuffer perſecution. 1.*Ti.*3.12. That whoſoeuer loſeth any thing for Chriſts ſake, ſhal receiue in recōpēce an hundreth fold more, and haue euerlaſting life to boote, *Ma.*19.29. If he tempt vs to the neglect of Gods Word, we are to tel him, that all Chriſts ſheepe heare his voice & follow him, *Ioh.*10.27. That whoſoeuer is of God heareth Gods words, *Ioh.*8.47

§. *Sect.*4.
That it behoooueth vs to bee skilful in handling the ſword of the ſpirit.

And thus may we repell the violence of all Satans temptations and giue him the foile, if we will take vnto vs the ſword of the Spirit, and skilfully vſe the ſame in the fight; for it is not ſufficient that we haue this ſword lying by vs, nor to be able to ſhew the goodneſſe thereof in diſcourſe, if in the meane time we neuer draw it out to fight the ſpirituall combat, but let it ruſt in the ſcabberd; but wee muſt alwayes haue it readie for the combat, and (as it were) naked in our hands, that we may ſtrike home, and cut off all the temptations of Sathan, and the luſts of our owne fleſh when they doe aſſault vs. And to this end we muſt be skilfull in the vſe thereof: for though a man haue an excellent weapon, yet if he know not how to vſe it, it will little helpe him either to defend himſelfe or offend his enemie; ſo if a man haue this two edged ſword of Gods Word, and haue no skill to rule it, hee will ſtrike flat-long and not cut, and ſome time wound himſelfe in ſtead of hurting his enemie: yea ſo politicke a Warriour is Satan againſt whom we fight, that if wee be not skilfull in the vſe of this ſword, he will turne the edge and point therof againſt our ſelues, and ſo in ſtead of defending vs, it will, like the ſword of Goliah, be readie for the enemie to cut off our owne head. And therefore it behoooueth vs to come into Gods ſchoole continually, that there wee may learne how to vſe and handle this ſword of Gods Word ſo cunningly, that we may reſiſt Satan in all his aſſaults, and giue him no aduantage in the fight. Otherwiſe he will vſe it to our owne ouerthrow; for if he durſt fight againſt our Sauiour Chriſt with his owne weapon the Word of God, whoſe knowledge was exquiſite and without meaſure, ſaying, It is written; how much more buſie will he be in vſing it againſt vs, who haue not attained vnto the leaſt part of his skill.

§. *Sect.*5.
The folly of thoſe who neglect this ſpirituall weapon.

Whereby appeareth, firſt the carnall wretchleſneſſe of many men, who, as though there were no enemie to aſſault them, haue not this weapon in their houſes at all, or if they haue, yet they beſtow more time in prophane exerciſes, then in ſtudie how to vſe the ſword of the Spirit for their owne defence; or at leaſt truſting to their owne skill as ſufficient in it ſelfe, they ſeldome come to the Lords ſchoole, where they might learne to vſe the weapon of Gods Word for their beſt aduantage. Secondly, hereby appeareth the wicked practice of the enemies of Gods Truth, who take from his people this ſword of the Spirit, which the Lord hath giuen vnto all for their defence. Neither doth the Apoſtle in this place exhort onely the Clergie to take this weapon, but al Chriſtians whatſoeuer, who are aſſaulted with their ſpirituall enemies: but they notwithſtanding conſpiring with Satan to worke the ouerthrow of Gods Church, depriue them of the vſe of the ſword of the Spirit, the Word of God, and ſo betray them into the power of Sathan being able to make no reſiſtance, when their chiefe weapon is taken from them.

CHAP. XVI.

Of Prayer.

§. *Sect.*1.
That prayer is the meanes of obtaining Gods aſſiſtance, and the reſt of the ſpiritual armour.
*Epheſ.*6.18.

THe laſt and chiefe meanes whereby wee may both defend our ſelues, and offend our enemies, 'tis feruent and effectuall Prayer, which the Apoſtle exhorteth vs to vſe, *Ep.*6.18. And pray alwayes with &c. The neceſſitie and profit of which exerciſe is exceeding great in this ſpirituall combate, becauſe thereby we doe obtaine all our ſtrength to fight, and victorie alſo ouer our enemies. For firſt we cannot endure the leaſt aſſault of Satan by our owne ſtrength, vnleſſe we be armed with the power of Gods might, as before I haue ſhewed. And the Lords aſſiſtance, whereby only wee can ouercome, is obtained by earneſt and effectuall Prayer, according to that *Pſal.*50.15. Call vpon me in the day of trouble; ſo will I de-deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me. And our Sauiour preſcribeth vs this meanes to free our ſelues from temptation, or at leaſt from being ouercome by it, that wee craue the Lords aſſiſtance, ſaying, Leade vs not into temptation, but deliuer vs from euill, *Matth.*6.13. So hee exhorteth his Diſciples vnto prayer, leſt they ſhould enter into temptation, Luke 22.40,46. Secondly, we cannot obtaine the ſpirituall armour (before deſcribed) by any meanes of our owne, but thoſe graces of Gods Spirit are his gifts, from whom euery good and perfect gift deſcendeth, *Iam.*1.17. and therefore are to be begged at his hands by earneſt and effectuall Prayer, we hauing his gracious promiſe, that if wee aske we ſhall receiue, *Matth.*7.7. And our Sauiour hath aſſured vs, that whatſoeuer we aske the Father in his Name, hee will giue it vs, Iohn 16.23. And to this his promiſe he addeth his commandement in the Verſe following, ſaying, Aske and you ſhall receiue. Yea, if wee doe but truely deſire the Holy Ghoſt, the Father will giue him vnto vs, Luke 11.13. And he commeth not alone, but bringeth with him our ſpirituall armour, euen all his graces fit for to arme vs in the ſpirituall combat, againſt all the aſſaults of Satan and his aſſiſtants.

§. *Sect.*2. The reſt of the ſpirituall armour is not ſufficient without Prayer.

Exod.17.11.

But whereas theſe graces are in this life but weake and imperfect in vs; our truth being mixt with wil-worſhip and hypocriſie; and the puritie of our conſcience ſtained with our corruption; our knowledge of the Goſpell but in part, and ſhadowed with the vaile of ignorance; our faith mixt with doubting, and weakened with incredulitie; our hope ſhaken from its anker-hold, when the promiſes of God are delayed; and whereas wee alſo are vnskilfull to vſe this ſpirituall armour for our beſt aduantage; therefore it behoueth vs after wee haue armed our ſelues at all points, not to truſt altogether in our armour, but to haue our recourſe vnto our grand Captaine Chriſt Ieſus, acknowledging our owne weakneſſe, and deſiring his aide and aſſiſtance, that being armed with his power, we may obtaine a glorious victorie ouer our ſpirituall enemies. And as Moſes ioyned with Ioſuahs ſword his owne effectuall prayer, which was of farre greater efficacie; for when hee held vp his hands in prayer, Iſrael preuailed; but when hee fainted, Amaleck had the vpper hand: ſo wee being to fight againſt the ſpirituall Amalekites, are not wholly to truſt in our ſpirituall weapons, but we are to implore continually the Lords aſſiſtance by heartie prayer, aſſuring our ſelues that if wee lift vp our hands and hearts vnto God, we ſhall in the end obtaine a full victorie; but if wee faint, the ſpirituall Amaleck will preuaile againſt vs. Whilſt our minds lie groueling on the earth, it is an eaſie matter for theſe ſpirituall wickedneſſes to ouercome vs, ſeeing they fight againſt vs from high places; but if wee lift vp our hearts in prayer vnto God, our minds and ſoules ſhall be as it were tranſported into Heauen which is a tower of ſtrength, into which our ſpirituall enemies cannot approach. Whenſoeuer therefore we are aſſaulted by Satan, let vs lift vp our ſoules into Heauen by effectuall prayer, and ſo we ſhall be out of his reach.

§. *Sect.*3. The properties required in Prayer.

Luke 18.1.
1.Theſ.5.17.
Pſal.50.15.

Now that our prayers may be effectuall, there are diuers conditions and properties required in them by the Apoſtle in this place. Firſt, that we pray continually, which alſo our Sauiour Chriſt enioyneth vs Luke 18.1. And Paul alſo, 1.*Theſ.*5.17. Not that wee muſt neglect all other exerciſes and doe nothing but pray; for there is a time to heare the Word, to doe the workes of mercie and of our callings; but his meaning is that wee be alwayes readie to pray vpon all good occaſions; eſpecially in the time of temptation this dutie is required, according to that, *Pſal.*50.15. And therefore the Apoſtle ſaith not, that we muſt pray ἐν παντὶ χρόνῳ, in euery particular time and ſeaſon, but ἐν παντὶ καιρῷ, in euery fit time, when iuſt occaſion and opportunitie is offered. Seeing then in the time of temptation wee doe eſpecially need the Lords helpe; therefore, that aboue all other is the opportune and conuenient time wherein wee are to implore his gracious aſſiſtance. Where by the way, the ſtinted prayers of the Popiſh rabble, which they reſtraine to ſet houres is confuted, for the Apoſtle willeth vs alwaies to be in a readineſſe when any fit occaſion is offered.

§. *Sect.*4. Wee muſt pray with all maner of prayer and ſupplication.

The ſecond thing required, is, that wee pray with all manner of prayer and ſupplication. The former word here vſed is προσευχὴ, which ſignifieth the earneſt deſiring of any good thing: the other is δέησις, which is the deprecation of any euill; ſo that whether wee want any thing that is good, or would be deliuered from any thing which is euill, wee muſt haue recourſe vnto God by prayer, that we may obtaine the one and auoid the other; but more eſpecially when we feele the want or weakneſſe of any part of the ſpirituall armour, the graces of Gods Spirit, we are to begge them at Gods hand, that ſo we may be enabled to ſtand in the encounter; and when wee apprehend the extreame malice, ioyned with the great power and cunning policie of our ſpiritual enemies, we are earneſtly to pray, that the Lord will not lead vs into temptations, or that he will not ſuffer vs to fall therein and to be ouerthrowne. And theſe our prayers muſt not onely be publike in the Church, but alſo priuate in our chambers; neither muſt wee be alwayes begging theſe benefits at Gods hand, but hauing obtained them, wee muſt be as readie to giue him thankes, and to aſcribe the glorie of all vnto him, who is the author and beſtower of all vertue and grace which is in vs; and ſo calling vpon God with all manner of prayer, hee will be continually readie to aſſiſt vs in our ſpirituall combate.

§. Sect.5. That wee muſt pray in or by the ſpirit.

The third thing required, is, that we pray in or by the ſpirit, for the word here vſed may ſignifie both. Firſt, therefore wee muſt pray in the ſpirit; to which is required, firſt, that wee pray with vnderſtanding; in which reſpect the ignorant Papiſts offend, who pray in an vnknowne tongue; and the ignorant Proteſtants alſo, who though they pray in their owne language, yet know not the ſenſe and meaning of that they ſpeake. Secondly, that we pray with attentiue minds, ioyning our hearts with our tongues, and thoughts with words; to which is oppoſed the prayer of the lips alone, when as wee draw neere vnto God with our mouthes, our hearts in the meane time being farre from him, as it is Eſay 29.13. Which kind of prayer is odious and abominable vnto God, for what more groſſe diſcord, then when the tongue and heart diſagree from one another, which ſhould bee tuned in vniſone? And as the carcaſſe being ſeuered from the ſoule is preſently corrupt and ſtinketh; ſo the prayer of the lips being ſeuered from the prayer of the heart, which is the life and ſoule of it, is but a dead carcaſſe of prayer, and ſtinketh in Gods noſtrils. Thirdly, that we pray with a pure conſcience and faith vnfained, lifting vp pure hands to God, without wrath or doubting, as it is 1.Tim.2.8. to which is oppoſed prayer proceeding from a polluted conſcience, when as men liue in their ſinnes without any true ſorrow for thoſe which are paſt, or any ſincere purpoſe to forſake them in the time to come. Which prayers muſt needs proceed from an heart full of incredulitie, ſeeing they haue no promiſe in the word whereupon they may ground their faith: nay, contrariwiſe it is ſaid, that God heareth not ſinners, Iohn 9.31. that is, ſuch as goe on in their ſinnes without repentance, hauing no purpoſe of heart to leaue and forſake them. And thus you ſee what it is to pray in the ſpirit, which we cannot performe, vnleſſe we pray through and by the Spirit of God, which helpeth our infirmities, and teacheth vs to pray as wee ought, yea it ſelfe maketh requeſt for vs with ſighes which cannot be expreſſed, as it is Rom.8.26.

Eſay 1.15.

§. Sect.6. Of watchfulneſſe.

Math.26.
1.Pet.4.7.

The fourth thing required is watchfulnes; which dutie is required ioyntly with prayer in many places. Our Sauiour three times ioyneth them together, ſaying, Watch and pray that yee enter not into temptation, Mat. 26. And the Apoſtle Peter, 1.Epiſt.4.7. ſaith, Now the end of all things is at hand: Bee yee therefore ſober and watching vnto prayer. As though he ſhould ſay, Your enemie the Deuill as a roaring Lion walketh about, ſeeking whom hee may deuoure, and therefore it behoou eth you at all times like valiant and carefull ſouldiers, who are ſtill in danger to be aſſaulted by their enemies, to bee ſober and watch, as it is 1.Pet.5.8. but now more eſpecially ſeeing the end of all things is at hand, for Satan knowing that his time is but ſhort, will redouble all his forces to worke your deſtruction, euen as ſouldiers will moſt fiercely aſſault a towne, when as they cannot long lie at the ſiege, either by reaſon of Winter drawing on, or the approching of new forces to relieue the towne or raiſe the ſiege. Seeing therefore Sathan redoubleth his force and care in working our deſtruction, let vs redouble our care and watchfulneſſe in ſeeking to preuent his force and malice. For if Sathan watch continually that hee may murther vs, ſhall not wee bee watchfull in withſtanding his aſſaults? Hee is continually in armes to ouerthrow vs, and ſhall not wee watch night and day in our Chriſtian armour, that wee may defeat his forces and obtaine victorie?

1.Pet.5.8.

§. Sect.7. Of bodily an ſpirituall watchfulneſ

Now this our watchfulneſſe is partly of the bodie, and partly of the ſoule. The bodily watching is the abſtaining from naturall ſleepe, to the end that wee may giue our ſelues vnto prayer; when as with Dauid wee water our couch with teares, Pſal.6.6. and call vpon God not onely in the day, but in the night alſo, as it is Pſal.88.1. And when as euen at midnight wee rouſe vp our ſelues to giue thankes vnto God for his mercie and benefits, as it is Pſal.119.62. The watchfulneſſe of the ſoule is when as we doe not ſleepe in our ſinnes, being rocked in the cradle of carnall ſecuritie, but ſhake off our drowſineſſe by vnfained repentance, riſing vp to newneſſe of life. And to this watchfulneſſe the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, Epheſ.5.14 Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ſtand vp from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall giue thee light, &c. for we are dead in our ſinnes, till Chriſt by his Spirit mortifie them and reuiue vs, raiſing vs vp to newneſſe of life, as it is, Epheſ.2.1. Though therefore we take our reſt and ſleep in that meaſure which nature requireth, yet let vs not ſleepe as doe other, (to wit, in carnall ſecuritie) but let vs watch and bee ſober, as it is 1.Theſ.5.6. becauſe in this reſpect it is time that wee ſhould ariſe from ſleepe, for the darke night of ignorance is paſt; and the bright Sun-ſhine day of the Goſpell is come, let vs therefore caſt away the workes of darkneſſe and let vs put on the armour of light: So that we walke honeſtly as in the day: not in gluttony and drunkenneſſe, neither in chambering and wantonneſſe, nor in ſtrife and enuying: but putting on the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, taking no thought for

§. Sect.8.
With our watchfulneſſe we muſt ioyne affiance in Gods prouidence watching ouer vs.

And this is the Chriſtian watch which we are to joyne with prayer: but as I would not haue vs put our whole confidence in the ſpirituall armour, ſo much leſſe in our owne care and watchfulneſſe; for we muſt relie our ſelues vpon God only, deſiring him to watch ouer vs while wee ſleepe; but yet with the Lords aſſiſtance wee muſt joyne our endeuour, and not drowſily and ſleepily receiue his aide. And as the godly Husbandman expecteth the fruites of the earth from the bleſſing of God, and yet notwithſtanding vſeth all paines, care and diligence in plowing, ſowing, and harrowing his ground; ſo wee are to ſeeke deliuerance from the force and malice of our ſpirituall enemies of God alone, but yet we are to joyne our good endeuour carefully and diligently, vſing all the good meanes which are ordained of God for this purpoſe.

§. Sect.9.
Of perſeuerance in prayer.

Rom.12.12.

Pſal.27.14.

1.Theſ.5.17.

Luk.18.1.

Why the Lord delaieth to grant the petitions of his children,

The fifth thing required is perſeuerance in prayer; for it is not ſufficient to pray earneſtly and feruently, for a ſpurt, but wee muſt continue therein, expecting the Lords leiſure. And vnto this we are exhorted, Rom. 12.12. continuing in prayer. So the Prophet Dauid perſwadeth to expect and waite for the Lord, and to be ſtrong in continuing conſtantly in our courſe, and then in the end God will comfort our hearts, *Pſal.*27.14. And the Apoſtle Paul willeth vs to pray inceſſantly, like importunate ſuiters who will haue no nay, though they receiue many denials. To this dutie our Sauiour encourageth vs by the parable of the vnrighteous Iudge, who though hee neither cared for man nor feared God, yet was moued through importunitie to doe the poore Widdow juſtice; and therefore our heauenly Father will much more grant the importunate ſuites of his Elect, eſpecially hauing bound himſelfe thereunto by his moſt gracious promiſes. True it is that the Lord doth many times deferre to grant the prayers of his children, as though hee heard or regarded them not; when as in truth he neuer delayeth any of their lawfull ſuites, vnleſſe it bee to this end that hee may thereby either conuay vnto them greater bleſſings then they deſire, as when hee giueth ſpirituall graces in ſtead of earthly benefits; or elſe that thereby he may moue them to pray more feruently, and ſo exerciſe and increaſe their faith, hope and patience; or that hee may ſhew theſe his graces to the prayſe of his glorie who hath beſtowed them, both to others and the parties themſelues; or that hee may mooue vs more thankfully to receiue and highly to eſteeme his benefits, after by long ſuite wee haue obtained them, which wee would not ſo greatly regard if hee beſtowed them at the firſt motion. A notable example hereof we haue in the Canaanitiſh woman, both for our comfort & imitation: to whoſe prayers our Sauiour Chriſt gaue (as it ſeemed) no eare; and when he did take notice of her ſuite, hee giueth her a double repulſe, firſt by telling her that hee was ſent onely to the loſt ſheepe of the houſe of Iſrael; and when this would not mooue her to ſurceaſe her ſuite, he vſeth a more bitter deniall, telling her that it was not fit to take the childrens bread and to caſt it to Whelpes: but when ſhe was not hereby diſcouraged, nor her faith extinguiſhed, but rather of a ſparke increaſed to a great flame, at the laſt ſhee doth not onely receiue what ſhee deſired, but alſo was ſent away with great commendation. But wherefore did not our Sauiour grant her petition at the firſt hearing? Surely not that he grudged her her ſuite, or was loath to entertaine it, but to the end that hee might make her more earneſtly implore his helpe, and manifeſt to all the World her ſingular faith; and laſtly, that ſhe might be an example to vs for our imitation, both to encourage vs in asking of God the ſupply of our wants, and alſo to perſeuere in prayer, though at the firſt God ſeemeth not to regard vs, yea though wee receiue diuers repulſes and many diſcouragements: which if we performe, we ſhall haue a notable teſtimonie of a true faith, when as wee can patiently abide the Lords leiſure, though he doe deferre his helpe; for hee that beleeueth, will not make haſte, as it is Eſay 28.16, and in the end we ſhall be ſure to obtaine our godly and honeſt deſires, if not as wee would, yet as it ſhall be moſt for our good; and withall eternall bleſſedneſſe. For the Lord is the God of iudgement; and bleſſed are all they that wait for him, as it is Eſay 30.18.

§. Sect.10.
How we muſt behaue our ſelues when God deferreth to heare our prayers.

When therefore we are aſſaulted by our ſpirituall enemies, and readie to faint in the combat of temptations, let vs call vpon the Lord for his aſſiſtance, that we may be freed from dangers and deliuered from them; and if the Lord doe ſeeme to deferre his helpe, and ſuffer vs ſtill to beare the brunt of the battaile, after we haue many times implored his aſſiſtance, yet let vs not be diſcouraged, but conſtantly perſeuere in prayer, aſſuring our ſelues that the Lord will either free vs from the temptation, or elſe giue vs ſtrength to endure and ouercome it: for he hath promiſed that he will not ſuffer vs to be tempted aboue our power, but that hee will giue a good iſſue to the temptation that we may be able to beare it, and hee is faithfull and true of his word: as it is 1.*Cor.*10.13. It may bee that the Lord will not quite free vs from the skirmiſh of temptation, though we haue often deſired it of him, either becauſe he would further try our Chriſtian valour, and exerciſe our faith, or reſtraine vs from ſinne, eſpecially ſpirituall pride, to which we are too too ſubject; as wee may ſee in the example of Paul, who being buffeted by the meſſenger of Satan, beſought the Lord thrice that he might depart from him: but the Lord anſwered that his grace which he beſtowed on him was ſufficient, and that his power was made manifeſt in the Apoſtles weaknes, as appeareth 2.Cor.12.8,9. Now the cauſe why the Lord would not altogether releaſe him, was, that hee might be humbled hereby, the pricke of the fleſh letting out the winde of vaine glorie, which would haue puffed him vp, by reaſon of the multitude of reuelations which hee had receiued. Let vs not therefore ſend for the Lords aſſiſtance (as it were) by poſte; and preſcribe the Lord a time with the Bethulians, wherein if wee be not relieued wee will faint and cowardly yeeld: for that which the Prophet ſpeaketh from the Lord concerning the Viſion, may fitly bee ſpoken of the Lords aide and helpe; Though it tarie, watch; for it ſhall ſurely come and not ſtay, Habac.2.3.

Hab.2.3.

§. Sect. 11.
Prayer to bee made for all the Saints.

The laſt thing required in our prayers, is, that we doe not onely pray for our ſelues, but alſo for all the Saints. For wee are fellow members of the ſame bodie, wee are fellow ſouldiers which fight vnder the ſame Captaine Ieſus Chriſt, and conſequently their victorie is our victorie, and their foiles are our foiles. As therefore Souldiers doe not only ſtand vpon their ſeuerall guards, but ioyne their forces together, whereby it commeth to paſſe, that they who being ſcattered might eaſily bee ouercome, hauing vnited their forces are vnreſiſtable; ſo we are not only to ſtand vpō our own defence, but to ioyne in prayer with the whole Church Militant, and then ſhal not our ſpirituall enemies ſtand againſt vs: for if the prayer of one righteous man auaileth much, being feruent and effectuall, of what efficacie and power are the Prayers of all the righteous ioyned together?

Iames 5.16.

§. Sect.12.
No armour appointed for the backe.

And thus haue I deſcribed the Chriſtian armour, which euery man is to put on before he enter into the combate with our ſpirituall enemies; amongſt all which there is not any piece appointed for the back, to note vnto vs that wee muſt neuer retire, but manfully ſtand to it euen in the face of our enemie. For if we reſiſt Satan, he will flee from vs, Iam.4.7. but if we giue ground and betake our ſelues to flight, hee will purſue vs ſwiftly and deadly wound vs; for wee haue no armour on the backe to defend vs from the violence of his blowes, neither will the Lord protect ſuch faint-hearted cowards as runne away from his ſtandard, not daring to truſt and relie vpon his almightie power and neuer failing aſſiſtance, which he hath promiſed to all that fight his battels. Seeing therefore there is no ſafetie in flight, and aſſured victorie to thoſe that faint not but endure the brunt of the skirmiſh vnto the end, let vs manfully ſtand vpon our guard, neither fleeing from nor yeelding to our ſpirituall enemies; for where can wee bee more ſafe then vnder the Lords ſtandard? where can wee bee more honourably imployed, then in fighting his battels? how can our ſtate bee more dangerous, then when wee flee and Satan purſueth vs? how can it bee more deſperate, then when wee yeeld our ſelues captiue to Satan to be bound in the fetters of ſinne, vntill the ſentence of condemnation be pronounced on vs in the generall ſeſſions at the day of Chriſts appearing.

Iames 4.7.

CHAP. XVII.

Of Satans ſtratagems.

§. Sect.1.
Satan worke vpon our o corrupt affections, and fi teth his tentations to eu ry ones diſpoſition.

ANd ſo much concerning our ſpirituall armour, as alſo our preparation to the ſpirituall warfare. Now we are to ſpeake of the battell it ſelfe: where firſt we are to conſider of Satans ſtratagems, and the manner of his fight; and ſecondly, of the ſpeciall conflicts or temptations wherewith he aſſaileth vs. Concerning Satans ſtratagems, wee are to know that they are many and dangerous; with which he will eaſily circumuent and ouerthrow vs; if wee doe not carefully preuent, or cunningly auoid them. For firſt hee dealeth not with all alike, neither vſeth the ſame weapons to foile euery one, but he obſerueth the qualitie and diſpoſition of his enemies, and accordingly he fitteth his temptations, ſo as they may be moſt forcible to preuaile againſt them. And to this end hee obſerueth to what ſinnes wee are moſt inclined, either by nature, or by preſent occaſion, and to thoſe hee inciteth vs, thruſting vs as it were downe the Hill, where wee are apt to runne head-long of our owne accord; and ſeconding his aſſault with the aide of our corrupt fleſh, which entertaineth willingly his ſuggeſtions, and vrgeth vs violently to yeeld to his temptations. So that Satan neuer ſtriueth againſt the ſtreame, but vſeth the tide of our affections to carrie vs ſwiftly into a Sea of ſinne.

§. Sect.2.
With what temptations Satan aſſaulteth the ambitious.

For example, if he find a man ambitiouſly affected, then hee couereth his hooke with the baite of honours: and thus hee tempted Abimelech to murther all his worthy brethren, that he might obtaine the ſoueraigntie: thus he tempted Ioab to ſtab traiterouſly Abner and Amaſa, that he might ſtill be Captaine Generall: thus he tempted Abſolon to vſurpe the Kingdome, though it were by

2.Sam.3.&20.

by the vtter deſtruction of his owne father. And thus hee tempted our Sauiour Chriſt to worſhip him, by offering him all the Kingdomes of the World, thinking belike that he was inclined to ambition, ſeeing hee profeſſed himſelfe a great King, and had no worldly Kingdome in his poſſeſſion. So in our dayes he tempteth the ambitious ſubject to aſpire, without juſt title, to the Crowne of their lawfull Princes; and thoſe who are Kings alreadie to affect a Monarchie, by vſurping wrongfully their Neighbour Kingdomes: So hee tempteth the Spiritualtie to come by Church-preferments, rather commended by the gifts of the purſe then of the minde; and the Laietie to buy great Offices at ſo high a rate that they cannot liue of them, vnleſſe they ſell juſtice by taking bribes to betray the innocent; and their honeſtie alſo by vſing all extortion.

§. Sect. 3.
How Satan tempteth the voluptuous.

If he find that men are addicted to voluptuouſneſſe, then he tempteth them to ſinne by offering carnall pleaſures; and thus he tempted Noah to drunkenneſſe, Dauid to adulterie, Salomon to idolatrie and all wickedneſſe. And thus now hee tempteth ſome to good fellowſhip, that is, to ſpend their whole time in drunkenneſſe, belly-cheare, and all riotous exceſſe and Epicuriſme; ſome to luſt, incontinencie, and all voluptuous pleaſures of the fleſh. Or if hee cannot bring them to ſuch carnall groſſeneſſe, hee will intice them to vſe lawfull recreations vnlawfully, immoderately ſpending all their time in pleaſure, which they ſhould beſtow in the ſeruice of God, by imploying themſelues in the generall duties of Chriſtianitie, and in the ſpeciall duties of their callings.

§. Sect. 4.
How Satan worketh vpon mens couetouſneſſe.
1. Tim. 6. 9. 10.

But if hee find that men are giuen to couetouſneſſe, then hath hee matter enough to worke vpon: for as the Apoſtle ſaith, They that will be rich fall into temptations and ſnares, and into many fooliſh and noyſome luſts, which drowne men in perdition and deſtruction: for the deſire of mony is the root of all euill. With this baite he allured Laban to deale churliſhly and vnjuſtly with Iacob, and his owne children; and to inrich himſelfe by impoueriſhing them, for whoſe ſake he ſhould haue gathered his riches. He inticed Balaam to curſe the people whom God had bleſſed, by offering him monie, the wages of wickedneſſe. He tempted Gehazi to take the talent and change of raiment of Naaman, ſelling for this ſmall trifle Gods honour and his Maſters credit. Hee allured Achab to murther Naboth, that hee might purloine his Vineyard, and ſo purchaſe a place of pleaſure with the bloud of his faithfull ſubject. With this baite he inticed Iudas to betray his Maſter, ſelling him for thirtie pieces of ſiluer, whoſe worth could not be valued with many Worlds. And hereby alſo he prouoked Demetrius to oppoſe himſelfe to the preaching of the Goſpell, becauſe hee would not loſe his gaine in making ſiluer ſhrines to the Idoll, Acts 19. 25. Neither was this argument drawne from profit forcible onely in former times, but now alſo it doth no leſſe perſwade to ſinne. For whom almoſt doth not Satan catch, or at leaſt intangle in this golden net? Doth hee not inſnare as well Profeſſors of Religion, as profeſſed Worldlings, ſo that in greedie ſeeking of gaine it is not eaſie to diſcerne the one from the other? Doth hee not ouercome all ſorts and conditions of men, as well thoſe who abound in all things, as thoſe that enjoy little, by proportionating his offers of riches, according to their ſeuerall eſtates; much to theſe that haue much, and little to thoſe that poſſeſſe little? For he commeth to Princes, and promiſeth them huge ſummes of monie, if they will lay intolerable taxations on their ſubjects, or rob the Church of her liuings, that is, God himſelfe of his right. He commeth to Magiſtrates and Iudges, and offereth vnto them great bribes, if they will peruert Iuſtice, and ſo putteth out their eyes that they cannot ſee right from wrong: for, reward blindeth the eyes of the wiſe, and peruerteth the words of the iuſt, as it is Deut. 16. 19. If hee ſee one in office couetous, he promiſeth great reuenues and ſtately houſes, if hee will deceiue the Prince of his right, and oppreſſe the ſubiect with grieuous extortion: and the like offers he maketh to couetous Gentlemen, if they will build their houſes with the bloud of their tenants, and by grinding the faces of the poore, inhaunſing their rents, and increaſing their fines to ſuch vnreaſonable rates, that the poore tenant can ſcarſe with the ſweat of his face earne his bread. Neither doth hee angle with this bait in the Court and Countrie only, but hee thinketh it fit for the Citie alſo: for he commeth to the couetous Merchant, and promiſeth him that in ſuch a countrie he ſhall haue good traſficke, if hee will diſſemble his Religion, that is, denie Chriſt before men. He offereth to the ſhop-keeper increaſe of wealth, if hee will vſe falſe waights and meaſures, and falſe lights, or elſe ſell ſuch wares as are neither profitable for the Church nor Common-wealth; or adulterate and falſifie his ſtuffe by mixing bad with good; or aske double the price, ſwearing that it coſt him more then afterwardes himſelfe is contented to take: in a word, if in buying and ſelling hee will vſe fraud, lying, ſwearing, and forſwearing, hee promiſeth to make him a rich man; though oftentimes he deceiueth him; for in ſtead of increaſing in wealth by theſe vngodly practiſes, he becomes a bankerupt, the Lord laying his curſe on thoſe wicked meanes, without whoſe bleſſing the builder buildeth, and the ſinne, eſpecially ſpirituall pride, to which we are too too ſubject; as wee may ſee in the example of Paul, who being buffeted by the meſſenger of Satan, beſought the Lord thrice that he might depart from him: but the Lord anſwered that his grace which he beſtowed on him was ſufficient, and that his power was made manifeſt in the Apoſtles weaknes, as appeareth 2.*Cor.*12.8,9. Now the cauſe why the Lord would not altogether releaſe him, was, that hee might be humbled hereby, the pricke of the fleſh letting out the winde of vaine glorie, which would haue puffed him vp, by reaſon of the multitude of reuelations which hee had receiued. Let vs not therefore ſend for the Lords aſſiſtance (as it were) by poſte; and preſcribe the Lord a time with the Bethulians, wherein if wee be not relieued wee will faint and cowardly yeeld: for that which the Prophet ſpeaketh from the Lord concerning the Viſion, may fitly bee ſpoken of the Lords aide and helpe; Though it tarie, watch; for it ſhall ſurely come and not ſtay, *Habac.*2,3.

Prayer to bee made for all the Saints.

The laſt thing required in our prayers, is, that we doe not onely pray for our ſelues, but alſo for all the Saints. For wee are fellow members of the ſame bodie, wee are fellow ſouldiers which fight vnder the ſame Captaine Ieſus Chriſt, and conſequently their victorie is our victorie, and their foiles are our foiles. As therefore Souldiers doe not only ſtand vpon their ſeuerall guards, but ioyne their forces together, whereby it commeth to paſſe, that they who being ſcattered might eaſily bee ouercome, hauing vnited their forces are vnreſiſtable; ſo we are not only to ſtand vpō our own defence, but to ioyne in prayer with the whole Church Militant, and then ſhal not our ſpirituall enemies ſtand againſt vs: for if the prayer of one righteous man auaileth much, being feruent and effectuall, of what efficacie and power are the Prayers of all the righteous ioyned together?

*§. Sect.*12.
No armour appointed for the backe.

And thus haue I deſcribed the Chriſtian armour, which euery man is to put on before he enter into the combate with our ſpirituall enemies; amongſt all which there is not any piece appointed for the back, to note vnto vs that wee muſt neuer retire, but manfully ſtand to it euen in the face of our enemie. For if we reſiſt Satan, he will flee from vs, *Iam.*4.7. but if we giue ground and betake our ſelues to flight, hee will purſue vs ſwiftly and deadly wound vs; for wee haue no armour on the backe to defend vs from the violence of his blowes, neither will the Lord protect ſuch faint-hearted cowards as runne away from his ſtandard, not daring to truſt and relie vpon his almightie power and neuer failing aſſiſtance, which he hath promiſed to all that fight his battels. Seeing therefore there is no ſafetie in flight, and aſſured victorie to thoſe that faint not but endure the brunt of the skirmiſh vnto the end, let vs manfully ſtand vpon our guard, neither fleeing from nor yeelding to our ſpirituall enemies; for where can wee bee more ſafe then vnder the Lords ſtandard? where can wee bee more honourably imployed, then in fighting his battels? how can our ſtate bee more dangerous, then when wee flee and Satan purſueth vs? how can it bee more deſperate, then when wee yeeld our ſelues captiue to Satan to be bound in the fetters of ſinne, vntill the ſentence of condemnation be pronounced on vs in the generall ſeſſions at the day of Chriſts appearing.

CHAP. XVII.

Of Satans ſtratagems.

Satan worke vpon our ow corrupt affections, and fi teth his tentations to e ry ones dispo ſition.

AND ſo much concerning our ſpirituall armour, as alſo our preparation to the ſpirituall warfare. Now we are to ſpeake of the battell it ſelfe: where firſt we are to conſider of Satans ſtratagems, and the manner of his fight; and ſecondly, of the ſpeciall conflicts or temptations wherewith he aſſaileth vs. Concerning Satans ſtratagems, wee are to know that they are many and dangerous; with which he will eaſily circumuent and ouerthrow vs; if wee doe not carefully preuent, or cunningly auoid them. For firſt hee dealeth not with all alike, neither vſeth the ſame weapons to foile euery one, but he obſerueth the qualitie and diſpoſition of his enemies, and accordingly he fitteth his temptations, ſo as they may be moſt forcible to preuaile againſt them. And to this end hee obſerueth to what ſinnes wee are moſt inclined, either by nature, or by preſent occaſion, and to thoſe hee inciteth vs, thruſting vs as it were downe the Hill, where wee are apt to runne head-long of our owne accord; and ſeconding his aſſault with the aide of our corrupt fleſh, which entertaineth willingly his ſuggeſtions, and vrgeth vs violently to yeeld to his temptations. So that Satan neuer ſtriueth againſt the ſtreame, but vſeth the tide of our affections to carrie vs ſwiftly into a Sea of ſinne.

*§. Sect.*2.
With what temptations Satan aſſaulteth the ambitious.

*Iudg.*9.
2.*Sam.*3.&20.

For example, if he find a man ambitiouſly affected, then hee couereth his hooke with the baite of honours: and thus hee tempted Abimelech to murther all his worthy brethren, that he might obtaine the ſoueraigntie: thus he tempted Ioab to ſtab traiterouſly Abner and Amaſa, that he might ſtill be Captaine Generall: thus he tempted Abſolon to vſurpe the Kingdome, though it were by the vtter deſtruction of his owne father. And thus hee tempted our Sauiour Chriſt to worſhip him, by offering him all the Kingdomes of the World, thinking belike that he was inclined to ambition, ſeeing hee profeſſed himſelfe a great King, and had no worldly Kingdome in his poſſeſſion. So in our dayes he tempteth the ambitious ſubject to aſpire, without juſt title, to the Crowne of their lawfull Princes; and thoſe who are Kings alreadie to affect a Monarchie, by vſurping wrongfully their Neighbour Kingdomes: So hee tempteth the Spiritualtie to come by Church-preferments, rather commended by the gifts of the purſe then of the minde; and the Laietie to buy great Offices at ſo high a rate that they cannot liue of them, vnleſſe they ſell juſtice by taking bribes to betray the innocent; and their honeſtie alſo by vſing all extortion.

§. Sect. 3.
How Satan tempteth the voluptuous.

If he find that men are addicted to voluptuouſneſſe, then he tempteth them to ſinne by offering carnall pleaſures; and thus he tempted Noah to drunkenneſſe, Dauid to adulterie, Salomon to idolatrie and all wickedneſſe. And thus now hee tempteth ſome to good fellowſhip, that is, to ſpend their whole time in drunkenneſſe, belly-cheare, and all riotous exceſſe and Epicuriſme; ſome to luſt, incontinencie, and all voluptuous pleaſures of the fleſh. Or if hee cannot bring them to ſuch carnall groſſeneſſe, hee will intice them to vſe lawfull recreations vnlawfully, immoderately ſpending all their time in pleaſure, which they ſhould beſtow in the ſeruice of God, by imploying themſelues in the generall duties of Chriſtianitie, and in the ſpeciall duties of their callings.

§. Sect. 4.
How Satan worketh vpon mens couetouſneſſe.
1. Tim.* 6.9.10.

But if hee find that men are giuen to couetouſneſſe, then hath hee matter enough to worke vpon: for as the Apoſtle ſaith, They that will be rich fall into temptations and ſnares, and into many fooliſh and noyſome luſts, which drowne men in perdition and deſtruction: for the deſire of mony is the root of all euill. With this baite he allured Laban to deale churliſhly and vnjuſtly with Iacob, and his owne children; and to inrich himſelfe by impoueriſhing them, for whoſe ſake he ſhould haue gathered his riches. He inticed Balaam to curſe the people whom God had bleſſed, by offering him monie, the wages of wickedneſſe. He tempted Gehazi to take the talent and change of raiment of Naaman, ſelling for this ſmall trifle Gods honour and his Maſters credit. Hee allured Achab to murther Naboth, that hee might purloine his Vineyard, and ſo purchaſe a place of pleaſure with the bloud of his faithfull ſubject. With this baite he inticed Iudas to betray his Maſter, ſelling him for thirtie pieces of ſiluer, whoſe worth could not be valued with many Worlds. And hereby alſo he prouoked Demetrius to oppoſe himſelfe to the preaching of the Goſpell, becauſe hee would not loſe his gaine in making ſiluer ſhrines to the Idoll, Acts 19.25. Neither was this argument drawne from profit forcible onely in former times, but now alſo it doth no leſſe perſwade to ſinne. For whom almoſt doth not Satan catch, or at leaſt intangle in this golden net? Doth hee not inſnare as well Profeſſors of Religion, as profeſſed Worldlings, ſo that in greedie ſeeking of gaine it is not eaſie to diſcerne the one from the other? Doth hee not ouercome all ſorts and conditions of men, as well thoſe who abound in all things, as thoſe that enjoy little, by proportionating his offers of riches, according to their ſeuerall eſtates; much to theſe that haue much, and little to thoſe that poſſeſſe little? For he commeth to Princes, and promiſeth them huge ſummes of monie, if they will lay intolerable taxations on their ſubjects, or rob the Church of her liuings, that is, God himſelfe of his right. He commeth to Magiſtrates and Iudges, and offereth vnto them great bribes, if they will peruert Iuſtice, and ſo putteth out their eyes that they cannot ſee right from wrong: for, reward blindeth the eyes of the wiſe, and peruerteth the words of the iuſt, as it is Deut. 16.19. If hee ſee one in office couetous, he promiſeth great reuenues and ſtately houſes, if hee will deceiue the Prince of his right, and oppreſſe the ſubiect with grieuous extortion: and the like offers he maketh to couetous Gentlemen, if they will build their houſes with the bloud of their tenants, and by grinding the faces of the poore, inhaunſing their rents, and increaſing their fines to ſuch vnreaſonable rates, that the poore tenant can ſcarſe with the ſweat of his face earne his bread. Neither doth hee angle with this bait in the Court and Countrie only, but hee thinketh it fit for the Citie alſo: for he commeth to the couetous Merchant, and promiſeth him that in ſuch a countrie he ſhall haue good traſficke, if hee will diſſemble his Religion, that is, denie Chriſt before men. He offereth to the ſhop-keeper increaſe of wealth, if hee will vſe falſe waights and meaſures, and falſe lights, or elſe ſell ſuch wares as are neither profitable for the Church nor Common-wealth; or adulterate and falſifie his ſtuffe by mixing bad with good; or aske double the price, ſwearing that it coſt him more then afterwardes himſelfe is contented to take: in a word, if in buying and ſelling hee will vſe fraud, lying, ſwearing, and forſwearing, hee promiſeth to make him a rich man; though oftentimes he deceiueth him; for in ſtead of increaſing in wealth by theſe vngodly practiſes, he becomes a bankerupt, the Lord laying his curſe on thoſe wicked meanes, without whoſe bleſſing the builder buildeth, and the labourer laboureth but in vaine, as it is Pſal. 127.1,2. So alſo hee commeth to the Artificer, and telleth him that if hee will be rich, hee muſt make ſale ware: and what is that? ſuch as is ſleight and altogether vnfit for vſe; as though that were moſt fit for ſale which is ſleight and altogether vnprofitable. And ſo common now adayes is this fault, that no greater diſpraiſe can be giuen, then to ſay it is ſale ware, as though now nothing which is good and ſubſtantiall were fit to be ſold. And with theſe and ſuch like ſnares doth Satan intangle thoſe that are couetous, and haue ſet their hearts vpon the earthly Mammon; which I haue the longer ſtood vpon, becauſe it is a temptation moſt dangerous; neither doth Satan by any meanes more eaſily ſacke our ſoules, and ſpoile vs of Gods graces, then when he aſcendeth by theſe golden ladders, or maketh a breach in our hearts with theſe rich bullets.

§. *Sect.*5. How Satan tempteth the vaine-glorious to ſinne.

If Satan ſee men proud and vain-glorious; then hee inticeth them to ſinne, by offering them gorgeous attire far vnfitting their ſtate and callings, and ſo cauſeth them to commit a great abſurditie: for whereas our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, that the bodie is of more worth then raiment, they make their rayment of more worth then their bodies, in other mens iudgement, & preferre gay apparel before the health of their ſoules, in their owne eſtimation. For that they may jet it out in rich attire, they vſe vnlawful meanes, either by injuring and oppreſſing their inferiours, or at leaſt by keeping the poore from their right: (for their ſuperfluitie of wealth was not giuen them to ſpend in ſuch exceſſe, but that they ſhold like the Lords Almners relieue the poore with their ſurpluſſage) and by both, they wound their ſoules with ſinne, and without repentance plunge them into euerlaſting death.

§. *Sect.*6. That Satan fitteth his tentations to mens diuers complexions.

So alſo Satan taketh aduantage of our complexion and temperature; by tempting the Sanguine to pleaſure and luſt; the Flegmaticke to idleneſſe and ſloth; the Melancholicke to enuie and malice; the Cholerick man hee prouoketh to quarrels and braules, and inticeth him to take reuenge by aggrauating the iniurie, and ſuggeſting that it will bee a great diſparagement to put vp ſuch a wrong. In a word, Satan carefully obſerueth to what ſinne wee are moſt prone by nature, cuſtome or occaſion; & to that he eggeth vs forward vnto which our owne luſts leade vs, changing his temptations as we change our affection. And therefore the Apoſtle Iames telleth vs, that whoſoeuer is tempted, is drawn away by his owne concupiſcence, becauſe Satan neuer aſſaulteth vs, but hee is ſure that the fleſh will further him in his temptations.

Iames 1.14.

§. *Sect.*7. Of the meanes to defeate Satans former pollicies.

And thus haue I diſcouered Satans firſt ſtratagem, which he vſeth in tempting vs to ſinne; which if wee would withſtand and defeate, wee are as carefully to obſerue our owne nature and diſpoſition, that wee may finde to what vices wee are moſt prone, and ſo with greater watchfulneſſe may auoide them. For as when a citie is beſieged, the inhabitants will moſt ſtrongly man that place, which by nature is moſt weake and aſſaultable, becauſe they know that the enemie will giue the onſet there where he is like to finde the eaſieſt entrance: ſo wee being beſieged with our ſpirituall enemies, are moſt carefully to obſerue where our ſoules are weakeſt to make reſiſtance, and ouer that part wee are to watch with greateſt diligence, aſſuring our ſelues that there Satan will plant all his engines of batterie, that hauing made a breach hee may enter and ſurprize vs. And becauſe the heart of man is deceitfull aboue all things, and none but God doth know it, let vs ſummon it often before the throne of Gods iudgement, and examine it by his law, that thereby we may ſee our ſecret corruptions, and after labour to kill and mortifie them. If we finde that we bee ambitiouſly affected, we are to vſe all good meanes that true humilitie may bee wrought in our hearts, and whenſoeuer (honours being offered) wee are tickled with ambitious and aſpiring thoughts, let vs ſuſpect that vnder the baite of honour Satan hath hid a hooke to catch vs. And therefore before wee accept it, wee are to examine our ſelues whether wee be fit for ſo high a place, whether wee can attaine thereto by honeſt and lawfull meanes, and whether the place it ſelfe bee ſuch, that therein we may glorifie God, benefit his Church and keepe a good conſcience. So if we find that we are addicted vnto pleaſures, we are with all care to ſtudie and practiſe true mortification; and when any pleaſures are offered vs, we are to looke narrowly into them, that we may diſcerne if Satan hath not laid vnder them a ſnare to intrap vs, either by tempting vs to pleaſures which are vnlawfull, or to the immoderate vſe of thoſe which bee lawfull, and as wee loue the ſaluation of our ſoules, let vs auoide the baite when we ſee the ſnare.

Ierem. 17.9.

In like manner if wee finde that we are prone to couetouſnes, let vs carefully labour to weane our ſelues from this vice, by conſidering that it is idolatrie, and the roote of all euill; that the rich (that is, ſuch as ſet their hearts vpon riches) ſhall as hardly enter into Gods kingdome, as a Camel thorow a needles eye; that riches are momentanie and mutable, and wee mortall, and therefore haue no aſſurance of them for the ſpace of one day. And when any commodity is offered vs, wee are to looke twice on it before we accept thereof, examining whether wee may compaſſe it by honeſt and good meanes, & without the hurt of our brethren; and then wee may take it as ſent from God; otherwiſe we may aſſure our ſelues, that how plea-pleaſantly ſoeuer the baite looketh, yet Satan hath hid vnder it a deadly hooke, and therefore if we ſwallow the baite the hooke will choake vs. And thus alſo are we to behaue our ſelues in reſpect of all other ſinnes, to which wee finde after due examination wee are addicted, if we will be ſafe from the diuels malice and cunning furie, knowing that where we are moſt weake, there he will giue the moſt violent aſſaults.

CHAP. XVIII.

How Satan fitteth his temptations to our ſtate and conditions.

§. Sect. 1. How Satan itteth his emptations o our worldly ſtate.

BVt as Satan fitteth his temptations to our nature and diſpoſition, ſo alſo to our ſtate and condition: for this alſo he obſerueth, and according to the qualitie thereof he tempteth vs to ſuch ſins, vnto which by reaſon thereof wee are moſt inclinable: and this he doth both in reſpect of our worldly, and alſo our ſpirituall eſtate. In regard of our worldly eſtate, he obſerueth whether wee are in proſperitie or aduerſitie. If wee bee in proſperitie, then he tempteth vs to thoſe ſinnes whereunto that eſtate is moſt ſubiect, namely, to pride and forgetfulneſſe of God, to contempt of our poore brethren, to the loue of the world, to coldnes in religion, and carnall ſecuritie; for he will perſwade vs, how wickedly ſoeuer we liue, that wee are highly in Gods fauour, otherwiſe hee would not beſtow ſo great and manifold benefits vpon vs, as pledges of his loue. If wee bee in aduerſity, then he will labour to perſwade vs to vſe vnlawfull meanes for the repairing of our eſtates, diſtruſting in Gods al-ruling prouidence and neuer deceiuing promiſes. If wee bee poore, he inticeth vs to ſteale, defraud and oppreſſe our brethren, that ſo we may become rich by others ſpoiles. If wee haue loſt any thing by theeues or other caſualties, he tempteth vs to go to witches and wizards, that ſo wee may hazard our ſoules, which are of more value then the whole world, for the recouery of ſome earthly triſle. If we ſuffer any great croſſe or affliction, he will perſwade vs that God hath forſaken and hateth vs, or elſe he would not ſo grieuouſly afflict vs; and hereby he mooueth vs to deſpaire, murmure and repine againſt God. Which temptation hee findeth ſo forcible, that hee confidently preſumed hee could thereby haue cauſed Iob to haue blaſphemed God to his face. Yea hee thought it a fit weapon to vſe againſt our Sauiour Chriſt; for, wanting ordinary meanes to ſuſtaine his hunger, Satan tempteth him to diſtruſt Gods prouidence, and to ſhift for himſelfe, by turning ſtones into bread, Matth. 4.

Math. 4.

§. Sect. 2. How we are to defeat Satans former policy.

Now if wee would withſtand Satan in this his cunning practiſe, wee alſo are carefully to obſerue our eſtates, and to arme our ſelues againſt thoſe temptations, to which that eſtate wherein wee liue is moſt ſubiect: In the time of proſperitie we are continually to meditate, that whatſoeuer we haue it is the gift of God, beſtowed on vs not for our deſerts, but of his free mercie and goodneſſe, that by the conſideration hereof we may be ſtirred vp to true thankfulneſſe, and as often as wee looke vpon the gifts may thinke vpon the giuer, and praiſe his name for his benefits, and imploy them to his glorie, and the good of our brethren the poore members of Ieſus Chriſt. Let vs remember that wee are but ſtewards of theſe earthly treaſures, and therefore muſt one day be called to an account, and conſequently the greater our receits bee, the greater will be our reckoning; that theſe earthly things are momentanie and mutable, and we alſo mortall, and therfore there is no reaſon that we ſhould bee proud of them, or contemne our brethren who want them, ſeeing in an inſtant they may abound, and we may be ſtripped of all we poſſeſſe. So if we be in aduerſitie, we are to relie our ſelues on the Lords prouidence, who hath promiſed to all that depend vpon him all things neceſſarie, ſo farre foorth as they tend to the ſaluation of our ſoules; neither are we to beleeue Satan when he telleth vs that afflictions are ſignes of Gods hatred, ſeeing there are innumerable examples of Gods deare children grieuouſly afflicted, and plaine teſtimonies of Scriptures which proue the contrarie, as ſhall appeare hereafter.

§. Sect. 3. How Satan frameth his temptations in reſpect of our ſpirituall eſtate: and firſt how hee tempteth Worldlings.

In reſpect of our ſpirituall eſtate Satan obſerueth whether wee be meere worldlings or profeſſors. If worldlings, then whether we be notoriouſly wicked, or ciuill honeſt men; thoſe that bee notoriouſly wicked he plungeth headlong into a gulfe of all wickednes and outragious rebellion againſt God, hee tempteth them to Atheiſme, and to contempt of Gods worſhip and ſeruice, to ſwearing and blaſpheming, to the prophaning of the Sabbath, and ſcorning of all religion, to murthers, adulterie, drunkenneſſe, theft and all diuelliſh practiſes, becauſe they are his ſlaues readie at his appointment to execute all thoſe workes of darknes wherein he will imploy them. For ſuch men it is but loſt labour to ſhew them how they may reſiſt Satan, ſeeing they take their whole delight in ſeruing and obeing him; and therefore before they bee taught how to reſiſt him, they muſt bee perſwaded to a deſire of comming out of his thraldome, of whom they are taken priſoners to doe his will, as it is 2. Tim. 2. 26. If they be ciuill honeſt men, he perſwadeth them that it is ſufficient if they deale iuſtly and vprightly with their neighbours both in their words and actions; and for Gods ſeruice conſiſting in the duties of pietie, which is commanded in the firſt table, that it is enough if they haue a good meaning, though they be vtterly ignorant of the principles of religion, and that it is onely required of Preachers and thoſe that bee booke-learned, to be able to an render account of their faith; as for them God will haue them excuſed, ſo they leade an honeſt life amongſt their neighbours, and be not tainted with groſſe and outragious ſinnes.

2. Tim. 2. 26.

§. Sect. 4.
How wee may reſiſt the former temptations.

But beloued, if we would not be ſubdued by Satan, let vs bee moſt carefull in withſtanding this dangerous aſſault: for there is not any one temptation wherewith Satan preuaileth more, then by perſwading men to content themſelues with a ciuill kind of honeſtie, which is deſtitute of religion and the true feare of God. And to this end let vs conſider, that ciuill honeſty ſeuered from true pietie is but glorious iniquitie: for when we haue attained to as great a meaſure thereof, as poſſibly we can in this ſtate of corruption, we ſhall come ſhort in diuers duties of many of the Heathens, who haue excelled in theſe morall & ciuill vertues: & conſequently when wee are at the beſt wee ſhall be but honeſt Infidels & good natured worldlings, if wee doe not ioyne thereunto the duties of pietie. And how goodly a ſhew ſoeuer our workes make in the eyes of men, yet are they odious in Gods ſight, if they bee not done in knowledge, and grounded on Gods word and commmandement, but in ignorance and according to our owne inuentions and the fond conceit of our blind vnderſtanding; if they proceed not from the loue of God, which is the onely fountaine of all acceptable obedience, but from the loue of our ſelues and other carnall reſpects; if they bee not the fruits of a liuely faith, but done in ignorance and infidelitie; for, whatſoeuer is not done in faith, is ſin, and therefore cannot pleaſe God. By which wee are not to vnderſtand an hiſtoricall faith, whereby we know and are aſſured that thoſe workes wee doe are commanded in Gods word; but a true iuſtifying faith which doth applie vnto vs Chriſt Ieſus, and all Gods mercifull promiſes made in him. For, that our workes may bee acceptable before God, there is required firſt that our perſons bee acceptable vnto him, neither can any thing we doe pleaſe him, ſo long as wee remaine his enemies, in which ſtate we are by nature, till we are reconciled in Chriſt our Mediatour, as appeareth Rom. 5.10. Now vnleſſe wee haue faith, wee cannot applie vnto vs Chriſt nor his merits and righteouſneſſe, by whom only wee are reconciled vnto God, and conſequently wee remaine Gods enemies, who can doe nothing pleaſing in his ſight. Secondly, the beſt of our workes are imperfect, and mingled with many corruptions, and therefore cannot abide the examination of Gods exact iuſtice, till their imperfections bee couered by Chriſts righteouſneſſe, and their corruption waſhed away with his moſt precious bloud; now Chriſt and his merits cannot by any other meanes be applied vnto vs, but by the hand of a liuely faith. Laſtly, if all our works and honeſt dealing bee not done in zeale of Gods glory, and referred to this end that Gods name may be magnified, they are not acceptable before God: for, the cauſe why he would haue our light ſhine before men, is, that hee our heauenly father may be glorified, as it is Math. 5. 16. and the maine end wherefore we ſhould haue our conuerſation honeſt amongſt the Gentiles and vnbeleeuers, is, that they which ſpeake euill of vs, as of euill doers, may, by our good works which they ſhall ſee, glorifie God in the day of their viſitation, as it is. 1. Pet. 2.12. And therefore let not Satan deceiue vs, in perſwading vs to reſt in ciuill honeſtie; for if it bee ſeuered from true pietie, from ſauing knowledge, from ſincere loue of God, iuſtifying faith, and a zeale of Gods glorie, it will not be acceptable in his ſight; as proceeding from the loue of our ſelues, and other carnall reſpects as namelie to obtaine praiſe or profit thereby.

§. Sect. 5.
How Sathan dealeth with profeſſors of Religion,

And thus Satan dealeth with ciuill worldlings. But if thoſe whom he incountreth bee profeſſours of religion, then hee ſeeketh to perſwade them, that if they outwardly performe the duties of piety, as the hearing of Gods word, the publike and priuate calling vpon Gods name, the frequent receiuing of the Sacraments; if they attaine to the knowledge and profeſſing of religion, and can tip their tongues with godlineſſe: then they may liue how they liſt amongſt their brethren, neglecting all the duties of the ſecond table, ſo they outwardly obſerue the firſt; for though they bee barren of good workes, deſtitute of charitie, filled with pride, addicted to couetouſneſſe, oppreſſion, and all deceitfull dealing, yet they ſhall bee iuſtified by their faith, and approoued of God for their outward profeſſion ſake. But let ſuch men know that this is a notable ſtratagem of Satan, to cauſe vs to fall into his ſecret ambuſhments to our deſtruction; which if they would preuent and auoid, let them conſider that pietie and charitable honeſtie are two ſuch twinnes as are borne, liue, and die both together; that they are the life and ſoule of a Chriſtian which cannot poſſibly be ſeuered; that it is as poſſible for the good tree to bring foorth bad fruite, for the fire to bee without heate, and the Sunne without light, as it is for a liuely faith to be void of good workes, true profeſſion to bee ſeuered from holy practiſe, and iuſtification before God from ſanctification and holineſſe neſſe of life before men; that whoſoeuer braggeth of his loue to God and loueth not his brethren is a liar, and there is no truth in him, 1. Iohn 4. 20. that though they profeſſe themſelues the children of God, yet if they doe not the workes of righteouſnes as well as the workes of pietie, and loue their brethren, they are in truth the children of the diuell, as appeareth 1. Iohn 3. 10. that not the hearers of the word, but the doers thereof are iuſtified, Rom. 2. 13. that not euery one who ſaith Lord, Lord, ſhal enter into the kingdome of heauen, but they who doe the will of the father which is in heauen, Math. 7. 21. that they deceiue themſelues who looke to bee ſaued by hearing the word, if they practiſe not that which they heare, Iames 1. 22. for in ſtead thereof they ſhall plunge themſelues into deeper condemnation: For the ſeruant that knoweth his maſters will and doth it not, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes, Luk. 12. 47. And it ſhall bee more eaſie for Tyre and Sidon, Sodome and Gomorrah, who had not the Goſpell preached amongſt them, nor ſaw Chriſts miracles, then for Corazin and Bethſaida which enioyed both. Math. 11. 21. for there as the Lord ſoweth much, hee looketh to reape much, and there as hee giueth great meanes of knowledge, there hee expecteth great fruites in practiſe, and as hee will be honoured in all, ſo eſpecially in thoſe that come nigh vnto him; as it is Leuit. 10. 3. Laſtly, that the ſentence of ſaluation and damnation ſhal not be giuen according to our words & profeſſion, but according to our deedes and the holy practiſe of the workes of mercie and Chriſtianitie which are the inſeparable fruits and vndoubted ſignes of true faith. And therefore let not Satan delude vs, by perſwading vs that pietie without honeſtie, profeſſion without practiſe, faith without workes are ſufficient for our ſaluation.

But if they be ſincere profeſſors, then hee obſerueth whether they bee babes or ſtrong men in Chriſt; if hee finde them babes, then he ſeeketh to abuſe their ſimplicitie, by drawing them either into errours and hereſies, or at leaſt into blinde zeale and ſuperſtition. If he cannot ſo preuaile, by reaſon that the bright beams the of Goſpell ſhining in the preaching of the word do diſcouer his errors and lies, giuing light to thoſe that ſit in the darknes of ignorance, and in the ſhadow of death, whereby their feete are guided into the way of peace, then he laboureth to ouerwhelme them with the burthen of their ſinnes, and to plunge them into the bottomleſſe gulfe of horror and deſpaire, by aggrauating the odiouſnes of their rebellion, and huge multitudes of their outragious trangreſſions, by ſetting before them, the curſe of the law, the vengeance of God due vnto them, his infinite and exact iuſtice which muſt bee ſatisfied, and vnſpeakable and endleſſe torments prepared for the damned. But if he cannot aggrauate their ſinnes, which in truth they haue committed, and make of them ſuch an huge mountaine as may ſerue to ouerwhelme them, he addeth vnto them his own ſins, by caſting into their minds outragious blaſphemies againſt God, and ſuch horrible ſuggeſtions of impietie, as will make their haires to ſtand on end when they do but thinke of them, perſwading them that they are their owne thoughts, and therefore horrible ſinnes, whereas in truth they are but his ſuggeſtions, and therfore if wee doe repell and reiect them, they are not our ſinnes but the ſinnes of the tempter: for as it is not our fault if a theefe intice vs to ſteale; ſo wee doe not intertaine his motion, but ſhew our deteſtation of his ſinne; ſo it is not a ſin to be tempted, if we preſently doe repell the ſuggeſtion, and doe not yeeld vnto the temptation. And this may appeare by our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, who though hee were free from ſinne, yet hee was tempted in all things like vnto vs, and ſo not free from Satans ſuggeſtions, for he was tempted to diffidence, to tempting God, yea to the worſhipping of the diuell himſelfe; but reſiſting Satans ſuggeſtions, he was not guilty of ſin. Whoſe example if we imitate, Satans blaſphemous temptations ſhall neuer bee laid to our charge; neither is it poſſible to bee free from temptations, although it bee poſſible by Gods grace to reſiſt them. But more of this hereafter.

See lib.3. cap.12.

§. Sect.7.
How Satan inticeth the weake Chriſtian to commit ſinnes of ignorance.

If by this meanes he cannot ouerthrow their faith and bring them to deſpaire, then he taketh aduantage of their ſimplicitie, by inticing them to commit ſins of ignorance. For example, hee will tell them that it is lawfull, nay expedient to vſe their Chriſtian libertie, when he tempteth them to licentiouſneſſe; and to the end he may more eaſily deceiue them, he will ſet a faire gloſſe vpon foule ſinnes, and ſeeke to iuſtifie them by Gods word, apparelling vices in the habite of thoſe vertues which moſt reſemble them. He will tempt to couetouſnes, vnder ſhew of frugalitie, telling them that they who prouide not for their familie are worſe then Infidels; and to prodigalitie, vnder the pretence of liberality, alleaging that they who ſow plentifully ſhall reape plentifully. Hee will allure them to tempt God, by neglecting thoſe meanes which hee hath granted them, vnder the colour of affiance in God; and to truſt in the meanes, vnder the vizard of carefull prouidence. He will tempt them to propound this end of their good workes, that they may bee ſaued by them, becauſe God hath promiſed to reward them; or to neglect good workes, as vnneceſſarie to ſaluation, becauſe faith alone iuſtifieth. Which temptations if we would withſtand, we muſt labour after true ſauing knowledge that we may diſcerne betweene vertue and vice, truth and error, that which God hath forbiden as vnlawfull from that which he hath commanded as lawfull, to this end vſing diligently all good means which tend to this purpoſe, as hearing, reading, meditating, and conferring of Gods word, that ſo the clouds of ignorance being diſpelled with the light of knowledge, wee may diſcouer Satans deluſions and deceits. Otherwiſe if he depriue vs of knowledge, which is the eye of the ſoule, he may eaſily ſeduce vs out of the right way into the gulfe of perdition.

§. Sect. 8.
How Satan dealeth with the ſtrong Chriſtian.

And thus Satan dealeth with weake Chriſtians: but if he find thoſe whom he aſſaulteth ſtrong men in Chriſt, ſo that he cannot take any aduantage of their ignorance, not ouerthrow their faith, then he laboureth to make them wound their conſcience, by committing ſins of preſumption againſt their knowledge, vſing the violence of their affections, to abuſe their reaſon and miſleade their iudgement; the danger of which temptation Dauid well diſcerning by his owne wofull experience, doth earneſtly entreate the Lord to preſerue him from preſumptuous ſins, Pſal. 19. 13. And thus hath Satan preuailed with ſo many of Gods owne children, that he durſt therewith aſſault our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, by offering him the whole world and the glorie thereof, if hee would fall downe and worſhip him; that his affections tickled with ambition, might moue him to commit this ſinne for the ſatisfying his deſires. But if he cannot thus preuaile, hee will transforme himſelfe into an angell of light, and tempt them to the doing of a leſſe good, that they may neglect a greater; or that which is in it ſelfe lawfull and commanded in its due time and place, he will tempt them to performe it vnſeaſonablie, when as other duties in reſpect of preſent occaſion are more neceſſarie; and ſo vſeth one vertue or dutie to ſhoulder another, and thruſt it diſorderly out of it owne place and ſtanding. For example, in the hearing of the word he wil caſt into their minds meditations, in their owne nature good and acceptable to God in their due time and place, to the end hee may diſtract their minds and make them heare without profit. In the time of prayer he will not ſticke to recall to their memories ſome profitable inſtructions which they haue heard at the Sermon; to the end hee may diſturbe them in that holy exerciſe, and keepe them from lifting vp their hearts wholly vnto God. Moreouer, in all his temptations he will alleage Scripture; but then either hee depraueth the place by adding or detracting, as when hee alleageth Scripture to our Sauiour Chriſt, Matth. 4. 6. It is written, hee will giue his Angels charge ouer thee, &c. and leaueth out to keepe thee in all thy wayes, which is expreſſed in the place he quoteth, becauſe that made quite againſt him: or if he recite them right, he will wreſt the words vnto another ſenſe, then the Holy Ghoſt hath written them, that ſo he may deceiue vs and lead vs into error.

CHAP. XIX.

How Satan allureth vs vnto ſin by degrees, and draweth vs from one extreame to another.

ANd thus haue I. ſhewed at large Satans firſt politicke ſtratagem, which hee vſeth to circumuent vs by fitting his temptations according to our nature & diſpoſition, or our ſtate and condition. A ſecond policie which Satan vſeth to circumuent vs, is this; if he cannot at the firſt intice vs to fall into outragious wickednes, hee will ſeeke to draw vs thereunto by degrees, beginning at the leaſt, and ſo bringing vs from that to a greater, till at laſt wee come to the higheſt ſteppe of wickedneſſe, whereby it commeth to paſſe, that as thoſe who walke to the top of an high hil, whoſe aſcent ariſeth by little and little, come to the top without wearines, before they wel perceiued that they did aſcend: ſo they who go forward in the waies of wickednes by degrees, do without any controlment or check of conſcience climbe vp to the higheſt top thereof, whence Satan caſteth them downe headlong into the pit of deſtruction. For example, if hee ſee a profeſſor of religion which maketh conſcience of his waies, hee doth not vſually ſeeke at firſt to draw him into hainous ſinnes, vnleſſe the cords of his temptations bee exceeding ſtrong; but firſt he allureth him to come into the company of wicked men, by offering ſome pleaſure or profit, or by occaſion of affinitie and mariage, ioyning him if hee can with ſuch a yokefellow as will draw him faſter backe, then hee can draw her forward in the courſe of godlines. If hee thus farre preuaile, then hee tempteth him to winke at their ſinnes which in conſcience he condemneth that he may ſtill enioy his pleaſute and profit, or continue in their loue and fauour. Then in the next place he moueth him to thinke them tolerable ſinnes which they commit, and nothing ſo outragious as others fall into; and when he hath made this progreſſe, then hee enticeth him to taſte of ſinne, which hee ſo ſweetneth with the ſugred delights of this vaine world that hee ſwalloweth it downe without all loathſomneſſe, and neuer taſteth the bitterneſſe thereof, till the heate of Gods Spirit doe cauſe it to worke in his conſcience, ſo as hee is neuer at reſt till he haue caſt caſt it vp againe by vnfained repentance. Otherwiſe if hee be not prevented thus by Gods Spirit, Satan will by this meanes cauſe his conſcience to ſwallow and to digeſt ſuch loathſome ſinnes, as in former times hee abhorred to ſee others commit. And as thoſe who from their infancie are accuſtomed, to take poyſons in ſmall quantities, doe enable their ſtomackes to digeſt more, till by long cuſtome and encreaſing the quantitie by degrees, it becommeth ſo familiar to their ſtomackes, that in ſtead of poyſoning them they are nouriſhed thereby, as Hiſtories doe record of ſome Indian Kings: ſo Satan enticeth vs to ſwallow downe the poyſon of ſinne at the firſt in ſuch ſmall quantitie, that our conſciences may not be ſick thereof: but having well digeſted the leaſt, he encreaſeth the meaſure till by long cuſtome hee hath made it ſo familiar to our conſciences, that thoſe ſinnes are even meate and drinke vnto vs, which at the firſt wee loathed as deadly poyſons.

Sect.2. meanes rengthen ainſt the rmer tenta-

Now if we would defeat this policie of Satan, wee muſt continually watch ouer our owne hearts, and pull them backe when we ſee that they but encline vnto any wickedneſſe; wee muſt not lightly eſteeme of any ſinne, nor willingly give entertainment to the leaſt wicked thought: for though in it ſelfe it be not ſo hainous, yet it will enlarge our conſciences and make roome for a greater, till at laſt we keepe open houſe, readie to receiue all wickednes which offereth it ſelfe vnto vs. And as we are carefull to auoid the ſinnes themſelues, ſo with as much diligence wee are to ſhunne the occaſions and meanes by which wee might be drawne, or enticed thereunto. But of this point more hereafter.

Sect.3. ns third cie in awing out of extreme another.

A third policie which Sathan vſeth to circumuent vs, is to bring vs from one extreame to another. For example, when wee ſee the vileneſſe of prodigalitie, ſo as wee will no longer be poſſeſſed of that vice, then will Satan make it as odious as hee can, and endeuour to bring vs into extreame hatred thereof, that ſo hee may the more eaſily draw vs into the contrarie vice of couetouſneſſe. If he cannot any longer keepe vs aſleepe in ſin, by rocking vs in the cradle of carnall ſecuritie, and ſinging vnto vs the ſweete tunes of Gods mercie and Chriſts merits, then will he labour to plunge vs into deſpaire, by ſetting before our eyes the hainouſneſſe of our ſins, and ſounding in our eares the thundring threatnings of the Law. If hee cannot any longer nuzzle vs in ſuperſtition, and cauſe vs to place all our Religion in Ceremonies, and in reſtraining our ſelues of the vſe of things indifferent, hee will draw vs to the other extreame by mouing vs to thinke all ceremonies vnlawfull, and to practiſe all licentiouſneſſe vnder pretence of Chriſtian libertie. If he can no longer perſwade vs to ſeeke for juſtification by the workes of the Law to the end wee may not relie on Chriſts merits and righteouſneſſe, he will bring vs into vtter diſlike of this doctrine, by ſhewing vs the abſurdities thereof, that hee may draw vs to the other extreame, namely, to neglect good workes, as altogether vnneceſſary to ſalvation becauſe faith alone juſtifieth. If he cannot hide out of our ſight the ſhining graces of Gods Spirit, by caſting before our eyes the cloud of our ſinnes and corruptions, then he will cauſe vs to looke on them thorow the ſpectacles of ſelfe-loue and affection, to the end wee may imagine them much greater then in truth they are, and ſo be puffed vp in pride, and too ſecurely reſt in thoſe gifts we haue, not ſeeking for increaſe. If he cannot perſwade vs to diffidence & diſtruſt, hee will moue vs to tempt God vpon no neceſſary occaſion: and thus he dealt with our Sauiour Chriſt, for firſt hee tempted him to diſtruſt Gods prouidence, and to prouide for himſelfe by turning ſtones into bread; but when he could not ſo preuaile, he moved him to make an vnneceſſary experiment of his prouidence and care, by caſting himſelfe downe head-long from the pinacle of the Temple, whereas there were ordinary means whereby hee might deſcend. Now the end why Satan vſeth this policie, is more violently to caſt vs into one extreame of ſinne, when with full ſwinge of will we doe auoid the other: as alſo to make vs beleeve that the latter temptation is the motion of Gods Spirit, ſeeing it is cleane contrary to the former ſuggeſtion of Satan, whereas in truth they are but vnlike children of the ſame father.

§. Sect.4. That wee are to auoid the former temptation by keeping vs in the golden mean.

The danger of which temptations if wee would auoid, we muſt keepe vs in the golden meane, auoiding both extremes; and becauſe we are ignorant and vnſkilfull in trauelling the ſtrait path which leadeth to Gods kingdome, and euery houre readie to take the by-wayes of errour which leade to deſtruction, let vs vſe the Word of God for our guide: and as the Iſraelites trauelling towards the land of promiſe, were directed by the cloud and pillar of fire, going forward when that went before them, and pitching their tents where that ſtayed; ſo let vs conſtantly and boldly trauell in our Chriſtian pilgrimage ſo long as we have the Word of God for our direction, not ſtaying where it biddeth goe, nor going when it ſtayeth. Let this be the touchſtone to diſcerne the golden truth from the droſſie extreames on either ſide; let it be the line to leade vs out of this labyrinth of errours; let it be the ſtarre of Bethlehem to conduct vs in our tedious iourney vnto the place where our Sauiour Chriſt is, not now lying in the armes of his mother, but ſitting at the right hand of his Father in all glorie, power and maieſtie. And becauſe we are vnſkilfull Pilots in ſayling the dangerous Sea of this tempeſtuous World, readie to fall vpon the rockes while we auoid the ſands; let Gods Word be our Card and Compaſſe, to direct vs to the holy Land: otherwiſe Satan will raiſe againſt vs ſuch ſtormie tempeſts, and contrary blaſts of temptations, that our ſoules will ſuffer ſhipwrack vpon the rockes of ſinne, and bee drowned in a Sea of deſtruction.

Chap. XX.

Of fiue other ſtratagems which Sathan vſeth.

§. Sect. 1. How Satan moueth the weake Christian to good duties out of ill cauſes and grounds, and firſt in reſpect of things indifferent.

A fourth policie which Sathan vſeth, is to ouerrule weake Chriſtians in the grounds and cauſes of all their actions. And if hee cannot draw them by the ſtrength of his tentations to doe thoſe things which are ſimply euill, hee will indeuour in the next place to make them to do things indifferent and lawfull, yea, ſuch things as are ſimply good, religious and honeſt, out of euill cauſes and wicked grounds, as becauſe hee doth ſuggeſt them, and not becauſe God requireth them, and by his cauſeleſſe terrors and ſuperſtitious feares preſſeth the doing of them, and not in obedience to God becauſe he commandeth them in his Word, and ſtirreth them vp to the doing of them by the inward motions of his Spirit. And firſt in things indifferent, as eating, drinking, ſleeping, walking, working and the like, he laboureth to take away their Chriſtian liberty in the vſe of them, by preſſing the doing or not doing of them by his ſuggeſtions and peremptorie commands, which hee often backeth with ſuperſtitious feares of ſome euill that ſhall befall them, if they doe not obey him in doing or not doing that hee ſuggeſteth, as namely, that they ſhall be ſuddenly ouertaken with ſuch and ſuch a iudgement, be ſtrucken with madneſſe or preſent death, or taken away aliue, if they either will doe, or not doe ſuch a thing in ſuch a manner, or at ſuch a time. Though Chriſt hauing purchaſed their libertie in all thoſe things indifferent, hath left them free vnto euery Chriſtian to doe or not to doe, to vſe or not to vſe them, as in their diſcretion they thinke fit, all circumſtances of perſons, time and place being duly conſidered. The which libertie if they betray through ſuperſtitious feares and want of faith, it is a wonder to ſee how Sathan tyrannizeth ouer them, for he will interpoſe in all their actions, and nothing can they doe, but hee will ſeeke to raigne ouer and rule them in it to their perdition. They muſt not goe out of doores to doe any buſineſſe, or to viſit a friend, but when he permitteth; and when hee moueth them to it, they muſt doe theſe things though there be no reaſon for it. They muſt not put on their clothes, nor dreſſe themſelues but in that manner as hee ſuggeſteth; they muſt ſpeake when hee will, and in what manner, and at his pleaſure they muſt be ſilent. They muſt not eate their meate but when hee permitteth, and then what hee will and not that which beſt pleaſeth their owne appetite; yea, the tentation often commeth between the bit and the lip, and when they are readie to put the meate into their mouth, they muſt pull it backe, and lay it by, or if not, it will choke them or ſome other miſchiefe ſhall befall them. With ſuch tentations as theſe I haue knowne ſome ſo dyeted, or rather famiſhed, that they haue languiſhed in their health and ſtrength, pined in their bodies, and neere vnto periſhing. Yea when hee hath brought them throughly to be at his direction, he wil command and countermand, enjoyne the doing or not doing of an action, and preſently after the cleane contrary, and both of them vnder ſome fearefull penaltie, that the poore Chriſtian is almoſt diſtracted in his wits, not knowing what to doe, nor which way to turne him to find any peace and reſt from theſe tentations. Now the beſt way to defeat this policie is not to hearken to Satans ſuggeſtions for our directions, but acquainting our ſelues with the Scriptures, to haue our warrant for all our actions out of the Word of God, and to doe them all in obedience to Gods commandement, not caring what Sathan ſuggeſteth to the contrarie, ſo we haue Gods reuealed wil for our warrant. And ſo wee ſhall not need to feare any of thoſe euils which Sathan threatneth, ſeeing as long as we walke in Gods wayes, wee are vnder his protection, ſo as Sathan and all the power of Hell ſhall not be able to doe vs any hurt; whereas contrariwiſe wee are in great danger of thoſe euils we feare, if wee ſuffer our ſelues to be ruled by Satans ſuggeſtions, ſeeing if God juſtly giue vs ouer to the tempter, he will reward his ſeruants with no better wages then preſent miſery, and endleſſe deſtruction. Secondly, wee muſt labour to informe our ſelues rightly in our Chriſtian libertie, and when we know it, ſtand faſt in it, as the Apoſtle exhorteth. And ſeeing all things indifferent are vnder our power, and all the creatures good vnto vs, as if they be ſanctified by the Word and Prayer, let vs retaine our libertie in the vſe of theſe things, doing or not doing what we thinke good, as in Chriſtian prudence wee judge fit, time, and place, and perſons being duly conſidered, and not that which Satan ſuggeſteth vpon no ground of reaſon or warrant of the Word. Laſtly, wee muſt take ſpeciall care that we neither doe nor omit any thing, the rather becauſe Sathan ſuggeſteth it, for ſo we ſhall be vnder his rule, and in our actions obey him and not God. Yea, if in Chri-ſtian prudence wee ſee no inconuenience in it, we muſt to preſerue our Chriſtian liberty, doe the contrary. As when he ſuggeſteth a neceſsity of doing this or that which in it ſelf is free and indifferent, and that vnder the feare of ſuch a penaltie; wee are the rather not to doe it, to ſhew that wee neglect his commands, and deſpiſe his threats.

§. Sect.2. How Sathan moueth the Christian to performe religious duties becauſe hee ſuggeſteth them.

And thus Sathan craftily circumuenteth the weake Chriſtian in things indifferent; But yet like an old wily Serpent, hee much more ſecretly and ſubtilly glideth and inſinuateth himſelſe into their ſpirituall actions and religious duties. And when hee cannot like a Deuill indeed hinder and diſcourage them from doing them altogether, then hee will transforme himſelfe into an Angell of Light, and ſeeme to ſpurre on their deuotion, that ſo they may doe them out of an ill ground, not becauſe God commandeth them, but becauſe he ſuggeſteth them; backing his motions with ſeruile threats and ſuperſtitious feares. Thus when he ſeeth that they incline to Prayer, hee will binde them to it by ſeruile neceſsitie and ſuperſtitious feare, vrging them to pray as much and often as hee ſuggeſteth, and in concluſion to neglect all duties of their generall & particular callings and doe nothing elſe but pray, becauſe the Apoſtle requireth vs to pray continually; whereas the Chriſtian is bound to performe all religious and ciuill duties in their ſeaſon, not ſuffering one to thruſt out another, and is enioyned by the Apoſtle to pray not at all times, but vpon euery fit occaſion and good opportunitie. So if they be addicted to the hearing of the Word, then hee will moue them to goe as often as hee ſuggeſteth, and as if they were all eare, to doe nothing but heare, omitting in the meane time all duties of their particular callings, and vtterly to neglect their charge and family. And this he doth that he may cloy and tire them with theſe duties, and cauſing them to ſurfet with too much fulneſſe, may hereby bring them at laſt to an vtter loathing of them. Secondly, that hee may moue them to performe religious duties diſorderly and vnſeaſonably, cauſing them ſo wholly to pitch vpon one, as that being taken vp with it, they may be drawne to neglect all others. Thirdly, hereby hee moueth them in the duties of Gods worſhip to doe himſelſe ſeruice, when as they are done at his motion, and ſuggeſtion, and not becauſe God hath commanded them. Laſtly, hee hereby inureth & accuſtometh them to be at his command, by yeelding vnto, and obeying him in things lawfull, becauſe vpon the ſame groūd he may moue them to deſiſt from doing of them when he countermandeth, and to doe theſe things that are vnlawfull, and ſo draweth them on by theſe ſweete meates to ſwallow poyſon. But ſeeing wee are oftentimes and moſt commonly ſtirred vp and excited to thoſe religious duties by the good motions of Gods Spirit, how may wee diſcerne theſe from the ſuggeſtions of Sathan? I anſwere that wee may doe it by theſe ſignes and differences. Firſt, the ſuggeſtions of the Deuill doe preſſe vs to theſe duties by a certaine impetuous neceſſitie, when as there is no reaſon of them grounded vpon Gods Word, all circumſtances being duly conſidered. Secondly, when as the performance of theſe duties is diſordered and vnſeaſonable in reſpect of circumſtances, and vſed to the ſhouldring and thruſting out of other duties, which in reſpect of preſent occaſions are more ſeaſonable and neceſſary, whereas when wee are mooued vnto them by Gods Spirit, one dutie is a helpe and furtherance to another. Laſtly, when as they preſſe vpon vs ceremoniall circumſtances, as the time, place and bodily geſtures, as neceſſarie and eſſentiall to the ſeruice in hand, which are in their owne nature indifferent; whereas the Spirit of God leaueth vs free to vſe, or not vſe them, as in Chriſtian wiſdome we find them more or leſſe conuenient to fit vs the better for the religious duties which are to be performed. Now when as we haue thus diſcouered them, the beſt meanes to defeate theſe pollicies of the deuill, are firſt not to yeeld to theſe ſuggeſtions, (though they moue vs to holy duties) vpon the ſuddaine before wee haue waighed and examined them by the word, and conſidered what ground and warrant they haue out of the Scripture, and not to yeeld obedience vnto them, becauſe they are ſuggeſted into our minds, but becauſe we find that God hath commanded them. Secondly, wee muſt conſider not only whether they be in themſelues good, but alſo whether they be now ſeaſonable, and whether the performance of them will not diſturbe our orderly proceeding in the wayes of godlineſſe, and diſable vs from performance of ſome other holy duties which in our Chriſtiā prudence, (waighing all occaſions and circumſtances,) wee find for the preſent more neceſſarie and ſeaſonable; and if wee doe, then not to giue place vnto them. The laſt is that we diligently ſtudy the holy Scriptures, which will teach vs, not only what God requireth as good, but alſo how and when it is to bee done, and in what order and manner vpon due conſideration of all circumſtances.

1.Theſſ.5.17.

§. Sect.3. How Satan moueth vs to propound bad ends to good actions.

A fifth policie which Satan vſeth to entrap vs in his ſecret abuſhments, is this: When by the violence of his temptations hee cannot altogether reſtraine vs from doing that which is good: then he will tempt vs to doe good actions to bad ends. In giuing of almes, he will moue men to propound this end, that they may bee ſeene of men; in doing of good workes, hee will tempt them to forget Gods glorie, and to ſet before them as their maine end of all their good actions, the meriting of Heauen; and if men will needs appeare vertuous and religious, hee will entice them to vſe outward vertues as a cloake to hide their inward vices, and Religion as a faire vizard to couer their foule impietie. And thus hee tempteth men to vſe all outward ſhewes of humilitie, to the end they may the better diſguiſe their hidden pride and ambition, as we may ſee in the example of Abſolon; and all complements of courteſie and loue, as a maske to hide their enuie and malice. And thus hee allureth men to profeſſe Religion, heare Sermons, and vſe glorious ſpeeches, that they may (ſeeming religious and men of good conſciences) haue their ſhops the better accuſtomed, and their words credited, and ſo haue the fitter opportunitie of deceiuing them, who for their profeſſion ſake repoſe truſt in them.

¶. Sect. 4. How Satan moueth vs to vſe euil means for the effecting good ends.

A ſixt policie whereby hee ſeeketh to ſurpriſe vs, is by tempting men to vſe wicked meanes for the accompliſhing of good ends, and to doe euil that good may come thereof; and thus hee tempted Saul to tranſgreſſe Gods commandement in reſeruing the fat of the cattle, to the end he might ſacrifice therewith vnto the Lord; and Iſaac to ſay that Rebecca was his ſiſter to ſaue his life: and Peter to vſe diſſimulation that hee might not offend the Iewes. And thus he tempteth men to tell officious and profitable lies for the auoiding of greater euils; hee moueth ſeruants to giue their maſters goods to the poore without their priuitie or liking, and ſo to commit theft that they may giue almes; hee tempteth Nonreſidents to poſſeſſe many liuings that they may keepe good hoſpitalitie, and ſo ſtarue the ſoule to feed the bodie; and Citizens to vſe all fraud and deceit that they may prouide for their family. Which policies of Satan are exceeding dangerous; for hardly can wee eſcape them both, namely, doing good things to bad ends, or vſing of euill meanes for the atchieuing of good purpoſes. But the more difficult the thing is, the greater muſt be our care; the more ſecret and dangerous Satans ambuſhments are, the more diligence and watchfulneſſe muſt wee vſe in auoiding them. In all our actions therefore let vs be carefull to propound vnto our ſelues good ends, and vſe good meanes for the accompliſhing of our honeſt and godly purpoſes. For if wee neglect the firſt, wee ſhall bewray our hypocriſie and impietie, if the latter we ſhall pollute a faire work with filthy tooles, and ſhew our diffidence in God in not daring to vſe thoſe godly and honeſt meanes which hee hath commanded and commended vnto vs, vnleſſe wee bolſter and prop them vp by our own fooliſh inuentions, and wicked practices. And whenſoeuer wee are mooued to propound euill ends vnto our good actions, or to vſe euill meanes for the accompliſhing of good ends, let vs aſſure our ſelues that they are not the motions of Gods Spirit, but the ſuggeſtions of Sathan, at leaſt ſo farre forth as we are tempted to the euill of the end or meanes; and therefore wee are to purge the wheate from the chaffe, the pure gold from the droſſe, and to doe the workes of God for thoſe ends, and by thoſe meanes, which hee hath appointed.

¶. Sect. 5. How Satan tempteth vs to be proud of our vertues.

A ſeuenth policie which Satan vſeth, is to take aduantage of our vertues to plunge vs head-long into vice; for example, when wee haue mortified our ſinnes, and are plentifull in all good works, he taketh occaſion thereby to puffe vs vp with pride, and a Phariſaicall conceit that we are not as other men are; yea if we be ſo humble that hee cannot make vs proud of any thing elſe, he will labour to make vs proud of our humilitie. Notable is the ſaying of * Auguſtine to this purpoſe, when (ſaith he) a man in the doing of ſome good worke ſhall rejoyce that hee hath alſo herein ſubdued pride: If euen out of this rejoycing he lifteth vp the head & ſaith: Behold I liue, wherefore then doeſt thou triumph? Yea therefore I liue becauſe thou triumpheſt perhaps becauſe thou triumpheſt before the time, .i. before being perfectly glorified, thou art freed from all corruption. Let vs not therefore be wretchleſſe and ſecure, but haue an eye to our hearts, euen in our good actions: and when wee entertaine any excellent vertue, let vs take heed leſt pride thruſt in with it, ſeeing moſt commonly it attendeth vpon vertue, and taketh vp his ſtanding where it lodgeth, for we are not quite at libertie, and out of the danger of Satans thraldome, ſo long as pride like a Iaylour attendeth on vs.

Aug. de nat. & gratia, cap. 31. T. 7. Col. 745. A.

¶. Sect. 6. How Satan moueth the Chriſtian to iudge of the reallity of his ſpirituall eſtate by outward accidents.

The eighth policie which Sathan vſeth to ſhake the faith of weake Chriſtians, and to diſcourage them from proceeding in the wayes of Godlineſſe, is to perſwade them to judge of their ſpirituall eſtate according to outward accidents, and not the reallitie and trnth of it; as it is hindred in its functions and operations, and not as it is in its faculties and habits. For when their ſpirituall graces are hindred by ſome outward or corporall cauſe from ſhewing themſelues in their full ſtrength by their actions and operations; from hence hee inferreth that they are decayed in them, and conſequently that they were not true graces, which are like the ſhining light, that ſhineth more and more vnto the perfect day: or like the graine of Muſtard ſeed which from a ſmall ſeed groweth vnto a great tree; or elſe if they were true, yet they are likely to be quite loſt; ſeeing that which is corruptible and ſubject to periſhing and looſing in the parts, may be alſo in the whole. Thus hee moueth them to judge of their graces and ſpirituall eſtate, in the time of tentation, when God ſuffereth Satan to ſift and winnow them as wheat, yea to buffet and beate them, euen blacke and blew, and in the time of ſpirituall diſcretions, when God either for the correcting of their ſinnes, or for the triall of their graces, bearing them to themſelues, and the malice of their ſpirituall enemies (in outward appearance) when they are aſſaulted by them. But with as great reaſon might wee be perſwaded to judge of the habituall ſtrength of our bodies, when their food being withheld from them, they are almoſt pined with hunger, or when they are wearied with toyleſome labour, or readie to faint after ſome long and ſharpe fight againſt a mightie enemie. For as the vigour of our bodily ſtrength is renewed by reſt and food, and ſo ſheweth that the habit was not loſt or decayed, but only the operation hindred; ſo will alſo the vertue of our ſpirituall graces againe appeare, when the conflict of tentations is ended, and the bright beames of Gods grace and fauour doe ſhine in our hearts in their wonted ſtrength. As we ſee in the example of Iob, Dauid, Ieremy, and Peter, whoſe graces made ſmall ſhew in their deſertions and tentations, but appeared in their wonted beautie and brightneſſe, when thoſe cloudes and ſtormes were ouer-blowne. Thus he moueth thoſe that are aged to judge of their ſpirituall ſtate, and the ſtrength of their ſauing graces, by their outward performances of religious duties: and becauſe they find that they are not able ſo well to remember what they haue heard as they were wont, nor ſo feruent in their prayers, nor ſo hote in their zeale and deuotion as in time paſt, therefore they are decayed in their ſpirituall graces, and growne remiſſe and lukewarme in all holy duties. Whereas their complaining of theſe defects and grieuing for them, doth plainly ſhew that there is no decay of their inward graces, but only of corporall and naturall abilities by which they are exerciſed. For the ſoule working by the body and ſpirits, as by its organs and inſtruments, when theſe are decayed by age or other externall accidents, it is not able to produce its effects by them in that excellencie and perfection, as when they were in their full vertue and vigour. Euen as the moſt skilfull workmen cannot make ſuch perfect worke when they haue bad tooles as when they haue good, although their art and skill may be greater then it was before. And hence it is that they cannot remember Sermons ſo well now as in the time of their youth, becauſe there is a decay in their naturall abilities, and their memory weakened by age and the drineſſe of their braines, though it may abound with vnnaturall humiditie. And hereof it is that the feruour of their zeale and deuotion ſeemeth abated, becauſe there is an abatement of naturall heate and a decay in the animall and vitall ſpirits, which are the inſtruments whereby it is exerciſed, whence neceſſarily proceedeth dulneſſe and lumpiſhneſſe in holy duties, though the iudgement more highly prizeth them, the will more ſtrongly imbraceth them, and the heart more intirely affecteth and loueth them then euer they did in the time of youth. Finally, he thus perſwadeth thoſe that are oppreſſed with melancholy, that they are ſuch in reſpect of their ſpirituall eſtate, as they find and feele themſelues being afflicted with that turbulent and pernitious humour. As namely that they are froward, full of feares, and diſcontents, fickle and vnconſtant, vnnaturall in their affections towards husband, wife, parents, children, ſlothfull and auerſe to all holy duties, vnſatiſfied in their doubts, ſtubborne in their wils, and deſperate in all their reſolutions and concluſions, and conſequently that they are rather limbes of the Deuill whom they reſemble in their corruptions, then the children of God, and ſuch as are deſtitute of all vertue and goodneſſe, and out of the ſtate of grace and ſaluation. Whereas theſe corruptions (if their caſe be throughly vnderſtood and conſidered) are not to be imputed to their naturall diſpoſition, and much leſſe to their ſpirituall condition, (for euen thoſe of the beſt and moſt tender natures, and many of Gods children who are indued with a great meaſure of grace and ſanctification, are often thus affected and afflicted, when they are oppreſſed with melancholy) but rather to the exceſſe of a naturall or rather vnnaturall humour, vpon which the Deuill taketh occaſion to abuſe and delude them with his ſubtill and malitious tentations. The which may hereby manifeſtly appeare in that they neuer felt ſuch corruptions of nature, defects in grace, nor awkerneſſe and vntowardneſſe to all Chriſtian duties before they were oppreſſed with this humour, nor ſhall afterwards feele and be vexed with them, when as by profitable phyſicke, wholſome diet, ſweet aire, good company and lawfull recreations they are purged and vnburthened of it, as I my ſelfe haue found by manifold experience. So that they might by as good reaſon judge of their naturall complexion when they are deepe in the diſeaſe of the yellow, or black jaundize; hauing their body ouer-ſpread and their bloud infected and tainted with choler and melancholy; or of their naturall temperature or ſpirituall abilities to doe God ſeruice, when their braine is diſtempered, and their body weakned and inflamed with a raging fit of a burning feuer; as when they are diſtempered and almoſt diſtraughted with this helliſh humour of melancholy;

Prou. 4. 18.

ſeeing this is a diſeaſe which no leſſe diſturbeth and diſableth both minde and bodie then the jaundize or feauer. And therefore as in theſe bodily ſickneſſes we are readie to excuſe our ſelues and others, by imputing our weakneſſes and diſtempers, not to our ſelues, but to the diſeaſe; ſo are wee to doe when we feele our ſelues oppreſſed with this humour, not aſcribing our diſabilities and corruptions to our ſelues in reſpect of our ſpirituall eſtates, but to the malignitie of our diſeaſe, and to ſay of this preualent and ouer-ſwaying melancholy, as the Apoſtle Paul did of his ſinning ſinne and inbred corruption; It is no more I that doe it, but this pernicious humour that dwelleth in me.

Rom.7.17.

CHAP. XXI.

Of the manner of Satans fight.

§. Sect. 1. That Satan obſerueth no complements of true valour.

AND ſo much concerning Sathans ſtratagems and warlike policies. Now let vs conſider of the manner of his fight. In which we are firſt to obſerue that it is moſt cruell and cowardly, for hee obſerueth no complements of true valour, but then moſt violently aſſaulteth vs when wee are leaſt prouided; if he cannot preuaile when we are waking, he will ſet vpon vs while we are ſleeping; if hee cannot hurt vs when wee are readie in the field armed with the compleat armour of a Chriſtian, the girdle of veritie, the breaſtplate of righteouſneſſe, the ſhield of faith, the ſword of the ſpirit, &c. he will watch a time when he can ſpie vs vnarmed, and then he will aſſaile vs; if he cannot ouercome vs in the time of proſperitie, when God hath hedged vs in with his bleſſings; hee will watch till wee be caſt downe with ſome aduerſitie, and then hee will lay load on vs whileſt we are vnder foot; and whereas all our hope of victory is in the Lords aſſiſtance, he will perſwade vs to yeeld vnto him, for as much as the Lord is become our enemie. Now if we would reſiſt Satan, wee muſt ſo prepare our ſelues that he doe not hurt vs by this his daſtardly fight. Seeing therefore he vſeth to ſet vpon vs on all aduantages, we are alwayes to be ſo prouided as that wee giue him no aduantage. Being awake, wee are alwayes to ſtand vpon our guard, readie armed with the graces of Gods Spirit; being to ſleepe, we are to deſire the Lord to watch ouer vs, and to command his Angels to pitch their tents about vs, that ſo wee may be defended from Satans fury. Seeing he is ready to aſſault vs when he ſeeth vs diſarmed, wee are alwayes to keepe the coat-armour of a Chriſtian buckled vnto vs. Laſtly, ſeeing in the time of proſperitie he is readie to puffe vs vp with pride, and in the time of aduerſitie to plunge vs into deſpaire, let vs humble our ſelues when God exalts vs, by thinking of our vnworthineſſe to receiue the leaſt of Gods mercies, and comfort our ſelues in the time of our affliction, by remembring that it is the portion of all that will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus, and that whoſoeuer ſuffer with Chriſt, ſhall alſo raigne with him, 2.Tim.3.12. and 2.12.

Iob 1.10.

2.Tim.3.12. and 2.12.

§. Sect. 2. Satan aſſaulteth vs when we are moſt ſecure.

The ſecond thing to bee obſerued in his manner of fight, is, that hee ſetteth vpon vs when we are moſt ſecure, and then ſoundeth the alarum to battaile, when we moſt flatter our ſelues with hope of peace; and that not drowſily and faintly, but with all celeritie and ſpeed, whereby hee ouercommeth oftentimes, or at leaſt foileth vs, before wee can arme or prepare our ſelues to make any reſiſtance. And thus hee aſſaulted our firſt parents in Paradiſe, when they ſecurely promiſed vnto themſelues the continuance and increaſe of their happineſſe; and Dauid alſo after all his trouble when hee was wretchleſſe and idle, ſleeping in the day, and after walking on his houſe top, letting his eyes wander after pleaſures. If therefore wee would withſtand Satan, let vs ſhake off all drowſie and carnall ſecuritie, and continually watch, ſtanding on our guard to reſiſt his encounters whenſoeuer hee ſetteth vpon vs: and as in calme weather the carefull Mariner prouideth all things againſt a tempeſt, and the valiant ſouldier doth arme and furniſh himſelfe with all neceſſaries before the aſſault; ſo when Sathan ſeemeth to offer vs a time of truce, let vs therein prepare our ſelues more ſtrongly againſt the day of battaile; for when this raging Lion ſeemeth to ſleepe as though he did not regard vs, then if through wretchleſneſſe wee giue him the leaſt aduantage, he will ſuddenly runne vpon vs and deuoure vs, if hee get vs within his cruell pawes.

§. Sect. 3. Satan neuer weary in aſſaulting vs. 1.Pet.5.8. Iob 1.7.

The third thing to be obſerued, is his indefatigable paines in tempting and aſſaulting vs, for hee neuer taketh reſt, but ſtill goeth about like a roring Lion ſeeking whom hee may deuoure; and this is euident by his owne confeſſion, Iob 1.7. where he profeſſeth that he had beene compaſſing the earth to and fro, and walked from place to place. So that hee omitteth no paine nor labour in ſeeking our deſtruction. And though hee ouercome vs not at the firſt, but retire foiled, yet hee will gather his forces againe and againe, and inceſſantly ſet vpon vs. And therefore if we would obtaine victory, wee muſt not thinke much of our labour, but vſe all paines, diligence and watchfulneſſe in repelling his aſſaults. And ſeeing Satan is ſo vigilant and painfull in ſeeking our deſtruction, let vs thinke no paines too great in ſeeking our preſeruation; and conſidering that Sathan after one, or two, or twentie foiles is as ready to ſet vpon vs again as at the firſt, let vs neuer faint, but like valiant ſouldiers alwayes ſtand readie in the field to endure his encounters. But alas, the practice of moſt men is farre otherwiſe, for they watch and drudge night and day to attaine vnto riches and preferments, and in the meane time little regard this dangerous foe, but to the end they may attaine vnto their worldly deſires, they entangle themſelues in the ſnares which hee hath laid to intrap them to their vtter deſtruction.

Sect.4.
at Satan en chan-th his temp-tions for his tter aduange.

The fourth thing to be obſerued in Satans fight, is his often changing of his temptations, and taking as it were into his hand another weapon, when hee perceiueth the firſt woundeth not. For example, he will tempt vs to the contempt of Gods Word, if hee cannot ſo preuaile, hee will entice vs at leaſt to neglect it; and if thus hee cannot hurt vs, he will, if hee can, choake the ſeed of Gods Word with the thornie cares of the World, and ſo make it vnfruitfull. He will moue vs to thinke that Chriſt was no Sauiour; if he cannot perſwade vs to this, then he will tell vs hee is not our Sauiour. Yea ſo ſhameleſſe is this tempter, that he will now tempt vs to to beleeue one lie of his coyning; and preſently after when he ſeeth wee giue no credit to that, hee will tell vs the cleane contrary. For example, hee will ſometimes tell vs that we are ſuch grieuous ſinners that there is no way but damnation: and if we withſtand this aſſault, hee will ſoone after perſwade vs to an ouer-weening conceit of our owne excellencie, and to a Phariſaicall opinion that we are not as other men are. Sometimes he will moue vs to doubt of our election, and if hee cannot thus preuaile, hee will preſently perſwade vs to thinke our election ſo ſure, that though we follow our owne luſts, and giue our ſelues ouer to all outragious wickedneſſe, yet in the end wee ſhall be ſaued. In a word, this wicked Protheus will transforme himſelf into a thouſand diuers ſhapes, and in a ſhort ſpace will varie many wayes his temptations, that if hee cannot preuaile by one meanes, he may ouercome vs by another. And therefore it behoueth vs, if wee will withſtand him, to arme our ſelues, not on one ſide alone, nor to be prepared againſt two or three aſſaults of our ſpirituall enemie, but we muſt be readie to anſwere all obiections, and not ſo wholly encline to one ſide and to the defending of one part, as that in the meane time wee leaue the other naked to be wounded with Satans blowes. And to the end wee may the rather bee encouraged to ſtand conſtantly in our defence, wee are to know, that when Satan doth ſo often ſhift his temptations, and in a ſhort diſtance of time doth ſeeke to bring vs into quite contrary vices, it is a manifeſt ſigne that hee doth not yet preuaile. For as no enemie is ſo fooliſh as will after that hee hath made one ſufficient breach for entry, or forced one gate of the Citie, goe from that to another, but rather enter where the way is made; ſo Satan laying ſiege to our ſoules, would not ſeeke to make a new battery with his temptations, if the former had made way for him to enter and ſurprize vs; he would not tempt vs to pride and preſumption, if he had ouercome our faith and plunged vs into deſpaire; he would neuer transforme himſelfe into an Angell of light, if hee could haue ouercome vs in his owne likeneſſe; hee would neuer tell vs of Gods mercie, if hee had alreadie ouerwhelmed vs with the ſight of our ſinnes, and conſideration of his iuſtice; not yet of Gods iuſtice, if hee could keepe vs in carnall ſecuritie, by ſetting before vs his mercie: but that way whereby he perceiues that he any whit preuailes, he will follow and continue earneſt in the ſame purſuite, till he perceiue he cannot catch vs. As therefore when the fit of the Ague ſhifteth from time to time, it is a good ſigne that our nature waxing ſtrong doth preuaile againſt the diſeaſe; ſo when Satans temptations in a ſhort time often change, and that from one contrarie to another, it is a ſigne that Gods Spirit being ſtrong in vs, doth reſiſt Sathan and putteth him to theſe ſhifts, whereas he would held on a conſtant courſe if hee preuailed againſt vs.

The oft changing of Satans temptations a probable ſigne that he doth not preuaile.

That Satan aſſaulteth vs ſometime himſelfe, and ſometime by his inſtruments.

The fift thing to be obſerued in the manner of Sathans fight, is, that ſometimes hee ſetteth vpon vs immediatly in his owne perſon, and ſometimes mediately, vſing for his inſtruments the world and the fleſh. Of the firſt wee haue an example, 1.*Chron.*21.1. where it is ſaid that Satan prouoked Dauid to number Iſrael. So the Euangeliſt ſheweth that the Deuill did put in the heart of Iudas Iſcariot to betray Chriſt. And the Apoſtle Peter telleth Ananias that Satan had filled his heart with his ſuggeſtions that he ſhould lie vnto the Holy Ghoſt. And thus alſo hee tempted our Sauiour Chriſt immediatly fortie dayes together in the Wilderneſſe, Mat. 4. Now when hee thus fighteth againſt vs in his own perſon, he giueth the aſſault either in his owne likeneſſe, or elſe transformeth himſelfe into an Angell of light. When hee encountreth vs in his owne likeneſſe, and like a Deuill indeed, then he doth as it were proclaime open warres, tempting vs not only to thoſe ſinnes, which hauing ſome appearance of good in them, our corrupt conſcience doth approue of, or at leaſt, can without any great terror winke at, but alſo to all outragious wickedneſſe and helliſh impietie, which euen a ciuill Worldling would abhorre to thinke of; namely, to Atheiſme, Idolatry, contempt of all Religion, blaſphemies againſt God, perjurie, ſacriledge, perſecuting perſecuting the knowne truth, hereſie, murther, adulterie, and ſuch like: all which at the firſt ſight may eaſily bee diſcerned to bee the ſuggeſtions of Satan, becauſe this helliſh brood doe reſemble their wicked father in their very countenance and outward appearance. And therefore Sathan who ſubdueth more with the Serpents wiles then with the Lions force, doth ſeldome vſe this fight againſt any which haue but the ciuill reſtraining grace of God, vnleſſe hee intice them thereunto by degrees (as before I haue ſhewed) or except hee finde them exceeding ignorant, to the end hee may make them beleeue that his ſuggeſtions are their owne thoughts; but hee practiſeth theſe temptations, for the moſt part, againſt thoſe who haue euen ſold themſelues to worke wickedneſſe, hauing their hearts hardned and conſciences ſeared with their cuſtomable ſinning.

Iohn 13.2.

Acts 5.3.

§.Sect.6. How Satan transformeth himſelfe into an angell of light.

And therefore moſt commonly hee transformeth himſelfe into an Angell of light, tempting vs to ſinne by vſing frindly perſwaſions, and making liberall offers of pleaſure, profit or preferment, or elſe minſing thoſe ſins to which hee tempteth vs as though they were nothing, or masking them vnder the vizard of vertue. Neither doth he often moue vs to commit thoſe ſinnes which nature reſtrained by Gods common grace, or ſanctified by his Spirit) doth abhorre and tremble to think of; vnleſſe it be either to vex Gods children with ſuch ſuggeſtions, rather then for any hope of ouercomming them; or elſe that whileſt their minds are wholly intent in withſtanding his outward violence, he may more cunningly intrap them in his ſecret ambuſhments, which they regard not. But otherwiſe hee vſually tempts vs to commit ſuch ſinnes, as through our corruption we are prone vnto, as not thinking them to be ſinnes, or but ſmall, or rather neuer entring into any conſideration of them at all; as namely, carnall ſecuritie, hardneſſe of heart, infidelitie, impenitencie, neglect of Gods Word, prophaning of his Sabbaths, couetouſneſſe, ambition, pride, neglect of the generall duties of Chriſtianitie and ſpeciall duties of our callings. All which are not much leſſe hainous in the ſight of the Lord then the other groſſe outward ſinnes, and much more dangerous vnto vs, as being Satans ſecret ſnares which hee layeth to entrap vs at vnawares; in which when we are caught we are content to lie bound, becauſe they doe not ſo much pinch and torment the the conſcience as the other outward ſinnes, being not ſeene, or not regarded. As therefore thoſe diſeaſes which by diſturbing the braine doe take away all ſenſe of paine, are of all others moſt deſperate, namely, the dead palſie, the falling ſickneſſe, and ſleepie lethargie, and in other diſeaſes the patient is moſt dangerouſly ſick when he hath no feeling thereof; ſo there is no ſickneſſe of the ſoule ſo deſperate and dangerous, as thoſe that afflict not our conſciences with any ſenſe of paine; to wit, carnall ſecuritie, hardneſſe of heart, and the reſt aboue named.

§.Sect.7. That Satan is moſt to be feared when hee moſt flattereth.

And thus haue I ſhewed Satans diſguiſed and ſubtill manner of fight, wherein like a Pirate he hangeth out flags of truce, to ſignifie peace and friendſhip, till hee haue gotten vs within his reach and command: and then he grapleth with vs, ranſacketh vs of all Gods graces, & caſteth vs ouer boord into the ſea of deſtructiō. And therfore it behoueth vs with no leſſe care to withſtand Sathan when he fawneth, then when he frowneth; when he fighteth by ambuſhment, then when hee aſſaulteth vs by open violence; when he offereth to ſtab vs to the heart, then when hee doth but (as it were) pricke a veine, letting vs bloud to death without ſenſe of paine; when hee tempteth vs to outragious crimes, then when he enticeth vs to ſecret and hidden ſinnes; when hee allureth vs like a friend to commit ſinne, by offering pleaſure, riches, or honours, then when like an enemie, a roring Lion, or cruell dragon he rangeth about and rageth againſt vs. For he propoundeth things delightfull to bring vs to griefe and miſerie, he fawneth on vs that he may bemire vs, and killeth while he embraceth vs. Neither doth man know his time, but as the fiſhes which are taken in an euill net, and as the birds which are caught in the ſnare, ſo are the children of men ſnared in the euill time, when it falleth vpon them ſuddenly, as it is Eccleſ.9.12. Yea, ſeeing this fight is farre more dangerous, becauſe he couereth his hooke with an alluring baite; and thoſe ſnares of ſinne more pernitious which lie hidden, then thoſe which lie in open view; ſeeing we are more eaſily tempted to thoſe ſinnes which are ſecret and diſguiſed in the habit of vertue, then vnto thoſe groſſe ſinnes which haue their names as it were branded in their foreheads; ſeeing alſo wee can more hardly repent of them, both becauſe they doe not appeare ſo horrible and grieuous vnto vs, as the other open and outward ſinnes, and alſo becauſe they worke in vs no ſhame after wee entertaine and liue in them, neither can any of our Chriſtian brethren admoniſh or rebuke vs for them, they being ſecret and vnknowne: therefore is Satan made more audacious to tempt vs, and wee more bold to admit of his temptation; and after we are fallen we lack meanes to raiſe vs vp againe by vnfained repentance, for our ſelues doe approue our ſins, and our brethren know them not: which Bernard well diſcerning, vttereth this ſpeech fit for this purpoſe: I am more afraid (ſaith he) of my ſecret, then of my open ſinnes; for if I ſinne ſecretly there is no man to reproue me; and where reprehenſion is not feared, there the tempter hath moſt free acceſſe and the ſin is entertained with pleaſing delight. In a word, ſeeing we are more eaſily drawne into theſe ſinnes; and after wee are enthralled with them, make no haſte to get out of our captiuitie; therefore let vs bee much more wary and heedfull in diſcouering and auoiding theſe hidden ſnares and ſecret ſinnes, into which wee doe moſt commonly fall vnwittingly, and being fallen doe moſt willingly continue in them.

§. Sect.8. How Satan aſſaulteth vs by his Inſtruments the world and the fleſh.

Secondly, Sathan aſſaulteth vs ſometime by his Deputies and inſtruments; eſpecially he employeth in theſe ſeruices, the world and the fleſh. In the world he doth not only make choice of our enemies and prophane irreligious men, which he ſtirreth vp to afflict and perſecute vs, to the end wee may be diſcouraged from the profeſſion and practice of true godlineſſe; but alſo of our deare friends and acquaintance and our neere kindred: ſometime our brother or ſiſter, our parents and children, yea, ſometimes a mans wife which lieth in his boſome, playeth the part of the tempter. As wee may ſee in the example of Iob, who was not ſo much vexed by all his outward afflictions, as by the temptation of his wife, and three friends. The ſame is euident in the example of Eue, whom Satan vſed as his inſtrument to intice Adam to the breach of Gods commandement: and Ieſabel, who was the Deuils Deputie, in prouoking her husband to oppreſſion and horrible murther. Neither doth hee only vſe to theſe ends our carnall friends, but alſo our ſpirituall kindred in Chriſt, who are of the ſame Religion, and make the ſame profeſſion with vs. And thus by the old Prophet, he enticed the yong Prophet to tranſgreſſe Gods commandement, 1.Kings 13. And thus he tempted our Sauiour Chriſt to neglect the worke of our redemption, vſing the Apoſtle Peter as his inſtrument; & therefore becauſe he ſupplied the Deuils place, our Sauiour calleth him by his name, ſaying, Get thee behind me Satan, thou art an offence to me, *Matth.*16.23. And thus now adayes hee vſeth profeſſors, yea Preachers of the Goſpell, as meanes to tempt men to ſinne, both by their words and euill examples, which temptation is farre more dangerous and of greater force, then if all worldlings ſhould combine themſelues together, and labour both by perſwaſion and example to ſeduce them. For when they can ſay, I am a profeſſor as well as thou, I am a ſeruant of God who make conſcience of my wayes as well as thou, I am a Prophet as well as thou, and therefore thou needeſt not to make any doubt or ſcruple in following my counſell or example; it is a moſt ſtrong temptation to intice vs to ſinne: for like ſheepe wee are moſt apt to follow after, when any of our owne company lead vs the way. And therefore if we would reſiſt this temptation, we muſt labour after true knowledge, that we may not depend vpon others for our direction, but vpon the Word of God alone, and not liue by example, but by precept; for the ſtraiteſt rule that euer was of the moſt holy mans life (our Sauiour Chriſt excepted) is often & in many places crooked (for who is it that hath not erred and gone aſtray?) and therefore if wee alwayes follow their example in all particulars, wee ſhall erre with them beſides all our owne errours.

§. Sect.9. That Satan vſeth the helpe of our owne fleſh in tempting vs to ſin.

So alſo hee vſeth the helpe of our owne fleſh to betray the ſpirit, and leade vs captiue into ſinne; and that ſo cunningly, that we can hardly diſcerne betweene Satans ſuggeſtions and our owne corrupt motions and deſires. For being a ſpirit, he doth not appeare in a corporall ſhape and perſwade vs to ſinne with reall words, which are conuayed to the vnderſtanding and heart by the eare, but hee commeth to vs after a ſpirituall manner, and ſuggeſteth ſecretly his temptations into the heart and mind directly and immediatly, ſo as wee can ſeldome diſtinguiſh his motions from our owne thoughts. For as the Spirit of God doth ſo moue vs to all vertuous and holy actions, as that in the meane time wee would thinke his motions to bee our owne godly cogitations, but that we are ſufficiently inſtructed out of Gods Word, that wee cannot of our ſelues ſo much as thinke a good thought, vnleſſe it proceed from God; ſo much leſſe can we diſcerne between the ſuggeſtions of Sathan and our owne fleſhly thoughts, becauſe they are both corrupt and alike wicked. By reaſon whereof it commeth to paſſe that Satan wanteth no opportunitie of circumuenting vs, becauſe we can put no difference betweene his temptations and our owne carnall deſires. And therefore hee hauing gotten (as it were) our owne watch-word, we are readie to open the gates of our ſoules when he offereth to enter, and to yeeld to his temptations as ſoone as he aſſaulteth vs, whereas no man almoſt is ſo outragiouſly deſperate that would wittingly and willingly entertaine Satans ſuggeſtions, whom hee knoweth to be a common enemy to mankind, continually ſeeking their deſtruction, though he ſhould intice him hereunto by offring much riches & great preferments. Yea, hence it is that after Satan hath many times deceiued and circumuented vs, yet cannot we beware of him, nor auoid his deceits. For whereas if a man doe giue vs euill counſell, or any way coſen vs, yet after he hath once or twice come vnto vs, wee can take heed of him, and though he make faire ſhewes of honeſty and friendſhip, wee will notwithſtanding be very iealous and ſuſpitious leſt againe he ouer-reach vs; when Satan commeth to vs this day and tempteth vs to ſuch groſſe wickedneſſe, that wee cannot chuſe but diſcerne them to be his ſuggeſtions, yet yet this is no impediment to him but that he may come againe to morrow, and deceiue vs with ſome more ſubtill policy, becauſe wee cannot diſcerne betweene his ſuggeſtions and our owne thoughts, and therefore doe acknowledge no other authour of his temptations but our ſelues.

2.*Cor.*3.5.

§. *Sect.*10.
That Satan hath great aduantage againſt vs becauſe his temptations are like our owne carnall thoughts.

Hence alſo it is that hee will not ſticke to tempt the moſt godly vnto the groſſeſt impietie, and the moſt learned and ſound in judgement, to entertaine the abſurdeſt hereſie or errour. For if hee preuaile (which ſometime hee doth, as wee may ſee in the example of David, whom he tempted to adulterie and murther, though he were a man according to Gods owne heart; and of Peter whom hee tempted to denie and forſweare Chriſt, though he were a moſt worthy Apoſtle) then he getteth a great victorie, and giueth them a ſingular foile; but if he be repulſed, yet this is no hindrance vnto him, why he may not intrap them in ſome more ſecret ambuſhment. Hence it is that though he begin his fight with cunning policie, taking vpon him the perſon of a friend, and tranſforming himſelfe into an Angell of light; yet this is no impediment but that he may afterwards again appeare and violently aſſault vs in his owne likeneſſe; as he aſſaulted our Sauiour, firſt with ſubtill and ſecret temptations, like a friend and wel-willer; and when he could not ſo preuaile, hee doth not ſticke to appeare like himſelfe, tempting him to outragious groſſe idolatrie, ſaying, All this will I giue thee if thou wilt fall downe and worſhip me. And contrariwiſe though hee begin his aſſault like a Deuill and profeſſed enemie, this is no hindrance but that he may end it like an Angell of light, and a flattering treacherous friend. So when hee hath inticed vs to one extreme and preuaileth not, this is no impediment but that ſoone after he may allure vs to the cleane contrary; becauſe though wee thinke the firſt motion to be his ſuggeſtion, yet wee may imagine the other to be our owne thought, or (as I ſaid) the motion of Gods Spirit, becauſe it is quite contrary to the former.

*Math.*4.9.

§. *Sect.*11.
How we may auoid danger, though wee cannot diſcern Satans temptations from our owne luſts.

Seeing therefore the matter ſtandeth thus; how may wee reſiſt Satan, conſidering that we cannot diſcerne his ſuggeſtions from our owne cogitations? I anſwere; wee muſt be skilfull in Gods Word, and thereby able to judge what is good and what is euill, to diſcerne what is vertue and what is vice, what God hath commanded, and what hee hath forbidden, which be the motions of Gods Spirit, and which the ſuggeſtions of Satan, and the thoughts of our corrupt fleſh; and then are we carefully to embrace that which our conſcience approueth as good, being informed by Gods Word, and to auoide and reject thoſe motions which wee know to be euill, whether they doe proceed from Satan, or from our ſelues. For it is not greatly materiall to know who is the authour of them, ſo wee are aſſured that they are euill and wicked; neither is it any dangerous errour to aſcribe Satans ſuggeſtions to our corrupt fleſh; or to attribute the wicked thoughts of our owne fleſh vnto Satan: for though he be not the next and immediate cauſe, yet hee is the firſt and principall cauſe of all ſinne and wickedneſſe. And hence it is that in the Scriptures the ſame wicked motion and action is ſometimes aſcribed to man, & ſometimes to Sathan indifferently, as appeareth, Acts 5.3,5. where firſt Peter aſſirmeth Satan to be the author of Ananias ſinne, by filling his heart with his ſuggeſtions, whereby hee was tempted to lie vnto the holy Ghoſt, and after he ſaith that Ananias had conceiued this lie in his owne heart.

Acts 5.3,5.

§. *Sect.*1
How Satans
ſuggeſtions may be diſc ned from ou owne fleſhly luſts.

But though moſt commonly it be very hard to diſcerne betweene the ſuggeſtions of Sathan, and of our corrupt fleſh; yet ſometimes they may be diſtinguiſhed by apparent differences. As firſt when the temptations are ſo cunning and exceeding ſubtill, that it is not poſſible they ſhould be the thoughts of a ſilly ignorant man, but the apparant ſuggeſtions of the old wily Serpent. Secondly, when as the ſuggeſtion is vrged with great force and violence, and leaueth behind it a deepe impreſſion, which ſeemeth to bring a neceſſitie of doing that which is euen contrary to naturall reaſon; whereas the ſuggeſtions of the fleſh doe rather leade and intice vs then draw and inforce vs vnto ſin. Thirdly, the temptations of Satan moue vs oftentimes to ſuch outragious wickedneſſe, and helliſh impietie, that euen nature corrupted doth condemne it as abominable and trembleth with feare and horrour, when they are firſt ſuggeſted. Fourthly, the fleſh taketh occaſion of things preſent and ſubiect to the ſenſes to intice vs vnto ſinne; but Satans ſuggeſtions ſometimes are farre fetcht and ſo ſtrange vnto vs, that before the inſtant they are ſuggeſted we neuer thought or ſo much as dreamed of them. Laſtly, the things whereunto wee are tempted by the fleſh, are alwayes delightfull and pleaſing vnto vs; but Satan tempteth vs alſo to thoſe things which are irkeſome and grieuous: as namely to ſuperſtitious abſtinence whereby the bodie is almoſt ſtarued, to puniſhing of our owne bodies, as he tempted the Baalitiſh Prieſts, to cut & launce themſelues before their Idol; and the ſuperſtitious Papiſts to whip themſelues before their Images, and to take vpon them tedious and dangerous pilgrimages to Idols and reliques of Saints; and the idolatrous heathen to burne in ſacrifice their deare children. So alſo hee tempteth ſome to deſpaire of Gods mercie, and ſo to torment their conſciences with horrour and feare; yea, ſometimes to lay violent hands vpon themſelues, murthering and taking away their owne life, which by nature is ſo deare and precious vnto them. All which being contrary to our naturall inclinations and the deſires of the fleſh, manifeſtly appeare to be the ſuggeſtions of Satan.

And theſe are the chiefe differences betweene the temptations of Sathan and the fleſh; otherwiſe they are commonly ſo like one to the other that they can hardly be diſcerned: and therefore let vs not be ſo carefull, curiouſly to diſtinguiſh them, as to auoide or reſiſt them; knowing that Satan is the Captaine Generall, and the fleſh and the luſts thereof his chiefe aides & aſſiſtants, which continually fight againſt the ſpirit, and labour to plunge both body and ſoule into euerlaſting deſtruction. To this purpoſe one ſaith, It is not eaſie to be diſcerned when our owne heart ſpeaketh, or when it heareth the fleſh or the Deuill ſpeake, But what mattereth it which of them is the ſpeaker, when as that which is ſpoken is one and the ſame. What will it profit vs to know the perſon of the ſpeaker, when as that which is ſpoken manifeſtly appeareth to be wicked and pernicious. And againe: It is not eaſie to diſcerne who ſpeaketh, nor any danger not to diſcerne it.

Chap. XXII.

Of the generall meanes whereby wee may bee enabled to withſtand our ſpirituall enemies.

§. Sect.1. The circumſtances to bee conſidered in this ſpirituall conflict.

AND ſo much concerning the manner of Satans fight. Now we are to ſpeake of the conflict it ſelfe; wherein (as I haue ſhewed) the parties aſſaulting and oppugning are the Deuill and his aſſiſtants, the world and the fleſh; the party defending and reſiſting is the Chriſtian ſouldier. The cauſe of the fight is not for Lands and Dominions, nor for riches and mines of gold; for theſe would Sathan bee content to giue if he had them in his poſſeſſion, if wee would renounce Gods ſeruice, and fall downe and worſhip him; but for the euerlaſting ſaluation of our ſoules, which Sathan laboureth by all meanes poſſible to hinder, and to plunge vs into endleſſe deſtruction. The weapons which the aſſailants vſe in this fight are not the ſword and ſpeare, or any other carnall furniture, but ſpirituall temptations, whereby they ſeeke to intice, draw, and prouoke man to ſinne, that conſequently hee may receiue the wages thereof euerlaſting death. The weapons which the Chriſtian ſouldier vſeth to defend himſelfe and repell his enemies, is the ſpirituall armour before ſpoken of, namely, the girdle of veritie, the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, the knowledge and profeſſion of the Goſpell of peace, the ſhield of faith, the helmet of ſaltion, the ſword of the Spirit, and feruent and effectuall Prayer.

§. Sect.2. Of two common affections to be conſidered of in this ſpirituall conflict.

Now in this conflict of temptations, there are firſt two common affections or generall properties to be conſidered of; the Chriſtian ſouldiers manfull reſiſtance, or elſe his fainting and receiuing the foile; for either hee couragiouſly ſtandeth vpon his defence, armed with the graces of Gods ſpirit, and putteth Sathan to flight by withſtanding his temptations; or elſe being ſurpriſed at vnawares, whileſt hee is diſarmed of theſe ſpirituall weapons and Chriſtian armour, he is foiled by his ſpirituall enemies, yeelding vnto their temptations and falling into ſin. That wee may withſtand our ſpirituall enemie valiantly in all his temptations, and obtaine a finall victorie, there are certaine generall meanes to be vſed; which may ſerue as ſtrong forts and bulwarks, vnto which we may retire our ſelues as often as we faint, and be readie to receiue any diſaduantage in the fight. Firſt, we are continually to haue in memorie the commandement of our chiefe captaine Chriſt Ieſus, whereby hee inciteth vs to a continuall fight without fainting or yeelding. So Epheſ.6.10.11. Bee ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to ſtand againſt all the aſſaults of the diuell. And. 1. Pet.5.8. Your aduerſary the diuell as a roaring Lyon walketh about ſeeking whom he may deuoure. Whom reſiſt ſtedfaſt in the faith. Secondly, let vs be incouraged to withſtand our ſpirituall enemies with aſſured hope of victory; for we fight the Lords battels vnder the ſtandard of Ieſus Chriſt, whoſe power is omnipotent, and therefore able to defend vs, and to ouerthrow our enemies with a word of his mouth; who alſo is our head and wee his members, and therefore wee may aſſure our ſelues that hee hath no leſſe will then power to ſuccour vs. As alſo let vs alwayes haue in minde the crowne of victorie promiſed to all that ouercome, euen a crowne of glory and euerlaſting happineſſe in Gods Kingdome, Apoc.2.7. and 3.5.12.21. And this will make vs reſolue neuer to faint in the battle, nor cowardly yeeld vnto Satans temptations, though he ſhould intice vs to ſinne by offering vs the whole World, becauſe we would not thereby hazard the loſſe of this eternall waight of glory. Thirdly, we are alwayes to ſtand in readineſſe armed with the Chriſtian armour, the graces of Gods Spirit, and to vſe all good meanes that we may be more and more ſtrengthened and confirmed in them. But yet when we are at the ſtrongeſt, wee are not to preſume vpon our owne ſtrength, but to relie our ſelues wholly vpon the Lords aſſiſtance, and when we are tempted ted and aſſaulted, wee muſt continually implore his helpe, that being armed with the power of his might, wee may withſtand the temptation and obtaine victorie.

§. Sect. 3. The fourth means, to take occaſion of Satans temptation vnto ſinne of doing the contrarie vertue.

Fourthly, when wee are aſſaulted by our ſpirituall enemies and tempted vnto any ſin, we muſt not only abſtaine from committing thereof, but alſo take occaſion thereby of doing the contrarie vertue. For example, when we are tempted to vnlawfull pleaſures, we muſt not onely abſtaine from them, but alſo wee are ſomewhat to abridge our ſelues of thoſe that be lawfull, and the more ſeriouſly and painfully to follow the workes of our lawfull callings: when we are tempted to couetouſneſſe, wee muſt the more earneſtly exerciſe the workes of mercie and Chriſtian liberalitie. When wee are tempted to ambition, we muſt not onely refraine from vainglory, but we muſt labour after true humilitie and mortification, refuſing not onely vnlawfull honours, but thoſe alſo which are lawfull, ſo oft as we haue iuſt cauſe to feare that Satan will (taking occaſion of our corruption) hereby cauſe vs to forget God. when wee are tempted to neglect the hearing of Gods Word on the Lords Sabbath, we are the more diligently to heare it, not onely then, being bound hereunto by Gods commandement, as being one of the chiefe meanes of ſanctifying this day conſecrated to Gods ſeruice; but alſo on the weeke dayes, if the Lord giue vs fit opportunitie, when as we might lawfully be exerciſed in the duties of our callings. In a word, when wee are tempted to any vice, we are to take occaſion thereby of doing the contrary vertue; in the meane time carefully auoiding the policie of Satan, before ſpoken of, whereby he laboureth to draw vs from one vice to his contrary extreame. And ſo like valiant ſouldiers we ſhal not onely auoid the danger and violence of Satans ſtrokes, but alſo wee ſhall giue Satan the foile with his owne weapon, yea and make him afraid to aſſault vs againe with his temptations, leſt when hee prouoketh vs vnto ſin, we take occaſion thereby to ſerue God, and more conſtantly to embrace vertue.

Fiftly, we are moſt carefully to withſtand Satans temptations when they are firſt ſuggeſted; and to giue him the repulſe as ſoone as wee perceiue that hee is but beginning to make an entrance. For this gliding Serpent if hee can but thruſt in his head, will eaſily make roome for his whole bodie: and therefore we muſt nip and bruſe him in the head, and vſe his temptations like the Serpents brood, which if men deſire to kill, they doe not tread vpon their tailes, for ſo they would turne againe and ſting them, but vpon their heads, and then they haue no power to hurt them: So wee are not fondly to thinke that we can without hurt vanquiſh Sathans temptations in th[illegible]d when wee haue long entertained them: for vnleſſe they be nipped in the head, and withſtood in the beginning, they will mortally poyſon vs with the ſting of ſinne. For as theeues comming to breake into a houſe, if they can but find roome for the point of their wrench to enter, will eaſily by turning and winding about the vice make the doores, though very ſtrong, flie open and giue them entrance; ſo if this cunning thiefe Sathan can find any entrance for his firſt temptations, ſo as we can be content to thinke vpon them, and reuolue them in our mindes with any liking, hee will eaſily burſt open the gates of our ſoules, and entring further will rob vs of all Gods graces. Let vs therefore if wee would reſiſt Satan, follow the aduice of the Heathen Poet in a farre different matter:

Principijs obſta: ſerò medicina paratur,
Cum mala per longas conualuere moras.

Or rather the counſell of the Apoſtle giuen vs in this ſelfe-ſame reſpect, Epheſ. 4.27. Giue no place to the Deuill. And as wiſe Citizens being beſieged, doe not let their enemies ſcale their walls and enter the Towne, with a purpoſe then to repell and beate them backe againe; but they withſtand them as ſoone as they giue the firſt aſſault, and keepe them, if they can, from approching neere their wals with ſconces and bulwarkes: ſo we are not to ſuffer Satan our enemy and the troupes of his temptations to enter into our hearts, but to giue them the repulſe at their firſt approching, leſt it be too late afterwards when they haue ſurprized and wounded vs with ſin. Bleſſed are they therefore who take this Babyloniſh brood of Satans temptations and daſh them euen whileſt they are young againſt the ſtones, leſt waxing old & ſtrong they furiouſly fight againſt vs, and leading vs captiue in the chaines of ſin, grieuouſly afflict and vexe vs.

Epheſ. 4.27.

Pſalm 137

§. Sect. 5. The ſixt me is after one temptation paſt to prep our ſelues fo another.

Sixtly, if we would not be ſurprized and foiled by Satan, wee muſt after we haue reſiſted him in one temptation, be readie prepared to withſtand another, and after wee haue once or twice giuen Satan the repulſe, we are not ſecurely to giue our ſelues to reſt, as though the warre were at an end: but wee muſt continually expect his returne with freſh ſupplies, and prepare our ſelues for a new aſſault, vſing the time of Satans intermiſſion, as a breathing time to recouer ſtrength againſt the next encounter. And as ſouldiers beſieged after they haue ſuſtained one aſſault, and giuen their enemies the repulſe, doe not ſecurely giue themſelues to idleneſſe and ſleepe, but prepare all things readie for the next conflict, mending the breaches, and repairing thoſe places which in the time of fight they found to bee moſt weake; ſo when we haue withſtood ſome of Sathans temptations, and giuen him the repulſe, pulſe, wee are not to giue our ſelues to reſt, ſleeping in wretchleſſe ſecuritie, as though our enemies were quite ouercome, but rather in the intermiſſion of the ſpirituall combat, we are to prepare our ſelues for the next aſſault, vſing all meanes to confirme our ſtrength, where we diſcerned in the time of fight that we were moſt weake, and more ſtrongly to arme our ſelues with the ſhield of faith and the ſword of the ſpirit; againſt thoſe tentations which we found moſt forcible to preuaile againſt vs. For our enemie like a roring Lion continually rangeth about ſeeking whom he may deuoure, his malice will neuer let him reſt, but euen then when he ſeemeth to entertaine a truce, hee is moſt buſie in plotting meanes, whereby he may worke our finall deſtruction. And therefore, wee are neuer more carefully to ſtand vpon our guard, then when this enemy ſeemeth to proclaime a peace, or when hee fleeth away as though he were vanquiſhed; for when hee talketh of peace, hee maketh himſelfe ready for the battaile, and this wicked Parthian doth more hurt in flying than in fighting. Here therefore the Chriſtian ſouldier muſt auoide two dangerous euils: the one, that hee doe not faint or yeeld in the time of the fight; the other, that hee doe not after one victory waxe inſolent and ſecure: but when he hath once ouercome, he is ſo to behaue himſelfe as though hee were preſently againe to be aſſaulted. For Satans temptations like the waues of the Sea do follow one in the necke of the other, and when one is paſt, another is readie to ouerwhelme vs, if like ſkilfull Pilots wee be not readie as well to breake the violence of that which followeth, as of that which went before. Neither muſt wee looke for any ſound truce or firme peace, till wee haue the euerlaſting peace in Gods Kingdome; for as long as wee continue in this life, our ſpirituall enemies will continually aſſault vs: and therefore let vs neuer be ſecure, vntill by death we haue obtained a finall victory.

And to the end that we may the rather be perſwaded to continuall care and Chriſtian perſeuerance in this ſpirituall fight vnto the end of our liues; let vs conſider that Gods promiſes and the crowne of victory are not promiſed to thoſe that enter into this ſpirituall fight, but vnto thoſe that continue fighting, till they haue obtained a full victory ouer their enemies, To him that ouercommeth will I giue to eate of the tree of life, Reuel.2.7. Be thou faithfull vnto the death, and I will giue thee the crowne of life, Verſe 10. Hee that ouercommeth ſhall not be hurt of the ſecond death. Verſe 11. To him that ouercommeth will I giue to eate of the Manna that is hid, &c. Verſe 17. He that ouercommeth ſhall be clothed in white aray, and I will not put out his name out of the booke of life: Chap.3.5. To him that ouercommeth will I grant to ſit with me in my throne, euen as I ouercame, and ſit with my Father in his throne. As it is Verſe 21. So that it is not ſufficient that wee enter the liſts and ſuſtaine the firſt and ſecond encounter, if afterwards we ſhamefully forſake the ſtandard of Chriſt and cowardly run away; or elſe traiterouſly yeeld vnto ſin and Satan: but if wee would be made partakers of Gods promiſes, wee muſt ouercome, that is, obtaine a full victorie ouer the fleſh, the world, and the Deuill. There is none triumpheth for making his enemies once or twice to retire, or for getting the better in ſome skirmiſh; becauſe they may gather their diſperſed forces, and joyne with them new ſupplies, and ſo giuing a freſh aſſault, obtaine victorie: but thoſe onely triumph who obtaine a full conqueſt, neither ſhall any triumph in the Kingdome of glory, who reſiſt Satan in one tentation onely, or bridle one luſt of the fleſh, but they who ſubdue them finally and wholy, not once alone, but vnto the end of their liues. For as it falleth out in worldly warres, oftentimes the enemy doth retire backe, and counterfetteth a flight, to the end the other may purſue him ſecurely and diſorderly with full aſſurance of victory; and then hee makes a ſtand and reuniting all his forces doth ouercome his wretchleſſe enemy: ſo oftentimes Satan faineth himſelfe to be put to flight, to the end wee may conceiue an opinion of his great weakneſſe, and our own inuincible ſtrength, and ſo bee brought to negligence and ſecuritie; and then he knits together all his force, and ouerthroweth vs when wee are wretchleſly ſecure fearing no danger. Yea, ſometimes he is in truth foiled, but yet not ſo as that he will ſurceaſe his fight; for if he cannot preuaile one way, hee will trie another, ſo long as our continuance in this earthly weake tabernacle giueth him any hope of ouercomming or foiling vs. And therefore we are alwayes to ſtand vpon our guard, and to keepe our ſtanding continually, watching and preparing our ſelues againſt the freſh aſſaults of our ſpirituall enemies. If Iob had beene ſecure after he had reſiſted Satans firſt temptation, in taking away his Oxen, Aſſes, and Sheepe, ſurely thoſe which followed would haue made him blaſpheme God as Satan imagined; but like a good ſouldier after that hee had receiued one blow, hee did not caſt away his ſhield of faith and patience, as though he had no further need of it, but ſtill held it vp expecting more, till the combate was ended; whoſe example we muſt imitate, if wee would obtaine victory, and enjoy the crowne of victory, euerlaſting happineſſe in Gods Kingdome. Otherwiſe if wee ſleepe in ſecuritie after wee haue giuen Sathan one ouerthrow, we ſhall be ſure to be aſſaulted and ſurpriſed before we be aware; for as one ſaith, Whileſt the Deuill is vanquiſhed, hee obtaineth victorie; and therefore: He is no more to be feared when hee ouercommeth, then when he is ouercome; for oftentimes he faineth himſelfe to be foiled that he may the more fiercely renue the aſſault, he flieth that he may draw vs into his ambuſhments, and aſſaile vs at vnawares; hee retireth openly that he may ſecretly ouercome.

Diabolus victus quoque vincit. Non ergo victor magis quàm victus extimeſcendus. Ioan. Riu. Atthend. de luct. Chriſt.

§. Sect. 7.
The ſeuenth meanes not to beleeue Satans ſuggeſtiſtions.

Seuenthly, if we would not be circumuented by Satan, wee muſt not giue any credit vnto him whether hee lieth or ſpeaketh true, whether he accuſeth or flattereth, whether hee indeauoureth to puffe vs vp with pride and ſelfe conceite, or whether hee laboreth by aggrauating our ſinnes to plunge vs into the gulfe of helliſh deſpaire; for he abode not in the truth becauſe there is no truth in him. When he ſpeaketh a lie he ſpeaketh of his owne, for he is a lyer and the father thereof, as it is, Ioh. 8.44. And if at any time he ſpeake the truth, it is to the end hee may be the better credited when he lyeth. For he ſpeaketh the truth that he may deceiue, he flattereth that he may hurt vs, hee promiſeth good things that he may giue vs euill, hee promiſeth life that hee may kill vs. And therefore we are not to beleeue the truth it ſelfe, becauſe hee ſpeakes it, but becauſe it is grounded on Gods word; nor to receiue it from his mouth as his aſſertion, but from the mouth of God, and his holy Prophets and Apoſtles, guided and inſpired with his Spirit: for either hee ſpeaketh the truth to gaine credit vnto his lies, or propoundeth true premiſes that hee may ſophiſtically gather out of them falſe concluſions. And hence it is that our Sauiour Chriſt did reiect his teſtimonie though true, and inioyned him ſilence when he confeſſed him to be the holy one of God, Mark. 1.24,25. And the Apoſtle Paul would not ſuffer the diuining maid to giue them her approbation though ſhee ſpake truth in confeſſing them the ſeruants of the moſt high God, which did ſhew vnto vs the way of ſaluation. becauſe Sathan did it, either to this end, that by his teſtimonie and approbation hee might cauſe them the rather to be ſuſpected and reputed impoſtors and deceiuers, who did their miracles by the helpe and aſſiſtance of ſome familiar ſpirit; or that hee might afterwards by telling this truth bee the rather credited when hee did bely and ſlander them.

§. Sect. 8.
The eight meanes, neither to deſpiſe Satans tentations, nor too deeply to apprehend them

Eightly, if wee would withſtand all Satans tentations, we muſt auoid two extremes, the one to deſpiſe them, the other too deeply to apprehend & too greatly to feare them. For if wee ſecurely contemne Satans tentations, wee will neuer arme and prepare our ſelues to make reſiſtance, and ſo hee will ouercome vs before wee be aware; if we take them too much to heart continually meditating vpon their ſtrength and violence, and vpon our owne infirmitie and weakneſſe, they will fill vs with feare, and plunge vs into deſpaire. If wee deſpiſe the tentation, Sathan will eaſily ſubdue vs: for there is no enemy ſo weake and feeble which will not preuaile againſt thoſe who ſecurely contemne them, though exceeding mightie; becauſe they neglect all meanes of their preſeruation, and neuer ſtand vpon their guard for their defence; and therefore much more will Satan preuaile againſt vs, if wee regard not his temptations, hee being ſtrong and mightie, and we feeble and weake. On the other ſide, if we ſo feare his tentations as that we deſpaire of victorie, Satan ſhall not need to fight againſt vs, for we will ouercome our ſelues, fainting before the fight, and caſting away our weapons as ſoone as Sathan doth but muſter his forces and march againſt vs. And therefore let vs ſo much feare the tentations, as that wee doe not ſecurely contemne them; and not ſo much feare them, as that wee ſhould deſpaire of victory; let vs feare them ſo much as that thereby wee bee ſtirred vp with more care and diligence to reſiſt and ouercome them; but not ſo much as that wee ſhould cowardly faint, diſtruſting Gods helpe. Let vs feare them in reſpect of our weakneſſe and their violence; but let vs boldly ſtriue againſt them, truſting in Gods almightie power and mercifull promiſes of his aide and aſſiſtance, being hereby aſſured of certaine victory.

§. Sect.
The ninth meanes th we examine tentations fore wee beleeue them.

Ninthly, wee muſt be moſt carefull that we doe not entertaine temptations, either into our judgements to allow them, or into our hearts and affections to be vexed and turmoiled with them, vpon the bare teſtimonie of Satan or our owne fleſh before wee haue throughly examined them by the touchſtone of Gods Truth. For if we are enioyned not to receiue doctrines hand ouer-head from thoſe that ſtand in the place of Gods Miniſters, and profeſſe their zeale in ſeeking our ſaluation; but firſt to trie the ſpirits whether they be of God or no; and if the Bereans are juſtly commended becauſe they did not inſtantly beleeue thoſe things which they heard from the Apoſtles themſelues, but firſt ſearched the Scriptures to ſee whether they were ſo or no: what folly and madneſſe is it to beleeue the ſuggeſtions of the Deuill, and our own fleſh without due examination, who are not only notorious liars, that ſeldome ſpeake the truth, vnleſſe it be with a purpoſe to deceiue, but alſo our profeſſed enemies, who ſeeke by all meanes our ruine and deſtruction. And thus we are to examine all temptations, whether they be aſperſions or perſwaſions, promiſes, or threatnings. For example, when Satan auoucheth that we are Hypocrites, we are not to beleeue it, becauſe he ſaith it, and ſo to vex our ſelues with this

1. Iohn 4.1.
Act. 17.

this perſwaſion, as though it were an vndoubted truth; but firſt wee muſt examine our ſelues, by Gods Word whether we be ſo or no, and out of it obſeruing the markes and ſignes both of hypocriſie and ſincerity, we are to apply them vnto our ſelues, that ſo we may diſcerne which of both doe belong vnto vs. And if wee find in vs the notes of vprightneſſe; as that wee deſire to performe obedience to the whole Law, and not only ſome few commandements, and that not onely outwardly to be ſeene of men, but alſo inwardly in our hearts, making conſcience of ſecret ſinnes aſwell as of open; that wee doe yeeld this obedience out of our loue towards God, and not for worldly and by reſpects: that we hate ſinne becauſe God hateth it and loue righteouſneſſe, becauſe he loueth it, and deſire as well to be freed from ſinne as from puniſhment, and to yeeld obedience, as to haue the reward of it, and ſuch like, then may wee with eaſe and vpon a ſure ground reject this temptation, as falſe and friuolous. So when he affirmeth that wee haue no faith and therefore are in the ſtate of condemnation, let vs not raſhly beleeue this ſuggeſtion and ſo be turmoiled and vexed with it, but let vs according to the counſell of the Apoſtle, trie our ſelues whether we be in the faith or no, obſeruing out of Gods Word the markes and ſignes of it; as the purifying of our hearts from that loue and delight in ſin which hath beene in them in former times; our loue to righteouſneſſe which wee haue formerly lothed; our care to pleaſe God, and to vſe the meanes of grace and ſaluation; our good workes and fruits of new obedience, and ſuch like; which ſignes if wee find in vs, we may eaſily get the victory in this temptation. Thus when hee telleth vs that we are not the children of God nor elected to ſaluation but the children of wrath and reprobation, ordained to deſtruction, if wee raſhly giue any credit to this ſuggeſtion how will it torment and vexe vs? How will it diſcourage vs in all Chriſtian duties when as wee thinke them bootleſſe and vnprofitable: whereas if we examine the temptation by the Word of God, and trie our ſtate by the markes and ſignes of our Election and Adoption therein contained, of which I ſhal ſpeake afterwards, how eaſily may we foile Sathan, and with much peace and comfort proceed in the wayes of godlineſſe? So when Satan perſwadeth vs to neglect holy duties, as hearing the Word, Prayer, and ſuch like, becauſe we performe them imperfectly and corruptly, and ſo ſinne againſt God and increaſe our condemnation; or deferre the doing them for time to come, when as we ſhall be more fit to doe them: if we giue credit to theſe tẽptations they will much turmoile vs, and more and more diſable vs vnto this holy ſeruice, but if we cal them into queſtion, and examine them by Gods Word, we ſhall find their falſhood, and auoid their danger. Becauſe that will teach vs, the more wee neglect the meanes of grace and ſaluation, the further we ſhall be from them, that God requireth of vs the obedience of ſonnes, that is, that wee deſire and indeuour to performe ſeruice vnto God in as much perfection as we are able; and that if wee ſo doe, hee will accept of our will for the deed, pardon our imperfections, and ſpare vs as a louing Father ſpareth his ſonne that ſerueth him. Thus alſo when he perſwadeth vs to ſin; to deſpaire of Gods mercie, and ſeeing it is too late to repent, to goe on in our euill wayes, and to take as much pleaſure as wee can in carnall delights; if wee would but examine this temptation wee ſhould find it contrary to Gods Truth, which reuealeth vnto vs the infiniteneſſe of Gods mercie inuiting vs to repentance, becauſe without all exception of perſon, ſinne or time, it is extended vnto all that leaue their ſinnes and turne vnto God by amendment of life. The ſame might be ſaid (but that it were too long to inſiſt vpon them) both of his falſe promiſes whereby he allureth the weake Chriſtian vnto ſinne, and alſo vngrounded threatnings, whereby hee frighteth him from holy duties; all which would be of no force to hurt vs, if we would bring them to the light of Gods Word, and examine them by this touchſtone, whereas receiuing them at Satans hands (as it were) in the darke, they doe much affright vs with cauſeleſſe feares and vngrounded terrours, and for the time that they are intertained vtterly diſcourage and diſable vs in vſing the meanes whereby wee might attaine to grace and ſaluation. And vpon this I haue the longer inſiſted becauſe (vpon much experience) I dare boldly ſay, that there is not any one thing that giueth Sathan greater aduantage in the ſpirituall conflict, or more afflicteth and weakneth poore Chriſtians vnto all good duties, then that they raſhly giue credit to his temptations, and neuer examine them by the Word of God, either by reaſon of their ignorance whereby they cannot, or their negligence and ſloth cauſed oftentimes through the aboundance of melancholy, whereby they liſt not to bring them to this triall.

§. Sect. 10.
The tenth meanes is not to trouble our ſelues with the iſſue of our temptations.

The tenth generall meanes to confirme and ſtrengthen vs in the ſpirituall conflict is to ſpend our whole forces againſt Sathans temptations, and not trouble our minds with cauſeleſſe feares and affrighting terrours by fore-caſting what will be the iſſue of them. For things preſent doe belong vnto vs, but future euents are onely and alwayes at Gods diſpoſing, and are therefore doubtfull vnto vs, whether they ſhall happen or no; or if they doe; when in or in what manner. In which reſpect many weake Chriſtians doe often offend and much weaken themſelues in being ſo much taken vp with that which doth not appertaine vnto them, namely future euents which God only knoweth and ordereth, that they quite neglect and forget preſent duties that belong vnto them. And thus ſome finding the violence of Sathans temptations , and their owne weakneſſe to withſtand them conclude a likelihood of their long continuance, and ſo an vnlikelihood of their withſtanding them. For if they cannot in their freſh ſtrength reſiſt the Deuill, and ſtand in a preſent brunt of temptations, much leſſe ſhall they (as they imagine) bee able to hold out when as being tired their ſtrength decreaſeth, and the malice and furie of their enemies is more enraged by their weake reſiſtance. In the mean time not conſidering that the iſſue of their temptations is in Gods hand, and that he can eaſily pull backe the enemy , ſo as hee ſhall not aſſault them, or renew and increaſe their wearied forces , ſo as they ſhall bee able to indure his encounters; Others feare that their weake ſhield of faith ſhall be pulled out of their hands , and that they ſhall bee vtterly ſpoiled of all ſauing grace, becauſe they find them alreadie ſo weakned in them ; not remembring that they ſtand in the power of Gods ſtrength , which is able to finiſh the battaile, as to giue the firſt on-ſet , and that their faith and other graces ſtand not in their owne ſtrength, but by vertue of Chriſts interceſſion who hath prayed that it may neuer faile ; and vpon the immutabilitie and truth of God , whoſe gifts and graces are without repentance. Others feeling in their hearts and conſciences affrighting terrours and the troubles and turmoiles of their afflicted minds , doe feare leaſt they ſhall burſt out into impatiencie, and ſo diſhonour God, diſcredit their profeſſion, and expoſe themſelues vnto ſhame and diſgrace , not well waying with themſelues that they haue not all this while ſtood in their owne ſtrength, but in the power of the Lord which being all ſufficient is alſo without change , if by faith wee reſt vpon it. Finally , others doe fearefully forecaſt that their troubles continuing and breaking them of their reſt and ſleepe , they ſhall bee diſtracted of their wits, and ſo end their dayes in rage and rauing ; not conſidering that the God of peace can when it ſeemeth good vnto him , put an end to their troubles, and make them quietly to take their reſt, when as they are aſſured that being vnder his protection they are in ſafetie. All which and ſuch like feares thorough fore-caſting of future euils , are not only vnprofitable , as enabling vs only to foreſee miſchiefe , but not giuing vs any ſtrength or wiſdome , whereby wee may be able to preuent or eſcape them , but alſo exceeding hurtfull and pernitious, making vs much more apt to fall vnto the euils feared. As feare of being foiled and vanquiſhed in time to come, doth for the preſent diſarme vs of Chriſtian courage and reſolution , and to become ſo cowardly that we are readie to flee at the next encounter. Feare of looſing faith and other ſauing graces , implyeth a likelihood that they may be loſt, and ſo maketh way for diffidence and doubting; feare of burſting out into impatiencie in time to come, weakneth our patience in preſent troubles, and pulleth away from it a chiefe prop whereby it is ſupported , namely, hope of a good iſſue and deſired victory , whereby the weake Chriſtian is ready preſently to diſhonour God, diſcredit his profeſſion, and diſgrace himſelfe by ſhewing his impatiencie; through feare of falling into it in time to come. And finally feare of future diſtraction indangereth him aboue all things to ſpeedie madneſſe , becauſe it ſo filleth his heart with terrour and amazedneſſe ; that it maketh his ſleepe to goe from him , and his minde reſtleſſe day and night. Into all which euils through the juſt judgement of God they plunge themſelues in giuing way to theſe diſtruſtfull feares, ſeeing hereby they do not only diſarme themſelues of Chriſtian courage and reſolution, and caſt away the ſhield of faith which ſhould defend them in the ſpirituall conflict , but alſo rob God of his glory, manifeſted in the wiſe and powerfull diſpoſing of future euents , and diſtruſt his gracious promiſe , whereby hee hath aſſured vs that he will not (if by a liuely faith we relie vpon him) ſuffer vs to be tempted aboue that we are able, but will giue a good iſſue to the tentation, that we may be able to beare it. Yea, hereby they take vpon them the execution of Gods office of fore-ſeeing and diſpoſing of that which is to come , which doth not at all belong vnto them , and ſo falling into a ſpirituall premunire, they are deſeruedly caſt out of Gods protection, and make a forfeiture of their libertie with all the riches of his ſauing graces, whereby they become an eaſie prey to their ſpiritual enemies. All which miſchiefes if we would eſcape; our beſt courſe is to buſie our ſelues in performing of our owne dutie, which is to reſiſt the Deuill , and to withſtand his temptations, when they are ſuggeſted , not intermedling with things to come, but only thus far forth that we may expect tẽptations before we are aſſaulted, and therefore prepare our ſelues by hauing continually all the ſpirituall armour faſt buckled vnto vs. But let vs for the iſſue and euent ſecurely caſt our ſelues vpon Gods powerfull prouidence and gracious promiſes, and in all humilitie of ſpirit ſubmit our ſelues to be wholly diſpoſed of by him according to his good wil and pleaſure, reſting contented with whatſoeuer hee ſendeth honour, or diſhonour , ſtrength or weakneſſe, right wits or madneſſe, life or death, as knowing that is not only al-ſufficient in reſpect of his wiſdome and power to our eternall good, but is alſo moſt good and gracious vnto vs being our louing father in Ieſus Chriſt, who hath promiſed that hee will cauſe all things to worke together for the beſt vnto them that loue him, and giue a good iſſue to all our trials.

§. Sect. 11.
The eleuenth meanes is to labour after humilitie and mortifie pride.

The eleuenth meanes to withſtand all temptations is to labour after humilitie, and vtterly to deny our ſelues and all that is in vs that God may be all in all, and haue the glory and praiſe of our ſaluation: vnto which till wee haue attained, wee ſhall neuer enjoy ſecure peace and ſound comfort, but ſhall euer bee vexed and turmoiled with Sathans temptations. For ſo long as pride and an opinion of our owne worth, beareth any ſway in vs, wee are readie to rob God in whole or in part of the glory and prayſe of ou[illegible]uation, whileſt we deſire to be ſome thing in our ſelues, and to offer him ſomewhat in liew of his mercie for which we looke to be accepted of him rather then others, whom we thinke in theſe reſpects inferiour vnto vs. And this maketh way for ſpirituall diſertions, and moueth the Lord who is moſt zealous of his glory to leaue vs to our ſelues, to Satans temptations, and to the ſtrength of our corruptions to befoiled and ouercome of them, that ſo by the ſight of our weakneſſe, and the lamentable experience of our ſhamefull falls we may be throughly humbled and becomming vile, yea nothing in our owne eyes be content to yeild vnto God, the whole and ſole prayſe of his owne worke. An example whereof wee haue in Iob, who was grieuouſly afflicted with torments of bodie and terrours of minde, not only for the exerciſe and manifeſtation of his patience that it might be a patterne to all poſteritie, but alſo to humble him and to beate him off from that too great opinion which hee had of his owne righteouſneſſe. Neither did the Lord free him from theſe calamities till he laid his hand vpon his mouth, and had learned to abhorre himſelfe, and to repent in duſt and aſhes. And Paul being too apt to be puffed vp with the multitude of reuelations was pricked with the thorne in his fleſh, and buffeted with the meſſenger of Sathan, that hee might learne to glory in nothing but in his owne infirmities, and in the power of God manifeſted in his owne weakneſſe. And as this pride doth much diſaduantage vs, becauſe it moueth the Lord to withdraw his aſſiſtance; ſo doth it chiefly aduantage Satan in this conflict, when as grounding our reſolution, faith and hope vpon ſo weake a ground as our owne worth, hee can eaſily ouerturne all with the leaſt blaſt and breath of his temptations by diſcouering the manifold corruptions, and manifeſt imperfections of the moſt excellent Graces in vs, and the beſt workes and actions done by vs.

§. Sect. 12.
Pride the chief cauſe of terrours of conſcience and troubles of minde.

In both which reſpects (vpon much experience and diligent obſeruation) I dare boldly affirme, that pride is the prime and moſt common cauſe of the conflicts and troubles of minde, wherewith many are ſo long and grieuouſly vexed till they be almoſt ſwallowed in the gulph of deſperation. The which wil ſeeme a ſtrange paradox vnto many, becauſe at the firſt view, none ſeeme more mortified to this vice, none more complaine of their ſinfull vnworthineſſe, or in the ſight and ſence of their wants and imperfections are more humbled and dejected. But if we looke to the ground of all, and can diſtinguiſh the effect from the cauſe, and Gods worke from our owne, we ſhall plainly perceiue that pride chiefly is the cauſe of all, that God caſteth them downe, becauſe they would be too much exalted, that they complaine of their ſinne and vnworthineſſe, becauſe they haue reſted too much on their righteouſneſſe and worthineſſe, and now in time of temptation find it nothing; and that they are thus deeply dejected, becauſe climing vp to aduance themſelues in the opinion of their owne worth, this weake ſtaffe or rather reed breaking vnder them, when they were at the higheſt, they haue fallen downe into the loweſt bottome of deepe diſcontent.

§. Sect. 13.
Pride the cauſe of diſcontent, diſcontent of melancholy and this of troubles of mind.

But for the better cleering of this point we are to know that ordinarily melancholy is the chiefe ground of theſe afflictions and troubles of minde, a principall actor in theſe Tragedies; and the choiſeſt inſtrument that Satan vſeth to plunge poore Chriſtians into theſe horrours of minde and terrour of conſcience; It is his chaire of eſtate in which he ſitteth and tyrannizeth, and his ſtrongeſt fort, of which being once poſſeſſed, hee is hardly caſt out. Now this melancholy is either naturall through the exceſſe of this humour in the temperature of the bodie, or accidentall and aduentitious through ſome outward cauſes. Of this latter, Pride is the moſt vſuall and greateſt cauſe, and (as it were) the leauen of the other which ſetteth it on working and boyling, miniſtring vnto it ſuch virulent poiſon and corruption, that it diſquieteth the minde, terrifieth the conſcience, and euen racketh and enrageth the heart and affections. For what is the next & immediate cauſe that breedeth accidentall melancholy, and encreaſeth and leaueneth that which is naturall, but impatiencie and deepe diſcontent? and what is the mother and nurſe of theſe but pride and conceit of our owne worth, when as he who is infected with it is croſſed in his hopes and deſires; the which will appeare if we conſider this pride and diſcontent, as they are exerciſed about either worldly or ſpirituall obiects. For when a man through pride deſireth to excell in the world, and to this end ouermuch loueth and deſireth worldly things, as credit and eſteeme, riches, pleaſures, and ſuch like, when he is croſſed of his hopes and ſhortned of his deſires, hee fretteth with diſcontent; groweth impatient of his afflictions, as though hee deſerued much better at the hands of God and men, and ſo this diſcontent bringeth dejection of minde, heauineſſe of heart, dulneſſe of ſpirit, and a generall lumpiſhneſſe in all the powers of bodie and minde: whereas contrariwiſe when we are throughly humbled and do ſee and acknowledge our owne vileneſſe and vnworthineſſe, we expect no great matters, and anſwerably are not much troubled, when wee are croſſed of our hopes; wee are patient in bearing euen great afflictions, becauſe wee know that our ſinnes haue deſerued much greater, and though with the Church in the Lamentations we were ſtripped of all, and led captiue of our enemies, ſo as we might juſtly complaine that no ſorrow is like ours; yet would wee with meekneſſe and patience beare all and acknowledge that it is the Lords mercies that we are not vtterly conſumed. Finally wee are contented in all eſtates, becauſe wee haue learned wholly to reſigne ouer our ſelues vnto Gods good pleaſure, and to ſubmit our wils to his will who knoweth better how to diſpoſe of vs, then wee our ſelues, and can through his wiſdome, power and goodneſſe turne all to our good, making thoſe things which ſeeme croſſes and hindrances, helpes and furtherances to our ſaluation.

§. Sect. 14.
Spirituall pride the cauſe of melancholy doubting and deſpaire.

Rom. 7.

Eſay 64.6.

Thus alſo when pride is exerciſed about ſpirituall objects it is a chiefe cauſe of impatiencie, diſcontent and melancholy, when as it is croſſed of its hopes and deſires. For when the Chriſtian after his conuerſion expecteth that hee ſhall in his ſanctification attaine vnto angelicall perfection and contrary to his hopes through the reliques of corruption remayning in him, bewrayeth his wants and imperfections, and receiueth many foiles and falls in the conflict of temptations, his minde is much diſquieted, his heart vexed, and his conſcience grieuouſly troubled and turmoiled, whereupon hee falleth into diſcontent and melancholy, whereas if he were ſo humbled that hee knew with the Apoſtle, that in him, that is, his fleſh dwelleth no good thing; if he had learned to acknowledge with the Prophet, that euen his beſt righteouſneſſe were like a polluted cloth, he would not be ſo affected and turmoiled with the ſight and ſence of his corruptions and imperfections. So pride maketh men deſire to be ſomething in the worke of their ſaluation, and to haue life eternall not only vpon freegift but partly by purchaſe, and with ſome reſpect of their owne worth. But when looking into themſelues they finde their corruptions many and great, and the beſt duties performed by them full of wants and imperfections; then this broken reed of their own worth failing, their hopes fall that reſted on it, and ſo they grow diſcontented and diſquieted, affrighted and troubled, and if God ſhould not vphold them with his ſpirit, making them wholly to abandon themſelues and to reſt wholly vpon his infinite mercies, and the al-ſufficient merits of Ieſus Chriſt, they would be eaſily ſwallowed vp in deepe deſperation, whereas if being thoroughly humbled, they had wholly denied themſelues in the work of ſaluation, and had aſcribed the ſole prayſe of it vnto the Lord, who hath only right vnto it, they would not be much exalted in their hopes by the ſight of their greateſt perfections, nor much dejected in the ſenſe of their imperfections, knowing that as their worthineſſe cannot ſaue them, ſo their vnworthineſſe ſhall not condemne them, ſo as they reſt wholly vpon the free mercies of God, and merits of Chriſt by a liuely faith. If being truly humbled they were brought to a holy deſpaire in themſelues, they ſhould not be ſo apt to entertaine that helliſh deſpaire of Gods mercies, and if being wholly ſtript and ſtarke naked of all opinion of their owne inherent righteouſneſſe they would by faith put on the perfect righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, their hearts and conſciences would not be ſo tormented with terrours and feares, doubting and deſpaire, when Gods juſtice ſummoneth them to make their appearance, but they would with much comfort and confidence come into his preſence hauing to pleade Chriſts perfect payment, and full ſatisfaction for their ſinnes.

Laſtly, if we would withſtand Satan, we muſt object our Sauiour Chriſt againſt all his tentations: for if wee apply him vnto vs by a liuely faith, he will be our ſhield and buckler to defend vs from all Satans blowes. For example, if Satan tell vs that we are miſerable ſinners, and therefore in the ſtate of damnation; we are to anſwere that our Sauiour Chriſt came into the world to ſaue ſinners, and that he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, and broken for our iniquities, and with his ſtripes we are healed: and ſo he which knew no ſinne, was made ſinne for vs, that wee might be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. If he ſay wee are ſubject to the curſe of the Law; we are to anſwere that Chriſt hath redeemed vs from the curſe of the Law, when he was made a curſe for vs. If he object that wee are ſubject to Gods wrath; wee are to tell him that Chriſt did beare his fathers diſpleaſure, that hee might make our peace: and whereas wee were ſtrangers and enemies, becauſe our minds were ſet on euill workes, he hath now reconciled vs in the body of his fleſh through death. If hee tell vs that wee are his bondſlaues; wee are to anſwer, that that we were ſo indeed in time paſt, but our Sauiour Chriſt hath payed vnto his Father the price of our redemption, and hath ſet vs free. If hee affirme that wee are vniuſt, and therefore ſhall be condemned before Gods judgement ſeate; wee are to anſwere that Chriſt who was innocent was condemned, that wee who are guiltie might be acquited; that though we are wicked in our ſelues, yet we are moſt juſt being clothed with his righteouſnes; that he that came to ſaue vs, ſhall come to judge vs, and therefore we need not doubt of mercy, if we plead his merits, forſaking the plea of our owne righteouſneſſe, and renouncing all ſelfe confidence. If he ſay that wee ſhall be held captiue of death and neuer riſe to take poſſeſſion of our heauenly inheritance; wee are to anſwer that our Sauiour Chriſt hath broken the bonds of death, and lead captiuitie captiue; that he is riſen againe, being the firſt fruits of them that ſlept, and is aſcended into heauen, to prepare vs a place there. If he obiect that Chriſt and all his benefits doe not appertaine vnto vs, for euery man ſhall liue by his owne righteouſneſſe, and the ſoule that ſinneth ſhall die the death; wee are to anſwere that by the Spirit of God and a liuely faith, Chriſt is become our head and we his members, ſo that hee is ours and we his, and our ſins he hath taken vpon him and beſtowed on vs his righteouſneſſe; hee is become our husband and we his ſpouſe, and therefore as he hath communicated himſelfe vnto vs, ſo likewiſe all his benefits, his merits, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification, and euerlaſting happineſſe.

§.*Sect.*16.
That to auoid Satans importunity, wee muſt leaue to diſpute with him and ſend him to our Aduocate.

But if Sathan will not thus be anſwered, we are not to entertaine any further diſputation with him, but to ſend him to our Sauiour Chriſt who hath taken vpon him to bee not only our Redeemer and our Mediatour and Interceſſor vnto God his Father, but alſo our Aduocate to plead our cauſe and to anſwere all ſuites made againſt vs both by Gods juſtice and the hand writing of the Law; and alſo by Sathan and all his adherents, as it is 1.Iohn 2.1. Seeing therefore our Sauiour Chriſt who is the wiſdome of his Father, hath taken vpon him the defence of our cauſe in all our ſuites, let not vs our ſelues be ouer-buſie in diſputing with this wrangling ſophiſter, but ſend him for an anſwere to our Sauiour Chriſt who hath fully ſatiſfied his fathers juſtice in all which it had againſt vs, and cancelled the hand-writing of the Law, whereby wee were obliged and bound, and therefore much more able is hee to anſwere all accuſations which this cauelling accuſer hath againſt vs. Neither are we to doubt but that our Sauiour will be our Aduocate to plead our cauſe, eſpecially conſidering that it doth principally concerne himſelfe, and his owne glorie and ſufficiencie. For the queſtions and cauſes controuerſall betweene vs and Sathan, are not about our owne worthineſſe, merits, righteouſnes, and ſatisfactions, all which wee renounce and caſt away from vs as polluted clouts, in reſpect of being any cauſes of our juſtification and ſaluation: but concerning Chriſts righteouſneſſe, merit, and the ſufficiencie and efficacy of his death and obedience, for the ſaluation of all repentant ſinners which doe apply them vnto themſelues by a liuely faith: and therefore wee may aſſure our ſelues hee will defend his owne cauſe againſt all Satans objections and imputations.

1.Iohn 2.1.

§.*Sect.*17.
If we will auoid Sathans importunitie, wee muſt imploy our ſelues in holy exerciſes.

But if Sathan continue his importunitie, and will admit of no anſwere, wee are as much as in vs lieth to baniſh his tentations out of our minds, and not to thinke and meditate on them. And to this end we are continually to exerciſe our ſelues in feruent prayer, deſiring the Lords gracious aſſiſtance whereby we may be inabled to withſtand all the aſſaults of our enemie, as alſo to heare, reade and meditate in Gods Word, and diligently to vſe holy conferences with our Chriſtian brethren, and painfully to imploy our ſelues in the workes of our callings, that ſo we may haue no leiſure to entertaine Satans tentations. For as a veſſell which is alreadie full can receiue no more, and whatſoeuer is powred thereinto ſpilleth vpon the ground: ſo when our mindes are repleniſhed with holy thoughts, and occupied in godly and honeſt exerciſes, there is no roome left for Satans ſuggeſtions, and therefore as ſoone as they offer to enter, we preſently reject them. Whereas on the other ſide if wee ſpend our times in idleneſſe, and doe not diligently exerciſe our ſelues in the duties of Chriſtianity, & of our ſeuerall callings: then are our minds fit grounds to receiue the ſeeds of Satans tentations, and to nouriſh them till they bring forth the fruits of ſinne. And if Satan find vs like emptie houſes cleane ſwept and voide of all holy meditations and godly exerciſes, hee will eaſily enter, and if himſelfe be not ſtrong enough hee will take vnto him ſeuen other ſpirits worſe then himſelfe, that ſo hee may be more ſtrong to keepe poſſeſſion. If therefore we would not be ouercome by Satans tentations, let vs beware of idleneſſe; for when the minde is emptie of that which is good, it is moſt fit to receiue that which is euill.

Math.12.45.

§.*Sect.*18.
That wee muſt not reuolue in our minds Satans tentations, but rather meditate on the contrarie preſeruatiues.

But if Sathans tentations be at any time entertained into our minds, let vs moſt carefully take heed that wee doe not ſuffer them (as it were) to take vp their lodging, by reuoluing them in our thoughts, nor to meditate too earneſtly on them, but rather on the preſeruatiues which may ſtrengthen vs againſt their violence; neither are wee ſo ſeriouſly to thinke on Satans objections, as that in the meane time we forget how to anſwere them. For example, when hee ſetteth before our eyes the hainouſneſſe of our ſinnes, wee are not to bend all our thoughts to meditate and call to minde all our ſins both new and old, both which we haue falne into through infirmitie, and which wee haue willingly committed; for ſo the huge cloud of our ſinnes being neere our eyes, will hide from our ſight the ſhining beames of Gods mercy and Chriſts merit, though they are without compariſon greater: but as ſoone as wee caſt one eye vpon our ſins for our humiliation, let vs caſt the other preſently vpon Chriſt Ieſus, who hath payed the price of our redemption, and ſuffered all the puniſhment which we by our ſins haue deſerued. For if when this fiery Serpent Satan hath ſtung vs with the ſting of ſin, wee ſpend our time in looking vpon the wound and neuer thinke vpon the remedie, euen the true brazen Serpent Ieſus Chriſt hanging on the Croſſe: the poyſon of ſin will ſo inflame our conſciences, that the wound will proue mortall, which at the firſt might eaſily haue beene cured, if we would haue applied thereunto the precious balme of our Sauiours bloud. So when Satan ſetteth before our eyes our owne weakneſſe and infirmities, to the end we may deſpaire of victorie, as being neuer able to withſtand ſuch ſtrong tentations, wee are not to ſpend our time in thinking hereupon, but preſently to call to minde the almightie power of God who hath promiſed vs his aſſiſtance in this ſpirituall fight. So when hee obiecteth vnto vs the iuſtice and wrath of God, in puniſhing of ſinne, and the curſe of the Law and torments of Hell prepared for the damned; we are not ouer ſeriouſly to reuolue theſe things in our minds; but preſently to call to minde Gods infinite mercie and Chriſts merits, whereby Gods iuſtice is fully ſatisfied, his wrath appeaſed, the curſe of the Law cancelled, and wee made of firebrands of hell, heires of Heauen. And thus if as ſoone as Satan inflicteth the wound we apply the playſter, it will neuer be mortall vnto vs; but if we let the poyſon of his tentations run in our minds and neuer thinke of any remedie, though at the firſt it ſeemed but a ſmall ſcratch, it will ſo inflame our conſciences with ſcorching heate, that they will afterwards very hardly admit of any cure. When therefore Sathan doth caſt into our minds his tentations, let vs repell them, and indeauour to quench them whileſt they be but ſmall ſparkes: for our corrupt mindes are like vnto tinder, and Sathans temptations like the fire: and therefore if in ſtead of putting them out wee blow vpon them, though they be but a ſmall ſparke at the firſt, within a while they will increaſe to an vnquenchable flame, which will torment our conſciences with ſcorching heate: neither is there any thing but the bloud of Chriſt, and the water of the Spirit, which will extinguiſh this wilde fire, when once it hath taken deepe hold on vs.

CHAP. XXIII.

How the Chriſtian being foiled by Sathans tentations may be raiſed againe.

§. Sect. 1. How a Chriſtian is to behaue himſelfe when he is fallen in tentation.

AND theſe are the meanes whereby the Chriſtian ſouldier may bee ſtrengthened and incouraged to ſtand in the combate of tentations. But ſometimes it commeth to paſſe that by reaſon they neglect theſe meanes, or elſe doe not ſo carefully vſe them as they ſhould, they are foiled by Sathan, ouercome by his tentations, and led captiue vnto ſin. How therefore muſt the Chriſtian thus ouertaken behaue himſelfe? ſurely he is not deſperately to caſt away all hope of victory, and cowardly to yeeld himſelfe to be the ſlaue of Satan, lying contentedly in the chaines of ſin, without any deſire or indeuour of comming out of his captiuitie: but being falne he is to labour and ſtriue that hee may riſe againe, and being taken priſoner by ſinne and Satan, he is not willingly to remain in their bonds, but earneſtly to deſire his freedome and libertie. Now the meanes whereby being fallen he may riſe againe, is by vnfained repentance, when as he is heartily ſorrie for his ſin, becauſe thereby hee hath diſpleaſed his louing and gracious father, and ſtedfaſtly purpoſeth for the time to come to leaue and forſake thoſe ſins, into which by the malice of Satan and his owne infirmitie he is fallen; and by a liuely faith, when as hee doth apply vnto himſelfe all the mercifull promiſes of the Goſpell made vnto all repentant ſinners. For though faith in nature goe before repentance, yet the act and fruit of faith, whereby wee are aſſured of Gods mercie in the free forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, alwayes commeth after. Where by the way wee may note a difference betweene the ſtate of Gods children and the wicked. Both fall into ſin very often, both alſo commit hainous and grieuous ſins; yea ſometimes the child of God falleth into more fearefull and horrible ſins, then a meere worldling; but herein the chiefe difference betweene them conſiſteth, that the child of God after his fall is vexed and grieued, and laboureth to riſe againe by leauing and forſaking the ſinne which is odious vnto him; but the wicked man after his fall neuer ſorroweth nor grieueth, but rather reſolueth to liue ſtill in his ſin, and to commit it againe and againe with greedineſſe and delight when he hath any occaſion offered.

A difference betweene the child of God and the wicked.

§. Sect. 2. The cõplaint of the weake Chriſtian.

But here the weake Chriſtian whoſe ſoule is oppreſſed with the heauy weight of ſinne will ſay vnto me, alas this which you ſpeake is ſmall comfort vnto me, neither can I hereby by haue any aſſurance that I am the child of God; for after I am fallen into ſinne, ſuch is the hardneſſe of my heart that I cannot bewaile nor be ſorrie for it; and whereas euery ſmall worldly loſſe or croſſe maketh mee mourne, weepe and waile, when by my ſin I haue offended God, I cannot ſhed a teare, nor ſhew any true ſigne of heartie ſorrow; and ſuch is mine vntowardneſſe and corruption, that in ſtead of forſaking my ſin, I am ready to fall againe vpon the next occaſion: and therefore I cannot haue any faith or full aſſurance of Gods promiſes made in Chriſt, ſeeing they are all limited & reſtrained to thoſe ſinners which repent and amend. That therefore theſe mourning ſoules may receiue ſome comfort, let them know firſt, that if they haue an earneſt deſire of repentance, faith, and the reſt of Gods graces; if they haue a good purpoſe to leaue and forſake their ſins, and to ſpend their liues in the ſeruice and worſhip of God: if they are diſpleaſed with their corruptions, and according to the meaſure of grace giuen, pray vnto God, deſiring the aſſiſtance of his holy Spirit, whereby they may more and more mortifie the old man, and crucifie the fleſh, and the luſts thereof: if they hate the ſinne they commit, and loue the good which they cannot doe: if they can grieue becauſe they are no more grieued for their ſinnes, and be diſpleaſed with themſelues, becauſe their ſins do no more diſpleaſe them: then may they be aſſured that they are Gods children, who are acceptable vnto him in Ieſus Chriſt. For hee reſpecteth not ſo much our actions as our affections; nor our workes, as our deſires and endeuours. To this purpoſe excellently Auguſtine. There is no holy and iuſt man free from ſinne, and yet for this he ceaſeth not to be iuſt and holy, if his heart adhereth to holineſſe. And with him agreeth Bernard. An vnwearied deſire (ſaith he) of profiting, and a continued endeuour to attaine vnto perfection, is eſteemed perfection. Now if this be to be perfect to labour after perfection; then not to goe forward is to goe backward. So that he who deſires to be righteous, is righteous; he that would repent, doth repent; hee that ſtriueth to leaue and forſake his ſinnes, God reputeth of him, as if he had left and forſaken them; they that would neuer fall, nor be foiled by their ſpirituall enemies, God eſteemeth as his inuincible ſouldiers, and valiant Worthies, who were neuer vanquiſhed. For the Lord accepteth the deſire for the deed; and if there bee firſt a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that a man hath not, as it is 2.Corinth.8.12. So he is accounted bleſſed, not who hath attained vnto perfect inherent righteouſneſſe indeed, but he who hungreth after righteouſneſſe, Math. 5.6. that is, who hath a ſenſe and feeling of his wants and imperfections, and withall an earneſt deſire to haue his wants ſupplied. In which reſpect one ſaith, that a iuſt life is alwayes preſent when we will, becauſe it is iuſtice it ſelfe if we effectually deſire it: neither is there any thing more required to the perfecting of righteouſneſſe, then to haue a perfect will to imbrace it.

§. Sect.3.
The conditions required vnto that deſire which is acceptable.

But yet we muſt not imagine, that euery flickering and vnconſtant deſire, proceeding from ſuddaine paſſion, and ſome extraordinary occaſion, is pleaſing vnto God; for ſo euery worldling might imagine himſelfe to be in the ſtate of grace: but vnto this deſire I ſpeake of, there are diuers things required. As firſt, that this deſire bee ioyned with an holy endeuour, and earneſt ſtriuing and labouring in the vſe of the meanes, whereby wee may attaine vnto thoſe graces which we do deſire: for it is not ſufficient that we wiſh for faith, repentance, and other graces, vnleſſe wee endeauour to attaine vnto them, and to this end carefully vſe all good meanes ordained of God for the obtaining our deſires. Secondly, this deſire muſt not be ſuddaine like a flaſh of lightning, vaniſhing away as ſoone as it entreth into vs, but wee muſt conſtantly perſeuere in it till it be ſatisfied. And as Dauid longed at all times after Gods iudgements, ſo muſt we long continually after ſauing grace and ſpirituall ſtrength, although wee cannot alwayes doe it with like earneſtneſſe, as wee may ſee by comparing *Cant.*2.5. with *Chap.*5.3. Thirdly, it muſt not be a ſlight, and indifferent deſire, as though we would haue theſe graces, if we could eaſily attaine vnto them, otherwiſe wee doe not greatly care whether wee haue them or no: but it muſt be very earneſt, at leaſt ſometime, though not alwayes: So as we may ſay with Dauid, *My ſoule longeth after thee, O Lord, as the thirſtie land. Pſal.*63.1. And, As the Hart brayeth for the riuers of water, ſo panteth my ſoule after thee, O God: as it is *Pſal.*42.1. And againe; *My heart breaketh for the longing that it hath to thy iudgements at all times. Pſal.*119.20. Like the deſires of a woman with childe, which can by no meanes be ſatisfied, vnleſſe ſhee haue her longing. It makes vs like the Spouſe in the Canticles euen ſicke of loue with Gods graces which wee long after, and at no eaſe till wee enjoy them. Now our deſire will appeare to bee thus earneſt when as we are impatient of any delay; Saying (like Rachel) giue mee grace and ſtrength to bring fruits of holineſſe, or elſe I die. And when our ſoules faint in our longing like a man that is hungry and neere famiſhed; according to that of the Wiſeman, hope deferred maketh the heart faint, but when the deſire commeth it is a tree of life. Finally, our deſires will appeare to be feruent, when as we are inflamed with an holy anger againſt all things that croſſe vs in them, and with a deuout violence of holy reſolutiõ do ſet our ſelues ſeriouſly & couragiouſly againſt whatſoeuer oppoſitiõ ſeemes to hinder vs frõ obtayning of them. Like the deſire of hunger which will breake through a ſtone wall, and make famiſhed men to tread vnder foot, euen thoſe that doe but a little hinder them from their deſired food, as wee ſee in the example of the hunger-ſtarued Samaritans, 2. King. 7. 17.

Pſal. 119.

*Cant.*5.8.

*Prou.*13.12.

Fourthly, this deſire is true, and pleaſing vnto God, when as it proceedeth from a ſenſe of our owne want and penurie, in regard whereof we are truly humbled. And hereof it is compared to hungring and thirſting; in which two things concurre, firſt, a ſenſe of want which afflicteth vs, and a deſire to haue it ſupplied.

Fiftly, it is not ſufficient that wee haue a continuall and earneſt deſire of our ſaluation, vnleſſe we deſire as earneſtly the ſubordinate cauſes and meanes tending thereunto; namely, vocation, juſtification, ſanctification, faith, repentance, and the reſt of the graces of Gods Spirit: for euen Balaam himſelfe did wiſh that hee might die the death of the righteous, but his deſire was not acceptable to God, becauſe hee wiſhed not alſo to liue their life: hee deſired to die like them, that he might be ſaued; but he deſired not to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and newneſſe of life, whereby hee might haue beene aſſured of ſaluation.

If therefore we would haue our deſires acceptable to God, they muſt be joyned with an holy endeuour to obtaine thoſe ſpirituall graces which wee doe deſire; they muſt bee conſtant, earneſt, and proceed from a true ſenſe and feeling of our owne wants, and bee referred as well to the meanes as to the end, and then the deſire of grace is the grace it ſelfe; the deſire of faith is faith; the deſire of repentance is repentance; not in it owne nature, but in Gods acceptation, who accepteth the will for the deed. According to that excellent ſaying of Auguſtine. Hee hath much profited in this life who in his profiting knoweth how farre hee is ſhort of perfect righteouſneſſe.

Multum in hac vita ille profecit, qui quàm longè ſit à perfectione iuſtitiæ proficiendo cognouit. Aug. de Spirit. & lit. cap. 36.

§. Sect. 4. The Chriſtians perfection conſiſteth in deſiring and labouring after perfection.

And in truth this is the chiefe perfection of our righteouſneſſe, when as we feele our imperfections, and labour earnely after more perfection, * for, wee are Chriſtians rather in our affections and deſires then in our workes and abilities: neither doth the Lord beſtow vpon his children the full meaſure of his ſpirit and the graces thereof in this life, but onely the firſt fruits, which are as it were but an handfull of corne in reſpect of the whole field; and the earneſt to aſſure vs of the reſt, which is but as a peny in reſpect of many thouſands, which are confirmed vnto vs thereby, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Rom. 8. 23. 2. Cor. 1. 22. and 5. 5. True it is indeed that God diſpenſeth and beſtoweth his ſpirit and the graces thereof vpon ſome of his children in greater meaſure, and vpon ſome in leſſe, euen as the firſt fruits may be a greater or leſſer handfull, and the earneſt is ſometimes a peny, and ſometimes a ſhilling, ſometimes more and ſometimes leſſe; but yet the greateſt meaſure which any receiue, is but as an handfull of the firſt fruits, and an earneſt-peny in reſpect of the maine ſumme and full meaſure, which the Lord hath hereby aſſured vs that he will beſtow vpon vs in his kingdome; and he that hath receiued the leaſt earneſt, hath as full and perfect aſſurance of the whole bargaine, which God hath couenanted to make good vnto vs, as hee who hath receiued the greateſt, according to the nature of an earneſt, to which the meaſure of grace here receiued is compared. But wherein doth this meaſure of grace and chiefe perfection of a Chriſtian conſiſt in this life? Surely, not in their workes, for they are all imperfect, and ſo full of corruptions that they are odious in Gods ſight, being conſidered in themſelues, and examined by the rule of his exact juſtice; neither in their inherent righteouſnes, and begun ſanctification; for when they are at the holieſt they are polluted with the reliques of originall corruption, which bring forth the fruits of actuall tranſgreſſions, and make vs vnable to doe the good wee would, in that manner and meaſure which wee ſhould. And therefore thoſe which are moſt righteous are not in this reſpect acceptable to God: but herein the perfection of a Chriſtian conſiſteth, when as ſeeing his imperfections, wants and ſinnes, he is grieued and truly humbled with the ſight and ſenſe of his owne miſerie and wretchedneſſe; and diſclaiming and rejecting his owne righteouſneſſe and good workes, doth flee vnto our Sauiour Chriſt, hungring after his righteouſneſſe, & by a liuely faith applying vnto his wounded ſoule his merits and obedience, doth looke for ſaluation in him alone; And laſtly, when as in obedience to his commandement, and in true thankfulneſſe for his infinite mercies hee hath an earneſt deſire to glorifie his Name, by a godly and Chriſtian life, ſtriuing and endeuouring continually to forſake his ſins, to mortifie his corruption, and to attaine vnto more and more perfection in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe. For, It is the greateſt part of Chriſtianitie to deſire with the whole heart to become a Chriſtian.

If therefore we doe keepe the couenant of the Lord, nay, if wee but thinke vpon his Commandements, to the end wee may doe them, the louing kindneſſe of the Lord ſhall endure for euer vpon vs, as it is Pſal. 103. 17. 18. if we can from our heart ſay with good Nehemiah, O Lord, I beſeech thee let thine eare eare now hearken to the prayer of thy ſeruant and to the prayer of thy ſeruants who deſire to feare thy Name; the Lord will heare vs indeed and grant our requeſts. If with the Prophet Dauid wee haue but reſpect of Gods Commandements, with a care to fulfill them, we ſhall not be confounded. If we but deſire to obey Gods commandement, the Lord will accompliſh our deſire, and quicken vs in his righteouſneſſe, though we be dull, yea dead vnto all goodneſſe. If with the Apoſtle Paul wee doe the euill which wee would not, and conſent to the law that it is good, delighting therein in the inner man; then though wee are with him led captiue vnto ſinne, yet it is not wee that offend, but ſinne that dwelleth in vs, that is, our old man, our corrupt and vnregenerate part, which cannot fitly be called by our name, becauſe it is mortified alreadie in ſome meaſure, and ſhall be fully aboliſhed by the Spirit of God. Neither doth it liue the ſame ſpirituall life with vs, ſeeing it is not quickned by the ſame ſpirit: and therefore as thoſe who haue diuers ſoules, which giue vnto them life and motion, are themſelues diuers and alſo called by diuers names; ſo the new and old man liuing as it were by diuers ſoules, the one being quickned with Gods Spirit, the other by Sathan (whereof it commeth to paſſe, that the more the one liueth the other dieth; the more ſtrong the ſpirit is, the weaker is the fleſh; and the actions of both are quite contrary) therefore they may fitly be called by diuers names: neither can the actions of the fleſh be aſcribed to the ſpirit, ſeeing they are contrary the one to the other. For as if a cion of a crab tree, and another of a pepin tree being grafted into the ſame ſtocke doe both bring forth their ſeuerall fruits, the one crabs, the other pepins, it may fitly bee ſaid this tree bringeth forth either pepins or crabs, becauſe they grow in the ſame ſtocke; but yet it cannot be truly ſaid that the crabtree cion bringeth forth pepins, or the pepin cion crabs: ſo becauſe the fleſh and the ſpirit are joyned together in the ſame bodie and ſoule, wee may in this reſpect ſay that this man ſinneth, or doth that which is good; but yet when wee ſpeake of the regenerate or carnall man properly and ſeuerally, as wee cannot truly ſay that the fleſh doth any manner of good, ſo neither can wee truly affirme that the ſpirit and regenerate man doth commit that which is euill, but (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) ſinne which dwelleth with him. And though the fleſh be the farre greater part, yet doth it not denominate and giue the name to the Chriſtian & his actions, becauſe it is partly mortified, partly in mortifying, and partly to be mortified, that is, deputed and deſtinated to death and deſtruction; and alſo becauſe it is the worſe and more vnworthy part without compare, and conſequently not to giue the name. For as wine mixt with water is called ſtill wine, though the water exceed the wine in quantitie, becauſe it is the more excellent ſubſtance; ſo the fleſh being mixt with the ſpirit, though it be in greater quantitie, it doth not giue the name to vs and our actions, but the ſpirit, as being our more excellent and worthy part; and of it wee are called ſpirituall, regenerate and new men, though the leaſt part be ſpirituall, regenerate and renued. If therefore we are regenerate, and haue in vs the Spirit of God, and the graces thereof in the leaſt meaſure, wee may boldly ſay with Paul, that it is no more we that doe offend God, but ſinne that dwelleth in vs; neither ſhall wee receiue puniſhment but the fleſh, that is, our vnregenerate and corrupt part, which ſhall be mortified and fully aboliſhed by the Spirit of God; as for the ſpirituall and regenerate part, it ſhall daily bee more and more ſtrengthened and confirmed in the ſpirituall life, and the more puniſhments, afflictions and torments the fleſh hath inflicted on it, the more ſhall the ſpirituall man grow vp in grace and goodneſſe, till our corruption being by little and little mortified, and in the end fully aboliſhed by death, wee ſhall bee perfect men in Chriſt, liuing a ſpirituall and euerlaſting life in all glory and happineſſe in his kingdome. When therefore the Lord ſuffereth Satan to afflict vs in our goods, bodies, and in our ſoules and conſciences, as he did Iob, it is not becauſe he hath forſaken vs & giuen ouer his whole intereſt hee hath in vs to this wicked ſpirit, but, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh in another matter, he deliuereth vs vnto Satan (to bee afflicted) for the deſtruction of the fleſh, that the ſpirit may be ſaued in the day of the Lord Ieſus, 1.Cor.5.5.

It may be that the worke of mortification and regeneration doth goe ſlowly forward, and the Lord may for a time let our corruptions beare great ſway in vs, to the end hee may hereby truly humble vs with the ſight of our infirmities, and take away from vs all ſelfe-confidence, preſumption and cauſe of boaſting, and make vs wholly to relie vpon his mercie and Chriſts merits: but though it goe on ſlowly, yet it ſhall goe ſurely, becauſe it is not begun and continued by our ſelues, for wee cannot ſo much as thinke a good thought, but all our ſufficiencie is of God, as it is 2.Cor.3.5. neither can we ſo much as will and deſiere that which is acceptable in Gods ſight, for it is he that worketh in vs the will and the deed, euen of his good pleaſure, as it is Phil.2.13. And therefore theſe holy deſires, which are the beginnings and firſt fruits of regeneration, being the worke of Gods Spirit; he will finiſh and perfect that which he hath begun, till at laſt we be fully freed from our corruption, and indued with vnſpotted holineſſe and ſanctification.

He will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him.* For if the Lord doe euen preſſe vpon vs whileſt wee doe not deſire his company; if he ſtand waiting and knocking at the doore of our hearts, calling and crying vnto vs that wee will open and giue him entrance; when his holy Spirit hath inflamed vs with true loue of him, and opened our hearts with an earneſt deſire to haue him enter; will hee now thinke you goe away and refuſe to come in when wee inuite him? No aſſuredly, for he hath promiſed the contrary, Reuel.3.20. Behold (ſaith he) I ſtand at the doore and knocke: if any man heare my voice and open the doore, I will come in vnto him & ſup with him, and he with me; that is, I will make him a rich banquet of my heauenly graces, and giue him to drinke the water of life, of which whoſoeuer drinketh ſhall neuer be more athirſt, but it ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing vp into euerlaſting life, as our Sauiour ſpeaketh, Iohn 4.14. So our Sauiour Chriſt calleth ſuch as thirſt vnto him, If any man thirſt, let him come to mee and drinke: And, I will giue to him that is athirſt of the well of the water of life freely. If therefore wee haue a thirſting deſire after Gods Spirit and the graces thereof, we ſhall in Gods good time bee ſatisfied, and filled with the full meaſure of them. And in the meane time though our infirmities be neuer ſo great and manifold, yet in Chriſt God will be well pleaſed with vs, when as our corruptions doe diſpleaſe our ſelues, ſo that we earneſtly deſire to bee freed from them, and to ſerue the Lord in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe of life. For the Lord eſteemeth more of our will than of our deedes, and of our holy endeuour than of our beſt workes, becauſe this is the ſeruice and ſacrifice of our hearts, wherewith aboue all other things he is moſt delighted: and therefore, Da cor Deo & ſufficit, Giue thy heart to God and it ſufficeth, Prou.23.26.

§. Sect.7. The former point illuſtrated by diuers ſimilitudes, Eſay 49.15. and 66.13. Mal.3.17.

For the Lord is our moſt gracious Father, whoſe loue farre exceedeth the loue euen of tender mothers, Eſay 49.15. Looke therefore what affection the tender father or mother beareth and ſheweth towardes their child: and ſuch, nay, infinitely more will the Lord ſhew towards vs as himſelfe profeſſeth. Mal.3.17. And I will ſpare them, as a man ſpares his owne ſonne that ſerueth him. Now we know that if a child endeuour to doe his dutie, and ſtriue to doe his beſt, though through want of power or skill hee is not able to doe as hee would, thoſe things which his father injoyned him; there is no louing father but will winke at his imperfections, and accept his will; commending his obedience and dutifull endeuour, though the worke in it ſelfe deſerue no commendations: how much more therefore will our heauenly father, whoſe loue is infinite and without all compare, bee well pleaſed with vs in the middeſt of our infirmities, if wee haue a deſire and care to ſerue him? The Lord is our ſhepherd, and wee his flocke and the ſheepe of his paſture, as it is Pſal.23.1. and Iohn 10. Now if a ſheepe be intangled in the briars, ſo as he cannot follow the ſhepheard, though hee heare his voice calling vnto him, yet if hee ſtruggle and ſtriue to come out to the vttermoſt of his power, and bleat for the ſhepheards helpe, when he cannot help himſelfe, hereby it appeareth that he is one of his flocke, which the good ſhepheard will not ſuffer to be loſt; whereas indeed if hee want not power alone, but will alſo to bee freed and to follow after, it is cleere that hee belongeth to another ſheepfold: ſo if when we are intangled in the briars of our corruptiõs, and ſo hindred with our imperfections, that we cannot follow the great Shepheard of our ſoules Ieſus Chriſt in the path of righteouſneſſe, which leadeth to the ſheepfold of euerlaſting happineſſe, though wee heare his voice calling vnto vs; yet if with the ſilly ſheepe wee ſtruggle and ſtriue to bee freed from the ſnares of ſinne, and when we cannot free our ſelues by our own power, doe as it were bleate, and after our ſheepiſh manner implore the helpe of our carefull ſhepheard; crying out with the Apoſtle Paul (that bleſſed ſheepe of Chriſt) Wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer mee from the body of this death? then will our louing ſhepheard Ieſus Chriſt in his good time come and looſe vs, and if with ſtrugling in the briars of ſin wee are ſo diſabled that wee cannot goe, hee will take vs like the ſtrayed ſheepe vpon his ſhoulders, and carry vs by the wayes of righteouſneſſe into his ſheepfold of euerlaſting happineſſe. Neither can it poſſibly be that our heauenly ſhepheard, who of purpoſe came into the World to ſeeke vs whileſt wee were loſt, and ſpent three and thirtie yeeres in following & finding vs, who were wandring and ſtrayed ſheepe, crying and calling vnto vs euen till hee became hoarſe with loud cryes, and paſſing thorow the thornie wayes of troubles and perſecution, till he had ſhed his precious bloud, and finally laid downe his life for our ſakes; ſhould now turne away his eyes and ſtop his eares when his ſheepe deſire to follow him, and earneſtly implore his helpe, finding their owne weakneſſe and vnabilitie to come ſo ſwiftly to him as they ſhould. The Lord is our Sauiour and Redeemer, who hath not ſpared his owne precious bloud, but hath giuen it to his Father as the price of our redemption, that wee might bee deliuered out of the captiuitie of the Deuill, in which we were detained, as it is 1. Tim. 2.6. If therefore we haue a ſenſe of our captiuitie, and a deſire to be ſet at libertie, being wearie of our miſery, and vnwilling to ſtay any longer in this cruell bondage; our Sauiour Chriſt will redeeme vs, for to this end hee came into the world, as appeareth Luke 4.18. And though like vnto poore captiues who (hauing long time beene clogged with heauy bolts, and galled with ſtrong chaines) haue their limbs ſo benummed and ſore, that they cannot goe after they are freed out of priſon; ſo we, after we haue long beene detained in Satans captiuitie, fettred with chaines of ſinne, and clogged with the heauy bolts of our corruptions, be ſo galled and benummed, that we cannot ſwiftly follow Chriſt our Redeemer in the wayes of righteouſnes vnto his kingdome of glory, but halt and ſtumble euery ſtep through our infirmitie and weakneſſe; yet if we haue an earneſt deſire of comming after him, then ſurely he hath giuen this ineſtimable price for our redemption, will not now leaue vs in the hands of his and our enemies; but will feed vs with the food of his Word and Sacraments, and ſtrengthen and ſupport vs with his holy Spirit, inabling vs with the graces thereof to follow his ſteps, till hauing obtained full libertie wee arriue at his kingdome of euerlaſting glory.

§. Sect. 8. That thoſe are Chriſts ſouldiers who haue a deſire of ouercomming their ſpirituall enemies.

Laſtly, that I may fit the ſimilitude to the ſpirituall conflict whereof we ſpeake. If we haue an earneſt deſire of ouercomming our ſpirituall enemies, and withſtanding their temptations, whereby they labour to draw vs to ſinne; we may be aſſured we are Chriſts ſouldiers, how weakly ſoeuer we fight when wee come to the encounter. For though a ſouldier through ſickneſſe bee ſo infeebled that he cannot weld his weapon againſt the enemie: yet if he march forward, and ſhew a couragious heart and earneſt deſire to ouercome, it will hereby plainly appeare that he is faithfull to his Captaine, & therefore hee ſhall receiue his pay, though at the firſt onſet his limbs ſhould faint vnder him. And ſo if through ſinne we haue our ſpirituall man ſo weakned, that he is readie to faint at the firſt incounter with our ſpirituall enemies, yet if we march vnder Chriſts ſtanderd, and fight the battailes of the Lord of Hoſts, hauing an earneſt deſire euen aboue our ſtrength to ouercome our enemies, ſurely Chriſt our grand Captaine will acknowledge vs for his ſouldiers, and will giue vs our pay, euen a crowne of victorie: and ſeeing his power is omnipotent and his loue incomprehenſible, wee may make ſure account that if in the fight wee receiue a foiſe, hee will ſtand ouer vs to defend vs with the ſhield of his prouidence and raiſe vs vp againe: yea if we be taken priſoners and led away captiue by ſinne and Satan, he will reſcue and deliuer vs. There is no diſcredit accreweth to a ſouldier by receiuing wounds, or being by vnreſiſtable violence taken priſoner; nay, rather it argueth his valour, and ſheweth that the inuincible courage of his mind doth farre ſurpaſſe the weake force of his bodie; but rather hereby is a ſouldier diſgraced, if either he dare not march into the field, or being entred the battle doth ſhamefully flee away, or cowardly yeeld vnto the enemy: ſo in this ſpirituall warfare it is no diſhonour to receiue foiles and wounds of our ſpirituall enemies, for the moſt valiant ſouldiers that euer fought the Lords battels, haue ſuſtained the like: nay, if in the fight they be taken priſoners, yet ſo they reſiſt to the vttermoſt of their power, and ſhew an earneſt deſire to bee out of the captiuitie of ſinne and Sathan, this is acceptable to their Captaine Chriſt, and hee will in pitie and compaſſion reſtore them to libertie. But if rather than they would endure the danger of the fight, they profeſſe themſelues friends to ſinne and Sathan; or if hauing profeſſed themſelues Chriſts ſouldiers, they at the firſt encounter of their ſpirituall enemies tempting them to any ſinne, doe forſake Chriſts ſtandard ſhamefully, or cowardly yeeld to ſinne and Satan, voluntarily liuing in their ſlauerie without deſire of libertie: then either they ſhew themſelues notable cowards, worthy to be caſhiered out of Gods Campe; or traiterous rebels, who though outwardly they made a profeſſion that they were Chriſts ſouldiers, yet in heart they deſired to ſerue Satan.

§. Sect. 9. Conſolations for thoſe who are vnwillingly foyled in the ſpirituall conflict.

Here therefore is incouragement for the weake Chriſtian who is diſcouraged and aſhamed to looke his Redeemer Ieſus Chriſt in the face, becauſe of the manifold foiles which he receiueth in this ſpirituall combat; for howſoeuer before the fight of temptations he reſolueth manfully to make reſiſtance and to ouercome, yet when the Deuill ſtrongly aſſaulteth, the world flattereth or frowneth, and the fleſh treacherouſly betrayeth him, fighting ſecretly with whole legions of vnlawfull luſts againſt the ſpirit, then is hee foiled and often taken captiue of ſinne. But let ſuch to their comfort know, that if they continue their earneſt deſire of fighting ſtill the Lords battailes, and ouercomming their ſpirituall enemies, they are accepted of Ieſus Chriſt, and in the end hee will giue them ſtrength to obtaine a finall victory. And that their manifold foiles and grieſly wounds which they receiue of ſinne and Satan may not diſcourage them; let them conſider, that neuer any entred the battle (our chiefe Captaine Chriſt excepted) but they haue beene ſubiect to the like. Adam who was the ſtrongeſt Champion in his owne ſtrength that euer entred the liſts, was ouerthrowne at the firſt encounter, and taken captiue of ſinne: in which bondage hee ſhould euer haue remained, had not Chriſt redeemed him. Noah was ouercome with drunkenneſſe; and Lot added thereunto inceſt. Dauid a notable ſouldier in fighting the Lords battels, was made a ſlaue to his owne luſts. Peter a ſtout Champion, ran away and forſooke his maſter. In a word, there was neuer any that liued, who haue not beene foiled by Satan, and wounded with ſinne. One perhaps receiueth more and deeper wounds, or is longer held captiue in the chaines of ſinne than another; but none haue eſcaped altogether. And thoſe who haue receiued the moſt grieuous hurts, ſo they haue an earneſt deſire to haue thoſe wounds healed which ſinne hath made in their conſciences, to the end they may bee enabled to renew the fight againſt their ſpirituall enemies; may aſſure themſelues that Chriſt the good Samaritan and their moſt carefull captaine, will powre the oyle of his grace and mercie, and the precious balme of his bloud into their wounds, which will as eaſily cure them, though they be many and grieſly, as if they were but few, and (as it were) but ſmall ſcratches.

§. Sect. 10. That Satan preuaileth againſt vs not by his abſolute power, but by Gods permiſſion.

And ſo much concerning the firſt conſolation, which may ſerue for the comforting and raiſing vp of thoſe who are fallen. In the ſecond place wee are to conſider that Satan foileth vs and cauſeth vs to fall into ſinne, not at his pleaſure nor by his owne abſolute power, but becauſe the Lord hath ſaid, thou ſhalt thus preuaile for the further manifeſtation of my glory. For therefore the Lord doth leaue his children ſometimes to themſelues, ſo that being aſſaulted by Satan they fall into ſinne, and bewray their infirmities and corruption; to the end hee may ſhew hereby and declare the riches of his power, mercie, and goodneſſe, which otherwiſe would not ſo manifeſtly appeare. And this the Apoſtle plainly ſheweth, 2.Cor.12.8,9,10. where hee ſaith that hee beſought the Lord thrice that he might be deliuered from the pricke in the fleſh and the meſſenger of Satan, which did buffet him: but the Lord returned him this anſwere, My grace is ſufficient for thee, for my power is made perfect through weakneſſe; after which anſwere receiued, the Apoſtle quieteth himſelfe notwithſtanding his infirmities, nay, glorieth in them, rather then in his reuelations, as hee profeſſeth ſaying, Very gladly therefore will I reioyce rather in mine infirmities, that the power of Chriſt may dwell in mee. Though then our infirmities be great and our falles many, yet are wee not to be altogether diſcouraged thereby, ſeeing it is the will of God that we ſhould thus bewray our infirmities and corruptions, to the end his power, mercie and goodneſſe, may be made the more manifeſt, and that both vnto our ſelues, and vnto others. For ſuch is our ſpirituall blindneſſe and ſecret pride, that if wee ſhould alwayes alike withſtand the temptations of Satan, without receiuing any foile, and neuer fall into any ſinne, wee would be readie to thinke that we ſtood by our own ſtrength, and ſo aſcribe the praiſe of victorie to our ſelues, thereby robbing God of the honour due vnto him: and alſo for the time to come, wee would relie vpon our ſelues rather then on the Lords aſſiſtance; then the which nothing could bee more diſhonourable vnto God, nor pernicious vnto our owne ſoules. But when as in the ſpirituall combate of temptations, wee ſometimes ſtand and ſometimes fall, ſometimes reſiſt thoſe aſſaults which are ſtrong & violent, & another time faint and yeeld in the lighteſt trials: this maketh it apparent that it is not our owne power, which in it ſelfe is not much vnlike at all times; but the power of God, which ſuſtaineth vs ſometimes, that we may not be wholly diſcouraged; and ſometimes withdraweth it ſelfe, that we may by receiuing foiles learn to know our infirmities, and wholly to rely our ſelues on the Lords aſſiſtance, returning all the prayſe of victory to the Lord, who onely hath ſuſtained vs. As therefore our infirmities in reſpect of our ſelues, ſhould ſerue to abate our pride, and to worke in vs true humiliation and vtter deſpaire in our owne ſtrength: ſo in reſpect that they ſhew vnto vs the Lords power ſupporting vs, they ſhould the rather incourage vs to fight the ſpirituall combate, with aſſured hope of victory, ſeeing it is manifeſt that wee ſtand not by our owne power, which like a broken ſtaffe or crackt weapon would faile vs when wee did moſt truſt and relie vpon it, but by the almightie power of God, againſt which neither Satan nor the gates of Hell can any iot preuaile. And in this regard we may well rejoyce in our infirmities with the Apoſtle Paul, becauſe by reaſon of them it more manifeſtly appeareth that the power of Chriſt dwelleth in vs, which is able to defend vs from Satans malice and violent rage, not only when we ſtand manfully in the encounter, but alſo when we are foiled and put to the worſt.

2.Cor.12.8,9.

Verſe 9.

That the Lord ſuffereth vs to fall for the manifeſtation of his owne power, mercy, and goodnes, and for our humiliation.

§. Sect. 11. Gods power moſt cleerely appeareth in our weaknes.

Yea in this reſpect the more weake and full of infirmities the poore Chriſtian is, the more is the prayſe of Gods glorious might manifeſted and magnified. For when Satan, who is ſo malitious, puiſſant and politicke an enemie, hath long time aſſaulted a ſilly weake man or woman, and yet cannot wholly ly preuailes, but returneth away foiled and ouercome, it muſt needes bee confeſſed that they are aſſiſted and ſtrengthened by ſome ſuperiour power which farre excelleth Satan in ſtrength and policie; whereas it ſeemeth no ſuch wonder when as the ſtrong Chriſtian, who hath obtained a great meaſure of knowledge, faith, and other graces, giueth Satan the repulſe. Neither are men ſo readie to aſcribe the prayſe of victory to the Lord, becauſe his immediate power and helping hand doth not ſo manifeſtly appeare; although in truth their victory alſo commeth wholly from him, for without his gifts and graces, they were as feeble and vnable to ſtand as the weakeſt; but yet the weaker and ſmaller the meanes are, the more manifeſt is the Lords power and wiſdome, who hereby doth accompliſh things which are aboue the power of men and Angels. For example; the power and goodneſſe of God appeareth great, when as he prouideth for vs food conuenient, and giueth ſtrength thereto to nouriſh and ſuſtaine vs; and yet it is more manifeſt, when as he ſo ſtrengtheneth vs by vertue of one meale that wee need no more in fortie dayes, as he did Elias, but then it ſhineth as it were in his full ſtrength, when as hee ſuſtaineth vs without any food at all, as he did Moſes and our Sauiour Chriſt. So it is made manifeſt when as hee giueth vs victory ouer our enemies, though there be ſome equality in the numbers & other preparations, for it is he that teacheth our hands to warre and our fingers to fight: but it is more euident when as our number is ſmall, as when hee deliuered the Iſraelites by Gedeon, and his three hundred men, from an innumerable army; and ouercame the whole hoſt of the Philiſtims, by the weake meanes of Ionathan and his armour-bearer: but then it is moſt cleere and manifeſt, when as hee ouercommeth our enemies by his own immediate power, as hee did the Egyptians in the red Sea, and the hoſt of Senacherib at the ſiege of Ieruſalem. And ſo when hee giueth the ſtrong Chriſtian who is full of grace, victory ouer Satan, his power appeareth; for vnleſſe he were ſtrengthned with his graces, he could not ſtand: but when one who ſeemeth in his owne eyes deſtitute of grace, and full of ſinne and corruption (ſo, that he plainly ſeeth that hee is altogether vnable to withſtand the leaſt aſſault) is notwithſtanding ſo ſupported by Gods almightie hand, and immediate power, that he doth not onely ſtand in the battell, but in the end obtaineth victory; hereby the power and goodnes of God moſt cleerely appeares to himſelfe and all the world. Seeing then our ſinnes and falls doe ſhew vnto vs our own infirmities and weakneſſe, and theſe doe declare Gods vnreſiſtable power and might, which notwithſtanding our feebleneſſe doth vphold vs: therefore let vs ſo deſpaire in our ſelues, as that thereby we may be moued to relie wholly vpon the Lord, hauing ſo much more hope of victory as the ſtrength of God excelleth the ſtrength of man. Let vs be ſo humbled with a true ſenſe and ſorrow for our owne infirmities and corruption, as that in the mean time we may receiue more ſound conſolation and true joy; becauſe wee ſtand not by our own ſtrength, which euery houre would faile vs, but by the power of Gods might. And therfore though Satan and all the power of Hell conſpire and band themſelues againſt vs, yet ſhall they not preuaile; and though they foile vs, yet ſhall they neuer finally ouercome; for hee that is with vs is ſtronger then all they who are againſt vs; and the greater our weakneſſe is, the fitter occaſion ſhall the Lord haue of ſhewing his omnipotent power in giuing vs victory.

Pſal.144.1.

¶.Sect.12.
Horror, feare and deſpaire following our falls, argue our diffidence in God, & ſelfe-confidence.

But if hauing bewrayed thine infirmities, and gotten a foile in the ſpirituall conflict, thou preſently be diſcouraged and deſpaire of victory, ſurely it is a manifeſt ſigne that thou diddeſt truſt too little in Gods aſſiſtance, & too much in thine owne ſtrength, which becauſe it hath failed, thou haſt caſt away all hope: and the greater thy horrour and deſpaire is which followeth thy fall, the greater was thy ſelfe-confidence, and the leſſe thy affiance in God. For he that altogether relieth vpon the Lords aſſiſtance, and wholly diſtruſteth his owne ſtrength when hee falleth in the time of temptation, is not much aſtoniſhed with any great wonder, knowing that through his owne infirmitie and weakneſſe, hee is moſt apt to fall when God leaueth him to himſelfe; neither is hee vtterly diſcouraged and ouer-whelmed with deſpaire, as though now there were no meanes to ſtand in the ſpirituall combate, and to obtaine victory; but hating, and with a peaceable and quiet ſorrow mourning for his ſinne, becauſe thereby he hath diſhonoured his God, and offended his diuine majeſtie, he doth not abate his hope; but with leſſe confidence in himſelfe and more confidence in God, he renues the fight againſt his ſpirituall enemies, with vndaunted courage, knowing that the Lord in whom hee truſteth and wholly relieth will neuer faile him. And therefore let vs no more reſt in our ſelues, if euer wee would enjoy the peace of conſcience, or would haue any aſſurance of the Lords aſſiſtance; for he will be all in all, neither can he abide any ſharing in the glory of the victory: and therefore ſo long as wee truſt in our owne ſtrength, and fight with our owne forces, hee will withdraw his helpe, till our often falles and foiles haue taught vs to know our owne infirmities and corruptions, that ſo deſpairing wholly in our owne ſtrength, we may peaceably reſt vpon his almightie power, & promiſed aſſiſtance.

§. Sect. 13.
The laſt conſolation, taken from the experience which we haue had of the Lords aſſiſtance.

Laſtly, let thoſe who are truly humbled in regard of thoſe foiles which they receiue in the ſpirituall conflict, comfort themſelues by the experience of Gods loue, care, and goodneſſe, both towards others & themſelues; for how many haue beene caſt downe as well as they, and yet haue in the end beene raiſed vp? how many haue ſorrowed and mourned, that now rejoyce and haue receiued comfort; how many haue taken notable foiles & grieuous fals in the ſpiritual conflict, & yet in the end haue obtained victory? In a word who hath depended vpon the Lord, and hath been rejected? who hath beene truely humbled, and hath not beene comforted; who hath fought againſt their ſpirituall enemies, and hath not by the Lords aſſiſtance ouercome? And is the Lords arme now ſhortned, or are his mercies come to an end? hath he forgotten to be gracious, or hath he ſhut vp his louing kindneſſe in diſpleaſure? Nay, rather ſay it is thine owne infirmitie, for the Lord is the ſame hee was, without change or ſhadow of change, and therefore as hee hath comforted and ſtrengthened and giuen victory vnto others, ſo will hee comfort and ſtrengthen and giue vnto thee a famous victory ouer thy ſpirituall enemies, if thou wilt depend vpon him and wait his leiſure. But if this will not comfort thee when thou heareſt of Gods mercie and aſſiſtance in ſupporting others, yet at leaſt let thine owne experience confirme thee in the aſſurance of Gods loue & ſuccor: for, haſt thou not indured many aſſaults of thy ſpirituall enemies, and yet thou ſtandeſt in the incounter? but I pray thee by whoſe ſtrength? ſurely not thine owne, for thou art weake and feeble, and thine enemies ſtrong and mightie, and therefore able to deſtroy thee euery minute, if the Lord did not ſupport thee, by his Almightie power. Haſt thou not alſo receiued many foiles, and bewrayed notable corruptions, and yet thou art not quite ouerthrown nor ſwallowed vp by thy ſinnes? And who hath preſerued thee? ſurely not thy ſelfe; for if thou canſt not ſtand againſt Sathan whileſt thou art fighting, much leſſe couldeſt thou riſe vp againe when thou art caſt down; but it is the Spirit of the Lord who hath raiſed thee vp by vnfained repentance, & hath renewed thy ſtrength, ſo that againe thou art readie to withſtand and reſiſt Sathan and his temptations. Why therefore ſhouldeſt thou feare leſt Sathan will in the end ouercome & deſtroy thee? why ſhouldeſt thou doubt of the Lords aſſiſtance in the time to come, of which thou haſt had ſufficient experience in times paſt? ſeeing himſelfe is vnchangeable and his gifts without repentance, and therefore thoſe whom hee hath defended hee will defend, thoſe that he hath once raiſed vp, he will euer raiſe vp, and to whomſoeuer hee hath giuen grace to withſtand their ſpiritual enemies, to thoſe hee will continue and increaſe his grace, till in the end they haue a finall victory, and the crowne of victory, euerlaſting glory.

INTREATING OF SATHANS ſpeciall and particular temptations, which hee ſuggeſteth againſt the ſeuerall cauſes of our ſaluation; and of the anſweres whereby they are to be refuted and repelled.

CHAP. I.

Comforts againſt confuſed feares and terrours of conſcience, wherewith the weake Chriſtian is vſually troubled at his firſt conuerſion.

§. Sect. I. Of the temptations of Satan which are vnreaſonable, and firſt of terrors & feares, and of the cauſes why God ſuffereth the faithfull to be thus afflicted.

WEE haue ſhewed in the former Booke the common affections of the Christian cōflict, namely, his manfull withſtanding Satans encoūters, and alſo his fainting and falling into ſin. Now wee are to ſpeake of the ſpeciall temptations themſelues, and the meanes whereby we may be ſtrengthened againſt them. The ſpeciall temptations of Sathan wherewith he aſſaulteth the weake Chriſtian, are either vnreaſonable and violent, or elſe ſuch as are ſubtill and politike, grounded vpon ſome probable ſhew of reaſon. Of the former ſort are thoſe terrours and feares wherewith hee affrighteth the Chriſtian newly conuerted vnto God, or temptations of command. For no ſooner doth a man giue his name to Chriſt, and endeuour to come out of the miſerable thraldome of Satan, leauing his former ſinnes, and endeuouring to lead a new life, but preſently hee purſueth him with all his forces, and affrighteth him with all his terrors. And as the Iſraelites were no ſooner eſcaped out of the bondage of Egypt, but preſently they were purſued with Pharaoh, and his hoaſt, and beſet on all ſides with difficulties and dangers, ſo as they began to repent them of their deliuerance, and cried out for feare: ſo as ſoone as the faithfull are eſcaped out of the cruell captiuitie of the ſpirituall Egypt, Satan the Prince of darkneſſe purſueth them with all his might, and ſo aſſaulteth and enuironeth them on all ſides with his terrors and feares, that they are oftentimes brought into a doubtfull deliberation, what they were beſt to doe, whether to goe forward in their ſpirituall march towards the holy land, notwithſtanding all theſe difficulties and dangers, or to returne againe into their wretched thraldome, that they may recouer their former ſecuritie and peace, and haue the quiet fruition of the fleſh-pots of Egypt, euen their carnall pleaſures, and worldly profits. But as Satan intendeth in this purſute the deſtruction of Gods children, or to recouer them againe into his ſeruitude to their vtter ruine; (all which he powerfully effecteth in the veſſels of wrath, and children of vnbeliefe) ſo contrariwiſe the Lord diſpoſeth of all this to the good of his true Iſraelites, and maketh way hereby for their full and finall deliuerance. For therefore hee ſuffereth the ſpirituall Pharaoh to purſue them with all his forces, to affright them with feares and terrours, & to bring them into many ſtraits, difficulties and dangers, that diſtruſting their owne ſtrength, and vtterly deſpairing of deliuerance by their owne meanes, they may be moued to flie vnto God, when they can flie no way elſe, and to cry out vnto him for helpe and ſuccour, when they are abandoned of all other hopes. And ſo the Lord being entreated with their earneſt prayers and ſtrong cryes, taketh occaſion to glorifie his great and glorious name, and to manifeſt his vnreſiſtable power in the deſtruction and ouerthrow ouerthrow of their enemies, and in their maruellous and mightie deliuerance out of that ſeruile ſubjection. So alſo by theſe troubles and trials he maketh way for repentance and for their true conuerſion vnto him; and by theſe ſeruile feares hee fitteth and prepareth their hearts for the entertaining of holy and ſonne-like feare, which is the head of wiſdome and root of godlineſſe. For hereby their hearts are bruiſed and made contrite, which are naturally moſt ſtiffe and obdurate, and ſo humbled that they become fit grounds to receiue the ſeeds of faith, repentance, and all other ſanctifying and ſauing graces; hereby their thraldome vnder Satan appeareth more odious and irkeſome, that being deliuered they may be more carefull to keepe themſelues from comming againe into this cruell bondage; hereby they are moued to abhorre their former ſinnes, as being the cauſes of all theſe troubles; and haue their conſciences made ſo tender by enduring theſe feares and terrors, that they would not bee perſwaded willingly to wound them by committing any knowne ſinne, with all the pleaſures and preferments of the world. Finally, the greater their horrour and perplexitie hath beene, the greater is their joy and comfort in their deliuerance, the greater alſo their thankfulneſſe towards God, by whoſe mercy & might they are deliuered. All which ſhould ſerue as effectuall reaſons to moue all Chriſtians afflicted with theſe troubles, and aſſaulted with theſe dangers, to beare with patience theſe horrours and feares, and to waite the Lords leiſure for their deliuerance; ſeeing the Lord diſpoſeth of them for their ſpirituall good, working by theſe feares, true ſecuritie, and making theſe terrors to prepare a way for joyfull peace and tranquillitie of minde, which ſhall neuer be taken from them.

§. Sect. 2. Of confuſed feares which haue no ground, but melancholy abuſed by Satans ſubtiltie, and how he worketh on this humour.

Now theſe terrours are either ſo confuſed, that the weake Chriſtian in the middeſt of his feares knoweth not what he feareth; or elſe they are grounded vpon ſome ſuppoſed and imagined cauſe. The former commonly proceed from a mixture of melancholy, with Satans malicious ſubtilty, whereby he taketh occaſion by abuſing this humour to worke the ouerthrow of the partie thus affected and afflicted. For that theſe ſpirituall terrours and feares are not to be aſcribed to nature alone, it may appeare by all ſuch who abounding with this melancholike humour, are not ſubject to terrours and feares of this kind, howſoeuer they are naturally timorous; as alſo by all thoſe contrariwiſe, who being of other complexions are much afflicted with them. And finally by the experience of Phyſicions, who though they be able by meanes of phyſicke to purge and correct this humour, ſo as it is brought vnto juſt temperature with the reſt, yet can they not rid their patients of theſe terrible feares, till the mind and conſcience by the helpe of Diuinitie, and powerfull perſwaſions out of Gods Word be ſetled and quieted. Neither will their conceit appeare to be well grounded who imagine that theſe terrors proceed from meere melancholy, becauſe ſuch as abound with this humour are moſt ſubject vnto them; if they conſider (as before I haue ſhewed) that Sathan in his policie fitting his temptations according to the nature, temperature, and diſpoſition of the partie whom he aſſaulteth, doth thinke theſe terrors and feares his fitteſt weapons to preuaile with thoſe who abound with melancholy: for finding them naturally timorous and of an heauie ſpirit, hee perceiueth that hee cannot eaſily keepe them aſleepe in carnall ſecuritie, for as much as they are naturally fearefull of their eſtate, and apt to make many doubts of their ſaluation, nor bewitch them with worldly delights, in which they take no great pleaſure & contentment. And therefore following their humour he laboureth to thruſt them head-long that way whereunto naturally, or accidentally they encline; and laboureth ſo wholly to poſſeſſe and oppreſſe them with affrighting terrors, and vncomfortable feares, that they taking pleaſure in nothing, & finding themſelues vnfit for any good dutie, may grow altogether impatient of their condition, and wearie of their liues. And therefore ſeeing the cauſe of this maladie is mixt, proceeding partly from Satans ſubtiltie, and partly from the ſuperfluitie of a naturall humour, and ſeeing the parts affected are diuers, the Deuils temptations troubling the minde, and melancholicke humours ouer-burthening & diſtempering the chiefe parts of the bodie, which are the ſoules organs and inſtruments whereby it worketh; it followeth that for the perfecting of the cure there bee applied mixt remedies, and that both the Diuine and Phyſicion doe joyne together, becauſe as perſwaſions are not auaileable to purge the ſuperfluous humours of the bodie; ſo pils or potions cannot worke vpon the mind, nor any cordial comfort vpon the afflicted conſcience ſurcharged with terrours and feares, and grieuouſly moleſted with the temptations of the Deuill. For howſoeuer it is true (as I haue alſo found it by mine owne experience) that ſome exceedingly abounding with melancholy, and grieuouſly afflicted, with doubtings, feares and many temptations (notwithſtanding that they haue vtterly refuſed all meanes of phyſicke) haue by comfortable perſwaſions in the publike miniſtery and in priuate conference, and by the euidence of truth appearing in both, and applied vnto them by the inward operation of Gods holy Spirit, beene ſtrengthened againſt all temptations, ſatisfied in all their doubts, quieted in reſpect of their feares, aſſured of their ſaluation, uation, and throughly ſetled in their minds with much peace and ſpirituall comfort, though the aboundance of this melancholike humour haue remained in them: yet this is ſeldome ſeene, and to be accounted an extraordinary worke of Gods holy Spirit, whereby hee would manifeſt his diuine power aboue the courſe of all naturall cauſes; the which neuertheleſſe is not vſually perfected but in long time, by plentifull meanes of working this comfort and conſolation, and great paines and diligence in the vſe of them. In regard whereof it behoueth all thus afflicted, that (not thinking what God can doe, or what he hath done in ſome extraordinary caſes, to ſhew the omnipotencie of his power) they vſe the ordinary meanes which hee hath preſcribed; and ioyne the Phyſicions counſell for the abating and correcting of their melancholy, with the perſwaſions and comforts of the Diuine; ſeeing this ſuperfluous humor is the chiefe inſtrument which Satan abuſeth to worke their ouerthrow, and the moſt deadly wounding weapon, which he draweth out againſt them in this combate of temptations. And therefore howſoeuer it is poſſible through the extraordinary aſſiſtance of Gods holy Spirit to ouercome this our enemie, and to obtaine the victory when hee is armed at all points, and in his full ſtrength; yet if wee diſarme him of his chiefe weapons, and take away the meanes whereby hee is enabled to maintaine the warre againſt vs, wee ſhall obtaine againſt him a more certaine, ſpeedie and eaſie conqueſt.

§. Sect.3. Of the ſpirituall meanes whereby the weake Chriſtian may be eaſed of theſe terrours.

Howbeit wee are not to reſt wholly in theſe naturall helps, ſeeing the cauſe is in part ſpirituall and ſupernaturall; but hauing by the helpe of phyſicke vnburthened the bodie of theſe melancholicke humours, wee muſt labour alſo that our minds may bee comforted, ſtrengthened and refreſhed againſt theſe troubleſome feares, and dreadfull paſſions. And firſt, if theſe terrours bee confuſed and vngrounded, we muſt labour to bring them to ſome head, and to ſearch out as much as in vs lieth, the particular cauſes of them, that ſo by their remoouall wee may find ſecure peace, and quiet comfort. For as hee who hath a ſwelling in any part of his body, can find no eaſe ſo long as the corruption is diſperſed, till it be drawne to a head, and thereby euacuated: ſo as long as thoſe corrupt cauſes of our terrours and feares are confuſedly ſcattered in our minds, there is little eaſe or comfort to be expected, but when we haue drawne them to ſome head, ſo as we can diſtinctly point at them, we may by remouing the cauſe of our feare, be eaſed of theſe terrours and troubles of mind. As therefore it fareth in bodily diſeaſes, wherein the greateſt difficultie appertaining to the cure is cleerely to diſcerne what the ſickneſſe is, and from what cauſes it proceedeth, which being vnderſtood the remedies are eaſie and readie at hand; ſo alſo in theſe diſeaſes of the ſoule, there is nothing ſo hard for the curing of them, as to know diſtinctly what are the true cauſes of theſe terrours and feares; ſeeing the Lord in his Word hath prouided ſpeciall remedies for euery ſuch maladie, which being fitly applied by Gods ſpirituall Phyſicions will eaſily effect the cure. Firſt, then we are to conſider that the chiefe cauſes of all croſſes and calamities are our ſinnes which infect our minds and conſciences with their guilt, from which guiltineſſe proceedeth a fearefull expectation of thoſe puniſhments to which we know that we are iuſtly liable; neither can wee euer be freed from this guiltineſſe and fearefull terrours, vntill our ſinnes being done away wee are iuſtified and reconciled vnto God; for then and not before wee haue peace of conſcience, boldnes, & confidence, when as we being aſſured that God loueth vs, and that wee loue him againe, we can ſecurely reſt in all difficulties and dangers vpon his gracious promiſes, and powerfull prouidence for preſeruation and protection. And this the Apoſtle teacheth vs, where he ſaith, that there is no feare in loue, but perfect loue caſteth out feare; for feare hath painfulneſſe; and he that feareth is not perfect in loue. So the Wiſe man telleth vs, that the wicked flie when none purſueth; but the righteous are bold as a Lion. And thus Adam, whileſt he walked with God in that innocencie wherein he was created, was bold and feared nothing, but no ſooner by his fall was his conſcience made guiltie of ſinne, but preſently hee hideth himſelfe in the buſhes, feareth he knoweth not what, and flieth before he knoweth an enemy to aſſault him. So Cain hauing his conſcience ouer-burthened with the guilt of his ſinne, feareth that euery one that met him would kill him, when as yet there was no enemy to aſſault him: whereas, contrariwiſe Dauid being aſſured of the remiſſion of his ſinnes, and of his peace with God, grew hereby ſo confident and couragious, that hee profeſſeth hee would not be afraid for ten thouſand of people, that ſhould beſet him round about; and that, though hee ſhould walke thorow the valley of the ſhadow of death hee would feare no euill, becauſe God was with him, and with his rod and ſtaffe comforted him. And thus the Apoſtle Paul likewiſe being iuſtified by faith, and aſſured of Gods loue, groweth to that confidence and boldneſſe, that he profeſſeth both for himſelfe, and in the name of all the faithfull that he is affraid of nothing, being fully perſwaded that neither death nor life, nor Angels nor principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, ſhould be able to ſeparate them from the loue of of God which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord.

§. Sect. 4.
That thoſe who would be freed from theſe feares, muſt labour to attaine vnto faith and repentance.

When therefore we are troubled and turmoiled with theſe confuſed feares & affrighting terrours, of which wee can yeeld no cauſe or reaſon, let vs firſt know this in generall, that our ſins haue expoſed vs vnto them; for where is innocency, there alſo is ſecurity, where there is juſtification and aſſurance of the remiſſion of ſinnes, there is peace with God, peace with the creatures, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt. So that if wee would be freed from theſe terrours and feares, we muſt carefully labour in the vſe of all good means ordained by God for the obtaining of a liuely faith, as hearing the Word, receiuing the Sacraments, Prayer, holy meditation, and Chriſtian conferences; aſſuring our ſelues that if wee be not wanting vnto our ſelues in the vſe of the meanes for the obtaining of faith, the Lord will not be wanting vnto vs, but will joyne with theſe outward exerciſes the inward operation of his holy Spirit, making them effectuall for the begetting and encreaſing of this ſauing grace in vs, whereby being juſtified, that is, aſſured of the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and of Chriſts righteouſnes we ſhall haue peace with God, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. And leſt we ſhould deceiue our ſelues with a counterfeit ſhadow of faith, and expell feare with a fond preſumption, let vs in the next place approue our faith to be true and liuely by the fruites thereof in vnfained repentance: the which though it doe not purchaſe forgiueneſſe of ſinnes by merit and deſert, yet doth it aſſure vs that they are forgiuen, becauſe God, of his free grace and mercie, hath bound himſelfe by manifold promiſes, that all who repent and turne from their ſinnes, ſhall haue their pardon, and in his Sonne Chriſt be reconciled vnto him. Yea vpon this condition of faith and repentance, the couenant of grace is made with vs, wherein the Lord promiſeth that he will pardon our ſinnes, receiue vs into his loue, multiply vpon vs temporary and eternall benefits, and preſerue vs from all dangers, requiring no more of vs but that we beleeue in Chriſt, and bring forth the fruits of faith in turning from our former ſinnes, and in leading a new life: and therefore if we performe on our part this condition, we may reſt aſſured that wee are in the couenant, and haue intereſt in all Gods promiſes, and conſequently wee may juſtly baniſh all terrors and feares, for as much as our ſinnes repented of and being forgiuen, are as though they were neuer committed in Gods eſtimate, and becauſe wee are now receiued vnder the protection of Gods prouidence, without the wiſe diſpoſing whereof, nothing can befall vs, whoſe loue is infinite in caring for vs, and his power omnipotent in defending vs; and who hath aſſured vs by his infallible truth that all things whatſoeuer, yea afflictions themſelues, and euen theſe terrours and feares ſhall turne to our good, and working together for the beſt, ſhall further the ſaluation of our ſoules.

Rom. 5.1.

Rom, 8.28.

§. Sect. 5.
That to be acquited of theſe feares, there is required a ſpeciall repentance, for our chiefe and moſt hainous ſinnes.

But beſides this repentance for all our ſins in generall, there is required for the procuring of our peace and ſecuritie, and for the remoual of theſe confuſed terrors and feares, that we enter into a ſtrait examination of our ſelues, whether ſome ſpeciall, hainous and grieuous ſinne againſt our knowledge, or vpon preſumption, doe not ſtill lie vpon our conſciences vnrepented of, which by Gods juſt judgement may bring vs into theſe agonies and dreadfull perplexities. For it is a righteous thing with God, that when with an high hand wee haue ſinned againſt him, and will not by the ordinary meanes of the miniſtery of his Word, or his more gentle chaſtiſements be brought vnto vnfained repentance, that wee ſhould be haunted with theſe terrors and feares, as it were, with ſo many helliſh furies, that ſo wee may be forced to come vnto him, by this trouble and perplexitie of minde, who will not come freely of our owne accord. If therefore we would haue theſe terrors remoued, and attaine vnto peace and ſecuritie in our mindes and conſciences, wee muſt not content our ſelues with a generall repentance for all our ſinnes, but wee muſt repent more eſpecially for thoſe more ſpeciall and hainous ſinnes, wherewith wee haue moſt grieuouſly offended God, and moſt deeply wounded our owne conſciences. And then, if notwithſtanding wee haue performed theſe duties of generall and more particular repentance, we are ſtill haunted with theſe confuſed feares, we are to take courage vnto vs, and boldly to challenge Sathan, or our owne corrupt fleſh, to enter the liſts, to alleage their worſt accuſations, and to make their bils of inditement as hainous and odious as they can, that we may anſwere vnto them. Then are we to enter into a more narrow examination of our eſtate, and to ſay with the Prophet David, Why art thou caſt downe my ſoule, and vnquiet within me? waite on God, for I will yet giue him thankes, for the helpe of his preſence: and againe, Why art thou caſt downe my ſoule, and why art thou diſquieted within me? waite on God, for I will yet giue him thankes, hee is my preſent helpe and my God. Art thou troubled becauſe God is thine enemie? be of good comfort, for thy Sauiour hath appeaſed his wrath and working a reconciliation, hath in thy behalfe procured his loue. Art thou vexed becauſe thou art liable to the curſe of the Law? Chriſt hath borne it for thee on his croſſe, that thou mayeſt be freed from it, and obtain the bleſſing. Art thou ſurcharged with the greatneſſe of thy debts, wherein thou art engaged to Gods juſtice? why Chriſt as thy ſurety hath ſatisfied for them all, & hath diſcharged thy debt to the vttermoſt farthing. Art thou affrighted with the ſight of thy ſinnes, which are in number numberleſſe, and in their qualitie hainous? feare them not, ſeeing both the mercies of God and merits of Chriſt are moſt infinite, and being waſhed away with his moſt precious bloud, they ſhall neuer bee imputed vnto thee. Finally, art thou afraid of the Deuill, Death, Hell and condemnation? bee of good courage, for Chriſt Ieſus thy bleſſed Lord and Sauiour hath ouercome, and gloriouſly triumphed ouer them all, not only for himſelfe, but alſo for all them who are in the couenant of grace, in which number thou mayeſt aſſure thy ſelfe to be one, ſeeing thou performeſt that only condition of faith and repentance which he requireth of thee.

§. Sect. 6. Of thoſe terrours which haue ſome certaine ground, namely Satans malice and violence.

And thus haue I ſhewed the means whereby the weak Chriſtian may be armed againſt confuſed feares: beſides which there are other terrours that ariſe from ſome knowne cauſe, at leaſt ſuppoſed and imagined. And thus ordinarily thoſe who are afflicted and troubled in minde are afraid of receiuing hurt from Sathan by outward violence, as though they were in danger to bee killed, torne in pieces, or carried away by him, and ſuch like. With which affrighting terrours as they are often vexed, ſo eſpecially when they are alone, or in the darke. And leſt any ſhould think that theſe are meere melancholicke illuſions, hauing no other cauſe but the abounding of that humour: and not at all the tentations of the Deuill, or of our owne fleſh; wee are to know that none are more haunted with theſe feares, then little children, who are of all others moſt free from the humour of melancholy; which ſheweth that theſe terrours ariſe from that guiltineſſe of conſcience which accuſeth for ſinne, and condemneth vs as worthy to bee giuen ouer of God, to be abuſed and euen deſtroyed of the wicked ſpirits. And therefore the beſt meanes of being freed from theſe feares is to labour after a true and liuely faith, which aſſureth vs of our reconciliation with God, and that being receiued vnder his protection we are ſafe from all dangers; as alſo to repent vs of our ſinnes which expoſe vs vnto all perils. For being freed from ſinne wee are exempted from all euill, yea euen from the feare thereof, and being by faith and repentance reconciled vnto God, and hauing him on our ſide to ſhield and defend vs, there is no appearance of danger from any enemy. For if God be with vs, what mattereth it who oppoſe againſt vs? if hee who is moſt louing and carefull of vs, and all-mightie to defend vs, do watch ouer vs with his all-ſeeing and all-ruling prouidence, what power of man, Angels, or Deuils can doe vs any hurt? For as for Sathan the Prince of darkneſſe and his wicked angels, howſoeuer they are moſt malicious and deſirous to deſtroy vs, and (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) like roring Lions goe about ſeeking to deuoure vs, yet what abilitie haue they to effect their will, ſeeing all their might is from God, and that not to be vſed at their owne pleaſure, but as the Lord giueth them libertie, and vſeth them as his inſtruments and executioners for the puniſhment of the wicked, and triall of his children? And this the Apoſtle Iude teacheth vs, namely that the Lord reſerueth the Angels which kept not their firſt eſtate, but left their owne habitation, in euerlaſting chaines vnder darkneſſe vnto the iudgement of the great day. Of which wee haue an example in the hiſtory of Iob, whom Sathan (though he maligned him) could not hurt, neither in his perſon nor eſtate, before he had obtained licence from God: yea ſo farre is hee from hauing any vnlimited power ouer men (and much leſſe the faithfull) that hee could not enter into the Swine vntill our Sauiour had giuen him leaue. Vnto theſe reaſons and examples out of the Scriptures wee may adde the experience of all times and ages; for where or when was it euer heard of, that Satan had any power ouer the bodies or goods of any of Gods ſeruants, to doe them any hurt, vnleſſe it were only for their triall, and for the exerciſe of their faith, affiance, and patience; that ſo by ſome corporall and temporall affliction there might be conueyed vnto them ſpirituall and eternall good? not becauſe Satan wanteth either power or malice, for if hee had libertie from God, hee both could and would deſtroy the perſons, and wracke the eſtates of many thouſands of Gods Saints; but becauſe he is ſo limited and reſtrained by Gods omnipotent power, that hee hath no poſſible meanes to execute his malice, without a licence and commiſſion from him: for otherwiſe the more godly and religious men were, and the more carefull to pleaſe God, the more obnoxious ſhould they be to the danger of his violence, ſeeing of all others he moſt maligneth them. Yea, not only the common experience which we may haue in all others, but that alſo which euery Chriſtian may haue in himſelfe, may ſufficiently ſtrengthen him againſt theſe feares of ſuffering from Satan ſome outward violence; for how commeth it to paſſe that they haue liued hitherto in ſafetie, and haue beene preſerued both in their eſtates and perſons? was it becauſe Sathan wanted either power or malice to deſtroy them? or becauſe they haue formerly had more ſtrength and abilitie to ſtand in their owne defence? no aſſuredly, for if there had beene no other hindrance, or meanes of their preſeruation, they had long agoe beene brought to vtter ruine; but becauſe God hath watched ouer them with his all-ruling prouidence, and hath hath ſo defended them, and rebuked and reſtrained Sathan, that though hee were euer moſt willing and readie, yet hee was neuer able to doe them any hurt. And therefore if hauing experience of Gods loue & power in ſhielding them from all dangers, they will reſt vnder the ſhadow of his wings, they ſhall be ſafe vnder his protection; neither ſhall Sathan bee euer ſo malicious and mightie to deſtroy them, but God will bee much more mercifull and powerfull to defend them. Neither haue they any reaſon to feare more when they are ſolitarie, then when they are in company, for if God ſhould leaue them to Satans malice and crueltie, it is not the power of the greateſt and moſt inuincible army that could defend them; and contrariwiſe if God be with them, it is no principalities and powers, yea all the puiſſance and ſtrength of all the damned ſpirits, that can ſo much as diſturbe their peace. And yet ſo fooliſh are ſinfull men, that they thinke themſelues more ſafe and ſecure from the danger of theſe ſpirituall wickedneſſes in the preſence of a child, then in the moſt powerfull preſence of God Almightie. Finally, there is no more danger in the remoteſt roome and darkeſt night, then is at the market place at noone day; neither doth darkneſſe, but the workes of darkneſſe expoſe men to any danger; for if as children of the light wee caſt off the workes of darkneſſe, and put on the armour of light; if we walke honeſtly as in the day, and by a liuely faith put on the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, taking no thought for the fleſh to fulfill the luſts thereof; then will the God of life and light watch ouer vs with his all, and euer ſeeing prouidence, and ſo ſhield and preſerue vs from all dangers, that the Prince of darknes ſhall not be able to hurt vs in the night, more then in the cleereſt day: for all times are alike vnto him, and he as well ſeeth vs, and as powerfully defendeth vs, in the moſt palpable darkneſſe, and deadeſt ſilence, as if it were at high noone. And this was holy Dauids meditation; If (ſaith hee) I ſay, yet the darkneſſe ſhall hide mee, euen the night ſhall be light about mee. Yea the darkneſſe hideth not from thee, but the night ſhineth as the day: the darkneſſe and light are both alike.

Chap. II.

Of tentations which haue no other ground but Sathans bare command, and how wee may reſiſt them. And of tentations inciting and mouing men to murther themſelues, and how wee may be armed againſt them.

§. Sect. 1. Of tentations of command, and how we may withſt them.

2.Tim.2.26.

And thus much concerning thoſe tentations which work vpon the mind and conſcience by affrighting and terrifying them: the other kind of vnreaſonable tentations, are tentations of command, which are ſuggeſted by Satan, with a certain kind of helliſh authoritie, and imperious violence, and leaue ſuch a forcible impreſſion behind them, as compelleth the afflicted partie to yeeld, and bringeth vpon him a certaine kinde of vrgent neceſſitie of doing ſomething injoyned by Sathan, though it be abſurd and impious, contrary to the Word of God, and light of nature; and that without any cauſe or reaſon alleaged to perſwade to the doing of it. For hauing ruled as the Prince of darkneſſe in the children of vnbeliefe, and enthralled them in his captiuitie as bond-ſlaues, enforcing them to doe his will; euen after that they are deliuered by Chriſt, he ſeeketh ſtill to tyrannize ouer their conſciences, and making his will to ſtand for law, hee imperiouſly inſulteth ouer them, preſuming vpon their weakneſſe and his own power, and without any reaſon hee vrgeth them to doe that which he commandeth. All which tentations commonly tend, either to the wounding of their conſciences with ſome hainons, groſſe and grieuous ſinne, which hee vrgeth them to commit, that they may re-acknowledge their ſubjection, and preſſeth vpon them as an earneſt penie, by the receiuing whereof they are engaged and bound to returne into his former ſeruice: or elſe to their vtter deſtruction; as when he vrgeth them to lay violent hands vpon themſelus, & vſe means to haſten their own death. Againſt which tentations weake Chriſtians are to arme themſelues by attaining vnto, and renuing their faith and repentance, whereby aſſuring their hearts and conſciences, that they are in the couenant of grace, and partakers of that redemption which is wrought by Chriſt, they may eaſily withſtand all theſe aſſaults. For then they may in an holy diſdaine refuſe to yeeld their obedience vnto theſe vnreaſonable tentations, as being reaſonable creatures; and ſay vnto themſelues, or the tempter; Should I who am a man or woman, indued with a reaſonable ſoule, which is giuen me of God to gouerne and guide me in all my actions, become now like a bruite beaſt without vnderſtanding, yeelding vnto ſuch things as are not only vnreaſonable, but alſo abſurd and monſtrous? yea ſhould I who was created according to Gods Image in all wiſedome and knowledge, ſhew my ſelf worſe then a beaſt, againſt all reaſon doing that which will bee hurtfull and pernicious vnto mee, vpon the meere command of my mortall enemy, whereas they by inſtinct of nature auoide dangers, and ſhun as neere as they can all things which may doe them harme? Then they may diſpute the matter with Satan, and tell him, that howſoeuer hee had ſome ſhew of reaſon to tyrannize ouer them whileſt they were his ſlaues and bondmen, and to exact their obedience vpon his bare cōmand, without alleaging any reaſon; yet now it is moſt abſurd that they being deliuered by Chriſt, and by the price of his moſt precious bloud, offered vnto his Father, as a full ſatisfaction for their ſinnes, ſet at libertie out of his thraldome, ſhould yet yeeld vnto him any ſuch ſubjection, as they did in former times. Now they may tell him that they are not their owne, and much leſſe his, ſeeing they are bought with a price, and by the law of redemption are bound to glorifie God both in their bodies and ſpirits, ſeeing they are his, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; that now they are deliuered by Chriſt out of the hands of their ſpirituall enemies, that they ſhould ſerue him without feare, all the dayes of their life, in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe before him; that now they be made free from ſinne and become the ſeruants of righteouſneſſe, who muſt bring forth fruits of holineſſe vnto life euerlaſting. Now they may aske him what authoritie hee hath to command another mans ſeruants, or what reaſon they haue to obey him, eſpecially commanding things which are hurtfull and pernicious both vnto their bodies and ſoules; ſeeing if they reſiſt him, they haue a promiſe out of Gods Word which can neuer faile them, that he ſhall flee from them? Finally, they may tell him, that their Lord by whom they are redeemed, hath commanded them, that they ſhould not giue any place to the Deuill, nor yeeld any jot vnto his tentations; whom if they obey, notwithſtanding their great weakneſſe and frailtie, they need not to feare the malice of the Deuill, nor all the power of Hell, ſeeing he who had power to deliuer them out of his thraldome, when they were embondaged, hath ſufficient ſtrength to defend them from his fury, when they are in his owne Family, and his houſehold ſeruants, being God omnipotent who is almightie to ſaue, and who hath vanquiſhed and glorioſly triumphed ouer him, not for himſelfe alone, but in the behalfe of all thoſe who adhere vnto him by a true and liuely faith.

And thus we are to arme our ſelues againſt thoſe tentations of Satan, whereby vpon his bare command, hee enforceth men to wound their conſciences with ſome hainous ſinne: now wee are to conſider of the other kinde, whereby he vrgeth them to lay violent hands vpon themſelues, and to take away their precious liues, that ſo at one blow hee may wound both their bodies and ſoules vnto their vtter deſtruction both in this World, and the World to come. In the enforcing of which tentation he commonly imployeth all his forces, and bendeth all his engins of battery againſt vs to make this breach, becauſe if hee can preuaile in this aſſault, hee maketh no queſtion of a full and finall victorie. To this purpoſe hee ſometimes vſeth to the afflicted Chriſtian no other argument to mooue him to the committing of this horrible, vnnaturall, and damnable ſinne of ſelfe-murther, but his peremptory command, which hee preſſeth vpon him with ſuch tyrannicall authoritie, and vnreſiſtable violence, that without the greater grace and aſſiſtance of God hee cannot chuſe but yeeld. Sometime hee haunteth him with affrighting terrours and horrible feares, as it were with helliſh furies, which ſuffering him to take no reſt, do ſo tire and weary him, that hee is willing by death to ſeeke ſome eaſe; for feare fooliſhly caſting himſelfe head-long into thoſe euils he feareth, and ſeeking for eaſe by exchanging worldly miſeries which are but momentary, for helliſh torments which are intolerable and euerlaſting. Sometime he draweth him hereunto by loading him (if ſo God permit him) with grieuous afflictions, either in his name, or ſtate, bodie or minde, making him beleeue that there is no meanes of eaſe or comfort but by taking away his life, as though (like vnto beaſts) death were vnto him an end of all miſeries; whereas it is to thoſe who die in their ſinnes and are defiled with their owne bloud, but the porch of hell, and a little fore-taſte of neuer ending ſorrowes. Finally, ſometime he ſurchargeth his conſcience, made tender by terrours and feares, with the intolerable waight of his hainous ſinnes, and affrighteth him with a cōceit that he hath committed crimes which are vnpardonable: and namely that fearefull and damnable ſinne againſt the Holy Ghoſt; and therefore in vaine it is for him to vſe any meanes to attaine vnto ſaluation; and vnprofitable, yea hurtfull and pernicious it is for him to liue any longer, ſeeing he ſhall ſpend his time in horror and deſpaire, and by adding more ſinnes vnto the former, increaſe that fearefull meaſure of his future condemnation. But in the meane time hee hideth from him the hainouſneſſe of this ſinne of ſelfe-murther, and helliſh deſpaire, which is more horrible and abominable in the ſight of God, then all his other ſinnes, which he ſhould euer commit, though hee ſhould liue to old age: as alſo the intolerable and endleſſe torments of Hell fire, into which hee wilfully leapeth without hope of recouerie; which as much exceed all worldly miſeries, griefes and puniſhments, as the wounding of the heart, or the racking of the limbs, exceedeth the pain of a prickt finger, or ſcratch of a pin.

§. Sect.3.
That the world and the fleſh further the former tentation, and of the inward cauſes mouing vnto ſelfe murther.

But beſides his owne forces, Sathan vſeth his common aids, the world and the fleſh. And firſt for the world it doth exceedingly vrge the afflicted Chriſtian to this fearefull deſigne of ſelfe-murther. For it is vſuall with worldlings to wonder at thoſe who are troubled in minde, as the Owle is wondred at by the little birds; to traduce their names, and to make them the ſubiect of their table diſcourſe; to condemne them as notorious ſinners, who haue committed ſome outragious wickedneſſe, for which they now ſuffer deſerued puniſhments; to cenſure them for mad men, who are fitter for Bedlem then for any good company. Of all which diſgraces the poore Chriſtian is often ſo impatient, hauing lately much eſteemed his reputation, and the Worlds fauour and good report, that hee had rather die then to liue thus blemiſhed and contemned. The fleſh alſo miniſtreth no ſmall ſtrength in this encounter to worke his ouerthrow and deſtruction, nouriſhing in it many damnable and vnruly luſts, which make an eaſie entrance for the Deuils and the Worlds forces. As firſt helliſh pride which will not ſuffer him to reſigne himſelfe ouer to Gods will & pleaſure, nor to ſtoop & ſubmit himſelfe to his afflicting hand; but rather chuſeth not to liue at all, then to liue otherwiſe then himſelfe deſireth. And this alſo maketh him to diſdaine that hee ſhould be pointed at as he paſſeth by, and be diſgraced in all companies, as a man loaded with ſinne and left of God; and to skorne to outliue his reputation, hee being not now able through his manifold afflictions to hold vp his head, and maintaine his former credit & eſteeme. Secondly, impatiencie which maketh him impotent in bearing thoſe afflictions which lie vpon him; and when he can no otherwiſe ſhift them off, nor bee eaſed of them, to chuſe rather to die then to liue ſo vncomfortably and endure ſuch miſerie. Where by the way we may obſerue that to kill a mans ſelfe to be rid of griefe and affliction, argueth no true courage, fortitude, & magnanimitie; for theſe ſhew themſelues in patient ſuffering that which they cannot nobly and Chriſtianly auoid; but baſe puſillanimitie, and impotent weakneſſe of minde, which is not able to beare the leaſt burthen of affliction, nor with inward puritie of conſcience comfort it ſelfe againſt a cauſeles ſcandall; farre vnlike vnto the holy Apoſtle who held on the courſe of Chriſtianitie, and approued himſelfe vnto God by honour and diſhonour, euill report and good report. Thirdly, infidelitie, diffidence and diſtruſt in Gods prouidence and promiſes, which cauſeth him, being hopeleſſe and heartleſſe, to deſpaire of being euer deliuered from trouble, and therefore hauing no confidence in God for his deliuery, either becauſe hee thinketh that he cannot, or at leaſt will not free him from thoſe miſeries which hee endureth, in deſperate manner hee vſeth theſe wicked meanes to deliuer himſelfe, leauing not only his life, but with it all hope of Gods fauour, and aſſurance of his ſaluation, that ſo he may rid himſelfe from ſome momentanie afflictions. And vnto theſe we may adde vnnaturall crueltie exerciſed firſt againſt others, and ſo being fleſhed in bloud, through the iuſt iudgement of God, turneth it owne edge againſt it ſelfe, as we may ſee in the example of Saul, Achitophel, Iudas, Nero, and many others. But howſoeuer not only the World, but alſo the corrupt fleſh act a part in this dreadful tragedie, and make way for Satans encounters when he aſſaulteth vs, yet ſeeing this horrible ſinne of ſelf-murther is vnnaturall, and euen terrible to fleſh and bloud; therefore it is to be thought that the Deuill himſelfe (who hath beene a murtherer from the beginning, and from the firſt foundation of the World hath beene continually fleſhed in bloud and crueltie) is the chiefe actor and agent in theſe horrible attempts and executions; as it may alſo heereby more then probably appeare, in that weake and tender hearted women, who naturally haue not courage enough to ſee their owne bloud, are, as often as men, their owne cruell executioners. And thus we reade in the Goſpell that theſe foule ſpirits cauſed the heard of Swine vnnaturally to drowne themſelues in the Sea; that they caſt the childe poſſeſſed ſometime into the fire, and ſometime into the water, to deſtroy him; and finally that thus Satan preſumed to tempt our Sauiour Chriſt, to caſt himſelfe head-long from the pinacle of the Temple, that vnder colour of getting honour among men, hee might haue tempted God, and ſo haue periſhed in his ſin.

§.Sect.4.
That ſelfe-murther i no caſe la

And therefore let all and euery Chriſtian carefully arme himſelfe againſt this horrible and helliſh tentation, ſeeing the chiefe author thereof is the Deuill, who thirſteth after their bloud, and taketh his chiefe delight in ſeeking their deſtruction and damnation. And to this end let vs know that howſoeuer there are many cauſes of this ſelfe-murther, and many excuſes alleaged, to make it ſeeme ſometime tolerable, and ſometime commendable, if not to others, yet at leaſt to thoſe who commit it, notwithſtanding it is for no cauſe, in any kind, at any time, or vpon any occaſion whatſoeuer lawfull or excuſable. For (as one ſaith) as it was not in our power or choice to be borne, ſo neither to die, for otherwiſe if it were in our power to die, it would be alſo in our power, not to die. Wee doe indeed in our extremities and miſeries deſire the reſt of death; becauſe it is a comfort to ſpeake of our good, when wee endure euill according to the cuſtome of Sea-faring men, who in their dangerous paſſages and ſtormie tempeſts are refreſhed in ſpeaking of the ſafetie of their deſired hauen; and though they cannot attaine vnto it, yet they take delight in wiſhing their arriuall at it. There are I confeſſe many caſes propounded by heatheniſh and worldly men or ignorant Chriſtians, in which they thinke this libertie may be taken; as firſt in ſome grieuous and intolerable

Sicut nec no ſtrum fuit naſci; ita non poteſtatis no eſt mori, &c. Hieronym. ad ægrotum amicum. Epiſt. Tom.4.

lerable afflictions, loſſe of friends or good name, loſſe of wealth or preferments, tedious and grieuous ſickneſſes, terrors of conſcience and ſuch like. But theſe are not intollerable in their owne nature, but through their ill bearing of them; and therefore not their liues, but their impatiencie were to bee laid aſide. Againe, theſe are the chaſtiſements of our heauenly Father, which he inflicteth on vs for our amendment; and hee is but a bad child who had rather die then endure his louing fathers chaſtiſements, to be bettered by them. Finally, they are but light, and of ſhort and momentary continuance; and therefore what folly is it, for the eaſing vs of theſe troubles which are light and temporarie, to caſt our ſelues head-long into thoſe which are truly intolerable and euerlaſting. Secondly, in deteſtation of others ſinne, or for the preuenting of their owne, which by force they ſhould bee compelled to commit, they thinke ſelfe-murther warrantable. Of the former we haue an example in Lucretia, who killed her ſelfe becauſe ſhee had beene rauiſhed by S. Tarquinius. Of the other in certaine Virgins in the Primitiue Church, of whom Auguſtine maketh mention, who caſt themſelues into the riuer to preſerue their chaſtitie from being polluted by their wicked perſecutors. But of her we may ſay, that ſhee was carried with a blind and a wicked zeale, if not with heatheniſh pride, committing her ſelfe a greater ſinne, becauſe another had committed a leſſe. For in truth it was not her ſinne, that ſhee was by force defiled, ſeeing her heart and minde were pure and chaſt, no more then a man ſinneth who hauing a knife in his hand is therewith forced violently to ſtab his owne bodie. And of them, vnleſſe (as Auguſtine ſuppoſeth) they might haue ſome ſpeciall warrant by reuelation, their fact is to be condemned, ſeeing it is not lawfull to doe euill for the auoiding of euill, nor to commit a certaine ſinne, for the ſhunning of one which is vncertaine. For what knew they but that the Lord might haue found out in the very inſtant meanes which were lawfull for the preſeruing of their chaſtitie, if not by the aſſiſtance of man, yet by changing the hearts of their perſecutors, or by ſtriking them with his immediate iudgements; as we ſee in the example of Abimelech, reſtrained by this meanes from defiling Sara, and in the Sodomites ſmitten with blindneſſe when they would haue abuſed Lots ſtrangers? Thirdly, this ſelfe-murther is thought excuſeable in caſe it proceed from an extraordinary deſire of attaining vnto the joyes of the life to come; and thus wee reade that Cleombrotus hauing read Plato his bookes of the immortalitie of the ſoule, caſt himſelfe headlong from a wall, that hee might come vnto the ioyes therein ſpecified. But vnto him we oppoſe the example of the Apoſtle Paul, who though hee earneſtly deſired to be diſſolued and to bee with Chriſt, yet hee haſtened not his owne death, but attended the Lords leiſure. And good reaſon, for he that will ſeeke to ruſh into the Bridall chamber to be partataker of that ſupper of eternall ioy, being not inuited and called by God, may iuſtly feare that he ſhall heare that ſpeach in the parable, Friend how cameſt thou in hither, not hauing on a wedding garment, but a garment imbrewed and defiled with thine owne bloud *Math.*22. 12. And he that thinketh to enter into heauen by the foule gate of ſo hainous a ſinne, doth much miſtake his way, and in all likelihood ſhall neuer haue entrance, yea rather being ſpeechleſſe and hauing nothing to anſwer in excuſe for ſo foule a fact, hee may with horror expect that terrible ſentence. Bind him hand and foote, and take him away and caſt him into vtter darknes, where ſhall bee weeping and gnaſhing of teeth. Fourthly, this murther is cauſed through deſperation, when men hauing committed ſome horrible ſinne, and being tormented with guilt and terrour of conſcience, and the apprehenſion of Gods wrath, they find their burthen ſo intolerable that they can find no reſt but in death. But this is a ſottiſh folly, when being ouer-burthened with ſin, they ſeeke eaſe by committing another notorious crime, and ſo adde to their former burthen; and in ſtead of caſting off their grieuous load, by laying it on Chriſt thorow faith, who offereth to eaſe vs if we will come vnto him, to tie it faſt vnto them by finall impenitencie, and by depriuing themſelues of all meanes of their future conuerſion. Finally, it is thought moſt excuſable when this murther is committed in zeale to Gods glorie, and in an vtter deteſtation of ſinne; as when they ſee that through their frailtie they are euery day prone to commit ſinne to Gods diſhonour, and the wounding of their owne conſciences; and therefore that Gods glory may not by their often fals bee impeached, nor their conſciences ouer-burthened, they take away their liues, that they may put an end to their ſinnes. But let ſuch know that we muſt not by diſhonoring God in the higheſt degree, preuent our diſhonouring him by infirmitie; nor by wilfull and preſumptuous ſinning, preuent ſinnes of frailtie and weakneſſe. Wee muſt not preſently doe euill, that wee may not doe euill for the time to come, nor put ſuch an end to ſinne, as will make vs die in ſinne without repentance, and for euer after diſable vs for performing the contrary duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. Finally, we muſt not vſe ſuch a meanes to free vs from ſinne, as God hath condemned and curſed; but thoſe meanes which he hath ordained for this purpoſe, as namely earneſt prayer for Gods grace, whereby wee may bee ſtrengthened againſt our corruptions, the hearing of the Word, which being made effectuall by the inward operation of Gods Spirit, bringeth vs to a true ſight and ſorrow for ſinne, and to a holy purpoſe of leauing it, that we may ſerue God in newneſſe of life. So likewiſe reading, meditation, conference, the conſideration of Gods mercies and iudgements, ſhewed both to our ſelues and others, and ſuch like.

§. Sect. 5. That neuer any of Gods Saints in former times haue haſtened their owne deaths.

So that it is vtterly vnlawfull in any caſe to commit this horrible ſin of ſelfe-murther; and therefore the Saints of God, the Patriarkes, Prophets, and Apoſtles, howſoeuer they endured many great and grieuous miſeries, afflictions, and perſecutions; many troubles of body, and ſorrowes of minde, yet neuer any of them ſhortned their dayes by laying violent hands vpon themſelues, but waited the Lords leiſure for their deliuerance; enduring the fierie triall, and fighting the Lords battels with courage and patience, till the Lord himſelfe their great Cōmander, after victory obtained, ſounded the retraite, & called them to receiue the crowne of victory promiſed to all that ouercome. Thus Iacob confeſſeth that his dayes were few and euill; but becauſe they were euill, he did not ſeeke to make them fewer, but patiently paſſed his pilgrimage vntill God called him, and gaue him entrance into and poſſeſſion of his heauenly Countrie. Thus though Dauid were continually perſecuted by his enemies, loaded with miſeries, affrighted with the terrours of the Almightie, and in his owne ſenſe forſaken of God; yet he neuer ſought eaſe, or the ſhortning of his ſorrowes, by taking away his life, but with all meekneſſe and patience waited on God for helpe and deliuerance, as he often profeſſeth. So though Iob were as miſerable as the malice of Satan could make him, and beſides all his outward griefes which were vnſpeakable, conceiued of God as of his enemy, who had ſet him vp as a mark, againſt whom hee ſhot the impoyſoned arrowes of his wrath; and though he had no reſt from theſe intolerable afflictions either day or night, yet hee would not vſe any meanes to ſhorten his life, that with it hee might put an end to his miſeries, but contrariwiſe ſharply rebuketh his wife, when as the Deuils inſtrument ſhe made but a motion which tended to that purpoſe. Finally, though the Diſciples and Apoſtles ſuffered cruell perſecution, impriſonments, whipping, ſtoning and other tortures, yea, though ſome of them had the Law of their members leading them captiue to the Law of ſinne, and the meſſenger of Sathan to buffet them; yet wee neuer read of any (notwithſtanding their aſſured hopes of future glory and happines) that by any violent meanes ſhortned their owne liues, but rather according to their maſters commandement, being perſecuted in one Citie, they did flee vnto another, and preſerued their liues as long as they lawfully could, that they might be ſeruiceable to God and his Church, by aduancing his glory in their ſaluation. And therefore let vs follow their example as good precedents, ſeeking all good meanes for the preſeruing of our liues; and abhorring the contrary practice of ſelfe-murtherers; and that the rather, becauſe wee reade of none but ſuch as we would be loth to reſemble, who haue beene guiltie of their owne deaths. As for example hypocriticall Saul, who was a man forſaken of God, and deſtitute of all true goodneſſe; curſed Achitophel, and treacherous Iudas the betrayers of their Maſters, wicked Nero, vnjuſt Pilate, and ſuch like, whoſe liues as they were moſt wicked and worthily odious, ſo ought their deaths to be vnto euery Chriſtian moſt hatefull and abominable.

§. Sect. 6. The example of Sampſon, Ionas, Razis obiected and anſwered.

But againſt this is vſually objected, firſt the example of Sampſon, who did willingly pull downe the houſe vpon his owne, and the Philiſtims heads, who notwithſtanding is, by the Apoſtle numbred among the faithfull. To which I anſwere, that this fact of Sampſon was altogether extraordinary; in which hee was particularly guided by the ſpeciall counſell of God, and ſtrengthened by his Spirit, for the atchieuing of this enterpriſe, entended for the deliuerance of Gods people, and deſtruction of his enemies; that therein hee might be a liuely type of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt, who by his death ouercame all the enemies of our ſaluation. And this appeareth by his prayer, made vnto God, for the reſtoring of his ſtrength, which for his ſinne was taken from him; for which prayer he had ſome ground by ſpeciall reuelation from God, ſeeing otherwiſe it could not haue beene made in faith; as alſo in that God heard his prayer, and gaue vnto him power and might for the accompliſhing of this fact, that ſo hee might take reuenge on his owne, and the Churches enemies. Secondly, the example of Ionas is objected, who appointed the Mariners to caſt him into the Sea, for the ſtilling of the tempeſt. To which the anſwere is eaſie; for Ionas was a Prophet, who might by the ſpirit of prophecie haue this reuealed vnto him, that it was the will and counſell of God, who in this would alſo haue him to be a type of his Sonne, as our Sauiour applieth it. And beſides, he ſaw this will of God manifeſted in his workes, ſeeing he had, for his ſake, ſent ſuch a tempeſt, as could by no other meanes bee quieted; and therefore when after all meanes vſed, he ſaw that it could be no otherwiſe, hee commanded them to caſt him into the Sea; not therein ayming at his owne deſtruction, which if he could, he would haue auoided; but at the preſeruation of his company, pany, whom he was loath ſhould periſh for his ſinne. Thirdly, the example of Ranis is alleaged, who hauing killed himſelfe to auoid the tyranny of Nicanor, is in the booke of the Maccabees, commended for this fact. To which I anſwere, that this booke is not Canonicall Scripture, and conſequently of no authoritie, where it is contrary to the holy Word of God; as it is in this particular, ſeeing it commẽdeth a fact, which is ſo often in the booke of God condemned: So that the commendation of this ſelfe-murtherer addeth no grace to him, but rather diſgraceth the commender, who ſpeaketh not out of true judgement, but out of his liking of carnall and ill-guided valour. For then are we called to ſuffer captiuitie, reproach or any diſgrace, when God granteth not vnto vs lawfull meanes, whereby wee may auoid them, among which ſelfe-murder cannot be numbred. And thus doth Auſtine eleuate, and lightly eſteeme the authoritie of this author, when as the Donatiſts ſought to juſtifie this fact of ſelfe-murther by this example, where he ſaith, that the Iewes did not eſteeme this booke of Maccabees, as being of like authoritie with the Law and the Prophets, to which God giueth teſtimony, as to his owne witneſſes, &c. but it is not vnprofitably receiued of the Church, if it be with ſobrietie read or heard; namely, to ſtirre vp Chriſtians by the example of the Macchabees who ſuffered ſo much for the Law, to ſuffer much more with conſtancie and patience for the Name of Chriſt, ſeeing their preſent ſufferings are not worthy the glory that ſhall be reuealed. So in the ſame place he ſharply cenſureth this fact of Razias, to bee more wonderfull then wiſe. And yet not very admirable in reſpect of true valour, and Chriſtian fortitude, which is alwayes guided by diuine wiſdome ſhining in the Word of God; For (as hee ſaith elſewhere) what great wonder is it, if being tainted with haughtie pride, hee deſired rather to kill himſelfe with his own hand, then after all that great honour which hee had in the ſight of his people, he would ſuffer a diſhonourable ſeruitude in the hands of his enemies? And afterwards; this Razias was far from the practice of thoſe words, where it is read: Whatſoeuer commeth vnto thee, receiue it patiently, ſuſtaine thy ſelfe in thy griefe, and haue patience in thy humiliation. And therefore this man was not wiſe in chuſing this death, but impatient of carrying himſelfe humbly. It is written that hee would die nobly and manfully, but doth it hereof follow, that he died wiſely? &c. And againe: This fact of his was great, but not therefore good; for euery thing is not good which is great, becauſe there are alſo great euils. God hath ſaid, Thou ſhalt not kill the iuſt and innocent; If therefore hee were not innocent and iuſt, why ſhould he be propounded for imitation? And if hee were iuſt and innocent, why was hee a murtherer of one who was innocent and iuſt? Laſtly, the ſpeech of the Apoſtle is objected, if I giue my body to be burned, and haue not charitie, it is nothing; therefore it is inferred, that if it be joyned with charitie, it is commendable to giue a mans bodie to be burned, and conſequently to bee the cauſe of his owne death. I anſwere, firſt, that this in their ſenſe is impoſſible, ſeeing hee who doth ſo, hath no true charitie towards himſelfe. Secondly, they wreſt the words of the Apoſtle who thus take them, for they are not to bee vnderſtood of a voluntary caſting a mans ſelfe into the fire, but of a voluntary yeelding a mans body into the hands of Tyrants and Perſecutors to bee burned, rather then hee will denie Chriſt, and the profeſſion of the Goſpell. And thus the three Children gaue themſelues to bee burned, that is, rather yeelded to be burned by Nebuchadnezzar, then they would worſhip his Image; and ſo Chriſt is ſaid to haue giuen himſelfe to bee crucified, when he was content to yeeld himſelfe to the rage of his enemies, to be crucified by them, that he might by his death perfect the worke of our redemption.

§. Sect.7.
That the ſelfe-murtherer ſinneth hainouſly againſt God.

And thus haue I ſhewed, that ſelfe-murder is in no caſe lawfull or excuſable. Now in the next place I will proue, that it is not only barely vnlawfull, but a notorious and moſt hainous ſinne, to the end that it may be vnto all Chriſtians execrable and abominable. For he who committeth this ſelfe-murder ſinneth grieuouſly, both againſt God, his neighbour and himſelfe. Againſt God, and that both the whole Trinitie joyntly, and alſo againſt euery perſon ſeuerally. And firſt they ſinne againſt God by wilfull tranſgreſſing, and violating his Law, and that both the Law of Nature written in euery ones heart, which requireth that euery man ſhould carefully vſe all good meanes for the preſeruing of his life, and auoid all contrary dangers which might hurt and ſhorten it: and alſo the Law written in the Tables of ſtone by the finger of God; which indefinitely forbiddeth all murther: Thou ſhalt not kill; that is, neither thy ſelfe, nor thy neighbour. For if it be a hainous ſin to kill another; it is much more hainous to kill a mans ſelfe; for the Law and rule of charitie, whereby a man loueth another, is to bee ſquared and proportioned according to that charity, whereby a man loueth himſelfe. If therfore murthering of a mans neighbour be ſo often condemned for ſuch an hainous, and abominable ſinne in the ſight of God, as that it doth with the guilt thereof, not onely defile the partie by whom it is committed, but alſo the whole Land where it is not puniſhed, then how much more hainous and outragious is this ſelfe-murther, which more highly violateth this Law of Charitie? Secondly, they grieuouſly ſinne againſt God in violating his Image in which they are created; for if it bee treaſon vnto an earthly Prince, to offer violence againſt his dead Image, painted on a Table, or ſtamped in his Coine; then how much more hainous treaſon doe they commit againſt the glorious Maieſtie of the King of Kings, who deface, and wilfully violate that liuing Image of God, in which they were created? And this reaſon the Lord rendereth, why he will not let this horrible ſinne of murther goe without ſeuere puniſhment: Who ſo (ſaith hee) ſheddeth mans bloud, by man ſhall his bloud be ſhead, for in the Image of God hath hee made man. Finally, they ſinne againſt God, as hee is Lord of Hoaſts, and ſupreame Maſter and Gouernour of Heauen and Earth. For he hath appointed vnto euery one of his Souldiers, in the Church Militant, his ſtation and ſtanding wherein he is to fight manfully againſt the enemies of our ſaluation, til the Lord himſelfe, who placed him there, do call him away, and by death ſound the retrait; that ſo hauing finiſhed his warfare, and obtained victory, he may receiue the crowne of euerlaſting glory. And if any man, either becauſe he is wearie of the fight, or for cowardly feare of the enemy, or becauſe hee doubteth of his Lords power or will to defend him, will leaue his ſtanding and flie away, or kill himſelfe for feare of the encounter; he diſhonoureth his Lord, betrayeth his cauſe, diſcourageth his fellow-ſouldiers, and as much as in him lieth, by making this breach, and leauing his place vnmanned, giueth the ſpirituall enemies of our ſaluation an eaſie entrance, for the ſurpriſing the Citie of God, the Church Militant. The Lord as Maſter of the Family hath appointed vnto euery one their labour, and the time alſo, how long they muſt continue at their work; and therefore if any will giue ouer, his buſineſſe before he is called from it by his Lord, he hath little hope to receiue his wages. Yea, if he deſperately kill himſelfe, rather then he will indure the paines of his maſters ſeruice, hee ſhall not ſcape without heauie puniſhment, ſeeing he much diſhonoureth his Lord, in making him ſo hard a Maſter, that he had rather die then doe him ſeruice; and accuſeth him of the greateſt crueltie, in that hee impoſeth vpon his ſeruants ſuch an intolerable taske, that it is better for them to die, then to ſuſtaine their labour; whereas in truth it is not the greatneſſe of their paines, but the ſmalneſſe of their patience; not becauſe they are ouer-burthened by God, but becauſe they haue by their frowardneſſe and waywardneſſe, ſo enfeebled themſelues, that they can beare nothing. Finally, we are by our great Land-lord placed, as tenants at will, in theſe houſes of clay; and therefore if it be vnlawfull for Tenants to pull downe, and deſtroy their earthly habitations, without the Lords conſent and approbation, and if they doe, they violate the Law, and giue him cauſe of a iuſt action againſt them; how much more vnlawfull it is for any to deſtroy this houſe of their bodie, contrarie to the expreſſe command of our great Land-lord, and to pull his building down to the ground, thereby making themſelues liable to a fearefull action, or rather inditement, which (if they bee found guiltie) concerneth them no leſſe, then the loſſe of their ſoules, and their euerlaſting impriſonment, in the Goale of Hell.

And as they many wayes offend againſt God the Father, and the whole Trinitie; ſo in more ſpeciall manner againſt our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt. For he hath with no leſſe price then his moſt precious bloud ranſomed and redeemed vs, that being freed from all our ſpirituall enemies, we might become his ſeruants. So as being bought with a price, we are no more our owne, but his who hath thus dearely paid for vs, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; and therefore what haue we to do to kill another mans ſeruant? Why ſhould wee thus defraud him of that ſeruice which is due vnto him by law of redemption? Why ſhould wee bee ſo vnthankfull, as to chuſe rather to die, then we will performe that ſeruice which he requireth, ſeeing he was content to die, to free vs out of the captiuitie of Satan, and that firſt ſeruing him in earth, we might after raigne with him in Heauen? Or how ſhall we eſcape his heauy indignation, and fearfull condemnation, in the Day of his appearing, when wee are ſo impatient of ſeruing him in the ſpirituall conflict, that if wee may not ſerue him in that manner which our ſelues deſire, we had rather die, then wee would ſubmit our ſelues vnto his will, and bee at his appointment? Vnleſſe wee would foolishly imagine, that our tentations and trials come vnto vs by chance, and are not diſpoſed of by his all-ruling power, and all-ſeeing prouidence. Againe, we offend againſt our Sauiour Chriſt by this ſelfe-murther, in offering violence to his myſticall body; for being members thereof, and (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) of his fleſh and bones, what doe we by deſtroying our ſelues, but make a maime (as much as in vs lieth) in his glorious body? As therefore the Apoſtle reaſoneth, to make whoredome abominable, Shall I take the members of Chriſt and make them the members of an Harlot? ſo let vs reaſon againſt this ſelfe-murther; Should I take the members of Chriſt, and by deſtroying them rent them from his glorious body. And ſhould I in the ſame act, (as much as in me lieth) draw in my Sauiour to be both an agent and patient in this horrible ſinne of murther? God forbid.

1.Cor.6.15.

Finally,

§. Sect. 9.
That the ſelfe-murtherer ſinneth againſt the holy ſpirit, and his gifts & ſauing graces.

Finally, they ſin directly againſt the Holy Ghoſt the ſanctifier, in oppoſing againſt his actions and operations; for his office is to ſanctifie, but they defile themſelues with their owne bloud; he preſerueth them by his holy directions, that as pure and vnblameable they may be offered vp vnto God; but they pollute their ſoules with deſperate wickedneſſe, and make them guiltie of the horribleſt kind of murther. Againe, we are (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) the Temples of the Holy Ghoſt in which hee dwelleth; & therefore what doe they who kill themſelues but race & ruinate Gods owne habitation, thruſt him out of his lodging, and (as it were) pull downe his houſe ouer his head? whereby as they commit an hainous ſin, ſo doe they ſubiect themſelues to a fearefull puniſhment. For (as the Apoſtle ſaith) if any man deſtroy the Temple of God, him ſhall God deſtroy. But moſt grieuouſly doe theſe ſelfe-murtherers ſinne againſt the ſanctifying gifts and graces of Gods holy Spirit, as againſt knowledge whereby they are inlightened; which hath reuealed vnto them the infiniteneſſe of Gods mercies, the all-ſufficiencie of Chriſts merits; Gods wiſe diſpoſing of all things, though they ſeeme neuer ſo hurtfull, to the good of all who louing him, doe reſigne themſelues ouer to be guided by his will; and the horribleneſſe of this ſinne of ſelfe-murther. Againſt faith, which aſſureth vs that God will ſuffer no man to be tempted aboue his power, but will giue a good iſſue vnto the tentation, if wee will truſt and depend vpon him. That he who reſiſteth the Deuill ſhall put him to flight; that he who fighteth vnto the end ſhall ſurely ouercome, and obtaine the crowne of victory; whereas they deſpaire of a good iſſue and of withſtanding the encounters of Sathan, and therefore ſhamefully yeeld, being content to murther themſelues at his appointment, to preuent further miſchiefe. In the ſame reſpects alſo they ſinne and offend againſt aſſiance and hope in God diſtruſting his promiſed aſſiſtance (as though hee either meant to falſifie his word, and would not, or were impotent in power, and could not defend them in all their troubles and trials) and caſting away all hope of eaſe and comfort, doe end their dayes in fearefull deſperation. So alſo againſt true fortitude and Chriſtian magnanimitie, which reſting vpon God, valiantly endureth the aſſault, till it hath obtained a finall victorie; and cowardly faint vpon a cauſeleſſe feare, & yeeld themſelues ouer into the hands of their enemies, who could not poſſibly by any other meanes obtaine the victorie. Finally, they offend againſt patience, which endureth all in aſſurance of reward; and make their burthen much more intolerable, by their waiwardneſſe and froward ſtrugling, then it is in it owne waight. And the like might be ſaid of the reſt of Gods ſanctifying graces: but theſe ſhall ſuffice.

Iames 4.7.

§. Sect. 10.
That the ſelfe-murtherer ſinneth grieuouſly againſt his neighbours.

And thus the ſelfe-murtherer ſinneth moſt hainouſly againſt God: hee offendeth alſo grieuouſly againſt his neighbours; and that both particular perſons, and alſo whole ſocieties, as the family, Church and Common-wealth, whereof he is a member. Hee ſinneth againſt particular men by his euill example, eſpecially if he haue beene ſuch an one as hath beene of any credit for his former life and conuerſation; for others ſo afflicted and through like impatiencie weary of their burthen, are much heartned and incouraged to follow the ſame practice, that ſo (as they falſely imagine) they may put an end vnto all their miſeries. In which reſpect as they were at their laſt departure guiltie of that horrible ſin of murthering themſelues; ſo are they euen after their death the cauſes of murthering others. But more principally they offend againſt their neere kindred, by robbing them of their friends, eſpecially if they depend vpon them for the meanes of their maintenance, as when they are their parents or patrons. In which caſe they expoſe them to want and miſerie, and mooue them through diſcontent (if they be not preuented by Gods grace) to follow their example. Or though they ſtand not in theſe termes of dependancie, yet doe they much wrong them by oppreſſing their friends hearts with griefe and ſorrow; not only in regard of their owne loſſe, whereby they are depriued of their friendſhip and ſocietie; but alſo in reſpect of their loſſe who haue made wilfull ſhipwracke of their liues, and, for ought that any man can judge, of their ſaluation. So that whereas in naturall deaths they only bewaile their temporary ſeparation, becauſe of their aſſured hope of meeting; in this caſe of ſelfe-murther they no otherwiſe lament them, then as vtterly loſt and periſhed. Finally, by making ſuch a wicked end they confound their friends with ſhame, & leaue vnto them as a legacie a ſhare of their reproch. For if it be a diſgrace and blemiſh to a neere Kinſman, in regard that they are ſo conjoyned in the bond of conſanguinitie, to haue his Father or Mother, Siſter or Brother, Wife or Daughter, come to a ſhamefull end, and to bee executed as Traitours, murtherers, or Felons, though it be by courſe of juſtice inflicted as a puniſhment (notwithſtanding that it is oftentimes a meanes to bring them to repentance, which is alwayes accompanied with the eternall ſaluation of their ſoules) then how much more reprochfull is it vnto them, when as not being able to beare their wickedneſſe, they become moſt vnjuſtly their owne executioners, dying in the very committing of ſuch an horrible ſin, without any likelihood of repentance, and ending their dayes in horror & deſperation?

Laſtly, they ſin againſt Societies, as againſt the family whereof they are members, which they defile with their bloud; againſt the Church, in making a rent in that bodie, and in diſgracing of their holy profeſſion of religion; for it is not vnuſuall for worldlings to cenſure their ouer-much ſtudying of the Scriptures, their hearing of the Word, and their ouer-much buſying themſelues in queſtions of Diuinitie, as the cauſes which haue brought them to this fearefull ſelfe-murther, wherein as they giue occaſion to wicked men to blaſpheme Gods Truth, and in that reſpect are acceſſary to their ſin: ſo doe they expoſe that true religion which they profeſſe to their ſlanders and calumniations. In regard whereof (like excommunicate perſons) they are debarred of the priuiledges of buriall, which ordinarily belong to other Chriſtians: for their corps are not ſuffered to be laid in the vſuall places, nor carried to the graue in a decent and comely manner; but are reproachfully caſt into an hole by the high-way ſide, or common field, with ſome marke or ſigne of diſgrace affixed to them, to giue occaſion vnto the paſſers by, to ſpeak by way of deteſtation of their horrible crime. To conclude, they ſin alſo againſt the Common-wealth in depriuing it of a mẽber, & their King of a ſubject, which might haue done them ſeruice. For recompence of which detriment, their goods are vſually confiſcate, to the vſe of the Weale-publike, and alienated from the vſe of their heires and executors.

§. Sect. 11.
That the ſelfe-murtherer ſinneth moſt hainouſly againſt himſelfe: and firſt by defiling his ſoule with ſinne.

But as they ſinne againſt all others among whom they liue; ſo moſt of all againſt themſelues, both by making their ſoules guiltie of horrible ſinne, and alſo obnoxious and ſubject to moſt grieuous puniſhments. For firſt they ſinne moſt vnnaturally againſt that naturall loue and affection which euery one beareth vnto his owne perſon, whereby hee thinketh himſelf bound by all good means to preſerue his life, & to aduance the good both of his body and ſoule; and to auoid carefully all perils and dangers which might bring vnto him any hurt. Yea ſo doth this loue naturally preuaile in man, that he deſireth rather to be any thing, then not to be, and to ſpend his dayes in miſery, rather then to end them by immature death, if he be not otherwiſe inclined by his heauenly hopes, and aſſurance of bettering his preſent condition. And this naturall affection which man hath for the preſeruing of his life, Satan was well acquainted with, and therefore he ſaith vnto the Lord; Skin for skin, and all that euer a man hath will he giue for his life. Yea this naturall loue and deſire of preſeruing life is in the very beaſts & vnreaſonable creatures; and therefore that man who ſeeketh to deſtroy himſelfe and haſten his owne death, is herein more ſenſeleſſe and deſtitute of vnderſtanding then the brutiſh creatures. But much more hainouſly doe they ſinne againſt that ſpirituall loue, which euery Chriſtian ought to beare to the ſaluation of his ſoule, whileſt they make themſelues guiltie of a moſt hainous crime, which is (as it were) a miſhapen monſter compounded of many ſins: as namely helliſh pride, which will not let them ſtoope vnder Gods afflicting hand; impatiencie, whereby they murmure and repine againſt his prouidence, and will not ſubmit themſelues to be ruled according to his good will and pleaſure; horrible deſperation, whereby they caſt aſide all hope of mercie; as if the goodneſſe of God, and infinitenes of his mercies, and Chriſts merits, were farre exceeded by their ſinnes; and moſt bloudie crueltie, whereby they become their owne butchers and executioners. In which laſt reſpect, he that killeth himſelfe is to be judged a much more hainous offender, then he who killeth another mã: for if he be juſtly thought a much more wicked murtherer, who killeth his Kinſman or friend, then he who killeth a ſtranger; and among parricides hee be moſt wicked, who killeth his neereſt Kinſman, as his brother, father, or childe; then how is his ſinne out of meaſure ſinfull, who becommeth his owne murtherer, ſeeing there is no man ſo neere vnto him as he is vnto himſelfe? Neither doth it make any matter at all, whether he be ſinfull and hath deſerued death, or innocent and hath not deſerued it; for no man is allowed in this caſe to be his owne judge or executioner. And in both reſpects he alike ſinneth againſt his owne ſoule; for the more innocent he is; the more hainouſly he offendeth in murthering an innocent; the more hainous ſinner he is, the more deſperately he ſinneth againſt his owne ſoule, by this ſelfe-murther, ſeeing hee taketh away all hope of repentance, and conſequently of remiſſion and ſaluation. And in this regard hee who committeth this ſelfe-murther moſt highly and hainouſly, ſinneth againſt his owne perſon; in that hee maketh himſelfe guiltie of a moſt grieuous ſinne, and taketh away the meanes whereby he might be cured of it. As if a man ſhould inflict into his bodie a deadly wound, and then deſperatly caſt away the cloth that ſhould binde it vp, and keepe him from bleeding to death; and the ſalue wherewith, if it were applied, it might be healed. For whereas the only condition of the couenant of grace is faith and repentance, which being performed; aſſureth vs of pardon and forgiueneſſe, and being neglected leaueth no hope of mercie, they who lay violent hands vpon their owne bodie, at the ſame inſtant make themſelues guiltie of an horrible ſinne, and diſable themſelues for performing this condition of beleeuing in Chriſt, and repenting of their ſinne, hauing no time left after the committing of this crime for the performance of theſe duties. therefore is this ſin of ſelfe-murther againſt his owne perſon that committeth it, ſeeing, as it were, with one ſtroke hee murthereth both his bodie and ſoule, and at once depriueth himſelfe of all the comforts which either concerne this life, or the life to come.

econdly, the lf-murthered raweth vpon imſelfe intoerable puiſhments.

And hereby alſo it appeareth that they who murther themſelues, doe moſt grieuouſly ſinne againſt their owne ſoules; in that they do not only defile them with abominable ſinne, euen then when they muſt appeare before God; but alſo doe draw vpon them moſt intolerable puniſhments. For not onely they inflict vpon themſelues that capitall puniſhment of a temporary death, but alſo caſt bodie and ſoule (as it were) head-long into the flames of Hell. Which if men would but throughly conſider, they would abhorre this abominable ſinne, if not for it ſelfe, yet at leaſt for feare of future puniſhment. And when the Deuill and their owne impatiencie ſhould moue them to commit it, that thereby being rid out of the World, they might haue an end of their preſent miſeries; they would eaſily withſtand theſe tentations as abſurd and ſottiſh: for what folly and madneſſe is it for a man to draw vpon himſelfe a farre greater puniſhment, that hee may be eaſed of a leſſer? to drinke the full vials of Gods wrath, that hee may not a little taſte them? to be ſo impatient of the heat of the Sunne, as to leape into the fire for eaſe? to acquit himſelfe of light and momentany afflictions, which if hee bore them with patience would turne to his good, by running head-long into thoſe horrible torments which are intolerable, and yet euerlaſting? to exchange (that they may finde eaſe) the miſeries of the the World, in which the deareſt children of God haue their ſhare and part, for the dreadfull fire of Hell prepared only for the Deuill and the damned? Yea but they may repent of their ſinne in the very act, and ſo obtaine remiſſion, and with it ſaluation. I will not deny but that if they doe attaine vnto vnfained repentance, and lay hold vpon Chriſt, by a liuely faith, they ſhall receiue pardon, and finde mercie, though it bee in the very houre of death; for Gods promiſes are indefinite, and limited vnto no time, ſo wee performe the condition which he requireth. But this I ſay, that if any man preſume to commit this horrible ſinne in hope of this repentance and mercy, it is ten thouſand to one he ſhall neuer attaine vnto them. For what hope haue they to repent at the laſt inſtant, when the agony and pangs of death are vpon them (which vſually depriue men of their memory, and the vſe of their vnderſtanding) who could not performe this dutie as they ought in their perfect health? Beſides, wee haue not repentance at our owne command, but it is the free gift of God, which he beſtoweth on whom hee will, and therefore what hope can they haue of obtaining it, who commit ſuch a fearefull ſinne, preſuming to haue repentance at their pleaſure, and ſo adding vnto their fearefull ſinnes of murther and deſperation, moſt vaine confidence, and audacious preſumption. And if there be yet any hope, who in his right wits would not rather indure the age of the longeſt liuer, all the torments and miſeries which the moſt wittie and malicious Tyrant could inuent, then to hazard the eternall ſaluation of his ſoule vpon ſo tickle and vnlikely a point, eſpecially if we adde vnto the former difficulties the Deuils powerfull and malicious buſineſſe in finiſhing that which he hath begun, and in keeping them from riſing by repentance, whom he hath ouerthrowne and plunged into theſe moſt hainous ſinnes.

§. Sect. 13. Whether wee are to judge all ſelfe-murtherers to be condemned.

But ſhall wee then conclude, that all who fall into this ſinne of ſelfe-murther are condemned? what ſhall we then thinke of ſome who haue led an holy and vnblameable life, and haue ſhewed many euident ſignes of their election, and yet through the violence of Satans tentations haue fallen into this grieuous ſinne of ſelfe-murther? I anſwere, let the ſecret things belong vnto God, and finall judgement to the Iudge of Heauen and Earth. As I may not juſtifie the wicked, ſo may I not condemne another mans ſeruant, let them ſtand or fall to their owne maſter. I dare not ſay that they are damned, becauſe of their holy life; I dare not ſay they are ſaued, becauſe of their ſinfull death. But leauing vnto the Lord his royall prerogatiue, whereby he may ſhew mercie where he will, and make that poſſible, yea eaſie, which is difficult and impoſſible vnto men; I ſee no hope by any thing which God hath reueiled, that any man, what ſhew of pietie ſoeuer hee hath made, ſhould attaine vnto ſaluation, if being in his right minde, vpon his owne free choice, after mature deliberation, he reſolue to commit this horrible ſinne, and ſo periſh in the very act; and eſpecially if to his ſinne of murther, he adde that fearefull ſinne of preſumption; therefore falling into this wickedneſſe, becauſe before hand he preſumeth that hee ſhall repent, and ſo obtaine mercie and forgiueneſſe. But on the other ſide, I dare not judge al thoſe to be cōdemned who hauing lead a godly life, doe after theſe good premiſes make ſuch a bad concluſion. For there are ſome (that the infinite riches of Gods mercie may appeare, to the praiſe of the glorie of his grace) who haue liued for a time after their deaths wound inflicted, and haue had time not only to repent, but alſo to manifeſt vnto the World their vnfained repentance, not only in generall for all their ſinnes, but alſo in particular, and that more ſeriouſly for this ſelfe-murther. There are ſome alſo through abundance of melancholy diſtracted of their wits, who vpon no ſet-led purpoſe, or willing choice, but in a ſudden paſſion, being affrighted and terrified with Satans tentations, doe run head-long into this ſin, not knowing what they doe; of whom there is the ſame judgement, that is, of thoſe who die in lunacie, frenzie, or rauing in ſome burning Ague, not caring what they either ſpeake or doe. And finally there are ſome, who for their ſinnes, and to manifeſt Gods righteous judgement in puniſhing of them, are giuen ouer vnto Satan to haue this temporary affliction of death inflicted on them; whom (after that hee hath receiued this commiſſion) he affrighteth with his terrors, vrgeth with his powerfull commands, and carrieth head-long with the violence of his tentations, which being vnreſiſtable leaue no free choice behind them of eſcaping that deſtruction which he hath prepared for them. In all which Satan is the principall cauſe of this cruell murther, and the parties his bare inſtruments whom he ruleth, not without force and violence. And therefore as hauing power giuen of God ouer the Swine, he entred into them, and carried them head-long into the Sea, making their owne legs to ſerue as the inſtruments of that deſtruction which their natures abhorred: ſo if for their ſinnes he ſhould haue this liberty granted vnto him by God ouer any of the faithfull, to inflict vpon them this temporarie judgement of death, hee is able to make their hands or legs or other members of their bodie his inſtruments for their ruine and deſtruction, though both their nature, and regenerate part doe exceedingly abhorre it.

Matth.8.32.

§. Sect. 14. Of the meanes whereby wee may be preſerued againſt this fearefull ſinne of ſelfe-murther, firſt we muſt auoid the cauſes thereof.

But this as I ſaid is no comfort or encouragement vnto thoſe who being in their right minde, doe through pride or impatiencie, vpon deliberation and free choice, murther themſelues, that they may be freed from ſome miſeries, loſſes or diſgraces which they will not beare and out-liue; who haue no ground for any aſſurance of pardon and ſaluation, but their owne preſumption, which being a ſinne as hainous as the other, doth but increaſe Gods wrath, and adde to the meaſure of their fearefull condemnation. And therefore that all men may be preſerued from this ſinne, and ſo eſcape thoſe heauie judgements, I will in the laſt place propound ſome means to helpe them in this endeuour. And firſt, they who would not fall into this ſinne, muſt auoid the cauſes thereof before mentioned, as namely, pride which maketh men diſcontent, when their eſtate doth not euery way anſwere to their high deſires; and labour after true humility which maketh men content with any condition, as being better then in their owne judgement they deſerue; and to ſubmit themſelues in all things to Gods good will and pleaſure, as knowing better then they what is good and profitable for them; and being readie in his infinite loue to order all things ſo, as that they may further the ſaluation of their ſoules. They muſt alſo flie impatiencie which maketh euery light burthen intolerable; and labour patiently to ſubmit themſelues to bee ruled by Gods good prouidence, aſſuring themſelues that nothing befalleth them but by his diſpoſing; who will order all things ſo (if they will truſt and depend vpon him) as that they ſhall turne to their good; and when they ſeeme almoſt conſumed with the fire of his wrath, and the heat of affliction, it ſhall tend but to the purifying and purging of them from the droſſe of their ſinnes, that like pure gold they be fit for his his heauenly treaſury. They muſt arme themſelues againſt doubting and deſperation, and vſe all good meanes to attaine vnto a liuely faith, grounding their aſſurance of mercie & ſaluation, not vpon their owne workes and worthineſſe, which will fall away like the ſand in the day of tentation, and moſt faile them when they moſt reſt vpon them; but vpon Gods infinite goodneſſe and free grace, and vpon the all-ſufficiencie of Chriſts merits and ſatisfaction, which will continue a firme foundation for our faith to reſt vpon, when our vnworthineſſe and want of deſert doe moſt diſcourage vs. They muſt take heed of exerciſing crueltie towards others, and endeuour to haue tender hearts full of loue, pitie and compaſſion, and ſo ſhall they bee more apt to exerciſe theſe graces towardes themſelues, and more hardly drawne to offer violence and outrage againſt their owne perſons. Finally, they muſt carefully ſhunne all manner of ſin, eſpecially hainous crimes committed againſt their knowledge and conſcience; which doe wound and weaken faith, and make them doubt and deſpaire of Gods loue and fauour, or if through infirmitie or the violence of their paſſions and corruptions, they haue fallen into any ſuch ſin, they muſt ſpeedily and ſeriouſly repent of them; that ſo they may be blotted out of Gods remembrance, and no more be matter of accuſation in their owne conſciences. For ſo long as we lie in ſins vnrepented of, he may in his righteous judgement make vs to become our owne executioners, or deliuer vs ouer vnto the power and malice of Satan, who can eaſily make vs the readie inſtruments of our owne ruine.

Rom.8.28.

§. Sect. 15. Of other meanes to keepe all from ſelfe-murther.

The ſecond meanes is that we meditate of the hainouſneſſe of this ſin, as before it hath beene deſcribed, and of the greatneſſe of the puniſhment; and by reaſon of them both, of the deſperateneſſe of their condition who fall into it. And then thinke with our ſelues, that though our eſtate be neuer ſo wretched, either in reſpect of our ſins or puniſhments; either in regard of our externall or internall afflictions, there is ſome hope of deliuerance, if we will carefully vſe the meanes ordained by God, and waite his leiſure for his helpe and bleſſing; or that both in our bodies and ſoules wee ſhould endure all the miſeries which are incident vnto mankinde in this life; yet in time they will haue an end, yea in compariſon ſhortly and within a while: whereas contrariwiſe if through pride and impatiencie wee lay violent hands vpon our ſelues, we are vtterly hopeleſſe and helpleſſe, and in a moſt fearefull and deſperate eſtate; caſting our ſelues head-long into Hell and deſtruction, from which there is no redemption, no comfort and refreſhing; no place to repentance or hope of mercie, or end of intolerable torments. Thirdly, when our minds are fild with horrors & fears, our conſciences ouer-burthened with ſin, and when wee are aſſaulted with ſuch tentations of Satan as wee cannot anſwere, wee muſt in any caſe take heed that out of a fooliſh ſhamefaſtneſſe and proud feare of being diſgraced, we doe not ſeeke to ſmother and keepe it ſecret vnto our ſelues; which were no other then like freſh-water ſouldiers to ſuffer our ſelues to bee ſurprized and ouerthrowne by our mightie enemies, because we would not haue our Captaine diſcouer our weakneſſe and want of skill: but wee muſt ſeeke for helpe and comfort, counſell and aſſiſtance from Gods faithfull Miniſters, or ſome other wiſe and able Chriſtians, laying open our ſinnes which ouer-burthen our conſciences, making knowne our ſtate in all particulars, and diſcouering thoſe ſubtill tentations of Satan, which wee cannot anſwere, or with which we are inceſſantly vexed, chuſing rather to ſhame our ſelues in this life, then to haue our faces couered with ſhame and confuſion in the day of Gods appearing. Finally, we muſt often haue our recourſe vnto God by feruent and effectuall prayer, crauing his bleſſing vpon all theſe meanes vſed, and deſiring him that hee will not lead vs into tentation, but deliuer vs from euill; that hee will rebuke Satan, and not ſuffer him to haue any power ouer vs for our deſtruction, that he will ſtrengthen vs againſt all his aſſaults, and giue vs a good iſſue out of theſe tentations, grounding our faith in theſe our petitions on his moſt gracious promiſes, that hee will not ſuffer vs to bee tempted aboue our power; and that if we call vpon him in the day of our trouble he will deliuer vs, that we may glorifie him. And ſo will hee manifeſt his power in our weakneſſe, giue Satan a repulſe and ouerthrow, and vs ſtrength to endure his encounters; and howſoeuer he may deferre for a time to free vs from theſe troubles, for his owne glory and our good, yet wee may aſſure our ſelues, and bee certainly perſwaded that in the end wee ſhall haue helpe and deliuerance, joy in the Holy Ghoſt, victory ouer our enemies, and the crowne of victory euerlaſting glory, which hee hath promiſed to all thoſe who ouercome.

Chap. III.

Anſweres to thoſe tentations of Satan whereby he perſwadeth carnall men to preſume, and true Chriſtians to doubt of Gods loue.

§. Sect. 1. That Satans tentations impugne all the cauſes and meanes of our ſaluation.

ANd thus much concerning thoſe tentations of Satan, which are vnreaſonable, and the meanes whereby the weake Chriſtian may be armed againſt them: now we are to ſpeake of the other ſort, for the enforcing whereof he pretendeth reaſon, and alleageth many arguments and teſtimonies, that hee may hinder vs from entring into, or diuert vs out of the courſe of Chriſtianitie, and make the meanes of our ſaluation altogether vneffectuall and vnprofitable. Where firſt we are to conſider that theſe tentations of Satan are not alwayes one and the ſame, neither impugne one or two points alone of our faith and religion; but as the cauſes and the meanes of our ſaluation are manifold, ſo alſo doth hee gather manifold objections againſt euery one of them, if they truly appertaine vnto vs, that ſo hee may impugne and race our faith; or elſe doth fill vs with vaine preſumption, perſwading vs that all the cauſes and meanes of ſaluation concurre together in vs, when as in truth wee are void and deſtitute of them all. Let vs therefore conſider of the ſeuerall cauſes of our ſaluation, and obſerue what tentations Satan ſuggeſteth in our minds againſt euery one of them. The firſt and principall cauſe of our ſaluation is Gods eternall loue and immutable good will, wherewith he hath loued his creatures from before the foundations of the World were laid; the which loue and good will in himſelfe did moue him to elect them to ſaluation, whom hee ſo loued without any deſerts in themſelues: for how could they deſerue any thing at Gods hand before they were? or what good could the Lord foreſee in them, but that which in his eternall counſell hee purpoſed to beſtow and impart vnto them? Firſt therefore wee will ſpeake of thoſe tentations which concerne the loue of God towards vs, which are of two ſorts; the firſt leading vs to vaine preſumption and carnall ſecuritie; the other, to horror and deſperation. For if Satan ſee men liuing in carnall ſecuritie, & frozen in the dregs of their ſins, ſo as in truth there is no true ſigne that they are beloued of God; hee will perſwade them that they are highly in his fauour and loue, and therefore though they runne on in their wicked courſes, yet they ſhall bee ſaued. Doeſt thou not perceiue (will hee ſay) that God dearely loueth thee? Why, conſider that Satans tentation whereby he perſwadeth carnall men that they are beloued of God, that hee hath made thee one of his chiefeſt creatures, whereas otherwiſe he would haue made thee a Toad or Serpent; he hath alſo like a tender Father preſerued and nouriſhed thee from thy infancy, and which is more, he hath ſent his dearely beloued Son to die for thee, and hee hath made choice of thee amongſt many others to be a member of his Church, where thou enjoyeſt the preaching of the Goſpell, and the vſe of the Sacraments, to the end thou mayeſt be aſſured of thy ſaluation without all queſtion or doubting: vnto theſe thou mayeſt adde all thoſe temporall benefits, in which thou aboundeſt aboue many others, for God hath giuen thee health & ſtrength of bodie, and ſecure peace of mind, thou enjoyeſt great preferments in the world, and art well eſteemed amongſt all, thou haſt varietie of pleaſures, and ſufficiencie, yea plentie of all earthly bleſſings: thou loueſt and art beloued of thy Spouſe, and thy children like Oliue branches ſtand about thy table.

Finally, thou haſt the World at will, and proſpereſt in all which thou takeſt in hand. All which benefits being promiſed by God to his children and ſeruants as rewards of their obedience, and pledges of his loue, doe ſhew, that thou haſt deſerued well at his hands, and art in ſuch a courſe of life already, as hath aduanced thee into an high degree of his ſpeciall fauour. Neuer therefore take care nor trouble thy ſelfe concerning thy ſaluation, vſe not ſuch ſtrictneſſe and preciſeneſſe of life, but take thy pleaſure, and follow thoſe delights which the Lord hath beſtowed vpon thee as pledges of his loue; for thou art not now a ſlaue but a ſonne, and therefore mayſt more freely follow thine owne deſire, and vſe thy libertie: caſt away all ſeruile feare, which maketh thee take ſuch paines in vſing all meanes whereby thou maiſt be aſſured of ſaluation; for thou art aſſured of the principall, namely of Gods loue, and therefore thou needeſt not to doubt of the reſt, nor to debarre thy ſelfe of thy pleaſures, ſpending thy time in feare and care, to the end thou maiſt get the aſſurance of that which thou needeſt not to call into queſtion.

§. Sect. 2. The anſwere to the former tentation.

And thus doth the Deuill fill men with preſumption, and lull them aſleep in carnall ſecuritie to their vtter deſtruction, and therefore it behoueth vs to arme our ſelues againſt him, that wee bee not circumuented. And to this end let vs cõſider that Gods loue goeth not alone, neither is it idle in thoſe whom he loueth: but as the firſt linke of a chaine draweth all the reſt of the chain with it, ſo the loue of God, which is the firſt cauſe of our ſaluation, is accompanied with all the other cauſes which are ſubordinate thereunto. For whom God loueth, them he electeth; whom he electeth, thoſe in his good time he calleth; whom he effectually calleth, them he juſtifieth; and whom hee juſtifieth, thoſe he ſanctifieth. If therefore we be not ſanctified, we are not juſtified; if wee are not juſtified, we are not called; if we are not called, we can haue no aſſurance that we are elected, nor yet of Gods loue and fauour; and conſequently whoſoeuer liue in their blind ignorance, in their infidelitie, and wallow themſelues in the filthy puddle of their ſins, without any true ſorrow for thoſe which are paſt, or any good purpoſe of heart to forſake them in the time to come, they can haue no aſſurance of Gods loue, but rather juſtly to feare leſt they are in the number of thoſe whom the Lord hath eternally rejected, if they continue in this their miſerable and deſperate eſtate.

Tempôrall benefits no infallible ſignes of Gods loue.

Neither let Sathan bewitch them with that vaine opinion of Gods loue towards them, becauſe of thoſe generall benefits, which like the raine and Sun-ſhine are beſtowed both vpon the good and bad: for what in this reſpect can they promiſe more to themſelues then Eſau and Saul? Were not they men created according to Gods owne likeneſſe? Were they not preſerued and nouriſhed by God, and that more liberally then many of Gods owne children? For Eſau had ſo much that hee profeſſed to his brother Iacob that he had enough, and was attended vpon by foure hundred men. And was not Saul a mightie King, who had all at command? Were not both theſe in the Church of God, and outwardly enjoyed the Word and Sacraments as well as any other; and yet God himſelfe ſaith that he hated Eſau, and had rejected Saul. And therefore let vs neuer bragge of our aſſurance of Gods loue, becauſe of theſe outward and common benefits which hee indifferently beſtoweth both vpon the elect and reprobate; but if we would be aſſured indeed of Gods loue, let vs looke into our ſelues, and conſider if hee haue beſtowed vpon vs his ſpirituall graces, faith, hope, patience, loue of him and our brethren, true repentance for our ſinnes, and holineſſe of life and the reſt; and then by the fruits of ſanctification wee may be aſſured that we are ſanctified, and conſequently juſtified, called, elected, and eternally loued of God.

§. Sect. 3. How Satan perſwadeth weake Chriſtians that they are not beloued of God.

And thus doth Satan falſly perſwade the carnall worldling, that hee is highly in the loue and fauour of God: but contrariwiſe when he aſſaulteth the weake Chriſtian, he changeth his copie, and goeth about to perſwade him that he is not beloued of God, but ſubject to his wrath and heauie diſpleaſure. And this hee inforceth by two ſorts of arguments: the one drawne from his manifold corruptions, whereby hee is vnworthy of Gods loue; the other from thoſe grieuous afflictions and croſſes which the Lord in this life inflicteth on him; both which hee thus vrgeth againſt him. Canſt thou vile wretch conceiue the leaſt hope that thou art beloued of God? Why, doe but take a view of thy ſelfe, and thou ſhalt ſee that originall corruption hath ouer-ſpread both thy bodie and ſoule like a filthy leproſie; vnto which thou haſt added actuall tranſgreſſions more in number then the haires of thy head, or the ſtarres of Heauen; for daily, nay hourely thou omitteſt ſome dutie which thy God hath commanded thee, and committeſt ſome ſinne which he hath forbidden. Can therefore the Lord, who abhorreth wickedneſſe, loue the wicked? canſt thou obtaine his fauour, & yet doeſt nothing but diſpleaſe him? He that loueth God keepeth his Commandements; but thou by tranſgreſſing them all, doeſt ſhew that thou loueſt him not: and will the Lord loue them who hate and rebell againſt him? Can iuſtice it ſelfe loue wickedneſſe, and perfect holineſſe impure corruption? No verily; for in his Word hee hath threatned his wrath againſt all ſuch notorious ſinners, and he is no leſſe true in his threatnings then in his promiſes. But if all this will not perſwade thee that the Lord thee, yet at leaſt be perſwaded by thine owne experience. For, hath not thy iuſt God begunne alreadie to make thee taſte the cup of his wrath, of which hereafter thou ſhalt drinke in full meaſure? Hath he not ſpoiled thee of thy goods, taken away thy good name, made thee an abiect amongſt men, afflicted thee in bodie with grieuous and continuall ſickneſſe, and filled thy ſoule full of horrour and deſpaire? Is not thy conſcience ſtung with ſinne, and hath not the poyſon thereof drunke vp thy ſpirit? Doeſt thou not plainly apprehend his wrath, and is not thy ſoule as it were ſet vpon the racke, ſo that there is not one part of thee, either of bodie and ſoule which is not full of miſerie and wretchedneſſe? Do not therefore fondly flatter thy ſelfe with a vaine opinion of Gods loue, but beleeue, if not my words, yet at leaſt thine owne ſenſes: And ſeeing thou haſt no hope of Gods loue, if thou beeſt wiſe loue thy ſelfe, follow thy pleaſure, eate and drinke and cheere vp thine heart, and do not vainly macerate and turmoyle thy ſelfe in labouring after impoſſibilities, and in ſtriuing for the aſſurāce of Gods loue, of which, when thou haſt done what thou canſt, yet ſhalt thou neuer be aſſured.

Sect. 4.
wee may
tenta-

And thus you ſee the manner of Satans tentations, whereby hee laboureth to perſwade vs that we are out of the loue and fauour of God; againſt which we muſt more carefully arme our ſelues, as being moſt odious and iniurious vnto God, and moſt pernicious vnto our owne ſoules. It is moſt iniurious vnto God, if wee doubt of his loue towards vs ſeeing he hath giuen vs innumerable pledges and moſt certaine teſtimonies thereof, and omitteth nothing which might doe vs good. Hee hath created vs after his owne Image, he hath continually preſerued and ſuſtained vs, giuing vs our meate in due ſeaſon, and oft-times hath ſuccoured and defended vs before wee craued his helpe. But which is more, he hath giuen his dearely beloued Sonne to die a bitter death, to redeeme vs out of the hands of our ſpirituall enemies: and to the end we ſhould be made partakers of Chriſt and all his benefits, he hath giuen vs his Word, and made his Couenant with vs, that in Chriſt he will be our God, and we his people, hee our Father, and wee his children. And leſt yet there ſhould be any place left to doubting, he hath added to his Word, his Sacraments, which like Seales may aſſure vs of his loue and fauour. What iniurie therefore ſhall we offer vnto God, if notwithſtanding all this wee doubt of his good will, of which hee hath aſſured vs by ſo many pledges, teſtimonies and ſeales? We know that a kind friend will take it moſt vnkindly, if after hee hath heaped vpon a man innumerable benefits, and ſhewed all teſtimonies of true loue, he notwithſtanding doubt of his good will, and ſuſpect his friendſhip: and ſo ſurely the Lord will take it ill at our hands, and thinke himſelfe much abuſed, if after hee hath beſtowed ſuch infinite benefits, euen his dearely beloued Sonne to die for vs, we now ſuſpect his good will, and grow iealous of his loue; if we doubt of his loue, who is loue it ſelfe, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1. Iohn 4.8.

§. Sect. 5. That carnall men haue no aſſurance of Gods loue though they boaſt thereof.

But againſt this which I haue ſaid, there are two obiections, the firſt is made by the worldling, the other by Satan. The worldly man will ſay, that the Lord hath made him alſo partaker of all theſe benefits, and therefore there is no cauſe why hee ſhould doubt of his loue; not any reaſon why hee ſhould bee cenſured or condemned for his faith. I anſwere, that hee is not reprehended for his perſwaſion of Gods loue, nor for his aſſurance of Gods promiſes in Chriſt; but for his boaſting of this faith, perſwaſion, and aſſurance, whereas there is nothing in him in truth but a dead carcaſſe of faith, carnall ſecuritie, and vaine preſumption. For true faith purifieth the heart, and worketh by loue, it is plentifull in good workes, and prouoketh vs to performe all good duties to God and our Neighbours: and it is impoſſible that we ſhould be truly perſwaded of Gods loue, and not loue him againe: it cannot be that we loue God, if we ſhew no care in glorifying his name, by letting our lights ſhine before men, nor any deſire to performe obedience to his will. For as our Sauiour ſaith, Hee that loueth mee keepeth my Commandements, and he that loueth mee not, keepeth not my words, as it is Iohn 14.23,24. If therefore wee liue in our ſins without repentance, if if we make no conſcience of our wayes, and ſhew no zeale in glorifying Gods Name; if our faith bee deſtitute of the fruits of good workes, then is our perſwaſion but fond preſumption; our aſſurance, carnall ſecuritie; our faith dead, and like a carcaſſe which breatheth not, as Iames ſpeaketh, Chap. 2. 26. Wee doe not then reprehend any for being perſwaded of Gods loue, gathering his aſſurance out of his manifold mercies, and innumerable benefits beſtowed on his Church: nay, contrariwiſe we affirme, that notwithſtanding all our ſinnes and vnworthineſſe, wee are to bee perſwaded of Gods loue in Chriſt, yea, and to beleeue againſt beliefe, and to hope againſt hope, when as there is no ground or reaſon of either in our ſelues: but this wee maintaine, that whoſoeuer hath this aſſurance and faith, in the leaſt meaſure begun in him, doth truly loue God againe, and earneſtly laboureth after mortification and newneſſe of life. And whoſoeuer is deſtitute of Gods loue, and liueth in his ſinnes, without any ſorrow for thoſe which are paſt, or purpoſe to leaue them for the time to come, he may well brag of his faith and aſſurance of Gods loue, but in very truth there is as yet nothing in him but carnall ſecuritie and vaine preſumption.

Iames 2. 26.

§. Sect. 6. That euery particular Chriſtian may aſſure himſelfe of Gods loue.

Secondly, the tempter will obiect that the Lord hath giuen all theſe teſtimonies and pledges of his loue vnto his Church, & that it therefore may well be aſſured thereof; but as for particular men, they notwithſtanding may iuſtly doubt of his loue, ſeeing they haue no ſpeciall reaſons to perſwade them that theſe teſtimonies and pledges were giuen particularly vnto them. But I anſwere, that this is a fond obiection. For what is the Church, but the whole company of Gods Saints? What is it but a bodie conſiſting of many members, which are particular Chriſtians? How therefore can the whole Church be perſwaded of Gods loue, if all the ſeuerall members doubt thereof? How can any thing belong to the whole, which belongeth not to the particular parts? As though a whole Citie could be aſſured of the Princes fauour, and yet all the particular men in the Citie ſhould thinke themſelues in his diſpleaſure. Saint Paul teacheth vs another leſſon in his owne perſon, ſaying, Galath. 2.20. Who hath loued me and giuen his life for me: hee ſaith not, who hath loued and giuen his life for the Church, but for himſelfe. Nor doth the Apoſtle here ſpeak this by reuelation, whereby hee might extraordinarily bee aſſured of Gods loue: but he vſeth for his argument a reaſon common to all Chriſtians; namely, that God loued him, becauſe hee had giuen himſelfe to death for him: whoſoeuer therefore beleeueth with Paul that Chriſt died for him, may bee aſſured alſo with him of Gods loue. Neither is he thus perſwaded of this loue to himſelfe onely, but alſo towards all the faithfull, Rom. 8.38. I am perſwaded that neither death, nor life, nor Angels, nor Principalities, &c. ſhall be able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord.

Galath. 2. 20.

§. Sect. 7. That doubti of Gods lo is iniuriou vnto him.

Secondly, if we doe not beleeue that God loueth vs, wee make him a liar, for hee hath profeſſed his loue, and giuen vs many teſtimonies thereof in his Word, neither doth he require any condition at our hands but that wee beleeue him. For his mercifull promiſes doe not exclude any for their vnworthineſſe, but for their vnbeliefe: according to that, Iohn 3.16. So God loued the world, that hee gaue his onely begotten Sonne, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life. And Verſe 18. Hee that beleeues on him is not condemned, but he that beleeueth not is condemned alreadie becauſe he hath not beleeued in the Name of the onely begotten Sonne of God. Seeing then there is no other condition required but faith for the aſſurance of Gods loue and euerlaſting life; ſurely, moſt deſperately doe we ſinne againſt our owne ſoules, and moſt blaſphemouſly againſt God, if wee will not beleeue his Word confirmed by his Seale, no not his Oath whereby hee hath ratified his Couenant betweene him and vs, but make him, who is truth it ſelfe, a liar, a couenant-breaker, yea, a periured perſon. For ſo the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1. Iohn 5.10. Hee that beleeueth not God hath made him a liar, becauſe hee beleeued not the record, that God witneſſed of his Sonne. Though therefore wee ſinne, yet let vs not thus blaſpheme; though we be grieuous ſinners, and vnworthy Gods loue, yet let vs not adde this to all our other ſins and vnworthineſſe, to diſtruſt Gods Truth in his gracious promiſes: for if we put all our other ſins into the one ſcale, & this alone into the other, yet will it weigh downe all the reſt; neither are wee damned for our owne ſins, if wee doe not adde vnto them infidelitie. For whereas the precious balme of our Sauiours bloud is a ſoueraigne ſalue to cure all other ſores of ſinne; yet this it cannot help, becauſe it doth refuſe the cure, and as it were pulleth off this precious playſter when it is laid on it.

Iohn 3.16.

1. Iohn 5.10

§. Sect. 8. Doubting Gods loue, pernicious to our ſo

But as this diſtruſting and doubting of Gods loue is iniurious vnto him, ſo alſo it is pernicious vnto our owne ſoules. For firſt, it tormenteth our minds, and ſetteth our conſciences vpon the Racke, when as wee haue no other aſſurance of Gods loue, but only ſo farre forth as wee find our ſelues worthy of it. For ſo often as wee fall, and the ſight of our ſins commeth before our eyes, hauing no other ground of Gods loue but our owne deſerts, we doubt and ſtagger like a ſhip toſſed with the billowes of the Sea, and in the end ſinke into the gulfe of deſpaire, being ouerballanced, ballanced, and too heauily laden with the vnſupportable waight of our ſinnes; whereas if wee were throughly perſwaded of Gods free loue and good will, grounded on his owne good pleaſure, and not on our worthineſſe, if we did fall we would be grieued indeed euen at the very heart, becauſe wee had diſpleaſed our gracious God and louing Father; but yet our ſins would not make vs deſpaire or doubt of his loue towards vs, becauſe it is not grounded on our worthineſſe, but vpon Gods owne free mercie, grace and good will.

hat wee cant loue God ſurance of s loue toards vs.

Secondly, if wee doubt and diſtruſt of Gods loue towards vs, wee ſhall neuer loue him from our hearts: for who loueth him entirely, of whoſe loue he is not perſwaded? or who can performe the duties of loue to ſuch an one as hateth and abhorreth him? Cos amoris amor, Loue is the whetſtone of loue. And if this be true amongſt men, then much more betweene God and vs: for wee loue him becauſe he loued vs firſt, as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1. Iohn 4.19. As therefore the cold ſtone can of it ſelfe caſt forth no heate, till it be firſt warmed by the Sun-beames, & then it reflecteth againe ſome of the heate which it receiued: ſo no more can our cold hearts caſt any beames of heartie loue towards God, till they bee warmed with the apprehenſion of his loue towards vs, & then they begin to returne ſome ſparkes of loue towards God, after they are inflamed with the beames of his loue cleerely ſhining in them. Vnleſſe therefore wee bee aſſured of Gods loue wee cannot loue him, and conſequently cannot performe any dutie of loue in obedience to his will: for as loue is the fulfilling of the Law, ſo the want of loue is the tranſgreſſing of al the Commandements: for all conſiſt in the loue of God, which is the fountaine of all true obedience; and in the loue of our Neighbour, which as a ſpring iſſueth from it. Nay, when wee deſpaire of Gods loue, then doe we deſpaire of our ſaluation, and therefore hauing no hope of happineſſe in the life to come, wee are readie to ſeek all the pleaſures and delights which this life will affoord vnto vs, giuing our ſelues ouer to the ſatisfying of all the filthy luſts of the fleſh, and ſpending our times in all Epicuriſme and ſenſualitie.

Laſtly, our doubting and diſtruſting of Gods loue doth ouerthrow our patience, in the time of affliction, and cauſeth vs to mourn and repine againſt God, blaſpheming him to his face. It hindereth all Chriſtian reſolution in ſuffering for the Name of Chriſt, for how ſhould we ſuffer any thing patiently for his ſake of whoſe loue we are not aſſured? It maketh the day of death horrible, whenas we are not perſwaded that wee ſhall render vp our ſoules into the hands of a gracious Father, but into the hands of a ſeuere Iudge: whereas on the other ſide, when we are thoroughly perſwaded of Gods loue, then may we patiently, yea joyfully ſuffer all afflictions, becauſe we know that they are but gentle trials, and fatherly chaſtiſements, which our gracious God doth inflict on vs for our euerlaſting good: when wee are perſecuted for our profeſſion of the Goſpell, wee will triumph with joy, becauſe wee are thought worthy to ſuffer any miſery for the Name of Chriſt, who hath laid downe his life for our ſake; when the day of our departing approcheth we rejoyce, becauſe wee deſire nothing more then to bee diſſolued, and to bee with Chriſt, who ſo tenderly loueth vs. In a word, come proſperitie, come aduerſitie, come affliction, come perſecution, come fire, come ſword, come life, come death, come what will come, nothing can come amiſſe; nothing can diſmay or diſcourage vs, if wee be once fully aſſured of Gods loue in Chriſt, both becauſe our loue of God, which by his loue is wrought in vs, will make the heauieſt and moſt tedious burthen ſeem light and momentany, which it ſhall pleaſe our heauenly Father to lay vpon vs: and alſo becauſe wee know that all things (euen miſeries, afflictions, perſecutions, yea death it ſelfe) worke together for the beſt vnto them that loue God. That our ſinnes and vnworthineſſe ſhould not make vs doubt of Gods loue.

Satans temptations anſwered whereby he moueth vs to doubt of Gods loue, becauſe of our vnworthineſſe.

SEeing therefore that our doubting and diſtruſting of Gods loue towardes vs, is both injurious vnto God & pernicious vnto our ſelues; let vs in no caſe admit of Sathans tentations whereby hee laboureth to perſwade vs that the Lord hateth vs. But foraſmuch as there is no perſwaſion without knowledge and faith, neither can we know and beleeue that we are in Gods fauour, vnleſſe we haue ſome ground and warrant out of Gods Word, whereupon wee may caſt our wauering minds, and confirme our fainting faith againſt the boyſterous blaſts of Satans tentations: therefore let vs examine Sathans reaſons, whereby hee goeth about to perſwade vs that wee are not beloued of God, by the touchſtone of Gods Word, and waigh his objections in the ſcales of the Sanctuary, to ſee if they be of any waight or ſubſtance, or elſe but frothie, light, and of no ſound conſequence. Firſt, therefore whereas Satan objecteth that we are miſerable ſinners, vnworthy altogether of Gods loue, and moſt worthy of his wrath and heauie diſpleaſure; that God is infinitely juſt, and therefore cannot nor will not loue vs being notoriouſly wicked: we are to anſwere, that indeed wee are in our ſelues vnworthy the leaſt dram of Gods loue, by reaſon of our originall corruption and actuall tranſgreſſion; and therefore if our aſſurance of his fauour, had no other foundation but our owne deſerts, wee had great reaſon not onely to doubt, but alſo vtterly to deſpaire of his loue towards vs. But the loue of God is not grounded vpon our worthineſſe which is nothing, but vpon his owne good will and pleaſure, which is infinite as himſelfe is infinite; and therefore though in our ſelues wee are moſt miſerable and wretched, yet this is no reaſon why wee ſhould diſtruſt or in the leaſt degree doubt of Gods loue, ſeeing it ariſeth not from any thing in vs, but from himſelfe who is vnchangeable. The truth hereof manifeſtly appeareth by the Scriptures, where it is ſaid that the Lord hath loued vs, not for our excellencie and worthineſſe, but of his free grace and louing kindneſſe. So *Hoſ.*14.5. I will heale their rebellion; I will loue them freely,&c. And the Apoſtle Iohn telleth vs that herein Gods loue appeareth, in that when we loued not him, he ſo dearely loued vs, that hee ſent his Sonne to be a reconciliation for our ſinnes; 1.Iohn 4.10. And Paul ſaith, that hereby *God ſetteth out his loue towards vs, ſeeing that whileſt wee were yet ſinners, Chriſt died for vs, and when wee were enemies God reconciled vs vnto himſelfe by the death of his ſonne: Rom.*5.8,10. If therefore the Lord loued vs when wee were enemies vnto him and dead in our ſinnes; how much more will hee loue vs now being reconciled in Chriſt, and in ſome meaſure purged from our corruption, and quickned by his Spirit to newneſſe of life? If when wee were moſt vnworthy, hee freely ſhewed ſuch exceeding fauour towardes vs: how much more hauing by his Spirit & the graces thereof made vs (in Chriſt) more worthy, will hee continue his loue vnto vs? If hee hath hitherto loued vs not for any deſerts of ours, but of his free mercy, becauſe he is loue it ſelfe, as Iohn calleth him, and the God of grace, as Peter ſtileth him, why ſhould we doubt of Gods loue in reſpect of our vnworthineſſe, ſeeing his loue hath not his ground vpon our worthineſſe, but vpon his owne nature which is immutable, and therefore whom he once loueth, he loueth them vnto the end, though in themſelues they are miſerable and wretched, Iohn 13.1.

§. Sect. 2. Gods election not grounded on our workes & worthines, *Rom.*11.5,6.

Our worthi-neſſe is not condition of Gods Counant,

*Ierem.*31.31.

*Rom.*4.13.

But as the Scriptures ſhew that God hath loued vs freely from all eternitie; ſo alſo doe they as plainly declare, that God hath manifeſted this loue in the worke of our ſaluation freely, and without any reſpect of our worthineſſe: as may appeare in the ſeuerall cauſes thereof. As firſt hee hath elected vs of his owne free loue and good will, and not for any of our deſerts. So *Epheſ.*15. Hauing predeſtinated vs vnto the adoption of children by Ieſus Chriſt vnto himſelfe according to the good pleaſure of his will. And therefore it is called the election not of vertue and workes, but of grace, *Rom.*11.5. Yea, it is flatly oppoſed to workes in the Verſe following. And if (ſaith the Apoſtle) it be of grace, it is no more of workes, or elſe were grace no more grace: but if it be of workes it is no more grace, or elſe were worke no more worke. So that our election is not grounded vpon our worthineſſe, but on Gods grace and good will: and therefore it cannot bee ouerthrowne by our vnworthineſſe, ſo wee wholly relie vpon Gods free mercie in Chriſt. Secondly, the couenant betweene God and vs, wherein he profeſſeth himſelfe our God, and taketh vs for his people and heires of his promiſes is not the Couenant of workes but the Couenant of Grace: in which hee offereth freely in Chriſt, his grace and mercy to all who will receiue it by the hand of a liuely faith. And this the Lord himſelfe expreſſeth, *Ier.*31.31. Behold the dayes come, ſaith the Lord, that I will make a new couenant with the houſe of Iſrael (that is, my Church) 32. Not according to the couenant which I made with their fathers (that is, the couenant of workes) the which my couenant they brake, &c. but this ſhall be my couenant that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael, after thoſe dayes, ſaith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God, and they ſhall be my people. So the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that the promiſe made to Abraham and his ſeed, was not giuen through the law, but through the righteouſnes of faith, and that it was not therefore by faith that it might come by grace: and the promiſe might be ſure to all the ſeed. For if the couenant were of workes and not of faith, of deſerts and not of grace, we ſhould continually diſanull and make it of no effect.

§. Sect. 3. Our redemption not cau-ſed by our worthineſſe.

Thirdly, as we are elected before all times, ſo were wee in time redeemed freely, and without reſpect of our owne worthineſſe, of the meere mercie and loue of God; although our Sauiour Chriſt payed the full price of our redemption vnto God his Father for vs: and this appeareth, *Epheſ.*1.7. *By whom we haue redemption through his bloud, euen the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, according to his rich grace, Verſ.*8. Whereby hee hath beene abundant towards vs in all wiſdome and vnderſtanding. So that our redemption was not free vnto our Sauiour Chriſt, for it coſt him the ineſtimable price of his moſt precious bloud; but it was free vnto vs, without any reſpect of our workes and worthineſſe. For wee were like deſperate debters, deeply ingaged vnto God, and not able to pay the leaſt farthing; and therefore were caſt into the priſon of euerlaſting death, there to be detained till wee had diſcharged the whole debt:

which being impoſſible vnto vs, it pleaſed our Sauiour Chriſt of his meere pitie & free good will to become our ſuretie, and to make full ſatisfaction to his father, euen to the leaſt mite, that ſo wee might bee releaſed and ſet free. We were all of vs miſerable captiues, held in the thraldome of ſinne, Sathan and death, vnable to deſerue in any meaſure to be ſet at libertie; for we were the children of wrath, who were not ſicke only, but euen dead in our ſinnes, as it is Epheſ.2.1,5. But our Sauiour Chriſt of his vndeſerued loue did pay the price of our redemption, and ſet vs out of our captiuitie, quickuing and raiſing vs vp from ſinne to newneſſe of life; as the Apoſtle ſetteth it downe Epheſ.2.3. And you were by nature the children of wrath as well as others. 4. But God which is rich in mercy, through his great loue wherewith hee loued vs, 5. Euen when we were dead by ſins, hath quickened vs together in Chriſt, by whoſe grace yee are ſaued. 6. And hath raiſed vs vp together in heauenly places in Chriſt Ieſus: 7. That he might ſhew in ages to come the exceeding riches of his grace, through his kindneſſe towards vs in Chriſt Ieſus. So that there is no worthineſſe in our ſelues which the Lord reſpected, for wee were all alike the children of wrath, and dead in our ſinnes, but onely of his free mercy and great loue, hee hath redeemed vs by Chriſt.

Our worthines no cauſe of our calling.

Fourthly, as the Lord hath freely redeemed vs, ſo alſo he hath freely called vs to the knowledge of the myſterie of our redemption wrought by Ieſus Chriſt, and choſen vs amongſt all Nations to bee his Church and peculiar people, and that of his meere grace and free good will, without any reſpect of our worthineſſe, as appeareth 2.Tim.1.9. Who hath ſaued vs, and called vs with an holy calling, not according to our workes, but according to his owne purpoſe of grace which was giuen vs through Chriſt Ieſus before the world was. So Moſes telleth the children of Iſrael, that the Lord had called and made choice of them aboue all other Nations to be his Church and people, not for any reſpect of themſelues, or their owne worthineſſe, but of his free loue and vndeſerued mercy, as it is Deut.7.7,8. Pſal.44.3. Fiftly, as the Lord hath freely called vs, ſo being called he hath freely juſtified vs, not for any inherent righteouſneſſe in our ſelues, but of his owne grace and good will, through the righteouſneſſe and obedience of Ieſus Chriſt which he imputeth vnto vs. And this is euident Rom.3.24. where it is ſaid, that we are iuſtified freely by Gods grace, through the redemption which is in Chriſt Ieſus. And Titus 3.7. where the Apoſtle ſaith, that we are iuſtified by his grace. And leſt wee ſhould ioyne with Gods grace our owne works and worthineſſe, hee telleth vs that Abraham himſelfe, though a moſt righteous and holy man in reſpect of his ſinceritie and integritie of heart, was notwithſtanding not juſtified by his workes, but Abraham beleeued God, and that was imputed vnto him for righteouſneſſe, Rom.4.3. and Verſe 5. hee flatly excludeth workes from being any cauſes of our juſtification; To him (ſaith hee) that worketh not, but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly, his faith is counted for righteouſneſſe. So that we are freely juſtified of Gods grace and good will, without any reſpect of our owne workes and worthineſſe, as being any cauſes of our juſtification, although they are neceſſary and inſeparable fruits thereof. For the ſame death and bloudſhed of Chriſt, whereby wee are freed from the guilt and puniſhment of ſin and euerlaſting death, doth free vs alſo from the death of ſinne to newneſſe of life, and doth not onely juſtifie but alſo ſanctifie vs, as the Apoſtle plainly ſheweth, Tit.2.14. Who gaue himſelfe for vs, that he might redeeme vs from all iniquitie, (that is, free vs from the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne to which we were ſubject) and purge vs to be a peculiar people vnto himſelfe, zealous of good workes.

That our ſanctification is the free gift of God.

Sixtly, our ſanctification and inherent righteouſneſſe it ſelfe, what is it elſe but the free gift of God, begun, increaſed, and finiſhed by his gracious Spirit? What are the graces in vs but Gods free and vndeſerued gifts? What are our beſt workes but the fruits of his Spirit working in vs? For by nature we are dead in our ſinnes, and the children of wrath as well as the vnbeleeuing heathen or moſt prophane worldling, Eph.2.1,3. By nature we are not able ſo much as to thinke a good thought, or to will that which is good, no more then thoſe who remaine in the ſtate of condemnation, as appeareth, 2.Cor.3.5. Phil.2.13. but it is our Sauiour Chriſt, who ſo loued his Church, that he gaue himſelfe for it, that he might ſanctifie it and cleanſe it, by the waſhing of water through the word, &c. as it is Epheſ.5.25,26. So that when wee haue attained to the higheſt meaſure of ſanctification that wee can poſſibly attaine vnto, wee muſt in all humilitie confeſſe with Paul, that by the grace of God we are that we are, as it is 1.Cor.15.10. Neither muſt we attribute any thing in the work of our ſaluation, vnto our ſanctification and good workes, but aſcribe all to the free grace and vndeſerued loue of God in Chriſt, wherby wee are ſanctified and ſtirred vp to new obedience, who were altogether polluted, yea dead in our ſinnes. So that our ſanctification and worthineſſe is not the cauſe of Gods loue and mercy towards vs, but his loue and free good will is the cauſe of our ſanctification, and maketh vs, who were vnworthy in our ſelues, worthy in Chriſt of his loue and fauour. And therefore we muſt not meaſure Gods loue by our worthineſſe and abundance of grace as being a cauſe thereof; nor deſpaire of his fauour and mercie, when wee ſee our vnworthineſſe and weakneſſe in ſanctifying graces; for theſe are no cauſes of his loue but effects, and conſequently when we wāt them altogether, though there be no cauſe of hope whileſt wee remaine in this ſtate, yet wee are not vtterly to deſpaire for the time to come, ſeeing the Lord in his good time may begin his good worke in vs; and when it is begun, and wee haue receiued the leaſt meaſure of ſanctification, euen a deſire and holy endeuour to liue in holineſſe & righteouſneſſe, wee may be aſſured that it is Gods worke, which hee hauing begun will finiſh and accompliſh, according to that, Pkil.1.6. In the meane time let vs poſſeſſe our ſoules with patience, and with a quiet and peaceable minde labour after the increaſe of grace, vſing all good meanes ordained of God for this purpoſe, ſubmitting our ſelues, in regard of the meaſure of grace, which wee doe deſire, to his good will and pleaſure, who will diſpoſe of all ſo, as ſhall bee moſt for his glory and our good. And in any caſe let vs beware that wee doe not ſo impatiently and violently deſire encreaſe of more grace, as that in the mean time wee forget to bee thankfull to God for that we haue, turning our ſongs of prayſe for Gods great benefits, into murmuring and repining. Let vs not be like vnto rich Miſers, who haue their mindes ſo intent vpon the getting of that riches they haue not, as that they forget to enjoy and take comfort of that they haue. Let vs not reſemble thoſe vnthankfull men, who when they haue receiued many benefits, doe ſtill deſire more, and when their deſires are not preſently ſatisfied, vngratefully murmure againſt their benefactors as though they had receiued nothing: but let vs make vſe of thoſe graces which we haue receiued to Gods glory and our comfort; let vs deſire more, that wee may more glorifie him with his owne gifts; and though our deſires be not preſently ſatisfied, let vs not fall into impatiencie, but ſubmit our ſelues vnto his good will and pleaſure, and bee truly thankfull for that portion of grace, which it hath pleaſed him of his abundant mercy to beſtow vpon vs.

§. Sect.7. Our own worthineſſe no cauſe of our ſaluation.

Laſtly, our ſaluation it ſelfe dependeth not vpon our owne worthineſſe, but vpon Gods free mercie and vndeſerued loue; for ſaluation is the free gift of God, and not the wages of our owne worthineſſe, as death is the wages of ſinne, as appeareth, Rom.6.23. And wee are ſaued by grace through faith, and that not of our ſelues; it is the gift of God, as it is Epheſ.2.8. And the Apoſtle telleth vs, Tit.2.11. that the grace of God bringeth ſaluation, and teacheth vs to deny vngodlineſſe and worldly luſts, and that wee ſhould liue ſoberly and righteouſly and godly in this preſent World: ſo that our forſaking ſin and imbracing holineſſe and righteouſnes is not the cauſe of our ſaluation; but the grace of God, by which all theſe effects are alſo wrought in vs. But moſt plaine is that of the Apoſtle, 2.Tim.1.9. where he excludeth our owne workes and worthineſſe, to the end he might aſcribe the whole worke of our ſaluation to Gods grace and good will. Who hath ſaued vs (ſaith hee) not according to our workes, but according to his owne purpoſe and grace. So Titus 3.5. Not by the workes of righteouſneſſe which we had done, but according to his mercy he ſaued vs, by the waſhing of the new birth, and renuing of the holy Ghoſt.

2.Tim.1.9.

Tit.3.5.

§. Sect.8. That the wor of our ſaluation is wholly effected by God alone.

But for the better cleering of this point, let vs further conſider that the Lord hath ſo diſpenſed and ordred of the cauſes and means of our ſaluation, as though he had purpoſely aimed at this, to beate downe our pride and opinion of our owne merit and worthineſſe, to make vs vtterly to deny our ſelues in the worke of our ſaluation, and to aſcribe vnto him the whole glory and prayſe of it. For whereas hee might haue wrought ſome graces and abilities in our ſelues, which might haue beene ſome grounds of our aſſurance and comfort, he hath not done it, but rather diuided the whole worke of our ſaluation, both for the beginning, performing, perfecting and applying of it betweene the three perſons of the bleſſed and glorious Trinitie. And firſt God the Father beginneth the worke by louing vs with an euerlaſting loue, and electing vs of his meere grace in his Son vnto life eternall, whom hee purpoſely ſent out of this infinite loue into the World, to effect this great worke of our redemption. Then God the Sonne taking vpon him our nature, performeth all things on our behalfe neceſſary for our ſaluation; ſatisfying Gods juſtice by his perfect righteouſneſſe and obedience, and ſauing and deliuering vs out of the hands of all our ſpirituall enemies. And now there remaineth nothing but the powerfull applying of that which Chriſt hath done and ſuffered for vs to our vſe and benefit; and this is principally effected by God the holy Spirit, who working effectually in vs by his Word, Sacraments and holy Ordinances, doth inlighten our mindes with the ſauing knowledge of God, and this great worke of redemption wrought by Chriſt, cauſeth vs to aſſent vnto the truth of the Goſpell, and ſtirreth vp in our hearts feruent deſires to be made partakers of Chriſt and his benefits; which are neuer ſeuered from a true and liuely faith, whereby wee receiue Chriſt giuen vnto vs of God as an all-ſufficient Sauiour; and doe wholly reſt vpon him for our ſaluation; and beſides this faith there is nothing elſe required of vs in this worke. By which it plainly appeareth how little or rather nothing weeare in the worke of juſtification and ſaluation. For what is required of vs vnto it but only faith? And what is faith but a gift and grace of God wrought in vs by his holy Spirit, in which worke wee are no agents at all, but meere patients who only receiue that which God giueth? And of what nature & quality is this grace of faith which God will haue vſed in this worke? Surely of no efficiencie and vertue in it ſelfe, but only an inſtrument to apply thoſe cauſes of ſaluation, which alone in themſelues are effectuall, as Gods mercifull promiſes, and the perfect obedience of Chriſt. What is it but only as a hand of a poore beggar to receiue an almes of a bountifull Prince, which it can no wayes merit by receiuing it? Finally, what is it but a grace herein differing from all other vertues and graces (ſauing thoſe that as effects and fruits doe depend vpon it) that whereas other vertues as charity, juſtice, obedience and the reſt doe make vs to reflect and looke vpon our ſelues, as vpon ſomthing worth the beholding, this grace of faith though it bee in vs, yet it cauſeth vs to looke quite out of our ſelues vnto another for the effecting of its worke, namely vnto God, our Sauiour Chriſt, and his holy Spirit, acknowledging them to be all in all in the worke of our ſaluation.

Now why hath the Lord thus wholly excluded vs and all our abilities, but becauſe he would haue the whole glory of his owne worke? Why would he haue our ſaluation to reſt only vpon himſelfe, and in no part vpon vs, but becauſe hee would haue vs to enjoy a more firme ground of aſſurance and comfort, then any thing in our ſelues could be? And therefore if wee can wholly deny our ſelues in the worke of our ſaluation, and reſting wholly and only vpon Gods free grace, and the all-ſufficient merits and obedience of his Sonne aſcribe vnto him alone the whole glory and praiſe of his owne worke, there is no cauſe why wee ſhould doubt at all in regard of out vnworthineſſe, ſeeing there is no worth or abilitie in vs, which in whole or part doth further our ſaluation.

§.Sect.9.

Seeing therefore Gods loue is not grounded vpon our owne worthineſſe, ſeeing hee electeth, redeemeth, calleth, juſtifieth, ſanctifieth, and finally saueth vs of his meere mercie and free good will without any reſpect of our owne merits or good works, let vs not reſtraine the infinite loue of God to our deſerts, nor meaſure his vnmeaſurable good will by the ſhort ell of our owne merits; but as the Lord hath freely loued vs, ſo let vs acknowledge his free and vndeſerued loue, and relie wholly thereupon, notwithſtanding our vnworthineſſe, ſeeing our worthineſſe is no cauſe of his loue, but it is his loue which maketh vs, and will ſurely make vs worthy to be beloued, if wee reſt wholly vpon him in Chriſt by a true and liuely faith: For ſo much as wee deſpaire in reſpect of our owne vnworthineſſe, ſo much would wee aſcribe to our owne worthineſſe; and looke how much wee attribute vnto our ſelues in the worke of our ſaluation, ſo much wee detract from Gods free mercy and Chriſts merit. And therefore let vs humbly acknowledge our owne vnworthineſſe; and become nothing in our owne eyes, that wee wholly relying vpon God hee may be all in all. For well worthy are wee to thirſt if wee leaue the fountaine of liuing waters; and digge vnto our ſelues broken ciſternes which will hold no water; well worthy are wee to fall into the gulfe of deſpaire, if we forſake the firme pillar of our ſaluation Gods mercy and Chriſts merit; relying and reſting vpon the broken ſtaffe of our owne righteouſneſſe; well worthy are wee to be damned, if we enuie the Lord the praiſe and glory of our ſaluation, deſiring rather to aſcribe it vnto our ſelues.

*Ier.*2.13.

§.Sect.10.
That being vnworthy in our ſelues, we are loued, elected, and ſaued in Chriſt.

But here the tempter will object that God is juſt, and therefore in his juſtice cannot loue, elect, juſtifie and ſaue vs who are vnworthy his loue, polluted with ſinne, and deſtitute of righteouſneſſe. I anſwere, that God doth not loue, elect, juſtifie and ſaue vs in our ſelues, but in our Sauiour Chriſt, in whom being vnworthy of our ſelues wee are made worthy; being vnjuſt in our ſelues, wee are made juſt, after wee are adorned with the rich robe of his righteouſneſſe; being in our ſelues the children of wrath and firebrands of Hell, wee are made children of God and heires of Heauen. For hee is made vnto God, wiſdome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification and redemption, that hee who reioyceth might reioyce in the Lord, as it is 1.*Cor.*1.30.31. And therefore the Apoſtle teacheth vs, that God hath giuen his grace, not ſimply vnto vs, who were altogether vnworthy thereof, but in Ieſus Chriſt, 1.*Cor.*1.4. and that in all things wee are made rich in him, as it is Verſe 5. So hee telleth vs, that grace doth raigne by righteouſneſſe vnto eternall life, through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, *Rom.*5.21. And that hee hath ſhewed the exceeding riches of his grace, through his kindneſſe towards vs in Chriſt Ieſus, *Epheſ.*2.7. And as God is gracious to vs in Chriſt, ſo hath hee declared this his loue towards vs in Chriſt onely, as may appeare in the ſeuerall cauſes and means of our ſaluation. For in him God hath elected vs to ſaluation, as appeareth *Epheſ.*1.5. In him is made the couenant of grace, as being that ſeed of Abraham in whom all the Nations of the earth are

And therefore not truſting in our owne worthineſſe, nor yet diſtruſting in Gods mercy and free loue in regard of our vnworthineſſe, let vs caſt off all ſelfe-conceit and opinion of our owne righteouſneſſe, that ſo we may put on the righteouſnes of Chriſt; and acknowledging our owne weakneſſe, yea our nothing, let vs neuertheleſſe be ſtrong in the grace which is in Chriſt Ieſus, as the Apoſtle exhorteth, 2.*Tim.*2.1. That temporall afflictions are rather ſignes of Gods loue, then of his hatred.

§. Sect. 1.
Afflictions markes rather of our adoption then of our reprobation.

THe ſecond argument whereby Satan ſeeketh to perſwade vs that we are out of the fauour of God, is taken from the manifold afflictions which are laid vpon many of Gods children, whileſt they remayne in this vale of miſery. But it is eaſie to anſwere this objection, if wee be but a little conuerſant in the booke of God, for there we may learne that afflictions & croſſes are rather ſignes of Gods loue then of his hatred; and markes rather of our election and adoption, then of reprobation and eternall damnation. For the Lord hath fore-ſhewed vs that his children ſhould mourne when the World ſhould reioyce, that they ſhould bee hated and perſecuted for his Name ſake; that all who will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus, ſhall ſuffer perſecution and affliction, 2.*Tim.*3.12. That they who will be conformable to him in glory, muſt alſo be conformable vnto him in his ſufferings, *Rom.*8.29. That this ſhort and momentany affliction, ſhall cauſe vnto vs a farre moſt excellent and eternall waight of glory, 2.*Cor.*4.17. That if wee ſuffer with Chriſt, wee ſhall alſo raigne with him, 2.*Tim.*2.12. That whom the Lord loueth he chaſteneth: and ſcourgeth euery ſonne that he receiueth, as it is *Heb.*12.6. That thoſe whom he doth not thus correct, are baſtards and no ſonnes, Verſe 8. And to theſe we may adde the examples of Gods children from time to time, as of Abraham, Iacob, Ioſeph, Moſes, Dauid, Iob, the Apoſtles, but eſpecially our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, who was hungry, harborleſſe, deſpiſed, ſcoffed, reuiled, buffetted, ſpit vpon, crowned with thorne, and laſtly crucified; and yet euen whileſt hee ſuffered all theſe afflictions, hee was the only begotten and beſt beloued Son of his heauenly Father.

§. Sect.
That affli

children.

So that both by teſtimonies and examples it is manifeſt, that afflictions are ſignes rather of Gods loue, then of his hatred; and markes of the children of God, rather then of the children of wrath. But here the tempter will demand how this can bee, conſidering that the Lord promiſeth to his children all good things; whereas afflictions are euils, and puniſhments inflicted on the wicked. To this wee may anſwere, that though in their owne nature they be euill, yet through the wiſdome and gracious prouidence of our God, they turne to the good of his children; and though to the wicked they are plagues and puniſhments, yet to the Godly they are but trials and fatherly chaſtiſements. For all their ſinnes are puniſhed in Chriſt, neither wil it ſtand with Gods juſtice to puniſh them againe in the faithfull; and therefore there is no other end of them but the manifeſtation of Gods glory, and our ſpirituall good and euerlaſting ſaluation. For as they are trials they ſerue to ſhew vnto all the world, and eſpecially to our ſelues, our faith, hope, patience, obedience, conſtancie, and the reſt of the graces of Gods Spirit, to the prayſe of his glory who hath beſtowed them, and to the comfort of our owne ſoules who haue receiued them. And as they are chaſtiſements they ſerue for ſharpe eye-ſalues to cleere our dimme ſight, ſo as we may ſee our ſinnes, and truly repent of them. They ſerue for ſowre ſawces to bring vs out of loue with our ſweet ſinnes, and for fire and files, whereby we are purged and ſcoured from the droſſe and ruſt of our corruptions. They are ſharpe pruning kniues, to lop and trim vs, that wee may bring forth plentifull fruites in godlineſſe. They are ſpurs to pricke vs forward in the Chriſtian race, and hedges to keepe vs from wandring out of the way. They are ſharpe ſalues to draw out our ſecret corruptions, and bitter potions to cure our deſperate diſeaſes. They are that worme-wood, whereby the Lord weaneth vs from the loue of the world, whoſe pleaſing delights wee would euer ſuck without wearineſſe, if our mouthes were not diſtaſted with ſome afflictions. They are rods, wherewith being ſcourged, wee are made more circumſpect in our wayes, and more carefull to performe obedience vnto all the Commandements of our heauenly Father. In a word, they are the ſtrait path which leadeth to euerlaſting happineſſe, and a bridle to reſtraine vs from running head-long into the broad way, which leadeth to endleſſe woe and miſery. And therefore ſeeing our momentany afflictions doe ſerue for the manifeſting of Gods glory, for the encreaſing of ſpirituall graces and furthering of our eternall ſaluation, let not Satan perſwade vs that we are out of Gods loue and fauour becauſe of our afflictions, but rather let vs repute them as they are indeed ſignes of his gracious prouidence and fatherly care which he hath ouer vs.

But heere the tempter will obiect that this I ſpeake is true of the outward afflictions of the body, for thereby the fleſh is mortified and ſubdued, and the ſanctifying graces of Gods Spirit exerciſed and increaſed in vs; but thy afflictions (will he ſay) are farre different, for thy ſoule is filled with horrour and feare, thy conſcience is mortally ſtung with ſinne, and the waight thereof ouerwhelmeth thee; thou ſeeſt thy ſelfe ſubiect to the curſe of the Law, and art alreadie tormented with the paines of Hell; thy God who looketh vpon his children with an amiable countenance, frowneth vpon thee like a ſeuere Iudge, and thou taſteſt of nothing but of his heauie wrath and diſpleaſure. In a word, thou haſt not one ſparke of true conſolation wrought in thee by Gods Spirit, with which thoſe that are Gods children are fully repleniſhed, and whereby they are incouraged patiently to abide all afflictions, but thy inward vexations are the torments of an euill conſcience, and the flaſhings of Hell fire wherewith hereafter thou ſhalt eternally be burned.

To this tentation wee muſt anſwere, that it cannot bee denied but that the afflictions of the mind are far more grieuous then the afflictions of the bodie; and that the torments of conſcience cauſed by the waight of ſinne, and the apprehenſion of Gods fearefull wrath, are as it were Gods three-ſtringed whip, in reſpect of the gentle rod of outward afflictions; for a ſorrowfull mind drieth vp the bones, as it is Prou. 17.12. and the ſpirit of a man may ſuſtaine his other infirmities, but a wounded ſpirit who can beare? as the Wiſeman ſpeaketh Prou. 18.14. Neuertheleſſe, though theſe corrections are more ſharpe and grieuous, then the outward afflictions of the body, yet it cannot bee denied but that theſe alſo are the chaſtiſements which our heauenly Father inflicteth vpon his children, ſometimes for his owne glory, and ſometime for their triall or chaſtiſement, when more light correction wil not reclaime them. For firſt thoſe places of Scripture before quoted, are ſpoken generally of all afflictions, and therefore are not to be reſtrained to the outward afflictions of the bodie, ſeeing they extend themſelues alſo to the afflictions of the minde, neither doth our heauenly Father correct all alike, but ſome he rebuketh only by his Word, and ſtayeth here when as this reclaimeth them; but if this will not preuaile, he goeth a ſtep further, and chaſtiſeth them with gentle correction, as with outward croſſes and afflictions; but if this will not reforme them, hee taketh his whip into his hand, wherewith hee grieuouſly ſcourgeth them, to the end they may more ſenſibly taſte of his diſpleaſure, and amend that which is amiſſe. And this hee doth by making them feele the waight of ſin, and apprehend his wrath and heauie diſpleaſure, which by their ſinnes they haue iuſtly incurred; and yet notwithſtanding all this he ſtill remaineth their gracious Father, who ſeeketh not their deſtruction but their reformation. Neither need this dealing of our heauenly Father ſeeme ſtrange vnto vs, ſeeing earthly parents take the ſame courſes with their children whom they tenderly loue; for when they offend them, they firſt ſeeke their amendment by words and fatherly admonitions; and when this will doe no good they proceed to blowes, and in a gentle manner doe correct them; and if this preuaile not with them, then they vſe more ſharpe and ſeuere chaſtiſement; but if all this be to no purpoſe, then will they diſguiſe their fatherly affection vnder the vizard of wrath and heauy diſpleaſure; they baniſh out of their countenance all ſignes of loue, and aſſume terrible lookes and bitter frownes; yea they will ſometimes thruſt them out of doores, and reiect them a while, leauing them to ſhift for themſelues, and to endure all miſerie. And whence proceedeth all this? ſurely not from hatred, but from loue and tender care which they haue ouer them for their good. And this maketh them vſe the bridle of correction, to reſtraine them from running into all licentiouſneſſe; this cauſeth them to pretend wrath in their countenance, that they be not by their lewdneſſe forced to entertaine it into their hearts; this moueth them to reiect them for a time that they may reclaime and retaine them for euer. Neither doth our heauenly Father, who is infinite in loue, deale otherwiſe with his diſobedient children; hee vſeth but his word if his word will ſuffice, he goeth no further then gentle chaſtiſement if that be enough; but if he ſharply ſcourge vs, yea if hee looke vpon vs with a frowning countenance, and ſhew nothing in outward appearance but his wrath and heauie diſpleaſure; if he ſeeme to reiect vs for a time, and to giue vs ouer to be tormented by Satan: yet vndoubtedly all this proceedeth from his loue and that fatherly care hee hath ouer vs, for our euerlaſting good and ſaluation. Hee ſeeketh not our deſtruction, but amendment; hee frowneth on vs for a time, that hee may looke graciouſly on vs for euer; hee ſeemeth to reiect vs for a while, that like the prodigall ſonne wee may returne againe, and bee receiued into his euerlaſting loue and fauour.

§. Sect. 4.
That ſpirituall afflictions tend to our mortification.

Secondly, the Lord ſendeth afflictions to mortifie in vs the old man, the fleſh and vnregenerate part: now the fleſh is not onely in our body, but alſo in our ſoule and euery part and faculty thereof, and therefore the Lord doth not afflict the body alone with outward calamities, but euen the ſoule alſo with griefe of mind and horrour of conſcience, with the waight of ſinne and ſenſe of his wrath, to the end that our corruptions both in bodie and ſoule may bee mortified, the olde man with the luſts thereof crucified, and in the end fully aboliſhed. And therefore doth the Lord breake our hard and ſtonie hearts, therefore doth hee plow and teare them vp like fallow ground, to the end that the ſeed of his grace being ſowne in them may take roote, fructifie and bring forth a plentifull harueſt of godlineſſe, to his glory and our comfort. It is not therefore for want of loue, that our heauenly Father doth thus bruiſe vs and euen cruſh vs in pieces; it is not becauſe he will reiect vs and caſt vs off: but when we are truly humbled, when our hard hearts are ſoftned, and our ſpirits broken and made contrite, then will hee regard vs and ſhew his tender loue and mercifull kindneſſe vnto vs as hee hath graciouſly promiſed, *Matth.*12.20. The bruiſed reed will he not breake, and ſmoking flax ſhall he not quench. So *Pſal.*51.17. The ſacrifices of God are a contrite ſpirit, a contrite and broken heart O God thou wilt not deſpiſe. And this the Lord himſelfe teſtifieth; I dwell with him alſo that is of a contrite and humble ſpirit, to reuiue the ſpirit of the humble, and to giue life vnto them that are of a contrite heart. Eſay 57.15. And the Prophet telleth vs that our Sauiour Chriſt was ſent into the world to preach glad tidings vnto the poore, to binde vp the broken hearted, &c. to comfort all that mourne, to giue them beautie for aſhes, the oile of ioy for mourning, the garment of gladnes for the ſpirit of heauines, &c. as it is Eſay 61.1,2,3. Luke 4.18.

Gods dearest children ſubiect to ſpiri
all affliction

Laſtly, that the afflictions of the mind, the apprehenſion of Gods wrath, the ſting of ſinne, and torments of conſcience, are not any true and certaine ſignes of Gods hatred, hereby it plainly appeareth: in that the moſt deare children of God haue beene ſubiect to them, and that in great meaſure. For example, Iob who by Gods owne teſtimony was the iuſteſt man that liued on the earth, notwithſtanding was ſo grieuouſly afflicted both in body and mind, that he burſteth out into theſe grieuous complaints, Iob 6.4. The arrowes of the Almightie are in me, the venome whereof doth drinke vp my ſpirit, and the terrours of God fight againſt mee. And *Chap.*9.*Verſ.*17. Hee deſtroyeth mee with a tempeſt and woundeth mee without cauſe. 18. He wil not ſuffer me to take my breath, but filleth me with bitternes. So, *Chap.*13.24. Wherfore hideſt thou thy face and takeſt mee for thine enemie? And *Verſ.*26. Thou writeſt bitter things againſt mee, and makeſt mee to poſſeſſe the iniquities of my youth. And *Chap.*16.9. His wrath hath torne me, and he hateth me and gnaſheth vpon me with his teeth; mine enemie hath ſharpened his eyes againſt mee. And *Chap.*19.11. He hath kindled his wrath againſt me, and counteth me as one of his enemies. Looke alſo vpon the example of the Prophet Dauid, who though he were a man according to Gods owne heart, yet was hee made to drinke a deepe draught in this cup of inward afflictions, and was vexed not onely outwardly in his eſtate, goods and bodie, but alſo, in his ſoule, with the ſenſe of Gods wrath, with the waight of ſinne, and the terrours and torments of conſcience, which made him to vtter theſe and ſuch like pittifull complaints in the booke of the Pſalmes, *Pſal.*6.3. My ſoule is alſo ſore troubled: but Lord how long wilt thou delay? And *Verſ.*6. I fainted in my mourning: I cauſe my bed euery night to ſwim, and water my couch with my teares. So *Pſal.*38.2. Thine arrowes haue light vpon me, and thine hand lieth vpon mee. 3. There is nothing ſound in my fleſh, becauſe of thine anger: neither is there any reſt in my bones becauſe of my ſinne. 4. For mine iniquities are gone ouer mine head, and as a waightie burthen they are too heauie for me, &c. And *Pſal.*88.7. Thine indignation lieth vpon me, and thou haſt vexed me with all thy waues. And *Verſ.*14. Lord why doeſt thou reiect my ſoule, and hideſt thy face from me? 15. I am afflicted and at the point of death: from my youth I ſuffer thy terrors, doubting of my life. 16. Thine indignations goe ouer me, and thy feare hath cut me off. So in the 77. Pſalme hee taketh vp this lamentable complaint: *Verſ.*7. Will the Lord abſent himſelfe for euer? and will hee ſhew no more fauour? 8. Is his mercie cleane gone for euer? doth his promiſe faile for euermore? 9. Hath God forgotten to be mercifull? hath hee ſhut vp his tender mercies in diſpleaſure? 10. And I ſaid, this is my death. Looke alſo vpon the Apoſtle Paul, who though he were a choſen veſſell, veſſell, whom God had ſeparated from his mothers wombe to carrie his Name before the Gentiles, yet was he afflicted grieuouſly, not only outwardly in bodie, as hee profeſſeth, but alſo in minde; for the meſſenger of Satan was ſent to buffet him, and hee had a long time a pricke in the fleſh, from which he could not be freed, though hee often begged this fauour at Gods hand, as appeareth, 2.Cor.12.7,8. And the burthen of ſin grieuouſly afflicting his conſcience, forced him to cry out, *Ro.7.24. So that by theſe and many ſuch like examples, that is manifeſt vnto our comforts which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1.Cor.10.13. There hath no tentation taken you but ſuch as appertaineth to man; for the ſame afflictions (which wee ſuffer) are accompliſhed in our brethren which are in the world, as it is, 1.Pet.5. verſ.9. Yea the ſame and far greater were endured by our head Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe, who receiued deepe and griſly wounds, in reſpect of thoſe ſmall ſcratches which we ſuffer, and drunke the full cup of Gods heauy diſpleaſure, of which we onely ſip or taſte. For he was not onely in his outward ſtate dejected and reputed as an abject amongſt men, nor perſecuted by his cruell enemies alone, euen to the taking away of his precious life, by a cruell and ſhamefull death; but alſo inwardly in his ſoule hee ſuſtained farre more heauie croſſes then that which hee outwardly carried on his ſhoulders, though the waight thereof cauſed him to faint for wearineſſe. For to ſay nothing of Satans tentations and the power of Hell which was ſet againſt him, let vs conſider of that bitter agonie which he ſuſtained in the garden, where the burthen of Gods anger, for our ſinnes was ſo heauie vpon him, that it preſſed out of his bleſſed bodie a ſweate of water and bloud: nor was he preſently eaſed of this vnſupportable waight, but hee was faine to beare it euen vnto his croſſe; neither was he comforted in mind when the pangs of death had taken hold of his bodie, but euen then he was ſo vexed with the ſenſe of his Fathers diſpleaſure, that in bitterneſſe of ſoule he cryeth out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me: Nor that he deſpaired vtterly of Gods loue and aſſiſtance, or thought himſelfe a reprobate and caſt-away, for hee calleth him ſtill his God: but the Deitie hauing for a time withdrawne it ſelfe, to the end the humane nature might ſuffer that puniſhment which wee had deſerued euen vnto death it ſelfe, which otherwiſe it could not haue bin ſubject vnto, he vttereth this ſpeech truly according to his preſent ſenſe and apprehenſion. Now if wee conſider who it is that was thus grieuouſly afflicted both in bodie and mind, wee ſhall find that it was not one hated of God, but his onely begotten and beſt beloued Sonne, in whom he profeſſeth himſelfe to be well pleaſed, Matth.3.17. Seeing therefore our Sauiour Chriſt who was the naturall Sonne and heire of God, and ſo tenderly beloued of his heauenly Father that in him he loueth all his children, did notwithſtanding endure not onely grieuous afflictions of body, but the intolerable burthen of his Fathers diſpleaſure in his ſoule alſo: why ſhould wee imagine that either our outward or inward afflictions are any ſignes or arguments that God hateth or hath rejected vs? eſpecially conſidering that hee hath predeſtinated vs to be made like to the image of his Sonne, not onely in his glory, but alſo in his afflictions: ſo that firſt we muſt ſuffer with him, and after raigne with him, as it is Rom.8.29. 2.Tim.2.12.

But it may bee objected that our Sauiour Chriſt ſuffered all this, not for any ſinne that was in himſelfe, for he did no ſinne, neither was their guile found in his mouth, 1.Pet.2.22. but he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was broken for our iniquities, as it is Eſa.53.5. And therefore conſidering that the Lord did thus hate ſin, euen when his dearely beloued Sonne did take it vpon him; how much more will he hate it in vs? if hee ſo ſeuerely puniſhed his deare Darling when hee had taken the ſins of others vpon him; how fearefull puniſhments are prepared for the ſinners themſelues? I anſwere, that indeed Chriſt who was iuſt did ſuffer for vs who were vniuſt, as it is 1.Pet.3.18. and that ſinne is ſo odious to Gods eyes, that rather then it ſhould not be puniſhed, hee would puniſh it in his dearely beloued Sonne. The conſideration whereof ſhould make vs alſo to hate and flie from it as the greateſt euill. But yet this ſhould be ſo farre off from diſcouraging vs, or from making vs doubt of Gods loue, that nothing in the world doth more aſſure vs thereof; no conſolation can be imagined more comfortable. For what greater teſtimonie of Gods loue can bee imagined, then that when we were ſtrangers, yea enemies to God, he ſhould ſend his deare beloued Sonne to die for vs, to the end that by this meanes his juſtice might be ſatisfied, his wrath appeaſed, and we being receiued into grace and fauour, might be made heires of euerlaſting life? what greater aſſurance can we haue that our ſinnes are forgiuen vs, then that they are alreadie puniſhed in Chriſt? it being againſt the juſtice of God to puniſh the ſame ſinnes twice? What ſtronger argument can bee brought, to proue that we ſhall neuer be ſubject to Gods wrath, nor be caſt away in his heauie diſpleaſure; then that our Sauiour hath borne his Fathers anger, to the end hee might reconcile vs vnto him? And therefore though our Sauiour ſuffered theſe outward and inward afflictions, not as hee was the dearely beloued Sonne of God who was free from ſin, but as he was our Mediator, who had taken vpon him our ſins, to the end hee might ſatisfie his Fathers iuſtice; yet ſeeing he endured theſe things in our ſtead, to the end we might be freed from them, hence ariſeth vnto euery true Chriſtian ſound comfort, and certaine aſſurance of Gods loue and goodneſſe towards him.

§. Sect. 7. A dangerous tentation grounded vpō our not profiting by affliction.

But the tempter will further vrge this obiection after this manner. Let it be granted (will hee ſay) that God doth chaſtiſe ſometime his children whom he loueth, both with outward and inward afflictions, and that they ſuffer euen the ſame miſeries which thou endureſt; yet ſeeing they are ſometimes puniſhments alſo which he inflicteth vpon the wicked, hence thou canſt not gather that they are fatherly chaſtiſements and ſignes of his loue to thee: yea contrariwiſe thou mayeſt aſſure thy ſelfe, that they are fearefull puniſhments and ſignes of Gods hatred, which God in iuſtice inflicteth on thee for thy ſinnes, that others may bee warned by thine example. For if they were chaſtiſements and fatherly corrections, then would they indeed correct thee, that is, reforme and amend thee; for this is the end why God inflicteth them on his children, & his end cannot be fruſtrate: but in thee there is no reformation wrought, nor any encreaſe of patience; whereas in the faithfull, tribulation bringeth forth patience, as euen by the Scriptures it is manifeſt. Yea contrariwiſe when the hand of God is vpon thee, thou bewrayeſt great impatiencie, and vttereſt inconſiderate ſpeeches, which tend to Gods diſhonour, giue offence to the World, and wound thine owne conſcience. And therefore howſoeuer to others, theſe are fatherly chaſtiſements, yet to thee they are ſeuere puniſhments, which moue thee rather to deſpaire, then aſſure thee of Gods loue.

Rom. 5. 3.

That it is no fit time to iudge of our ſpirituall graces in the conflict of tentations.

To this we anſwere, that it cannot be denied, but that Gods corrections doe correct and amend his children, and that afflictions ſerue to the encreaſing of their patience, faith and other graces; but yet let vs know that Sathan playeth the falſe deceiuer, when hee mooueth vs to looke for the aſſurance of Gods loue, and for our amendment and increaſe of Gods grace, in the very time when the hand of God is vpon vs, whileſt the conflict laſteth, and the tentation grieuouſly ſhaketh and battereth vs. As if hee ſhould come to a man who hath endured much and tedious ſickneſſe, and ſhould ſay vnto him, thou diddeſt imagine thy ſelfe a while agoe very beautifull and exceeding ſtrong, but thou waſt much deceiued, for if thou lookeſt in a glaſſe thou ſhalt preſently perceiue that thou art leane, pale and deformed, and if thou makeſt triall of thy ſtrength, thou ſhalt find that it is ſcarce ſufficient to ſuſtaine the waight of thine owne bodie. Now who would not deride ſuch fond reaſoning? Who could not eaſily anſwere, that iudgement is not to be taken of the beautie and ſtrength of the body in the time of ſickneſſe, but in the time of health? But this is the very like caſe, and thus ſottiſhly doth Satan conclude, or rather delude Gods children in the time of tentation. For he ſaith thus vnto them, thou diddeſt perſwade thy ſelfe that thou art the childe of God, and in his loue and fauour, that thou art endued with faith, patience and other graces, and daily increaſeſt in them; but now thou art come to the triall it proueth farre otherwiſe; for thy faith is turned into doubting or infidelitie, and thy patience to impatiencie, and therefore there is no likelihood that thou art beloued of God, for then thou wouldeſt profit by afflictions, and increaſe in grace and ſtrength, whereas thou bewrayeſt nothing but thy manifold corruptions. But we are to know that wee are not to iudge of our grace and ſtrength, in the time of tentation and of the ſpirituall conflict, when as our ſoules are grieuouſly ſicke with the ſenſe of ſinne and apprehenſion of Gods heauie diſpleaſure incurred thereby, when as the fire of Gods Spirit is couered with the aſhes of our corruptions, and the fruits and graces thereof nipped with the cold winter and boyſterous blaſts of tentations, but wee are to looke into our ſelues when the fit is paſt and the conflict ended, and then ſhall we find our patience by experience of Gods loue confirmed, our faith renued, and all other graces ſtrengthened and increaſed; and then ſhall wee cleerely diſcerne the bright beames of Gods loue and fauour, ſhining vpon vs, when the clouds of tentation are paſt away which did hide them from vs.

But if in the time of triall and tentation we iudge according to our preſent ſenſe and feeling, wee muſt needs be deceiued: for it cannot be denied but that euen the deare children of God who haue receiued a great meaſure of grace; when the hand of God is vpon them doe doubt of his loue and fauour, and when they are grieuouſly afflicted doe bewray their corruption, and ſhew their impatience by vttering inconſiderate ſpeeches. For while wee continue in this life, we haue the reliques of ſinne hanging on vs, and we are partly fleſh and partly ſpirit, yea the fleſh is the ſtronger part, and therefore it is no maruell if the fleſh being pinched in the time of tentation doth complaine, and being lanced deeply with the razor of ſharpe afflictions doth cry out for paine, complaining of the Chirurgion that he dealeth too rigorouſly with him. And if men through bodily ſicknes haue their iudgements blinded, their vnderſtanding dazled and miſled, their memory ouerthrowne, ſo that they can put no difference betweene their friends and their enemies, nemies, but euen raile vpon thoſe who in the time of their health they dearely loued, and think none ſo much their enemie as their Phyſitian, rauing and inconſiderately ſpeaking they know not what; what wonder is it if the like effects follow the ſickneſſe of the ſoule, when it is (as it were) ſet vpon the racke, preſſed with the burthen of ſinne, and tormented with the apprehenſion of Gods anger, conſidering that theſe kind of afflictions are farre more grieuous and without compariſon more intolerable, for a man may ſuſtaine his infirmities, but a wounded ſpirit who can beare? as it is Prou. 28.14. What maruell then is it, if they take God for their enemie, when they feele his ſharpe medicines, though in truth he be their louing Phyſitian, who by this meanes cureth them of their diſeaſes of ſin and corruption? what wonder is it if they vtter rauing ſpeeches when the ſenſe of paine preſſeth them ſo ſore? how is it poſſible but that they ſhould doubt of Gods gratious loue & fauour, when as they preſently taſte of nothing but his rigor and iuſtice?

Wee muſt not therefore iudge of our ſtate while the croſſe is vpon vs, for ſo ſhould we condemne the generation of the iuſt to bee moſt wicked, then ſhould we imagine thoſe who haue excelled in patience to bee moſt wayward and impatient. Looke vpon Iob who is renowned for patience, and you ſhal finde that while the hand of God was vpon him, hee bewrayeth the corruption of the fleſh and ſheweth notable impatiency, curſing the day of natiuitie, and wiſhing that he had neuer beene borne, or elſe that he had preſently after his birth beene ſwallowed vp in the iawes of death, Iob 3. So chapter 6. 8.9. hee thus crieth out like a man vtterly deſperate: O that I might haue my deſire, and that God would grãt me the thing that I long for. 9. That is, that God would deſtroy mee: that hee would let his hand go and cut me off. 10. Then ſhould I yet haue ſome comfort: though I burne with ſorrow: let him not ſpare, &c. Where Iob ſeemeth to deale with God as a condemned malefactor with a iuſt and ſeuere Iudge, who ſeeing the anger of the Iudge incenſed againſt him for his crime, hath no hope that hee can by intreatie and perſwaſions mooue him to reuoke his ſentence of death, and therefore onely deſireth a mitigation of the tortures, and that he may quickly bee diſpatched and rid out of his paine, nam miſericordia genus eſt citò occidere, it is a kind of mercie to bee ſpeedie in execution: So Iob hauing no hope to be freed from his miſeries, deſireth onely this fauour at Gods hands, that he would not (as it were) torment him peece-meale, but make a quick diſpatch of him by laying on a greater waight of afflictions, till by their vnſupportable burthen the breath were preſſed out of his bodie. And Chap. 10.18. Wherefore haſt thou brought mee out of the wombe? Oh that I had periſhed, and that none eye had ſeen me! 19. And that I were as I had not beene, but brought from the wombe to the graue.

Iob 10.18.

Looke vpon the Prophet Dauid who was a man according to Gods owne heart, endued with a ſtedfaſt faith and conſtant patience; and you ſhall perceiue that Gods loue, and the graces of Gods Spirit in him, were ſo ſhadowed with the grieuouſneſſe of his preſent afflictions, that hee could not diſcerne them. For he complaineth like a man vtterly caſt off and rejected of God. Pſal. 88.14. Lord why doeſt thou reiect my ſoule, and hideſt thy face from me? 16. Thine indignation is gone ouer me, and thy feare hath cut me off. The like complaint hee taketh vp, Pſal. 77.8,9,10. Neither had the Prophet in theſe times alwayes the ſpirit of ſupplication and prayer, but ſometimes the grieuouſneſſe of his paine did ſhut his mouth ſo as hee could not confeſſe his ſinne, nor humble himſelfe before his God; though through the waight of affliction, his bones were conſumed, and hee rored for griefe all the day long, as appeareth Pſal. 32.3,4. So Ieremie ſeeing the Word of Gods Ambaſſadours deſpiſed and contemned, could not beare it, but burſteth out into great impatiencie, curſing the day of his birth, and euen the man that brought newes thereof to his Father, because hee was borne to ſee labour and ſorrow, and that his dayes ſhould be conſumed with ſhame: Ier. 20.14,15,18. If therefore wee judge of Iob, Dauid, and Ieremie, according to their outward behauiour and their owne inward feeling in the time of afflictions, and in the combat of tentations; wee ſhould thinke them void of faith, impatient, and deſtitute of all aſſurance and hope of Gods loue and fauour: but the Scriptures teach vs otherwiſe, propounding them vnto vs as patternes of patience and true godlineſſe; and themſelues alſo at other times doe ſhew their ſingular faith, incomparable patience and the reſt of the graces of Gods Spirit. Seeing then this is not our caſe alone, but the ſtate of Gods deareſt children, let vs not beleeue the tempter telling vs that wee are not Gods children, becauſe we ſee not Gods graces ſo plainly in the time of tentation and triall, yea contrariwiſe bewray our impatiencie and other corruptions: but let vs bee truly humbled in the ſight of our infirmities, labouring and ſtriuing to reforme them, and judge of our ſtate, not as wee finde it in the time of the conflict, but as it was, or is before, or after the combat is ended.

§. Sect.10. The obiection out of *Eccleſ.*9 1. anſwered.

Laſtly, the tempter objecteth, and hath ſtirred vp his wicked inſtrumẽts the enemies of Gods truth to defend, that though we are not wholly to deſpaire of Gods loue, yet we muſt doubt thereof: and to this purpoſe they alleage that ſaying, Eccleſ.9.1. which they reade thus: I haue handled all theſe things in my heart that I might curiouſly vnderſtand: Iuſt and wiſe men and their workes are in the hand of God; and notwithſtanding a man knoweth not whether hee be worthy of loue or hatred, but all things are kept vncertaine for the time to come, &c. I anſwere, that if Gods loue or hatred did depend vpon our owne wotthineſſe or vnworthineſſe, wee might well doubt; nay I will ſay more, wee might juſtly deſpaire of his grace and good will, and certainly aſſure our ſelues that wee were hated and abhorred of God; for this, if any thing, we haue deſerued. But the truth is, that as Satan temptihg our Sauiour, and quoting Scripture for his purpoſe, left out that which made againſt him; ſo heere by his inſtruments aſſaulting his members, he addeth to the Scriptures that which maketh for him. For neither in the Hebrew, which is the originall, nor in the Greeke tranſlation is there any one word of our worthineſſe or vnworthineſſe; but thus it is in the text as it is truly tranſlated in our Bibles; No man knoweth either loue or hatred of all that is before them: and whereas they reade the words following thus; But all things are kept vncertaine for the time to come, they moſt groſly depraue the text, which is thus to be read as wee haue it tranſlated; All things come alike to all, and the ſame condition is to the iuſt and the wicked: & thus alſo doth Arias Montanus, one of the moſt learned amongſt themſelues tranſlate it.

Neither will their corrupt tranſlation ſtand with the ſenſe and truth of the place: for as hee ſaith, no man knoweth whether hee be worthy of hatred: but this is vtterly falſe; for ſo ſhould we ſay that we could not know whether the Sodomites for their filthineſſe, the Canaanites for their idolatrie, Iulian for his apoſtaſie were worthy to bee hated of God; whereas the Scriptures witneſſe the cleane contrary, & euen they themſelues doe confeſſe, that they who deſperately giue ouer themſelues into all ſin and wickedneſſe, are not to doubt but that they are worthy of Gods anger and heauy diſpleaſure, why therefore on the other ſide may not thoſe who are truely conuerted vnto God, and indued with a liuely faith which worketh by loue, be aſſured of Gods loue and fauour, ſeeing hee hath aſſured them hereof in his Word? Nay in the ſame Chapter, Verſe 7. their corrupt expoſition is ouerthrowne; for there he biddeth vs to eate our bread with ioy, and to drinke our wine with a cheerefull heart, for God now accepteth our workes. Now, though God did indeed accept our workes, yet we could not be moued to ioy and cheerefulneſſe of heart hereby, vnleſſe alſo wee might be aſſured of his acceptation.

§. Sect. I
The expoſi

9.1.

But let vs examine theſe words and ſhew the true ſenſe of them. There are two expoſitions giuen, which may ſtand with the analogie of faith and the circumſtances of the text. For ſome vnderſtand theſe words not of Gods loue or hatred, but of mans loue towards thoſe things he deſires, and of his hatred towards thoſe things he flieth; & then this is the ſenſe of the place; A man knoweth not whether thoſe things which hee loueth, as pleaſures, honours, & riches, or thoſe things which he hateth, namely, croſſes & afflictions ſhall happen vnto him, becauſe they are only diſpoſed by the prouidence of God who giueth theſe outward things indifferently to all both juſt and vnjuſt. So that if the words are thus to be vnderſtood, there is no ſhew of reaſon in the Papiſts expoſition. Secondly, let it be granted that it is to be vnderſtood of Gods loue towards vs, yet it will make nothing for their purpoſe: for then this is the plaine ſenſe of the words; No man can know whether hee be loued or hated of God by theſe common outward things which happen alike to all, and in reſpect whereof there is the ſame condition to the juſt and the wicked, and to the pure and polluted, to thoſe that worſhip God & thoſe that worſhip him not. There is no judgement that can be giuen, either of our ſelues or others in reſpect of our outward ſtate; for ſometime the juſt are poore, the vnjuſt rich, the wicked aduanced to honour, and the godly afflicted and perſecuted. For example, Eſau enjoyed his delights and plentie of all things, Iacob like a poore Pilgrime went into a ſtrange Country, hauing no other riches but his clothes on his backe and his ſtaffe in his hand, and when hee was come amongſt his friends hee endured tedious labours, and many miſeries. And ſo Dauid was perſecuted, whileſt Saul did ſit on the throne; yea our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe was arraigned at the barre and condemned, whileſt Pilate and the cheife Prieſts and Phariſies ſate in the ſeate of juſtice, ouerſwaying all at their owne pleaſures. And yet at the ſame time, Iacob was beloued, Eſau hated; Dauid choſen of God, Saul rejected; our Sauiour Chriſt the deare ſonne of his heauenly Father, and his enemies the inſtruments and limmes of Satan. So that it is moſt true that Salomon ſpeaketh, namely, no man can haue aſſurance of Gods loue and fauour by theſe outward benefits beſtowed both vpon the godly and wicked; neither by his aduerſities and afflictions can gather that the Lord hateth him: for theſe befall all indifferently, as it pleaſeth God to puniſh the reprobate, or to chaſtiſe his owne children. But though wee can gather no ſound argument from theſe outward things of Gods loue, yet it followeth not that there is no other means to aſſure vs hereof: for by the ſame reaſon we may conclude that man is no better then brute beaſts, and that there is no immortalitie of the ſoule, becauſe it is ſaid, *Eccleſ.*3.19. that the condition of the children of men and the condition of beaſts is the ſame. But as the Wiſeman ſpeaketh there of their outward mortalitie alone, and not abſolutely in all reſpects; and therefore he ſaith that they are alike to ſee to, that is, in outward appearance, Verſe 18. and explaineth himſelfe in the words following; for (ſaith he) as one dieth ſo dieth the other: ſo he doth not meane heere ſimply that there is no aſſurance of Gods loue, but onely in reſpect of theſe outward things, and therefore he addeth, that in theſe outward reſpects all things come alike to all, and the ſame condition is to the juſt and the wicked.

§.Sect.12.
How Gods loue towards vs is manifeſted and knowne.

Rom.8.

Iohn 3 16.

Rom.8.38.

Though then there is no aſſurance of Gods loue to bee gathered out of our worldly eſtate, yet it cannot hence bee concluded that therefore there is no meanes whereby wee may bee aſſured hereof. For the Lord hath giuen vnto vs his Word and mercifull promiſes, hee hath giuen vnto vs his holy ſpirit *crying in our hearts Abba Father, and witneſſing to our ſpirits that we are the ſonnes of God, Rom.*8. He hath manifeſted his loue by giuing vs his onely Son, and begetting in vs by his Word and Spirit a liuely faith, whereby we may apply him & all his benefits vnto vs. Whoſoeuer therefore beleeueth truly in Ieſus Chriſt, he may be aſſured of Gods loue and euerlaſting life, according to that Iohn 3.16. So God loued the world, that he gaue his onely begotten ſonne, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life. If therfore we beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt, we need not to deſpaire, no nor to doubt of Gods loue and fauour towards vs; notwithſtanding our vnworthineſſe, nor yet in regard of the manifold afflictions which God inflicteth on vs, neither in reſpect of thoſe manifold infirmities which we bewray whileſt the hand of God is vpon vs: but we may ſoundly and aſſuredly conclude with the Apoſtle Paul, *Rom.*8.38. I am perſwaded that neither death nor life, nor Angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, 39. Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature ſhall be able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord.

CHAP. VI.

Of Gods election, the cauſes, ſubiect, obiect and properties thereof.

§.Sect.1.
Of the author and chiefe efficient of our election.

AND ſo much concerning the firſt cauſe of our ſaluation, namely Gods loue and good will, and alſo the tentations of Satan, whereby hee laboureth to impugne our aſſurance therof. The ſecond cauſe is Gods free election, which proceedeth from the other; for whom he loueth, thoſe he electeth vnto euerlaſting life and happineſſe, it being an inſeparable fruit of loue to ſeeke the good and felicitie of the partie beloued. Election therefore is that part of Gods eternall and immutable decree, whereby of his free loue and vndeſerued grace hee hath pre-ordained ſome in Chriſt vnto ſaluation, and to the vſe of the meanes tending thereunto, for the prayſe of the glory of his grace. In this definition is ſet downe firſt the efficient cauſe or author of our election, namely God himſelfe, the Father, the Sonne, and the Holy Ghoſt; and this appeareth, *Epheſ.*1.4. Hee hath choſen vs in him before the foundation of the world, that we ſhould be holy, &c. And Iohn 15,16. Yee haue not choſen mee, but I haue choſen you, and ordained you that yee go and bring forth fruit, &c. Secondly, the motiue or impulſiue cauſe of Gods election is expreſſed, namely, Gods free loue, meere good will and vndeſerued grace. And this alſo is manifeſt, Luke 12.32. Feare not little flocke, for it is your Fathers pleaſure to giue you a Kingdome. And *Epheſ.*1.5. who hath predeſtinated vs to be adopted through Ieſus Chriſt vnto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his will.

§.Sect.2.
That there was no other cauſe which moued God to elect vs, but his free grace and meere good will.

Here therefore are excluded all other cauſes, wherewith diuers haue imagined God was moued to elect vs; as namely our owne will, the foreſeeing of our workes, worthineſſe or faith, and the merits of our Sauiour Chriſt. And that theſe were not the cauſes which moued the Lord to elect vs, it may be proued by manifeſt teſtimonies of Scripture. Firſt, our owne will is expreſly excluded, *Rom.*9.16. It is not in him that willeth or runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercie. Secondly, not the foreſight of our own works, for the Apoſtle plainly affirmeth, *Rom.*9.11, 12. that before the children were borne, and when they had neither done good or euill, that the purpoſe of God might remaine according to election, not by workes, but by him that calleth: 12, It was ſaid vnto her, the elder ſhall ſerue the younger: 13. As it is written, I haue loued Iacob and hated Eſau. And chap. 11.5,6. hee ſaith, that Gods election is of grace, and if it bee of grace it is no more of workes, or elſe were grace no more grace. Thirdly, not the foreſight of any worthines in vs more then in others: For there is no difference, for all haue ſinned and are depriued of the glory of God: as it is *Ro.*3.23. And the Apoſtle affirmeth both of himſelfe & others, *that they were all dead in their ſinnes, and by nature the children of wrath as well as others, Epheſ.*2.1,3. Fourthly, the Lord reſpected not our faith as an impulſiue cauſe mouing him to elect vs, but onely as an effect of our election; neither was the Lord mercifull vnto vs in making choice of vs to be partakers of euerlaſting happineſſe, becauſe wee were faithfull, but that we might be faithfull, as Paul profeſſeth of himſelfe, 1. Cor. 7. 25. And the Holy Ghoſt affirmeth, Acts 13.46. that as many of the Gentiles as were ordained vnto eternall life beleeued. Laſtly, although the merit of Chriſt was the onely meritorious cauſe of our ſaluation, yet it was not the cauſe of Gods election, for Gods election was from all eternitie, and the cauſe of Chriſts merits, which were in time and the effects of Gods election, and therefore that which came after could not be the cauſe of that which was from all eternitie, neither can the effect produce the cauſe, but the cauſe the effect. Moreouer, wee are not ſaid in the Scriptures to bee choſen for Chriſt, but in Chriſt, Epheſ. 1.4. And the Apoſtle Iohn affirmeth, that Gods eternall loue was the cauſe which mooued the Lord to ſend his Sonne to redeeme vs by his death, and not that his death was the cauſe of his loue, Iohn 3.16.

And ſo much concerning the efficient cauſe of our electiō. The materiall cauſe thereof was the purpoſe or counſell of God himſelfe, whereby hee determined to elect vs. The formall cauſe was the ſeuering and ſetting apart of certaine men which were to be ſaued, ſelected from the reſt who were rejected. The end of Gods election was twofold: the firſt and chiefe end was the glory of God, ſet forth by manifeſting his grace and mercie in the ſaluation of the faithfull. And this the Apoſtle plainly expreſſeth, Rom. 9. 23. namely, that the end of Gods election is, that he might declare the riches of his glory in the veſſels of mercie, which he hath prepared vnto glory. And Epheſ. 1.4,5,6. hee ſaith, that he hath choſen vs in Chriſt and predeſtinated vs, to the praiſe of the glorie of his grace. The ſecond end which is inferiour and ſubordinate to the other, is the ſaluation of the elect, and this alſo is expreſſed by the Apoſtle, Rom. 9. 23. where he ſaith, that the elect are prepared vnto glorie. And Act. 13. 48. the Holy Ghoſt ſaith, as many as were ordained to eternall life beleeued: thereby implying that the ſaluation of the elect is the end of Gods election. And theſe are the cauſes of Gods election. The effects which inſeparably follow hereupon, are Chriſt the Mediatour, and the whole worke of his mediation & our redemption wrought by him, our adoption, effectuall calling, juſtification, ſanctification, and glorification; and theſe are the degrees and meanes of our election, which are as well contained in Gods Decree as our ſaluation it ſelfe.

§. Sect. 4. Of the ſubiect, obiect, and properties of Gods election,

The ſubiect in which wee are elected, is Chriſt Ieſus our Mediatour and head; not in regard of his Deitie alone, for ſo hee is the efficient and primary cauſe; nor in reſpect of his humanitie alone, but as hee is God and man. And we are therefore elected in him, both becauſe in our ſelues wee were not capable of ſuch glorious dignitie, as alſo becauſe hee alone is a fit Meditatour in whom we ſhould be elected, ſeeing with our election there is an vnion and conjunction of vs with God who hath elected vs. The obiect of Gods election are all thoſe who are pre-ordained vnto euerlaſting life, and whom the Lord will eternally ſaue; which being conſidered in themſelues are a great number, but yet in reſpect of the number of the reprobates but a ſmall and little flocke; for though many be called, yet few are choſen, as Chriſt himſelfe affirmeth, Math. 22.14. The laſt thing, which alſo is expreſſed in the definition, are certaine properties attributed to Gods election; namely, that it is eternall, free and immutable. That this decree is eternall, it appeareth, Epheſ. 1.4. Hee hath choſen vs in him before the foundation of the world. So Rom. 9.11. Secondly, that it is free and of his meere grace, it is manifeſt, Ro. 9.18. He hath mercy on whom he will, and whom he will hee hardeneth. So Epheſ. 1.11. In whom we are choſen when wee were predeſtinate, according to the purpoſe of him which worketh all things after the counſell of his owne will. Laſtly, that it is immutable and moſt firme and certaine, it plainly appeareth, 2. Tim. 2.19. The foundation of God remayneth ſure, and hath this ſeale, the Lord knoweth who are his. Where wee may obſerue, that this immutabilitie and certaintie of Gods decree, doth not depend vpon vs or our perſeuerance, but vpon Gods good pleaſure and foreknowledge, for it is a foundation in it ſelfe firme and ſtable, and hath not the ſeale of our worthineſſe or perſeuerance in grace, but of Gods fore-knowledge whereby he knoweth who are his.

CHAP. VII.

Satans tentations concerning Gods election anſwered, and firſt thoſe wherewith he aſſaulteth carnall worldlings.

§. Sect. 1. Satans tentation whereby he perſwade worldlings, that all in the end ſhall be ſaued, anſwered.

NOw concerning this decree of election and the aſſurance thereof, there are two ſorts of Satans tentations: the firſt he ſuggeſteth into the minds of carnall worldlings to nouriſh in them fond preſumption and carnall ſecuritie: the other, into the minds of weake Chriſtians, whereby hee mooueth them to doubt and deſpaire of their election to euerlaſting life. The worldly man hee aſſaulteth with two principall tentations: firſt, he perſwadeth him that there is no election at al or reprobation, but that all in the end ſhall be ſaued. Which groſſe abſurditie that he may make more plauſible and probable, hee ſetteth before them the infinite mercie of God, and the generall promiſes and conſolations in the Goſpell: as, that he will not the death of a ſinner, and that hee will that all men ſhall be ſaued, in both places cunningly diſſembling that which followeth; for to the firſt place is added, but that he repent, and in the latter, that they who ſhall be ſaued muſt alſo come to the knowledge of the truth. But this tentation is ſo palpably abſurd, that it becommeth not Satans policie to vſe it to any, but thoſe onely whoſe hearts are hardned, their eyes blinded, their conſciences ſeared, and who hauing not beleeued and loued the truth, are giuen ouer of God to beleeue ſtrong deluſions; and therefore I will not ſpend much time in anſwering it: onely let ſuch men as are ſeduced with Satans lies know thus much, that Gods mercie is a juſt mercie, as his juſtice is a mercifull juſtice; that God is infinite in both, & no leſſe glorified in the manifeſtatiō of the one then of the other. Let them know that there are no promiſes of the Goſpell ſo generall, which are not limited with the condition of faith, and the fruit thereof vnfained repentance. Let them know, that God who is not onely mercifull but alſo true, yea truth it ſelfe, hath in his Word reuealed his will, as well concerning the eternall death and deſtruction of the wicked, as the ſaluation of the godly. Hee hath ſaid, that many are called and few choſen; that the gate of Heauen is ſo ſtrait, that there are few who find it; that hee will ſay to the workers of iniquitie, Goe your wayes, I know you not; that he will make a ſeparation betweene the ſheepe and the Goats, and as he ſaith to the one, Come yee bleſſed of my Father, inherit yee the Kingdome prepared for you from the foundations of the world, ſo he will ſay to the other, Depart from me yee curſed into euerlaſting fire, which is prepared for the Deuill and his angels. Let them know that neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor wantons, nor buggerers, nor theeues, nor couetous, nor drunkards, nor railers, nor extortioners, nor any that liue in the like ſinnes without repentance, ſhall inherit the Kingdome of God, for truth it ſelfe hath ſpoken it, 1. Cor.6,9,10. but they ſhall haue their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimſtone, which is the ſecond death, as it is, Reuel.21.8. And therefore let not Satan bewitch them, by ſetting before their eyes Gods mercie; for as ſure as God is juſt, and true of his word, ſo ſurely ſhall ſuch as continue in their ſinnes, without repentance, be eternally condemned; neither is it any impeachment to Gods mercy, if he exerciſe his juſtice in inflicting due puniſhment vpon obſtinate and rebellious ſinners, ſeeing it is ſufficiently manifeſted in the ſaluation of thoſe who repent and beleeue.

§. Sect.2.
Satans tentations grounded vpon the vnchangeableneſſe of Gods predeſtination

The ſecond tentation which Satan ſuggeſteth into the minds of carnall men, to the end they may runne on in their deſperate courſes, and wallow ſtill in the pleaſing filth of their corruptions, he thus frameth; Why enjoyeſt thou not (ſaith hee) thy pleaſures? why art thou afraid to ſatisfie all thy deſires? what needeſt thou to take any paines in performing Gods worſhip and ſeruice, and to what purpoſe ſhouldeſt thou forſake thy pleaſing ſinnes, ſtudying and ſtriuing after mortification and newneſſe of life, which is ſo bitter and vnpleaſant vnto thee? for Gods decree of predeſtination is ſure and moſt vnchangeable as himſelfe is without change, and therefore if thou art elected of God thou mayeſt follow thy delights, go on in thy ſins, liue as thou liſt, yet ſurely thou ſhalt be ſaued, and hee will thee repentance, though it be deferred to the laſt gaſpe. But if on the otherſide thou art a reprobate, rejected of God in his eternall counſell, then take what paines thou wilt, make thy throate hoarſe with praying, and thy bags emptie with giuing almes, be neuer ſo diligent in Gods ſeruice, neuer ſo carefull in mortifying thy ſins, yet all is in vaine, for thoſe whom hee hath reprobated ſhall be condemned. And therefore much better were it to take thy pleaſure and to follow thine own deſires whileſt thou art in this life, for the puniſhments of the life to come will be enough, though thou addeſt no torments of this life vnto them.

§. Sect.3.
That the former tentation is both fooliſh & ridiculous, falſe and impious.

And thus doth Satan reaſon in the minde of a carnall man, partly to continue and increaſe his ſecuritie in the courſe of ſinne, and partly to diſcredit the holy doctrine of Gods eternall predeſtination, as though it it opened a doore to all licentiouſneſſe. But if wee conſider of this tentation aright, and ſound it to the bottome, wee ſhall find firſt that it is moſt fooliſh and ridiculous, ſecondly, that it is moſt falſe and impious. That it is moſt fooliſh it will eaſily appeare, if wee vſe the like manner of reaſoning in worldly matters; for it is all one as if a man ſhould thus ſay: thy time is appointed, and the Lord in his counſaile hath ſet downe how long thou ſhalt liue; if therefore it bee ordained that thy time ſhall be ſhort, vſe what means thou wilt of phyſicke and good diet, yet ſhalt thou not prolong it one day; but if God hath decreed that thou ſhalt liue to old age, take what courſes thou wilt, runne into all deſperate dangers, vſe ſurfetting and all diſorder of diet, nay, eate no meate at all, and yet thou ſhalt liue till thou art an old man. Or as if he ſhould ſay; God hath decreed alreadie whether thou ſhalt be rich or poore, and if he hath appointed thee to be poore, take neuer ſo much paines, follow thy calling as diligently as thou wilt, abſtaine from all waſtfulneſſe and prodigalitie, yet ſhalt thou neuer get any wealth: but if thou art pre-ordained to be rich, ſell all thou haſt and ſcatter it abroad in the ſtreets, ſpend thy time in gaming, drinking and whoring, neuer troubling thy head with care, nor thy hands with worke, yet ſhalt thou bee a wealthy man. Now who would not laugh at ſuch abſurd manner of reaſoning if any ſhould vſe it? becauſe euery man knoweth, that as God hath decreed the time of our life, ſo hee hath decreed alſo that wee ſhould vſe the meanes whereby our liues may bee preſerued, ſo long as hee hath ordained that wee ſhould liue, namely, auoyding of dangers, good diet, and phyſicke; and as he hath decreed that a man ſhould be rich, ſo he hath decreed alſo that hee ſhould vſe all good meanes of attaining vnto riches, namely, prouidence and paines in getting, and care and frugalitie in keeping that he hath gotten; and whoſoeuer vſe not the meanes, doe make it manifeſt that they were not ordained vnto the end. Although indeed, becauſe the Lord would ſhew his abſolute & almighty power, he doth not alwayes tie himſelfe vnto means, but ſometime croſſeth and maketh them vneffectuall to their ends, and ſometime hee effecteth what he will, without or contrary to all meanes; and hence it is that ſome quickly die who vſe all meanes to preſerue health, and ſome become poore who vſe all meanes of obtaining riches, whereas others being depriued of the meanes attaine vnto long life & riches by the immediate bleſſing of God. But ordinarily the meanes and end goe together, and therefore it is fond preſumption to imagine or hope, without the vſe of the meanes, to attaine vnto the end. And thus it is alſo in ſpirituall matters appertaining to euerlaſting life; thoſe whom God hath elected, he hath ordained alſo that they ſhould attaine vnto & vſe all good meanes tending thereunto, namely faith, repentance, ſanctification; and newnes of life: and therefore it is as abſurd for any to imagine, that they ſhall be ſaued continuing in their ignorance, infidelitie, vnrepentancie, and filthy corruptions, as it is for a man to thinke that he ſhall liue to be old, and yet runneth into all dangers, forſaketh phyſicke yea and food alſo whereby his life ſhould be ſuſtained. For the ſpiritual meanes of ſaluation are as well (nay much more) contained in Gods decree, as the corporall meanes of preſeruing life: for it hath beene heard of, that ſome haue liued in the middeſt of dangers, and in the abſence of meate, for a long time; but it was neuer heard that any haue attained vnto euerlaſting life without faith, repentance, and ſanctification: for euen the thiefe vpon the croſſe beleeued in Chriſt, and ſhewed the fruits of his faith in acknowledging his own ſinne, reproouing his fellow, in confeſſing our Sauiour Chriſt euen then when his Apoſtles denied and forſooke him, in calling vpon his Name and deſiring by his meanes euerlaſting life.

§. Sect.3. Satans te- tion ground- vpon the vn- changeable of Gods De- cree, falſe impious,

But as this tentation is fooliſh, ſo alſo it is falſe: for whereas he ſaith that though we liue in our ſinnes without repentance, yet we may be elected and therefore ſhall be ſaued; and though we take neuer ſo great paines in Gods worſhip and ſeruice, and moſt carefully indeuour to ſpend our liues in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, yet wee may be reprobates and therefore ſhall be condemned; this is vtterly vntrue: for whomſoeuer the Lord hath ordained to euerlaſting life, thoſe alſo he hath ordained to vſe the meanes whereby they may be ſaued, and conſequently whoſoeuer carefully vſe theſe meanes may be aſſured of their ſaluation, whoſoeuer neglect and deſpiſe theſe meanes they manifeſtly declare that they are not in the number of the elect, ſo long as they continue in their neglect and contempt: for the end and the means tending to the end, are inſeparably joyned in Gods decree; ſo that they who vſe the one ſhall obtaine the other, they who neglect & contemne the meanes ſhall neuer attaine vnto the end.

The end of Gods electi two-fold. Epheſ.1.5,6.

Now the end of Gods election is two fold. The chiefe and principall is his owne glory, as appeareth, Epheſ.1.5,6. Who hath predeſtinated vs to be adopted through Ieſus Chriſt vnto himſelfe, according to the good pleaſure of his will; to the praiſe of the glorie of his grace. And this end the Lord will not ſuffer to be fruſtrate: for his glory ſhall ſhine in all his elect, and therefore wee alſo are moſt carefully to labour that we may further this end; for the more that the praiſe of Gods mercy doth ſhine in vs, the better aſſurance we haue of our election. And ſeeing God is moſt glorified when as our lights ſhine brighteſt before men in a godly and Chriſtian life, therefore let vs bee moſt carefull to ſpend our time in holineſſe & righteouſneſſe, that thereby wee may glorifie our heauenly Father, and alſo make our owne election ſure; for he hath choſen vs that wee ſhould bee holy, and therefore if wee bee holy it is a moſt certaine ſigne that hee hath choſen vs.

Matth.5.16. 1.Pet,2.12.

Epheſ.1.4.

The ſecond end of Gods election.

The ſecond end of Gods election is the ſaluation of his elect; for the juſt accompliſhing whereof, he hath pre-ordained diuers ſubordinate cauſes or meanes, which are the inſeparable effects and fruits of his election; all which are ſo linked one with another, as that the precedent meanes is the cauſe of that which next in order followeth, and Gods Decree the cauſe of all. The effects of Gods election, which are the ſubordinate cauſes or meanes of our ſaluation, are principally three; Vocation, Iuſtification, and Sanctification. By vocation we are ſeparated from the world, made members of the Church, and ingrafted into the body of Chriſt; and this is ordinarily done by the preaching of the Word, being made effectuall by the inward operation of Gods Spirit; or extraordinarily by ſome other meanes, or immediatly by the illumination of the Holy Ghoſt. In our juſtification wee haue the pardon and remiſſion of all our ſins by vertue of Chriſts merit, and are adorned with his righteouſneſſe imputed vnto vs: and this is done, principally by God himſelfe, and inſtrumentally by a liuely faith. Our ſanctification conſiſteth in our dying to ſinne, and riſing vp to newneſſe of life; which is begun, increaſed, and finiſhed in vs by Gods Spirit. Whoſoeuer therefore are predeſtinated to ſaluation, they alſo are effectually called, that is, ſeparate from the world, and ingrafted into the body of Chriſt; and this they attaine vnto by diligent and attentiue hearing of the Word. Whoſoeuer are effectually called, are alſo juſtified; and therefore haue obtained a true and liuely faith. Whoſoeuer are juſtified are alſo ſanctified, that is, die vnto their ſinnes, and riſe againe to newneſſe of life. And conſequently whoſoeuer are ſtill meere worldlings and no true members of Chriſts bodie (as all thoſe are who make no conſcience of hearing Gods Word diligently, reuerently, and attentiuely, nor of treaſuring it vp in their hearts) they are not truly called; whoſoeuer haue not Chriſts righteouſneſſe and obdience imputed and applied vnto them (which none haue that are deſtitute of a true and fruitfull faith) are not juſtified; whoſoeuer liue in their ſinnes, without repentance, without any earneſt deſire and heartie endeuour of ſeruing the Lord in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe of life are not ſanctified, and whoſoeuer are not called, juſtified & ſanctified, ſhall neuer be ſaued; for the end and the meanes tending thereunto are joyned together in Gods Predeſtination. So that where the one is, there the other is; where the one neuer is, there the other ſhall euer bee wanting. And therefore as by our ſanctification, juſtification, and vocation, wee may certainly conclude that we are elected and ſhall be ſaued, ſo if we be without theſe wee may certainly inferre, that we are rejected, & ſhal be condemned if we liue and die in this ſtate. Seeing then this is Gods truth, let not Satan lull vs in ſecuritie with that ſophiſticall cauill; if wee be elected wee ſhall be ſaued liue how we liſt; if we be reprobates we ſhall be condemned, be we neuer ſo earneſt in labouring after godlineſſe; for theſe principles may well ſtand together, it is impoſſible that the elect ſhould periſh, and as impoſſible alſo that any who beleeue not in Chriſt, and bring not forth the fruits of their faith in a godly and Chriſtian life ſhould be ſaued; it cannot bee that the reprobate ſhould attaine vnto euerlaſting happineſſe, and that any ſhould not attaine thereunto, who deſireth and endeuoureth to ſerue and feare the Lord: becauſe predeſtination and ſaluation are ſo coupled together with the meanes that come betweene them, that they cannot poſſibly be ſeuered from one another, nor the meanes from either of them, nor yet amongſt themſelues; euen as the firſt linke of a chaine is joyned with the laſt by thoſe which are betweene them, and theſe which are in the middle one with another.

CHAP. VIII.

Satans tentations whereby he moueth the weak Chriſtian to doubt of his election, anſwered.

§. *Sect.*1. The cauſes which moue Satan and his inſtruments to perſwade the weake Chriſtian to doubt of his election,

ANd theſe are the tentations wherewith Satan aſſaulteth the worldling: but if he haue to deale with a true Chriſtian, who is indeed elected of God, and ſheweth the fruites of his election, by deſiring and endeuouring to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and righteouſnes, then he perſwadeth him to doubt of his election, and to hang as it were wauering in the aire, ſometime lifted vp with hope, ſometime dejected and caſt downe with feare, till at laſt hee being weary and tired with his doubtfull thoughts, and hauing no where to reſt himſelfe, is ſwallowed vp of deſperation. Like vnto a ſilly bird which flieth ouer the maine Ocean, and one while hopeth to attaine vnto the land, another while feareth, ſeeing no place where to light till at laſt being ſo weary that ſhe can fly no further, ſhe falleth downe and is drowned in the Sea: So theſe one while hope, and ſoone after finding their owne infirmities, and not ſeeing where they may reſt their wauering minds, doubt and feare, till at laſt through wearines they ſinke downe and are ſwallowed vp in the gulfe of deſperation, where they are drowned and deſtroyed, if it doe not pleaſe the Lord to lift them vp againe, and to ſhew them the firme Rocke Ieſus Chriſt, whereupon they may reſt their weary mindes, and refreſh their fainting ſoules; which hee alwayes doth performe to thoſe that belong to his election; for it is impoſſible that any of them ſhould periſh, though Satan and all the power of Hell ſeeke their ruine and deſtruction. But at this marke Satan aymeth though he neuer hitteth it, and though hee neuer finally preuaile, yet to this doubting, and in the end deſpairing, hee laboureth to perſwade the true Chriſtian. Neither doth he content himſelfe with the forces of his owne tentations, but hee joyneth with him the world, which is as ready as Satan himſelfe to oppugne the certaintie of our election, and our owne trayterous fleſh which is eaſily moued to doubting and deſpaire, when as it ſeeth nothing in it ſelfe whereupon it may reſt. In the world he maketh his choice not of ſilly ignorant men, but of the moſt ſubtill Sophiſters and learned Doctors, the true ſucceſſors of the Scribes and Phariſies, euen the whole rabble of the Popiſh Clergy; who ſtand on Satans part ſtoutly fighting his battailes, being perſwaded and ouercome by that tentation which our Sauiour Chriſt withſtood, All this will I giue thee. For to what end (I pray you) doe theſe great Doctors ſo ſtifly ſtand in the defence of Satans cauſe, perſwading men might and mayne to doubt of their election, and conſequently of their ſaluation? Surely that by emptying mens minds of all true comfort, they may fill their owne cheſts, and get the treaſures of the earth into their poſſeſſions. For when the weake conſcience wauereth and doubteth of his election, and not finding any true conſolation whereupon it may reſt, commeth vnto them for ſome comfort & better aſſurance; they behaue themſelues like vnto vngracious Surgeons, who intending to make a pray of their patients, and to get their gaines out of their paines and tortures, doe one day heale, and the next day hinder the cure, making the wound worſe then it was when they tooke it in hand, till at laſt they haue ſo poyſoned the ſore that it is paſt their cure, whereas they could eaſily haue healed it at the firſt, if they had not regarded their profit more then their owne credit, or their patients health; or like vnto deceitfull Lawyers, who ſometimes ſpeake in their clients cauſe and ſometimes betray it, going about in a tedious circuit, whereas the direct way lieth open before them, that ſo their Clients cauſe being made more doubtfull and tedious, and themſelues impatient of delayes, are faine to double and treble their fees, and yet oftentimes to no purpoſe, becauſe the more they receiue, the fitter they thinke them to be their perpetuall Clients. So doe theſe Popiſh Chirurgions and Romiſh Counſellers deale with their Patient and Client; for ſhewing his wounded conſcience, and deſiring ſome comfort at their hands, they will not make any ſoueraigne ſalue of the ſimples which they might gather out of Gods word, whereby hee might ſoone be healed, for then their cure, and conſequently their gaines were at an end: but they hold him in ſuſpenſe, and increaſe his diſeaſe of doubting, applying thereunto poyſons in ſtead of ſalues, whereby at laſt his wound is made deſperate. Thou canſt not (will they ſay) attaine vnto any certaine aſſurance of thine election, for that were fond preſumption; but thou art to hope well: and that thou mayſt confirme thy hope, thou muſt make vowes & goe on pilgrimage, to inuocate and offer vnto theſe and theſe Saints, thou muſt doe theſe workes of ſupererogation, build ſuch a Monaſtery, repaire ſuch a Church, giue ſo much money to ſuch a Cloyſter, buy theſe Indulgences, whereby thou mayſt receiue pardon for thy ſins; and for more ſurety ſake, thou ſhalt at thy death bequeath ſo much money to the Prieſts, for Maſſes, Trentals and Dirges, that if it happen thou goe into Purgatory, thou mayeſt ſpeedily be deliuered. But all this while they ſpeake not a word of Gods vndeſerued grace and free election, not a ſyllable of Chriſts death and ſatisfaction for our ſins; no, this were too ſoueraigne a ſalue, and would too ſoon heale the wounded conſcience, and ſo marre the market of theſe Mount-bankes, making their Vowes, Pilgrimages, Maſſes, Dirges, Indulgences, & other trũpery-ware not worth the cheapning.

§. Sect. 2. The ſtate of this queſtion betweene the Christian and Satan with his aſſiſtants.

But let vs conſider the ſtate of the queſtion betweene vs and Satan, with his Doctors and Proctors, whom he ſeeth with worldly riches to plead his cauſe. We hold that a man truly conuerted, indued with a liuely faith and ſanctified, may ordinarily bee aſſured that he is the child of God, elected to ſaluation: but they affirme that it is preſumption for ſuch to haue any certaine aſſurance hereof, vnleſſe it be by extraordinary reuelation; hee may hope indeed that hee is elected and ſhall be ſaued, but this hope muſt be tempered with feare, and mixt with doubting; and this doubting they call humilitie, which they doe not account an infirmitie, but rather a vertue which doth commend their faith, eſteeming firme aſſurance to be but hereticall confidence and damnable preſumption, and pronouncing him accurſed in their counſell of Trent, who affirmeth that wee are to beleeue without doubting the remiſſion of our owne ſinne and euerlaſting life in particular. And becauſe they cannot but confeſſe, that doubting and beleeuing, in themſelues are oppoſed one againſt another; they teach, that their faith is aſſured of Gods mercie and Chriſts merits, as in themſelues infinite and ſufficient; but it doubteth (in reſpect of our vnworthineſſe and manifold imperfections) to apply them particularly vnto our ſelues: ſo that when we look vpon God and Chriſt, there is cauſe of firme aſſurance, but when wee looke vpon our ſelues, there is nothing but matter of doubting. There is indeed ſome place left to their ſtaggering hope, but none to aſſurance of faith. As though our faith were grounded on our owne worthineſſe, and not vpon Gods free mercy and Chriſts merits; and as though reſting vpon theſe alone, it could not haue certaine aſſurance of our election and ſaluation, notwithſtanding our vnworthineſſe and corruptions. But let vs arme our ſelues againſt this their doctrine, which containeth nothing elſe but principles wherupon Satan may ground his tentations, whereby he perſwadeth vs firſt to doubting, and afterwards to deſpairing of our election and ſaluation; for when the troubled conſcience hath no other aſſurance of Gods loue and his owne election, but that which is gathered from his owne worthineſſe and workes, he ſtill doubteth whether yet hee be worthy, or haue fulfilled the meaſure of works required; and then further examining himſelfe to cleere his doubt, and finding his his beſt workes exceeding imperfect, and that his ſins and corruptions are innumerable, then is his conſcience ſet vpon the rack, and his ſoule plunged into deepe deſpaire, hauing no other ſtay but the broken ſtaffe of of his owne righteouſneſſe, which moſt deceiueth him when he moſt truſteth to it.

in this conuerſie,

And that wee may be confirmed againſt Satans tentations, and the ſubtill ſophiſtrie of theſe his Doctors, I will handle this point at large, and will plainly proue, firſt, that the child of God being conuerted, iuſtified and ſanctified, may bee certainly aſſured of his particular election, and that without any ſpeciall reuelation after an ordinary manner. Secondly, I will ſhew the meanes whereby we may attaine vnto this aſſurance; and the infallible ſignes of our election. Laſtly, I will anſwere ſuch objections as are made againſt it by Satan and his adherents.

at wee may certainly ured of our ection, prod by teſtionies of the riptures.

Concerning the firſt, namely, that wee may bee certainly aſſured of our election and ſaluation, it may be proued by teſtimonies of Scriptures, and alſo by infallible reaſons grounded vpon them. For we muſt not thinke that we can haue this aſſurance, by aſcending into Heauen, and there ſearching into Gods ſecret Decree, but wee muſt gather it out of Gods Word wherein the Lord hath reuealed his will vnto vs: and in regard hereof, though Gods will in it ſelfe be ſecret, ſo that wee may aske, who hath knowne the will of the Lord? yet ſeeing the Lord hath reuealed his hidden will in his Word, we may ſay with Paul, that we haue knowne the mind of Chriſt.

*...or.*2.16.

Now this knowledge of Gods will concerning our election, is not to be gathered out of the Law, as the Papiſts would haue it; for by reaſon of the condition annexed to the promiſe of euerlaſting life (Doe this and liue) it leaueth our conſciences in perpetuall doubting, nay, rather in vtter deſperation, becauſe we know that we are farre from the exact obedience thereof, but out of the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell, freely made to euery one who beleeueth, without any condition of our owne workes and worthineſſe.

he couenant

r election.

And therefore if wee beleeue the promiſes of the Goſpell made in Chriſt, we may be aſſured of our election and ſaluation, though in our ſelues wee are miſerable ſinners, who haue tranſgreſſed all Gods Commandements: for the couenant and promiſes of God made to Abraham and his ſeed, was not through the law, but through the righteouſneſſe of faith, as it is, *Rom.*4.13. and therefore it is by faith, that it might come by grace, and the promiſe might bee ſure, not in it ſelfe onely, and in reſpect of the ſufficiency of Gods mercy and Chriſts merits, as the Papiſts dreame; but to all the ſeed, that is, to all that beleeue, and be the children of Abraham, who was the Father of the faithfull both Iew and Gentile. For otherwiſe we ſhould haue no better aſſurance of ſaluation by the Goſpell then by the Law; for euen the promiſe of the Law was moſt ſure in it ſelfe and on Gods part, yet not ſure to vs who could not performe the condition: and therefore the Lord made a new couenant, not of workes but of grace, onely on the condition of faith; that ſo the promiſe might be ſure, not onely in it ſelfe and on Gods behalfe, but alſo vnto vs who are Abrahams ſeed, that is, true beleeuers, as appeareth *Rom.*4.16. And this alſo notably appeareth, *Heb.*6.17,18. where the Apoſtle ſaith, that God willing more abundantly to ſhew vnto the heires of promiſe the ſtablenes of his counſaile, bound himſelfe by an oath, 18. That by two immutable things wherein it is impoſſible that God ſhould lie, wee might haue ſtrong conſolation, which haue our refuge to hold faſt the hope that is ſet before vs, 19. Which we haue as an anchor of the ſoule both ſure and ſtedfaſt.

*...m.*4.13.

*Rom.*4 16,
*Heb.*6.17,18,

In which words the Apoſtle plainly ſheweth, that the Lord hath added his oath to his promiſe, not to the end that in it ſelfe it ſhould be confirmed, or needed any confirmation on Gods part (for his bare word is yea and Amen, ſo infallible & ſure, that though Heauen and earth paſſe away and periſh, yet not one iot or title of his word ſhall faile till all things be fulfilled) but to the end that we to whom the promiſes are made, might be aſſured of the ſtableneſſe of his counſaile, and thereby receiue ſtrong conſolation, and might reſt our ſoules in the tempeſts of tentations vpon firme hope, as it were vpon a ſtedfaſt and ſure anchor. Now what ſtabilitie, what ſtrong conſolation, what ſtedfaſtneſſe of hope, if wee are ſtill vncertain of our election, ſometimes hoping, as when wee looke vpon Gods mercie and Chriſts merits, and ſometimes doubting, as when we looke vpon our owne ſins and vnworthineſſe? For what is this but to be ſhaken from our anchor-hold, and to be toſſed vp and downe with the waues of doubting, till at laſt wee daſh againſt the rockes of deſpaire, and ſo make ſhipwracke of our ſoules?

*Matth.*5.18.

§. *Sect.*4.
Particular teſtimonies prouing this point.

And thus you ſee that the couenant of grace was therefore made with vs, that wee might be aſſured of our election, and that the whole Goſpell is nothing elſe but Gods ambaſſage, whereby hee certifieth vs of his free and vndeſerued loue in Ieſus Chriſt. But let vs further conſider of ſome ſpeciall teſtimonies whereby this aſſurance is confirmed. *Rom.*5.1. it is ſaid, that being iuſtified by faith, wee haue peace towards God through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. But what peace can we haue, if we be not aſſured of our election, but haue our minds diſtracted and racked betweene faith and doubting, hope and deſpaire? *Rom.*8.38. the Apoſtle profeſſeth, that he is perſwaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, &c. nor any other creature ſhould bee able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God which in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord. It is true (will the tempter ſay) that Paul had this aſſurance of his election and ſaluation, but it was by ſome ſpeciall reuelation, and not ordinarily; and therfore it followeth not hereof that euery particular Chriſtian can haue this aſſurance. I anſwere, that the Apoſtle groundeth not his faith on reuelations in that place, but on a foundation common with him to all true Chriſtians, namely on the death of Chriſt, *Verſ.*32. on Gods free juſtification, *Verſ.*33. and vpon Chriſts interceſſion, *Verſ.*34. & from hence hee confirmeth his and our reſolution, that nothing ſhould ſeparate vs from the loue of Chriſt, *Verſ.*35. that is, from the loue of God in him. Whoſoeuer therefore with Paul beleeueth that Chriſt died for him, that God freely juſtifieth him through Chriſts merits, and that our Sauiour ſitteth at the right hand of his Father to make interceſſion for him, he may be aſſured of Gods loue, and conſequently of his election. Secondly, Paul ſpeaketh this not of himſelfe alone, but alſo of all the faithfull, and therefore hee vſeth the plurall number, I am perſwaded that nothing ſhall be able to ſeparate vs. So *Epheſ.*3.12. the Apoſtle ſaith, that wee haue through Chriſt boldneſſe and entrance with confidence by faith in him. And *Heb.*4.16. he exhorteth vs to goe boldly vnto the throne of grace, that we may receiue mercy, &c. And *Chap.*10.22. Let vs draw neere with a true heart in aſſurance of faith, &c. But I would faine know what entrance with confidence, what boldneſſe and aſſurance of faith, when wee draw neere vnto God, and preſent our ſelues before his throne of Majeſtie, if wee remayne doubtfull of his loue and our election? So *Heb.*6.19. he ſaith that our hope is a ſure and ſtedfaſt ancher of the ſoule; but what certaintie or ſtedfaſtneſſe is there in it, if it wauer and ſtagger through doubtfulnes, ſo often as we looke vpon our ſinnes and vnworthineſſe? The Apoſtle Peter alſo doth tell vs, that the truſt which we haue through Ieſus Chriſt muſt bee perfect, that is, entire and perpetuall, till we enioy the thing which we hope for, 1.*Pet.*1.13. And 2.*Pet.*1.10. hee exhorteth vs to vſe all diligence that wee may make our calling & election ſure, which if we could not doe, he ſhould perſwade vs to the vndertaking of a needleſſe labour. Nay, he plainly aſſureth vs, that if wee doe theſe things (to wit, if we ioyne vertue with our faith, and with vertue knowledge, and with knowledge temperance, and with temperance patience, and with patience godlineſſe, and with godlineſſe brotherly kindneſſe; and with brotherly kindneſſe loue) wee ſhall neuer fall; becauſe theſe are effects and vndoubted ſignes of our election. And the Apoſtle Iohn would not haue it a matter doubtfull, whether wee are elected and ſhall bee ſaued or no; but certainly knowne and vndoubtedly beleeued: and therefore hee aimeth principally at this marke, and propoundeth this as the chiefe end of his Epiſtle, namely to ſhew how wee might know ordinarily, and be fully aſſured that we are beloued of God, elected, and ſhall be ſaued. So 1.Iohn.3.14. We know that we are tranſlated from death to life, becauſe wee loue the brethren. And therefore in the latter end of his Epiſtle he ſaith, that he had written it to this end, that *we might know that we haue eternall life, Chap.*5.13. Seeing then the Scriptures doe commend vnto vs a ſtedfaſt and aſſured faith, whereby wee particularly are aſſured and perſwaded of our election and ſaluation, notwithſtanding our ſinnes and vnworthineſſe: therefore let not the tempter perſwade vs to caſt away this certaine perſwaſion, and to wauer in doubting; but let vs ſay with the Apoſtle Paul, 2.*Tim.*1.12. Though I am vnworthy, yet I know whom I haue beleeued, and I am perſwaded that he is able to keepe that which I haue committed to him.

Iohn 3.16.

But againſt that which hath beene ſaid the tempter objecteth, that the promiſes of the Goſpell are generall and indefinite, and therefore no man can gather out of them any certaine aſſurance of his particular election. I anſwere that this conſequence is falſe: for out of a generall and indefinite propoſition wee may truly and by the Lawes of reaſon gather and inferre a particular concluſion, though not contrariwiſe. For example; if I thus conclude; all men are reaſonable creatures: but I am a man; therefore I am a reaſonable creature: it is rightly and truely inferred. Though therefore the promiſes of the Goſpell be contained in generall propoſitions, yet may euery faithfull man as certainly conclude, that they belong vnto him, as if they were particularly applied vnto him by name. For when the Lord by his Ambaſſadours maketh this generall propoſition in the preaching of the Word; Whoſoeuer truly beleeue in Chriſt, they are all elected vnto euerlaſting life; the faithfull hearer maketh this aſſumption in his minde, But I by the grace of God, and by the preaching of his Word made effectuall by his Spirit, haue a true faith begotten in mee, whereby I beleeue in Chriſt my Sauiour; and therefore Gods promiſe of life and ſaluation belongeth vnto mee. And thus alſo doth the conſcience of man out the generall curſes of the Law conclude that hee is accurſed; for when the Law deliuereth this propoſition in generall, tall, Curſed is euery one who abideth not in all things which are written in the booke of the law to doe them; euery particular man maketh this aſſumption in his owne conſcience, But I haue not continued in all to doe it, nay, in ſtead of doing all, I haue neglected all, in ſtead of continuing in obedience, I haue been continually diſobedient, in ſtead of doing the duties commanded, I haue committed the ſins forbidden, & therefore by the ſentence of the law I am accurſed. So that though both the threatnings of the law, and the promiſes of the Goſpell be generall and indefinite, yet doth euery mans conſcience truly informed by Gods Word, gather out of them moſt certaine particular concluſions.

Sect.6. at we may aſſured that e are the thfull, vnto om the promiſes of the ſpell are de.

But here the tempter will obiect further; It is true indeed that euery faithful man may apply the generall promiſes of the Goſpell vnto himſelfe, but all the queſtion is whether thou canſt know that thou haſt faith or no, ſeeing many who continue in their infidelity, bragge moſt of their faith. I anſwere, that it cannot be denied but that many are deceiued, by contenting themſelues with their carnall ſecuritie, in ſtead of a liuely faith; but hence it followeth not, that becauſe many are deceiued with an opinion of faith, therefore thoſe that beleeue indeed cannot be aſſured that they haue faith; no more then this followeth, ſome men dreame that they are rich, and are not ſo indeed when they awake, therfore no man knoweth whether he be rich or no; for what is their ſecure opinion, but an idle dreame of their owne braines, which hath no warrant out of Gods Word? where as faith certainly and euidently perſwadeth, and like a Candle doth not onely manifeſt other things, but alſo it ſelfe appeareth by his own light. So that as a man who ſeeth and feeleth the fire and the heate thereof, doth certainly know that he ſeeth & feeleth it, ſo he that beleeueth in Chriſt doth know that he beleeueth indeed: yea as much more certaine is this knowledge, as the knowledge of faith grounded vpon Gods Word which is infallible, is more certaine then the knowledge of the ſenſes, which are often deceiued. Furthermore, if wee could not be aſſured that wee haue faith, then to what purpoſe ſerues the admonition of the Apoſtle, 2.Cor.13.5. Trie your ſelues whether you are in the faith, examine your ſelues: know you not your owne ſelues, how that Ieſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be reprobates? In which words the Apoſtle plainly implieth, that we may know that we haue a true and liuely faith, or elſe this triall and examination were vaine; nay, he plainly ſaith that we may know that Chriſt is in vs, except we bee reprobates, and conſequently that wee haue faith; for this only is the hand whereby we apply Chriſt vnto vs and all his benefits. So 1.Cor.11.28. the Apoſtle willeth vs to examine our ſelues before wee come to the Lords Table, that ſo wee be not vnworthy gueſts; in which examination the chiefe thing which we are to reſpect, is whether we haue a true faith; for this is the mouth of the ſoule, whereby wee feed vpon the body and bloud of our Sauiour Chriſt; and therefore vnleſſe we can know whether wee haue faith when wee are truely indued therewith, this admonition of the Apoſtle were to no purpoſe; neither can wee haue any aſſurance to our owne ſoules, that we are worthy gueſts of the Lords Table, & conſequently we reſt doubtfull whether we receiue the Sacrament to our ſpirituall good and ſaluation, or to our iudgement and condemation. Thirdly, wee are aſſured of this by Gods Word, that whatſoeuer is not done of faith is ſinne. Rom.14.23. And without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God, Heb.11.6. If therefore wee cannot be aſſured that we haue faith, wee can haue no aſſurance that our beſt actions, our calling vpon Gods Name, our hearing of his Word, and all other duties of Pietie and Iuſtice, are any better then ſinnes, and odious in Gods ſight: whereof it muſt needs follow that theſe actions, how good ſoeuer in themſelues, will be done of vs in doubting, becauſe wee know not whether they bee done in faith, and being done doubtingly they become ſins indeed, and therefore diſpleaſing in Gods ſight. Laſtly, if I can know whether I beleeue a man vpon his word, and whether I truſt and relie my ſelfe vpon his promiſe or no; why may I not much more know whether I beleeue Gods gracious promiſes made vnto all repentant ſinners, and amongſt the reſt vnto my ſelfe, namely, that for the obdience and merits of Chriſt, I ſhall haue remiſſion of my ſinnes and euerlaſting life? ſeeing this faith is not out of our ſelues, but a gift of God wrought in vs by his holy ſpirit, which is not idle in vs, for it purifieth the heart, and worketh by loue, it mooueth vs to hate and flie from thoſe ſinnes wee haue loued, and to imbrace and loue that holineſſe and righteouſneſſe of life, which heretofore hath beene loathſome vnto vs. As therefore the fire is knowne by his heate, the Sunne by his light, the good tree by his fruits; ſo when our cold hearts are inflamed with the loue of God, and a feruent zeale of his glory, when our blind vnderſtandings are inlightned with the knowledge of God, and of his true religion, when wee bring forth the fruits of our profeſſion in a godly and Chriſtian life, then may we certainly know that wee are indued with a true and liuely faith.

§. Sect.7. A tentation grounded vpon our aſſurance of faith, anſwered.

But heere the tempter will take occaſion to perſwade the weake Chriſtian and the troubled conſcience, that hee hath no faith, ſeeing hee doth not certainly know that hee hath it, nor diſcerneth theſe ſignes and fruits of faith in himſelfe. To this ſuggeſtion wee are to anſwere, that wee doe not ſay that the weake Chriſtian may be aſſured at all times, that he hath faith by his preſent ſenſe; for firſt when we are newly conuerted, and the ſeeds of faith are ſowne in our hearts, wee doe not preſently diſcerne it. But as the Corne which is caſt into the ground, is for a time couered, and after ſpringeth vp the blade, and then the eare, ſo faith being ſowne in our hearts, which firſt like fallow grounds are plowed vp, and as it were harrowed and broken with the threatnings of the Law, and apprehenſion of Gods anger due vnto our ſinnes, doth in the time of our humiliation and contrition, lie couered ſo as we cannot diſcerne it, till being more and more watered with the water of the ſpirit, and the heauenly promiſes of the Goſpell, which in the preaching of the Word, like ſweet dewes and pleaſant ſhowers diſtill vpon it, it ſendeth forth the blade, namely an holy deſire and earneſt endeuour to ſerue God, & afterwards the fruit, euen a plentifull harueſt in godlineſſe and righteouſneſſe of life. And ſecondly, ſometime after that faith is begun in vs, and wee haue ſeene the fruits thereof to our comfort, it is after hid from vs againe, as when either wee wound our conſcience by committing ſome grieuous ſinne againſt knowledge wittingly and willingly, or when it pleaſeth the Lord to exerciſe vs in the ſpirituall conflict of tentations; for then ſometimes it commeth to paſſe that our faith for a time lieth hid vnder the aſhes of our corruptions; and the cloud of our ſinnes, and the apprehenſion of Gods anger, doth ſo ouer-ſhadow the eyes of our vnderſtanding, that we cannot diſcerne the beames of Gods loue and fauour ſhining vpon vs. Although when the conflict is ended, our faith againe flameth out in the loue of God, and zeale of his glory, and the louing countenance of the Lord ſhineth graciouſly vpon vs when theſe clouds of tentations are ouer-paſt. And therefore though we doe not certainly know our faith by the fruits thereof, either ſoone after our conuerſion, or in the time of tentation, yet this muſt not diſcourage vs, becauſe theſe are no fit times to judge thereof: onely when we want this knowledge and full aſſurance, let vs vſe all good meanes ordained of God that we may attaine thereunto, if we neuer had it; or recouer and againe renew it, if after wee haue once had it, wee loſe the ſenſe and feeling thereof, either by falling into hainous ſins, or by the violence of Satans tentations.

CHAP. IX.

That we may be aſſured of our election, proued by diuers arguments.

§. Sect. 1.
First, becauſe the Goſpell manifeſtly ſheweth th
we are ele

AND thus haue I ſhewed by plaine teſtimonies of Scriptures, that we may infallibly bee aſſured of our election. Now I will alſo prooue the ſame by ſtrong arguments, drawne from the ſame fountaine. Firſt, therefore we may thus reaſon; Whatſoeuer is manifeſtly ſhewed vnto vs in the Goſpell, that wee are bound to beleeue, and of that wee may be aſſured: but it is manifeſtly declared in the Goſpell, that we are elected vnto euerlaſting life: and therefore wee are bound to beleeue it, and may bee aſſured that wee are elected. The propoſition or firſt part of this reaſon containeth two branches: the firſt is, that we are bound to beleeue whatſoeuer the Goſpell reuealeth: the ſecond, that we may be aſſured of it; both which are euident truths. For that which Chriſt commandeth, that we are bound to performe: but he commandeth vs to beleeue the Goſpell, Marke 1.15. Repent and beleeue the Goſpell. So this is his commandement that we beleeue, &c. 1. Ioh. 3.23. The breach of which Commandement is puniſhed with euerlaſting death. For hee that will not beleeue ſhall be damned, as it is Mark. 16.16. And as wee are bound to beleeue it, ſo wee may alſo come to be aſſured thereof; ſeeing the Goſpell commandeth vs nothing, which it doth not alſo by the inward and ordinary co-operation of Gods Spirit enable vs to performe. For this difference is betweene the Commandements of the Law and the Commandements of the Goſpell: the Law ſheweth vs the duties which we ſhould performe, but miniſters vnto vs no power whereby we may be enabled to performe them; but the Goſpell being aſſiſted with the operation of Gods Spirit, doth command, and withall giueth vs abilitie to performe the Commandement, for the words of the Goſpell are ſpirit and life, as our Sauiour ſpeaketh, Ioh. 6.63. and with the preaching thereof the Spirit inwardly worketh, quickning and ſtrengthening vs to performe that which it enjoyneth. The aſſumption or ſecond part of the reaſon is alſo cleer, namely, that the Goſpell manifeſteth vnto vs our election. For what elſe is the whole Goſpell but a declaration of Gods loue, and of our election and redemption in and by Ieſus Chriſt? What is it elſe but the ambaſſage whereby God reconcileth vs vnto himſelfe? What elſe is contained therein, but Gods mercifull promiſes of life and ſaluation, made on no other condition but on the condition of faith, which wee need not feare to performe, ſeeing it is commanded vs of God. And therefore though wee had no other reaſon to beleeue, yet we ſhould beleeue in obedience to Gods Commandement, ſeeing hee commandeth nothing which is not good in it ſelfe, tending to his owne glory and our ſaluation; and if we doe beleeue, though our vnworthineſſes bee neuer ſo great, yea though our faith be neuer ſo weak and ſmall, yet may we thereby be aſſured of our election and ſaluation. For this is Gods will, that who- whoſoeuer beleeueth in his Sonne ſhall haue euerlaſting life, as it is Iohn 6.40. So Iohn 3.36. He that beleeueth in the Sonne hath euerlaſting life. But moſt notable is that place, 1. Iohn 5.10. He that beleeueth in the Sonne of God, hath the witneſſe in himſelfe: that is, they need no other reaſons to perſwade them that the teſtimony which God hath giuen of his Sonne (namely, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhall haue euerlaſting life) is true; for they haue a full and ſufficient aſſurance hereof by their faith. Whoſoeuer therefore can be aſſured that they beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt (as all may who bring forth the fruites of faith in ſanctification and holineſſe of life, or at leaſt deſire and endeuour to ſerue the Lord in the duties of pietie and righteouſnes) they may be aſſured, nay, they are bound by Gods expreſſe commandement, vndoubtedly to beleeue that they are elected and ſhall be ſaued, becauſe all the promiſes of the Goſpell are made vnto them without any other condition.

Secondly, whoſoeuer are bound to beleeue that Ieſus Chriſt is their Sauiour and Redeemer, they are alſo vndoubtedly to beleeue, and may alſo be aſſured of their election; but euery Chriſtian is bound by Gods expreſſe commandement to beleeue that Ieſus Chriſt is their Sauiour and Redeemer, as appeareth 1. Iohn 3.23. and therefore they are vndoubtedly to beleeue, and may be aſſured of their election. The propoſition is manifeſt, ſeeing all thoſe and thoſe onely are ſaued and redeemed by Chriſt, who are elected to ſaluation in Gods eternall decree.

The aſſumption is moſt certaine, for whereas God commands vs to beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt, he doth not onely enioyne vs to beleeue that hee is a Sauiour of his Church in generall, or of the Patriarches, Prophets, and Apoſtles alone, for this alſo the diuels beleeue as well as we; but we are to beleeue that hee is our Sauiour and Redeemer, and to applie all the promiſes of life and ſaluation made in him, particularly vnto our ſelues; for otherwiſe how ſhould we haue that aſſurance of faith, and that bold confidence when we approach vnto the throne of grace, which the Apoſtle requireth of vs, if we cannot be aſſured that hee is our Sauiour and Redeemer, in whom God loueth and hath elected vs?

m.4.20.

Neither muſt this faith and aſſurance of our election and ſaluation bee mixt with doubting, as the Papiſts would beare vs in hand, who make doubting not an infirmitie, but a commendable vertue of their faith: for faith and doubting though they are often mixt in Gods children, yet in reſpect of their owne natures, they are oppoſed in the Scriptures one againſt the other. So it is ſaid of Abraham, that hee doubted not of Gods promiſe through vnbeleefe, but was ſtrengthened in the faith, Rom. 4.20. Where the Apoſtle ſheweth, that doubting is a fruite of vnbeleefe, and not a commendable vertue; yea, hee oppoſeth it to faith, ſaying, that hee doubted not of the promiſe, but was ſtrengthened in the faith.

Iames 1.5.

So the Apoſtle Iames, chap. 1.5. ſaith, If any man lacke wiſedome, let him aske in faith and wauer not; where hee oppoſeth faith to wauering or doubting.

Matth.21.21.

And our Sauiour Chriſt alſo maketh this oppoſition, Matth. 21.21. ſaying, If yee haue faith and doubt not, So that though faith and doubting are not oppoſed in reſpect of the ſubiect wherein they are, for euen the moſt deare children of God haue their faith often mixt with doubting, they being partly fleſh and partly ſpirit; yet theſe two in their owne natures are oppoſed one againſt the other; and euen in reſpect of their ſubiect they thus farre diſagree, that though they haue their ſubſiſtence in the ſame ſubiect, yet not in the ſame part; that is, though they bee in the ſame man, yet not in the ſame part, for faith is in the regenerate and ſpirituall part, doubting in the vnregenerate or fleſhly part.

Doubting a fruit of vnbeleefe oppoſed vnto faith.

Doubting then is no vertue of faith, but oppoſed thereunto as a fruit of vnbeleefe; it proceedeth not from the ſpirit but from the fleſh: and as a fruite of the fleſh it is condemned in Gods word, though the Papiſts highlie commend it.

Matth.14.31.

So Matth. 14.31. our Sauiour reprehendeth Peter for his doubting; O thou of little faith, wherefore diddeſt thou doubt?

Luke 12.29.

And Luk. 12.29. hee telleth vs that wee muſt not ſtand in doubt, or (as the word μὴ μετεωρίζεσθε ſignifieth) be not like vnto meteors which are carried about in the aire with euerie winde.

Iames 1.7.

And the Apoſtle Iames, chap. 1.7. compareth him that wauereth or doubteth, to a waue of the ſea toſt of the wind & carried away. And Paul is ſo farre from commending doubting for a vertue, that hee doth not onely condemne it as a ſinne in it ſelfe, but alſo as a cauſe which maketh our actions which are indifferent or good in themſelues to become ſinnes. So the eating of this or that meate is a thing indifferent and lawfull if it be receiued with prayer and thankſgiuing, but yet the Apoſtle telleth vs,

Rom.14.23.

Rom. 14.23. that he who doubteth is condemed if hee eate; and he rendreth this reaſon; becauſe he eateth not of faith, and whatſoeuer is not of faith is ſinne. So that by this hee ſheweth, that hee who doubteth, eateth not of faith; and whatſoeuer is not done of faith is ſinne. Seeing therefore doubting is oppoſed vnto faith, and is in it ſelfe not onely a ſinne, but alſo a cauſe of ſinne; let vs not entertaine it though it bring letters commendatorie from the Pope and all his ſhauelings; but labour to baniſh it out of our hearts, and ſtriue after faith and full aſſurance of our election and ſaluation in Chriſt Ieſus: And though we find our great vnworthineſſe of the leaſt of God mercies, and cannot ſee any reaſon in our ſelues why wee ſhould beleeue that we are elected and ſhall be ſaued, yet let vs hope againſt hope, and beleeue againſt beleefe, for it is not a thing left to our choice but enioyned vs by God, as the chiefe and maine dutie required in the Goſpell: And therefore laying aſide all reaſoning and diſputing, let vs reſolue to beleeue in obedience to Gods Commandement; and then though wee are neuer ſo full of corruptions, yet will this faith purifie vs; though wee are moſt backward in performing any good worke, yet will it be fruitfull in vs, and will worke by loue; though we be moſt vnworthy, it will make vs more worthy, by applying vnto vs the righteouſnes of Chriſt and the merits of his death and bloudſhed, which wil not onely free vs from the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, but will alſo purge vs from the vices and corruptions themſelues.

Acts 15.9.

*Gal.*5.6.

Q. Sect. 4.
Thirdly, faith is a certaine & particular perſwaſion, & not a doubtfull opinion or generall notion.

Thirdly, the certaintie of our election may bee prooued, by an argument drawne from the nature of faith: which is not a doubtfull opinion, but a certaine perſwaſion; not a generall notion, but a particular aſſurance, whereby wee doe apply and appropriate vnto our ſelues thoſe things which we doe beleeue. Whoſoeuer therefore hath true faith, he doth certainly beleeue and is particularly aſſured of his election, iuſtification and ſaluation. That faith is a certaine perſwaſion, it may appeare firſt by thoſe properties and names which are giuen vnto it in the Word. *Heb.*11.1. faith is ſaid to bee ὑπόστασις, that is, a ſubſiſtence or preſent being of things hoped for; ſo that hope waiteth for them in time to come, but faith enjoyeth them as being preſent, namely, in reſpect of the certaine aſſurance and particular application of the promiſes vnto our ſelues. And therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, that hereby wee may know (not that we ſhall haue, but) that we haue eternall life, 1. Iohn 5.13. not in poſſeſſion, but in aſſurance of faith. It is called ἔλεγχος in the ſame place, which word is quite contrary to doubting, as ſignifying a manifeſt demonſtration which doth not only ſhew a thing probably, but alſo doth conuince with ſtrong arguments, and make that truth cleere and manifeſt, which was otherwiſe obſcure and ſecret, and therefore in the text it is called a demonſtration of things not ſeene. So there is aſcribed vnto it fulneſſe of perſwaſiō: *Heb.*10.22. Let vs draw neer with a true heart, ἐν πληροφορίᾳ πίστεως, in full aſſurance of faith: and alſo boldneſſe with confident truſt, *Epheſ.*3.12. by whom wee haue boldneſſe and entrance with confidence (not by extraordinary reuelations, but) by faith in Chriſt: which full aſſurance, boldneſſe and confidence wee could not haue, if wee were not aſſured of Gods loue and our election, but remained doubtfull whether wee were beloued of God and elected or no. To theſe names and properties of faith, we may adde ſome plaine teſtimonies of Scriptures, which cleerly ſhew that faith is not a doubtfull hope, but a certaine perſwaſion. 1. Iohn 3.14. The Apoſtle ſaith, that we know that wee are tranſlated from death to life (not by reuelation but) becauſe wee loue the brethren; hee doth not ſay that we know that wee ſhall be, but that we are tranſlated from death to life, to note the certainty of this knowledge and perſwaſion, *Rom.*5.2. the Apoſtle ſaith, that by Chriſt we haue acceſſe through faith vnto Gods grace, wherein wee ſtand and reioyce vnder hope, or, as the word ſignifieth, glory and triumph with joy. So that wee doe not wauer & ſtagger, but ſtand firmely through faith; we doe not feare and timerouſly hope, but euen glory and triumph in our rejoycing: ſaying with the Apoſtle, *Rom.*8.33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods choſen? it is God that iuſtifieth. 34. Who ſhall condemne? it is Chriſt which is dead: yea, or rather which is riſen againe, who is alſo at the right hand of God, and maketh requeſt for vs. 35. Who ſhall ſeparate vs from the loue of Chriſt, &c. So, that though our ſinnes be manifold, our vnworthineſſe great, and our faith weake; yet if it be true, it may alſo be certaine in the aſſurance of Gods loue and our election: becauſe it is not grounded on our worthineſſe, but vpon Gods free iuſtifying and accepting of vs, as righteous in Chriſt, and vpon Chriſts death, reſurrection and interceſſion for vs vnto God his Father; which is a moſt ſure foundation that cannot faile. Indeed if our faith and the anchor of our hope did pitch, reſt, and faſten it ſelfe, vpon the light and hollow ſands of our owne merits and worthineſſe; the ſurging waues and boyſterous blaſts of Satans tentations, would diſanchor and toſſe vs to and fro, till at length we ſhould make ſhipwracke of our faith, againſt the rockes of deſpaire: but ſeeing we take hold and reſt vpon the firme and ſure anchor-hold Chriſt Ieſus his merits and righteouſneſſe; well may the tempeſts of Satans tentations ſhake vs, but they ſhall neuer remoue vs from our firme hold and certaine aſſurance which wee haue in Chriſt; becauſe we apprehend him, nay rather, are apprehended or taken hold of by him, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, *Phil.*3.12. And no man (no not the whole power of Hell) is able to plucke vs out of his hands, as our Sauiour aſſureth vs, Iohn 20.28. For though they bee mighty to deſtroy, yet Chriſt is almighty to ſaue, as it is Eſay 63.1. and therefore let vs not ſuffer our ſoules to be racked betweene hope and feare, but let vs truſt perfectly on the grace that is brought vnto vs by the reuelation of Ieſus Chriſt, as the Apoſtle exhorteth, 1. *Pet.*1.13.

this certaintie of faith, we will adde to theſe teſtimonies, ſome examples of beleeuers mentioned in Gods Word. And firſt let vs conſider the faith of Abraham: which was not wauering and doubtfull, but moſt certaine and aſſured; for aboue hope hee beleeued vnto hope, and hee was not weake in faith, neither did hee doubt of the promiſe of God through vnbeleefe, but was ſtrengthened in the faith, and gaue glory vnto God, being fully aſſured that he which had promiſed was able to performe it; and therefore it was imputed vnto him for righteouſneſſe; as the Apoſtle ſetteth it downe, *Rom.*4.18,19,20,21,22. Now Abraham was not only a bare beleeuer, but the Father of the faithfull; neither was his faith propounded vnto vs as a wonder to admire at, but as an example for all his ſonnes to imitate. And therefore it is ſaid, Verſe 23. That this is not written for him only that his faith was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe. 24. But alſo for vs to whom it ſhall be imputed for righteouſneſſe, which beleeue in him, who hath raiſed vp Ieſus our Lord from the dead. But it may bee obiected, that Abraham is not ſaid heere to beleeue thus certainly his owne election or ſaluation, but that hee ſhould haue a ſonne, and become a Father of many Nations: I anſwere, though this were the next and immediate obiect of his faith, yet this was not the chiefe and principall; but the promiſe of bleſſedneſſe and happines, which was made to him and all the Nations of the earth, in his ſeed Chriſt. For Abraham could not be iuſtified by beleeuing that hee ſhould haue a Son, but by beleeuing in the Meſſias, which ſhould come out of his loines, by whoſe righteouſneſſe and obedience hee ſhould bee ſaued. And therefore the Apoſtle, *Gal.*3.16. doth appropriate that promiſe made vnto *Abraham, Gen.*22.18. In thy ſeed ſhall all the Nations of the earth be bleſſed, vnto the promiſed ſeed Ieſus Chriſt. Looke alſo vpon the Prophet Dauid and you ſhal ſee that though his faith was often ſhaken with doubting, yet in it ſelfe it remayned certaine: like a tree ſhaken with the winds, which is not ouerthrowne, but taketh more firme and deep root: *Pſal.*23.4. Though I walke thorow the valley of the ſhadow of death, I will feare no euill, for thou art with me. So *Pſal.*27.1. The Lord is my light and my ſaluation, whom ſhall I feare? The Lord is the ſtrength of my life, of whom ſhall I be afraid? Neither had he only this aſſurance in himſelfe, but ſheweth that it is alſo the ſtate of all the faithfull, *Pſal.*125.1. They that truſt in the Lord ſhall be as mount Sion, which cannot be remoued, but remaineth for euer. So Iob in the middeſt of his afflictions ſheweth his certaine aſſurance & faith, ſaying, Iob 13.15. Lo, though he ſlay me yet will I truſt in him. And Chap. 19.25. I am ſure that my Redeemer liueth, and he ſhall ſtand the laſt on earth. 26. And though after this skin, wormes deſtroy this body, yet ſhall I ſee God in my fleſh, &c. And Paul ſpeaking not only of his owne aſſurance of Gods loue, but of all the faithful, ſaith, that he is perſwaded, *that nothing in the world ſhould be able to ſeparate vs from Gods loue in Chriſt, Ro.*8.

§. *Sect.*6. That faith particularly perſwadeth vs of our election

And thus haue I ſhewed, that faith is a certaine aſſurance of Gods loue and fauour in Chriſt. Now I will alſo proue that it particularly perſwadeth vs of our owne election and life euerlaſting. For firſt, ſuch a faith is begot now in our hearts, by the preaching of the Word, as was begot in the hearts of men, by our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe; for as there is but one God, ſo there is but one true and iuſtifying faith, *Epheſ.*4.5. but by that faith they were particularly perſwaded of the remiſſion of their ſinnes, and conſequently of their iuſtification and ſaluation, as appeareth, Luke 7.42,50. where our Sauiour ſaith thus to the woman: Thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee, thy faith hath ſaued thee, goe in peace. So *Matth.*9.2. hee ſaith to the ſicke of the Palſie, Be of good comfort, thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee, goe in peace. So Matth. 9.2. hee ſaith to the ſicke of the Palſie, Be of good comfort, thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee. And therefore the faith which is now begot in vs by the preaching of the Word, doth alſo particularly perſwade vs of our ſinnes and eternall ſaluation. For as our Sauiour Chriſt by his owne abſolute authoritie, did remit the ſinnes of thoſe that did beleeue; ſo hee hath left this authoritie to his Miniſters (not abſolutely by their owne power to remit ſins, which the man of ſinne doth challenge vnto himſelfe, but) to declare and pronounce their ſinnes forgiuen who truly beleeue in the Son of God, and repent them of their ſinnes: the which their ſentence is ratified in Heauen, according to that *Matth.*16.19. I will giue vnto thee the keyes of the Kingdome of heauen, and whatſoeuer thou ſhalt bind in earth ſhall be bound in heauen, and whatſoeuer thou ſhalt looſe in earth ſhall bee looſed in heauen. Which authoritie is not giuen to Peter alone and his ſucceſſors, as the Papiſts dreame; but as Peter anſwered, not only for himſelfe, but alſo in the behalfe of all the reſt, ſo he receiueth this power both for himſelfe and for all the Apoſtles; yea, for all Gods true Miniſters, the vndoubted ſucceſſours of the Apoſtles, as our Sauiour expoundeth himſelf, Iohn 20.23. where hee giueth this authoritie to all the Apoſtles; ſaying, Whoſe ſins ſoeuer ye remit, they are remitted vnto them, & whoſe ſins ſoeuer yee retaine, they are retained. So that the Miniſters of Gods Word, by the preaching thereof, may aſſure men particularly of the remiſſion of their ſinnes: for when hee maketh this generall propoſition, Whoſoeuer beleeueth and repenteth him of his ſinnes ſhall haue them remitted, and be made an heire of euerlaſting life; and the particular hearer doth truly aſſume that hee beleeueth and repenteth, the Miniſter hath authoritie giuen him of God to make this concluſion: Therefore be thou aſſured that thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee in Chriſt, and that thou art an vndoubted heire of euerlaſting life. Secondly, as the Lord doth offer vnto vs his gracious promiſes of life and ſaluation, ſo doe we receiue them by faith; but the Lord doth not only generally in the Word offer theſe his gracious promiſes to all that will receiue them, but alſo particularly in the right vſe of the Sacraments to euery faithfull receiuer. For in the Sacraments we muſt conſider a relation and correſpondency between the outward ſignes and things ſignified: as therefore the Miniſter doth offer and giue, and I receiue and eate the outward ſignes of Bread and Wine; ſo am I as certainly to beleeue that God doth offer and giue, and that I doe receiue and feed vpon Chriſt Ieſus and all his benefits, with the hand and mouth of faith, vnto the nouriſhing of my particular ſoule to euerlaſting life, as my body is nouriſhed with theſe outward Elements of Bread and Wine. Laſtly, the Apoſtle ſaith, that through faith we haue entrance vnto God with boldneſſe and confidence, and therefore by faith the beleeuer is particularly perſwaded of the remiſſion of his ſinnes, and of his reconciliation with God. For with what boldneſſe or confidence can the poore ſinner come before God, who is terrified with the threatnings of the Law, with the tentations of Satan, and with the conſideration of his owne vnworthineſſe and ſelfe-guiltineſſe; if hee be not particularly aſſured that his curſe is borne by Chriſt, that hee is forgiuen the whole debt of his ſinnes, and reconciled vnto God? What aſſured comfort can hee receiue, if hee beleeue that God hath elected Peter and Paul and all his Church, if he be not alſo aſſured that he is in this number? If a whole Citie ſhould rebell and commit high treaſon againſt a Prince, and the Prince ſhould ſend out a Proclamation, declaring that vpon ſuch conditions hee would receiue them to mercy; with what boldneſſe or confidence can any in this City come before him, if hee be not aſſured that hee hath performed theſe conditions? But this is our caſe, we haue rebelled againſt God, and hee hath proclaimed in his Goſpell the pardon of our ſinnes; ſo we lay hold vpon Chriſt by a true and liuely faith, and repent vs of our ſinnes; If therefore wee could not be aſſured that we haue a liuely faith and true repentance, and conſequently that Gods mercifull promiſes belong particularly vnto vs; with what boldneſſe or confidence can we come before him? But the Apoſtle ſaith, that by faith we haue this boldneſſe and confidence, and therefore it followeth that we may be aſſured that we haue faith and repentance, and thereby may certainly be perſwaded of Gods loue and of our particular election.

Epheſ.3.12.

§. Sect.5. The fourth argument, drawne from the doctrine vſe of the Sacraments.

Fourthly, that we may certainly be aſſured of our election, it may be proued by an argument drawne from the doctrine and vſe of the Sacraments; for the Lord hath added to the couenant of grace, his Sacraments as ſeales, not to confirme Gods promiſes in themſelues, which are ſo vndoubtedly true that they need no confirmation, but to ſtrengthen our faith in this ful aſſurance that they belong particularly vnto vs. For whereas in the Word the promiſes of grace and ſaluation are generally propounded to all beleeuers; in the vſe of the Sacraments, they are particularly applyed to euery worthy receiuer; to the end that all doubting being remoued, they may certainly be aſſured that all the promiſes of the Goſpell doe belong particularly vnto themſelues. Now if the Lord would haue vs doubt of our election and ſaluation, and if this doubting were a vertue of faith, as the Papiſts teach, then ſurely there were no vſe of the Sacraments; for the Word is ſufficient to beget that generall faith which is mixt with doubting; and the Sacraments which doe further aſſure vs and apply vnto vs Gods promiſes, would be rather hurtfull then profitable, becauſe they take away doubting, which is a vertue of their faith. But we are otherwiſe inſtructed by Gods Truth, namely, that the Lord would not haue vs doubt of his promiſes: and therefore hee hath not onely written his Couenant, but alſo hath confirmed it by his Seale, and hath thereby particularly applyed it to the vſe and benefit of euery one who receiueth it by the hand of a liuely faith, that there may be no place left to doubting. And hence it is that the Sacrament of Circumciſion is called the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, Rom.4.11. becauſe thereby as by a ſeale Abraham was confirmed in the truth of Gods promiſes, and aſſured that the righteouſneſſe of faith, that is, the righteouſnes of Chriſt, who was the promiſed ſeed, did belong vnto him. And anſwerable to this Sacrament is Baptiſme, wherein Chriſt and all the gracious promiſes of life and ſaluation made in him, are particularly applyed to the party baptized; and therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, that all that are baptized into Chriſt haue put on Chriſt, Galath.3.27. where hee compareth Chriſt to a garment which by the hand of faith is put on by euery particular beleeuer. So in the adminiſtration of the Lords Supper, the Bread and Wine is particularly deliuered vnto all the Communicants, to ſignifie vnto them, that euery one who ſtretcheth forth the hand of faith doth receiue Chriſt and all his benefits, whereby his ſoule is nouriſhed vnto euerlaſting life. Whoſoeuer therefore hath faith, hee may be aſſured that he receiueth Chriſt; and whoſoeuer receiueth Chriſt, he may be aſſured of his election and ſaluation; for to as many as receiue him, to them he giueth power to be the ſonnes of God: and who are thoſe? euen thoſe that beleeue in his Name, as it is Iohn 1.12. And whoſoeuer eats his fleſh and drinkes his bloud hath eternall life, as our Sauiour ſaith, Iohn 6.54. Now if we would know how we feed vpon him, it is by the mouth of faith, as he expoundeth himſelfe, Verſe 47.

Rom.4.11.

Gal.3.27.

But we are taught to pray for the remiſſion of our ſins: and therefore we are certainly to beleeue that our ſins are remitted, and conſequently that wee are iuſtified, called, elected, and ſhall be ſaued; for whom he did predeſtinate, them alſo he called, and whom he called, them alſo he iuſtified, and whom he iuſtified, them alſo he glorified.

Sixtly, whatſoeuer we profeſſe in the Articles of our faith, that wee ſhould beleeue, and of that wee may and ought particularly to be aſſured: but euery man profeſſeth that he beleeueth the remiſſion of ſins and life euerlaſting, that is, that the Lord doth not onely forgiue ſinne, and granteth vnto ſome the fruition of euerlaſting life, for this the Deuils beleeue as well as we, but alſo that he doth particularly forgiue mee my ſins, and that hee will make mee an heire of eternall happineſſe: for this is the nature of faith, to aſſure vs particularly of that which wee beleeue, as we haue ſhewed: therfore we ought to be aſſured of the remiſſion of our ſins, and that we ſhal attaine vnto euerlaſting life, and conſequently that wee are elected, ſeeing none enjoy it but Gods choſen. But it may be objected, that if euery one be bound to beleeue as an article of his faith that his ſins are forgiuen, and that hee is an heire of euerlaſting life, then ſome are bound to beleeue that which is falſe, for thoſe who liue and die in their ſins without repentance, ſhall neuer obtaine either the one or the other. I anſwer, that we are not bound to beleeue, being deſtitute of a true and a liuely faith, for this were rather fondly to preſume, then ſurely to be perſwaded of the promiſes of the Goſpell, but wee are firſt bound to haue a true, liuely and iuſtifying faith, and ſo to beleeue and apply vnto our ſelues the promiſes of the Goſpell. But thoſe that liue in their ſins without repentance, they are altogether deſtitute of true faith, which whereſoeuer it is purifieth the heart, and worketh by loue, mouing the beleeuer to endeuour and ſtriue to mortifie his corruptions, and to riſe from the death of ſin to newneſſe of life. And therefore well may they ſecurely preſume, but it is impoſſible that they ſhould truly beleeue, becauſe they are vtterly deſtitute of a liuely faith, and where the cauſe is not the effect cannot follow: and conſequently for their infidelity they are ſubject to eternall plagues and puniſhments, becauſe they doe not that which they are bound to performe. Neither muſt we thinke that euery kind of Faith, or rather euery fond perſwaſion of faith is enjoyned vs, but ſuch a faith as is grounded vpon Gods Word; but the Word of God doth teach vs; that whoſoeuer liue in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God, and if wee liue after the fleſh wee ſhall die, Rom. 8.8.13. That the vnrighteous ſhall not inherit the Kingdome of God, 1. Cor. 6.9. That the workers of iniquitie ſhall be reiected of Chriſt, Matth. 7.23. And that no vncleane thing, nor whatſoeuer worketh abomination and lies ſhall enter into the Kingdome of Heauen, Reuel. 21.27. And therefore thoſe who liue in the fleſh, thoſe who are workers of iniquity, vnrighteous and vncleane, in which ranke are all thoſe who liue in their ſinnes without repentance, fulfilling the luſts of the fleſh, and falling continually into ſinne with pleaſure and delight, are not bound ſimply and abſolutely to beleeue, ſo long as they reſolue to continue in this ſtate, for ſo ſhould they be bound to beleeue that which is falſe and repugnant to Gods Word; but they are bound to haue a true faith, which being wrought in their hearts will mooue them to forſake their ſins by vnfained repentance, to hunger after righteouſneſſe, to endeuour to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and newneſſe of life, and ſo beleeue in Chriſt as their Sauiour and Redeemer, which fruits if our faith bring not forth, wee cannot bee aſſured that wee haue true faith, or doe truely beleeue. For though in nature faith be before repentance, yet in our ſenſe and feeling it alwayes followeth it: neither doth faith euer ſoundly and truly perſwade vs of Gods loue, till we haue ſorrowed for our ſinnes, and at leaſt in purpoſe of heart haue forſaken them. So that whoſoeuer liueth ſtill in his ſins with pleaſure and delight, and yet beleeueth that hee is elected to ſaluation, and that hee is in Gods fauour, and ſhall continuing in this ſtate be made an heire of eternall life, hee is not indued with true faith, but with fond preſumption and carnall ſecuritie, which maketh him to beleeue that which is falſe and repugnant to Gods Word. Though then all men, euen carnal worldlings and reprobates are bound to beleeue, and becauſe they doe not, are ſubject to condemnation, as committing a great and fearefull ſinne; as appeareth, Iohn 3.18. and 16.8,9. where our Sauiour ſaith, that the Holy Ghoſt ſhould reproue the world of ſin, becauſe they beleeue not in him: yet they are not bound to beleeue continuing in worldlineſſe, and reſoluing to goe on in their ſins, for ſuch a faith were but fond preſumption; but they are bound ſo to beleeue as that their faith may bee grounded vpon Gods Word, which it can neuer poſſibly be if it be ſeuered from true repentance, and for want of this faith they are condemned.

CHAP. X.

The laſt argument grounded vpon the teſtimony of Gods Spirit.

§. Sect. 1.

LAſtly, whatſoeuer the Spirit of God doth teſtifie in the heart and conſcience of a man, and doth fully aſſure him thereof, that he is to beleeue, and of that hee ought vndoubtedly to be aſſured: but the Spirit of God doth teſtifie to the faithfull, and doth fully aſſure them that they are the ſonnes of God by adoption and grace, and conſequently that they are elected; for none are the ſonnes of God but thoſe who are predeſtinate to be adopted through Ieſus Chriſt, as it is Epheſ. 1.5. and therefore the faithfull are to beleeue, and ought vndoubtedly to bee aſſured that they are the ſonnes of God elected to euerlaſting life. The propoſition is manifeſt; for what more certaine truth can be imagined, then that which the Spirit of God witneſſeth vnto our ſpirits, and confirmeth vnto vs, ſeeing all the properties required in a true witneſſe, doe concurre in him in the higheſt degree, namely knowledge, truth, and faithfulneſſe? for knowledge, hee is infinite and knoweth all things, euen the eternall counſell and decree of God concerning our election, as appeareth, 1. Cor. 2.10. The Spirit ſearcheth all things euen the deepe things of God; and this Spirit doe wee receiue that wee may know the things that are giuen to vs of God. As it is, Verſ. 12. What fitter witneſſe therefore can be imagined in this reſpect then Gods Spirit, who wholly and only knoweth all his ſecret counſels? In reſpect of truth hee is moſt true, yea, Truth it ſelfe, and in regard hereof hee is called the Spirit of truth which leadeth vs into all truth. Iohn 16.13. And therefore as in reſpect of his knowledge he cannot be deceiued, ſo in reſpect of his truth hee cannot deceiue. In reſpect of faithfulneſſe he is moſt faithfull and iuſt in all his wayes, Pſal. 145.17. 1. Cor. 1.9. eſpecially in his Word; for his teſtimony is ſure, as it is, Pſal. 19.7. and therefore he cannot lie, neither will he conceale the truth for any reſpect of perſons; and conſequently, whatſoeuer this al-knowing true and faithfull witneſſe teſtifieth, wee are vndoubtedly to beleeue as being moſt ſure and certaine. If an Angell ſent from Heauen ſhould aſſure vs from God that wee are elected, euen the Papiſts themſelues could not deny, but that wee might be aſſured thereof by ſuch a reuelation without any manner of doubting: but the teſtimony of Gods Spirit witneſſing to our ſpirits that wee are the ſonnes of God, is ſo much more certaine and without exception then the teſtimonie of Angels, as the Spirit of God better knoweth the counſels of God then Angels, as it excelleth them in truth and faith, as the teſtimonie which is imprinted in the heart is more firme then that which is ſpoken in the eare, which may eaſily bee begotten. And therefore if by their doctrine we might be aſſured of our election by the extraordinary reuelation of an Angell; then much more certainly may we be aſſured hereof by the ordinary teſtimony of Gods Spirit which he witneſſeth in the hearts and conſciences of the faithfull.

That Gods Spirit teſti-fieth that w of God.

The propoſition being manifeſt, let vs proue the aſſumption; which containeth two branches, firſt that the Spirit of God teſtifieth to our ſpirits, that we are the ſonnes of God; and ſecondly, doth fully aſſure vs of this teſtimony that it is moſt vndoubted true; both which are manifeſt by Gods Word. Firſt, that Gods Spirit giueth this teſtimony in the hearts of the faithfull, it is euident, Rom. 8.15,16. For yee haue not receiued the ſpirit of bondage to feare againe; but yee haue receiued the ſpirit of adoption, whereby wee crie Abba Father: the ſame Spirit beareth witneſſe with our ſpirit, that we are the children of God. So Galath. 4.6. Becauſe yee are ſonnes, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Sonne into your hearts which crieth Abba Father. Which places doe ſo euidently proue this point, that there needs no more reaſons or allegations; for firſt hee excludeth the ſpirit of bondage, which like the Papiſts faith cauſeth vs to feare and doubt of our election and ſaluation; and then he telleth vs that we haue receiued the ſpirit of adoption, which beareth witneſſe vnto our ſpirit, that we are the children of God.

Secondly, becauſe we are exceeding weake and the graces in vs ſhadowed with imperfections and our faith mixt with doubting: becauſe we are ſaued as yet but by hope, as it is, Rom. 8.24. And wee walke by faith and not by ſight, as it is, 2. Cor. 5.7. and this our faith is continually ſhaken with manifold tentations, therefore leſt we ſhould doubt of Gods loue and our election, adoption and ſaluation, the Lord hath giuen vs his Spirit to ſeale, and further to confirme this aſſurance in our hearts; and that it might be an earneſt and a ſure pledge vnto vs, whereby hee might ſecure vs concerning the couenant which hee hath made with vs. The truth whereof appeareth in many places of the Scripture. 2.Cor.1.22. Who hath ſealed vs and hath giuen the earneſt of the Spirit in our hearts. So Epheſ.1.13. In whom alſo ye haue truſted, after that ye heard the word of truth, euen the Goſpell of our ſaluation, wherein alſo after that ye beleeued, yee were ſealed with the holy Spirit of promiſe. 14. Which is the earneſt of our inheritance, vntill the redemption of the poſſeſſion purchaſed vnto the praiſe of his glory. And Epheſ.4.30. the Apoſtle exhorteth vs not to grieue the holy Spirit of God, by whom we are ſealed vnto the day of our redemption. And 2.Cor.5.5. hee ſaith that God hath giuen vnto vs the earneſt of his Spirit.

Which wordes doe miniſter vnto euery faithfull man no ſmall conſolation, if they be rightly weighed; for firſt wee vſe to ſeale thoſe things which we would haue moſt certaine and out of all controuerſie; as when a man hath made a promiſe or couenant with another, for his better ſecuritie he doth commit it to writing, and leſt yet there ſhould any ſcruple or doubt reſt in his minde, he doth confirme it by adding his ſeale, to put the matter out of all queſtion; ſo the Lord hath added to the written couenant of his Word, whereby he hath aſſured vs of our election, adoption and ſaluation, the outward ſeale of the Sacraments, and the inward ſeale of his Spirit, whereby hee hath ratified it, not in it ſelfe, but in our hearts, that ſo all cauſe of doubting being taken away, wee might certainly be aſſured of his promiſes, that they belong vnto vs not after a generall manner as the Papiſts teach, but particularly, euen as this aſſurance is particularly ſealed by Gods Spirit in the heart of euery true beleeuer, Rom.4.11. The end therefore why wee are ſealed to ſaluation by Gods Spirit, is not that we ſhould doubt thereof, but that it might be out of all queſtion fully ratified and confirmed vnto vs: for this is ſignified by this metaphor here vſed of ſealing, as may appeare not only by the ordinary cuſtome amongſt vs, but alſo by the vſe thereof in former times. So when Ahaſhueroſh would haue letters written in the Kings Name, which no man might reuoke, hee commandeth that they ſhould bee ſealed with the Kings Ring. Heſt.8.8. And Iohn 6.27. it is ſaid that God the Father had ſealed our Sauiour Chriſt, that is, confirmed him in his office of mediation, by giuing euident teſtimonies and manifeſt ſignes that the people might not doubt of his calling & anointing, Matth.3.17. and 17.5. and Iohn 1.32. So, whereas the Holy Ghoſt in the faithfull is called the earneſt of our inheritance, this miniſtreth vnto euery true beleeuer no ſmall conſolation, nor doubtfull aſſurance of his ſaluation; for wee know that an earneſt is giuen amongſt men to ratifie and bind a bargaine, ſo as they cannot go from their agreement after earneſt is giuen and receiued. The word arrhabo, which is here tranſlated earneſt, hath alſo other ſignifications which miniſter vnto Gods faithfull ones the ſame aſſurance and the like true comfort, Geneſ.38.17,18. this word is vſed to ſignifie a pledge or pawne, then the which there can bee no better aſſurance of performing promiſe; and 2.King.14.14. it ſignifieth a hoſtage in wars, which is giuen for aſſurance to confirme couenants agreed vpon. Whereas therefore Gods Spirit in the faithfull is called arrhabo, which ſignifieth an earneſt, pawne and hoſtage: wee are hereby aſſured that the Lord will performe his couenant betweene vs and him; that he will not miſſe a day in the performing of his promiſe; that howſoeuer we were enemies, yet now being reconciled by the death of his Sonne, hee hath giuen vs an hoſtage to aſſure vs of eternall peace, euen his holy Spirit. And therefore let not Satan nor al his aſſiſtants cauſe vs to doubt of Gods couenant, wherein he hath aſſured vs of our election, adoption and ſaluation; ſeeing hee hath ſealed this couenant with his Spirit, and hath giuen vnto vs this earneſt and pawne, to aſſure vs that he wil performe his promiſe and bargaine.

§. Sect. 5.
That wee may diſcerne Gods Spirit by the effects thereof.

But here the tempter obiecteth, that wee cannot know and diſcerne whether we haue the Spirit of God, vnleſſe it ſhould bring forth in vs ſome extraordinary effects: and though it ſhould be granted that wee were endued therewith, yet wee cannot diſcerne the teſtimonie thereof from our owne thoughts, vnleſſe it be by ſome ſpeciall reuelation. To the firſt I anſwere, that though many lulled aſleepe with carnall ſecuritie, do vainly dreame that they haue Gods Spirit, and ſo are deluded with their owne phantaſies; yet this hindereth not, but that hee who hath the Spirit of God indeed, may certainly be aſſured that it dwelleth in him. For it ſealeth in vs the aſſurance of Gods couenant, and who can receiue this ſeale and not feele the impreſſion. It is an earneſt, and who receiuing an earneſt cannot know whether he hath receiued it? for otherwiſe how can it aſſure vs of our bargaine, if of it ſelfe we haue no aſſurance. It is a pawne of Gods loue & our ſaluation, and who hauing a pawne in his cuſtody cannot know that hee poſſeſſeth it. It is a heauenly light which doth illuminate our vnderſtandings, which were blind and ignorant in the knowledge of Gods Truth, and who cannot diſcerne betweene blindneſſe and ſight, light and darkneſſe? It is a water which purgeth vs from our corruption, and who that is thus waſhed and clenſed, can doubt that this water hath touched him. It is a fire which inflameth our cold frozen hearts with a zeale of Gods glory, and loue of our brethren, and how can fire which is carried in our breaſts be hidden from vs. It is a precious oile which mollifieth our hard ſtony hearts, and maketh them flexible and plyable to Gods will, which before were ſo ſtiffe and obdurate that they would rather haue broken then bowed to obedience; it ſuppleth alſo our ſtiffe joynts, and maketh them actiue and nimble in the works of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and who finding thoſe ſtrange alterations in himſelfe, may not be aſſured that hee is anointed with this oyle? It is the Lords Champion fighting in vs againſt the fleſh, and ſubduing the luſts thereof, and who feeling this inteſtine warre in his owne bowels can doubt that the Combatants haue their reſidence in him? In a word, it is onely this ſpirit which reſtraineth vs from the euill, which naturally wee loue, and prouoketh vs to imbrace that good, which through naturall corruption we lothe and abhorre: if therefore ſinne grow vnpleaſant vnto vs, and vertue and true godlineſſe delightfull, wee may bee aſſured that this is the worke of Gods Spirit dwelling in vs. Would wee then bee aſſured that we are endued with the Spirit of God? Why then let vs conſider if our eyes blinded with ignorance are inlightned in any good meaſure, with the knowledge of Gods Truth; if our ſoules polluted with the filth of ſinne, are purged in ſome ſort from our corruptions; if our cold hearts are inflamed with the zeale of Gods glory and the loue of our brethren; if our hearts more hard then adamant, and more inflexible then ſteele, are ſoftened and made obſequious to Gods will; and if the other members of our body, which were benummed and as it were taken with a dead palſie, be made nimble and actiue in the workes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; if wee feele a fight and combat betweene the fleſh and the Spirit, the one ſtriuing to leade vs captiue vnto ſinne, the other reſiſting and drawing vs out of this captiuitie; if the ſins which heretofore wee haue loued, be now lothſome vnto vs, and the vertues which wee haue abhorred be delightfull and pleaſant; and then wee may aſſure our ſelues that it is the light of Gods Spirit which hath ſhined vpon vs, it is this heauenly water which hath waſhed vs, it is this diuine fire which hath inflamed vs, it is this precious oyle that hath mollified and ſoftned vs, it is this Champion of the Lord of Hoſts which maketh warre againſt our traiterous fleſh, and ſubdueth the luſts thereof; in a word, it can bee nothing but Gods Spirit, which makes vs hate that ſin which naturally wee ſo dearely loue, and to loue vertue and godlineſſe which by nature is lothſome and bitter vnto vs.

Gal.5.17.

And thus it is manifeſt that wee may bee aſſured that we haue Gods Spirit, by the ordinary fruits thereof in euery faithfull man.

§. Sect. 5.
How wee may diſcerne the teſtimony of Gods Spirit from our ow presumptio

Now let vs conſider how we may know the teſtimony of this Spirit, witneſſing in our hearts that we are elected, adopted and ſhall be ſaued, from our owne phantaſies cauſed through carnall ſecurity and vaine preſumption. And to this end we are to know, that the preaching of the Goſpell is the miniſtery of the ſpirit, whereby wee are ſealed and confirmed in the aſſurance of our ſaluation, as appeareth, 2.*Cor.*3.6. And hence it is that the Preachers of the Goſpell are called the Miniſters by whom the people beleeue, 1. *Cor.*3.5. And the words of the Goſpell are called by our Sauiour Chriſt ſpirit and life, becauſe it is the miniſtery of the ſpirit which quickneth vs, as it is Iohn 6.63. And *Gal.*3.2. the Apoſtle ſaith that wee haue receiued the ſpirit by the hearing of faith, that is, the doctrine of faith preached in the miniſtery of the Goſpell. If therefore the teſtimony of ſaluation in the minds of the faithfull, be conceiued by the preaching of the Goſpell applyed vnto them by faith, then is it moſt certainly the teſtimony of Gods Spirit; for the inward teſtimony of Gods Spirit is not different from the outward teſtimony of the Word; but if this perſwaſion be not grounded vpon Gods Word, as theirs is not who perſwade themſelues that they are elected, adopted, and ſhall be ſaued, notwithſtanding that they liue in their ſinnes without repentance, making no conſcience of their wayes, nor endeuoring to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe, and righteouſnes of life; then is it not the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, but a preſumptuous phantaſie, and a ſecure and carnall imagination: for the teſtimony of Gods Spirit in the conſcience, is the ſame with the teſtimony of the Word, and therefore it doth not beare witneſſe nor giue any aſſurance that they are ſaued, which Gods Word pronounceth to be in the ſtate of damnation. When therefore this teſtimony is giuen in a faithfull man, and agreeable to Gods Word; it is the teſtimony of the Spirit which ſealeth vs in the full aſſurance of that we beleeue: according to that *Epheſ.*1.13. where the Apoſtle ſaith, that after the faithfull had receiued the Word of truth, euen the Goſpell of their ſaluation, and beleeued therein, they were ſealed with the holy ſpirit of promiſe. But thoſe who make no conſcience of hearing the Goſpell preached, and when they heare it, doe not beleeue it, nor apply it to themſelues by a true and liuely faith, nor bring forth any fruits thereof in a holy and Chriſtian life, they haue neither Faith nor Gods Spirit: and therefore if they haue any perſwaſion of their election and ſaluation, it is not the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, but their owne phantaſie, and a vaine opinion ariſing from carnall ſecuritie and preſumption.

roughly perſwadeth the faithfull of their election and ſaluation: ſecondly, by the manner of perſwading them: thirdly, by the effects of this teſtimony and perſwaſion. For the firſt, the Spirit of God doth not onely giue this bare teſtimony that we are elected, adopted, and ſhall be ſaued: but alſo doth fully perſwade vs heereof, as being a thing moſt certaine and without queſtion. So 1. Corinth. 2.12. the Apoſtle ſaith that wee haue receiued the ſpirit of God, that we might know the things that are giuen to vs of God. And Epheſ. 1.17,18. Gods Spirit is called the ſpirit of wiſdome and reuelation, which doth inlighten the eyes of our vnderſtanding, that we might know what the hope is of his calling, and what the riches of his glorious inheritance is in the Saints; and what is the exceeding greatneſſe of his power, particularly towards vs that beleeue, according to the working of his mightie power. So the Apoſtle Iohn ſaith, hereby we know that Chriſt abideth in vs, euen by the ſpirit which hee hath giuen vs, 1. Iohn 3.24. So that wee may be aſſured that wee haue Gods Spirit, and thereby bee thorowly perſwaded that Chriſt dwelleth in vs, and conſequently that wee are elected and ſhall bee ſaued. And Chap. 4.13. Hereby know we that we dwell in him and he in vs, becauſe he hath giuen vs of his ſpirit. And the Apoſtle Paul by the Spirit of God was ſo ſtedfaſtly aſſured of Gods loue, that he profeſſeth that hee was firmely perſwaded that nothing could ſeparate him from it, Rom. 8. 38,39. So that the Spirit of God thoroughly perſwadeth the faithfull that they are elected and ſhall bee ſaued; whereas the wicked who are deſtitute of Gods Spirit, may well haue a fond opinion and a fooliſh conceit, that they are highly in Gods loue & elected to ſaluation, through carnall ſecuritie and vaine preſumption; but they are neuer thoroughly perſwaded hereof; for when any affliction of body or minde is inflicted on them, their vain perſwaſion vaniſheth away, and nothing remaineth but doubting, which in the end bringeth them to vtter eſperation.

But here the tempter will take occaſion to diſcourage the weake Chriſtian, and to perſwade him that he hath not Gods Spirit, ſeeing hee doth not feele in himſelfe this firme perſwaſion of Gods loue and his election & ſaluation. To which we are to anſwere, that Gods Spirit doth throughly perſwade, although not at all times, neither in our preſent ſenſe and feeling; for immediatly after our conuerſion when wee are newly regenerate, and like new borne babes in Chriſt, the motions of the Spirit are but weak in vs, and we are not skilfull in vnderſtanding this heauenly language of the Spirit, wherewith we haue beene altogether vnacquainted; but the ſpirit waxing ſtronger in vs, and we growing to a ripe age in Chriſt, doth cry in our hearts, Abba father, and teſtifieth to our ſpirits that we are the ſonnes of God; which wee then being better acquainted with this heauenly ſpeech, do well vnderſtand, and are throughly perſwaded thereby. And ſecondly, when the poore Chriſtian who hath receiued a great meaſure of the ſpirit is exerciſed in the ſpirituall conflict, the hideous noiſe of Satans tentations which like Canon-ſhot ſound in his eares, and the tumultuous outcries of his owne paſſions do ſo diſturbe and wholly poſſeſſe him, that hee cannot heare the voice of the ſpirit perſwading him that he is the childe of God; till the skirmiſh bee paſt and the noyſe of tentations ceaſed, and then againe as in former times he heareth to his comfort the Spirit of God perſwading him of Gods loue, and hereby hee is againe aſſured thereof. So that wee are not to iudge of the hauing of Gods Spirit in the time of our Chriſtian infancie and ſpirituall nonage, nor yet according to our preſent ſenſe in the time of tentation, but when wee are come to perfect age, and when the conflict of tentations is ceaſed.

§. Sect. 8.
That the teſtimony of the ſpirit is known by the manner of perſwading vs.

Secondly, the teſtimony of Gods Spirit perſwading vs of his loue and our election, is knowne by the manner whereby it perſwadeth vs: namely, it perſwadeth vs hereof with arguments grounded vpon Gods word, and drawne not from any worthineſſe in our ſelues, but from Gods free grace and vndeſerued mercy, and from the righteouſneſſe & merits of Chriſt; whereas Satan and our own fleſh neuer vſe ſuch reaſons, but either moue vnto a bare and vaine opinion which hath no ground at all but ſelfe-loue, which maketh men eaſily beleeue that which they deſire; or elſe with ſome arguments drawne from ſome outward cōmon benefits beſtowed indifferently vpon the good and bad; or laſtly, from a Phariſaicall conceit and falſe opinion of our owne worthineſſe and deſerts.

§. Sect. 9.
The third meanes to diſcerne the ſpirit, namely by the fruits thereof.

Laſtly, the teſtimony of Gods Spirit is knowne and diſcerned by the effects thereof; for after that it hath effectually perſwaded vs, that we are elected and the deare children of God, wee are mooued thereby to truſt wholly in God, and to loue him as our gracious Father. From which loue proceedeth a zeale of his glory, and a true hatred of ſin, becauſe thereby our heauenly Father is diſhonoured and diſpleaſed with vs; and a true loue and hearty endeuour of imbracing holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, becauſe thereby our gracious father is glorified and wel pleaſed with vs. If therefore theſe effects and fruits follow this perſwaſion of Gods loue and our election, we may be aſſured that it is the Spirit of God which doth perſwade vs; but if wee haue no ſuch truſt and affiance, no ſuch loue of God, no zeale of his glory, no hatred of ſin, no loue nor deſire of imbracing righteouſneſſe, but remayne as carnall, worldly, and prophane as euer we were, then let vs bragge as much as we will of our perſwaſion of Gods loue and our election, yet it is moſt certaine that this perſwaſion is not wrought in vs by Gods Spirit, but is a vaine conceit and fond opinion which proceedeth from ſelfe-loue, carnall ſecuritie, and fond preſumption, which in the end vaniſhing away will leaue vs in deſpaire.

CHAP. XI.

Of the meanes whereby we may be aſſured of our election.

§. Sect. 1. The firſt meanes the teſtimony of the Holy Ghoſt,

AND thus haue I prooued that thoſe who are conuerted vnto God, iuſtified, & in ſome meaſure ſanctified, may ordinarily attaine vnto the aſſurance of their election: Now I will ſhew the means & ſignes wherby we may be thus aſſured. The firſt and principall meanes which aſſureth vs of our election, is the inward teſtimony of Gods Spirit which crieth in our hearts Abba Father, and witneſſeth vnto our ſpirits that wee are the children of God, as it is Rom. 8.15,16. Which teſtimony it doth not giue by extraordinary reuelation, but by a ſecret application of the promiſes of the Goſpell vnto vs, and by an inward co-operation whereby it maketh the outward miniſtery of the word effectuall for the begetting of faith in vs, whereby as with an hand we do appropriate the generall promiſes of the word vnto our owne ſelues. And when the Miniſters vſe reaſons to perſwade vs of Gods loue in Chriſt, then the holy Ghoſt openeth our deafe eares, and inlighteneth our blinde vnderſtandings, and powerfully inclineth our wils, ſo that wee may attentiuely heare, truly vnderſtand, and bee fully aſſured of that truth which is deliuered, not onely in reſpect of the whole Church, but alſo of our ſelues particularly, ſo as we can ſay, I beleeue that theſe promiſes of God are true, and that they belong to all the faithfull, and conſequently vnto mee who doe beleeue and am aſſured of them, ſeeing they are promiſed on no other condition.

Rom. 8.15,16.

Diuers differences betweene the teſtimony of the ſpirit and preſumptuous ſecuritie.

But the tempter will obiect, that many through carnall preſumption doe perſwade themſelues, that all the promiſes of the Goſpell doe belong vnto them, and therefore we may eaſily bee deceiued, not being able to diſcerne betweene the teſtimony of the ſpirit and preſumptuous ſecuritie. I anſwere, that thoſe who are indued with Gods Spirit, may eaſily diſcerne the teſtimony of the ſpirit from the carnall language of preſumption, as it is euident by that which before I haue deliuered; and alſo may more plainly appeare by manifeſt differences, if the one be compared with the other. For preſumption is a fruit of originall corruption which accompanieth vs from our mothers wombe, till it be beaten downe with Gods ſanctifying Spirit; but the teſtimony of the ſpirit is a thing ſupernaturall, which no man euer feeleth before his conuerſion vnto God, when as by the preaching of the word hee is humbled vnder the burthen of ſinne, ſorrowing and grieuing for his ſins paſt, and deteſting them from his heart, and purpoſing to leaue and forſake them in the time to come. If therefore we haue had alwayes this teſtimony in our minds that we are in Gods fauour and elected, and neuer felt our conuerſion, nor diſcerned any fruits thereof; then doth this teſtimony proceed from carnall preſumption and not from Gods Spirit. Secondly, thoſe who haue the teſtimony of the Spirit make conſcience of the diligent and carefull vſe of the outward meanes of ſaluation, as the hearing and reading of the word, the receiuing of the Sacraments, and other holy duties of Gods ſeruice, becauſe they know that the inward teſtimony of the Spirit is not ordinarily ſeuered from the outward teſtimony of the word; and the aſſurance of Gods loue and our election is not wrought immediatly in vs by reuelation of the Spirit, but by the preaching of the word & vſe of the Sacraments, made effectuall by the inward cooperation of the holy Ghoſt. But preſumption as it ariſeth not from the vſe of theſe meanes made thus effectuall, but from carnall ſecurity, ſo is it not confirmed thereby: for the leſſe that the preſumptuous man heareth the word and performeth the duties of pietie and Gods ſeruice, the more confidently doth he boaſt of his faith and full aſſurance; and therefore hee maketh no conſcience of vſing theſe meanes ordained of God; yea, contrariwiſe hee will not ſticke to affirme, that the hearing of the word too often is the cauſe that troubleth mens minds and afflicteth their conſciences, mouing them to doubt of Gods mercie, which before they neuer called into queſtion. And why is this, but becauſe hereby men are rouzed out of their ſleepe of ſecuritie, and haue their confident preſumption beaten downe? If then we are carefull to vſe all holy meanes ordained of God to aſſure vs of our ſaluation, that aſſurance and teſtimony which followeth is the teſtimony of Gods Spirit: otherwiſe it is nothing elſe but fond preſumption. Thirdly, preſumption is moſt confident, and neuer doubteth nor maketh any queſtion of his election and ſaluation who thus preſumeth; but this teſtimony of the Spirit is much aſſaulted with doubting, and oftentimes thereby ſo exceedingly weakened that wee cannot heare the voice thereof: as wee may ſee in the example of Iob, Dauid, the father of the poſſeſſed child, the two Diſciples who journied to Emaus, and in all Gods children who haue not yet attained vnto fulneſſe of perſwaſion, vnto which none can come but by degrees. And therefore if we can bragge with ſecure worldlings, and ſay with the proud Phariſie, I neuer was troubled I thank God with any doubting of mine election and ſaluation, as many are; but alwayes haue had a ſtrong beleefe that I am in Gods loue and ſhall vndoubtedly bee ſaued: wee may aſſure our ſelues that this is the voice of preſumption, and not the teſtimony of Gods Spirit. Fourthly, preſumption is joyned with worldlineſſe and prophaneneſſe, but the teſtimony of Gods Spirit is neuer ſeuered from ſanctification, or at leaſt from an earneſt deſire and holy endeuour of ſeruing the Lord in holines and righteouſneſſe: for (as I ſaid) the teſtimony of the Spirit in the conſcience is neuer contrary to the teſtimony of the Spirit in the Word, neither doth it beare witneſſe that thoſe are in Gods loue and elected to ſaluation, which the Scriptures witnes to be in Gods diſpleaſure and in the ſtate of condemnation, namely, all vnrepentant ſinners continuing in their vnrepentancie. And therefore if the aſſurance which wee haue of our election and ſaluation bee not joyned with a deſire to leaue our ſinnes, and with an earneſt endeuour of ſeruing God in the duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, then it doth not proceed from the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, but from carnall ſecuritie and fond preſumption. Laſtly, preſumption no longer perſwadeth men of Gods loue and fauour, then they enjoy the outward benefits of this life; but when the Lord layeth vpon them any grieuous affliction, either outwardly in body and ſtate, or inwardly in minde; then this perſwaſion vaniſheth, and nothing remayneth but doubting, which commonly endeth in vtter deſpaire: but the teſtimony of the Spirit is conſtant and permanent; and howſoeuer we cannot by reaſon of the grieuouſneſſe of afflictions, and the violent noiſe of our owne paſſions heare the voice thereof at ſome times, yet afterwards againe it crieth aloud in our hearts Abba Father, and witneſſeth vnto our ſpirits that we are the ſonnes of God. So that the chiefe meanes whereby we are aſſured of our election is the Spirit of God. But ſeeing we haue it not naturally in our ſelues, how may wee attaine vnto it? Surely wee are to haue our recourſe vnto the Father of lights by earneſt prayer, from whom deſcendeth euery good and perfect gift, hauing our faith grounded vpon Gods gracious promiſe, namely, that if wee aske wee ſhall receiue, and more eſpecially, that hee will giue his holy ſpirit to them that aske it, as it is Luke 11.13.

he ſecond meanes, the hearing of the word.

The ſecond meanes whereby wee may attaine to the certainty of our election, is the hearing of the Word, wherein the Lord manifeſteth his grace and good will to all beleeuing and repentant ſinners, and whereby alſo he ordinarily begetteth this faith and repentance in all his children. For howſoeuer Paul may plant, and Apollos may water, but God alone giueth the increaſe; yet Gods bleſſing ordinarily accompanieth his owne ordinance, making it effectuall by the inward operation of his Spirit, for thoſe ends for which he hath ordained it. And though the word may long ſound in our eares before it peirce the heart, or beget any ſauing grace in vs, vnleſſe the Lord open our hearts and make the ſeed of his word fruitfull: yet thoſe who make conſcience of hearing the word, with diligence, reuerence and attention, and pray for the aſſiſtance of Gods ſpirit, whereby it may become profitable to their ſaluation, may conſtantly expect the bleſſing of God vpon his owne Ordinance, which they carefully vſe in obedience to his will. Whereas thoſe who neglect and contemne Gods Word haue no ſuch aſſurance, becauſe it is the means and inſtrument which is ordained of God for this purpoſe, without which the Spirit of God doth not ordinarily beget faith, or any ſauing grace in vs. Though therefore we doe not after long hearing of the word, feele this aſſurance of Gods loue & our election, yet let vs not giue it ouer but expect Gods bleſſing vpon it, & waite his leaſure, aſſuring our ſelues that in the end, hee will make this his owne Ordinance effectuall for thoſe ends, for which he hath ordained it.

1.Cor.3.6.

§.Sect.3.
The third meanes, the vſe of the Sacraments.

The third meanes whereby wee may attaine to the aſſurance of our election, is the frequent and religious vſe of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, whereby our faith is more and more confirmed in the truth of Gods promiſes. For the Lord to the preaching of his word which is the Couenant of grace, hath added theſe Seales that we might bee the more thoroughly aſſured of his loue and fauour; and therefore if wee conſcionably frequent this holy Sacrament, the Lord will bleſſe alſo this his owne Ordinance. Moreouer they who worthily receiue theſe holy myſteries, doe receiue Chriſt Ieſus, and haue the vnion and communion which is betweene him and them, more and more ſtrengthened and confirmed, for hee that eateth his fleſh and drinketh his blood dwelleth in Chriſt, and Chriſt in him, As it is Iohn 6.56. Now there is no condemnation to thoſe that are in Chriſt Ieſus, and therefore they need not doubt of their election and ſaluation.

§.Sect.4.
The fourth meanes, the effects of our election.

onely in naturall things, but alſo in thoſe which are ſupernaturall and ſpirituall. And therefore as certainly as we know that there is fire becauſe it caſteth forth heate, and the Sunne by his caſting forth of bright rayes whereby the world is lightned; and that a tree is good by the good fruites which it bringeth forth; ſo alſo may we as certainly be aſſured that we are elected of God, when we find in out ſelues the effects and vndoubted ſignes of our election. Neither are theſe effects bare ſignes onely of our election, but alſo manifeſt ſeales which by their plaine impreſſion, doe euidently aſſure vs thereof: ſo that though wee doe not directly and immediatly know Gods election, predeſtination, and eternall decree of ſaluation in God himſelfe, electing, predeſtinating, and decreeing that we ſhall be ſaued; yet we may plainly ſee apparant ſeales and impreſſions hereof in our ſelues, liuely reſembling that which is ſecret in Gods hidden counſell. And as we not ſeeing the ſeale which maketh the impreſſion, doe eaſily diſcerne the forme, faſhion, and quantity thereof by the print which it hath made, ſo wee not ſeeing Gods ſecret decree of predeſtination, may notwithſtanding attaine to the euident knowledge thereof, by that impreſſion which it maketh in vs. This alſo may further be illuſtrated by a familiar ſimilitude; namely, as the Sun-ſhining vpon vs with his bright beames, doth imprint as it were in our eyes the Image of his light, whereby wee ſee the Sun and the light thereof (the beames of the Sun which are caſt vpon vs, being reflected backe againe to the Sun it ſelfe) ſo the fore-knowledge of God whereby he hath decreed that we ſhall be ſaued before all eternitie, is ſecret in it ſelfe, ſo that we cannot ſee nor vnderſtand it directly, but yet whileſt God doth acknowledge vs for his elect, hee doth expreſſe the Image and forme of this his fore-knowledge in thoſe whom he hath elected, whereby we doe alſo acknowledge him our gracious God who hath elected vs; and ſo it commeth to paſſe that by the true knowledge of God, which is communicated vnto vs, whereby we acknowledge him for our God and Father, wee alſo know his fore-knowledge, whereby hee knoweth and acknowledgeth vs for his ſonnes and children. For firſt God knoweth vs, and then by the light of this knowledge communicated vnto vs, he enlightneth our hearts with the true knowledge of himſelfe, as the Sun firſt inlightneth our eyes, and by this light wee ſee the Sun it ſelfe. And this our Sauiour Chriſt intimateth, Iohn 10.14. where firſt hee ſaith hee knoweth his ſheepe, and then hee addeth that he is alſo knowne of them. As though he ſhould ſay, whileſt I know and acknowlege them for my ſheepe, hereby I bring to paſſe that they in like manner by the participation of this my light and knowledge, doe acknowledge mee for their true Paſtor. If therefore we know and acknowledge God, for our gracious God and louing Father in Chriſt, it is a moſt certaine ſigne, that he alſo by his fore-knowledge, doth know and acknowledge vs for his people and children. But if we remayne in our ignorance, without the knowledge of God, and his Sonne Chriſt, we can gather no aſſurance vnto our ſelues of our election; for if the fore-knowledge of God had ſhined vpon vs, the beames thereof would haue illuminated our hearts, ſo as wee ſhould by their light haue knowne God alſo. The like may be ſaid of Gods eternall loue, wherewith hee hath loued vs in Chriſt; for God louing vs, hath imprinted the Image of his loue in our hearts, whereby we loue him againe: and when this heauenly heate of Gods loue hath deſcended on vs, and warmed our cold hearts, frozen in the dregs of ſinne, then doe wee reflect ſome of thoſe beames of Gods loue towards him againe. And this the Apoſtle Iohn plainely ſheweth, 1. Iohn 4.19. where hee ſaith that we loue God becauſe he loued vs firſt; that is, by that eternall loue wherewith God loued vs in Chriſt, there is imprinted in our hearts the loue of God. And hence it is that hee ſaith, Verſe 7. that loue commeth from God: becauſe wee can neither loue God, nor our neighbours aright, till his loue towards vs hauing ſhined vpon vs, hath inflamed our hearts. So the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, Rom. 5.5. that the loue of God is ſhed abroad in our hearts, by the holy Ghoſt which is giuen vnto vs, whereby loue towards God is begotten in vs. If therefore the loue of God be in our hearts, wee may bee aſſured that it is but an impreſſion which is made in vs, by the ſeal of his loue towards vs; but a little ſparke kindled by this heauenly flame and a ſmal modell or little counterfeite reſembling the infinite loue of God, wherewith from all eternitie he hath loued vs in Chriſt. Thus alſo Gods eternall election, whereby before all worlds hee hath choſen vs in Chriſt, doth make an impreſſion, and ſealeth in our hearts the forme or Image thereof, whereby we make choice of the true God Iehouah, amongſt all the gods of the Nations to bee our onely God, whom we will ſerue and worſhip, and therefore if we haue made this election, and dedicated our ſelues wholly to Gods worſhip and ſeruice alone; it is a moſt certaine ſigne of our election, whereby God hath choſen vs; for our chooſing of God is an effect of his chooſing of vs, and an impreſſion or print wherewith by his election hee hath ſealed vs.

the ſpeciall effects of our election, whereby wee may bee aſſured that wee are choſen of God. The firſt effect, is our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe ſet apart of God to be the Mediator to reconcile all Gods elect vnto him, dwelling in vs by his Spirit; who may juſtly bee called the firſt effect of Gods election, becauſe all the other, namely our vocation, juſtification, ſanctification, and ſaluation, are by him and through him alone. Whoſoeuer therefore are aſſured that Chriſt dwelleth in them, and they in him, they haue a moſt vndoubted ſigne of their election: and whoſoeuer haue not Chriſt dwelling in them by his Spirit, can haue no aſſurance that they are choſen, as the Apoſtle plainly ſheweth, 2. Cor.13.5. Know you not (ſaith he) that Ieſus Chriſt is in you except you be reprobates? but how ſhall wee know whether Chriſt dwelleth thus in vs and we in him? the Apoſtle telleth vs, Rom.8.1. that thoſe who are in Chriſt Ieſus walke not after the fleſh but after the ſpirit, that is, thoſe who doe not willingly ſubmit themſelues to be ruled and led by the luſts of the fleſh, but labour and ſtriue to reſiſt and ſubdue them, ſtudying and endeuouring to liue a ſpirituall life, in holineſſe and righteouſnes. For in whomſoeuer Chriſt dwelleth by his ſpirit, thoſe he regenerateth and raiſeth from the death of ſin, to newnes of life; and his bloud is effectuall, not onely to purge them from the guilt of ſin, but alſo to cleanſe them in ſome meaſure from the corruptions themſelues.

The ſecond effect of our election, is our effectuall calling; whereby we are ſeparated from the world, and ingrafted into Chriſt, and made liuely members of his body: and this is done ordinarily by the diligent and attentiue hearing of the word, joyned with the inward operation of Gods Spirit. If therefore wee haue heard Gods Word preached diligently and attentiuely; if thereby we haue attained vnto the knowledge of the worke of our redemption wrought by Ieſus Chriſt, and are delighted therewith; if by this meanes wee haue our hearts ſomewhat weaned from the world, and fixed vpon our Sauiour and heauenly things; and thinking it ſufficient to haue ſpent the reſt of our liues paſt in the luſt of the Gentiles, do liue henceforward after the will of God: then are wee truly and effectually called; for thoſe are Chriſts ſheepe that heare his voice and follow him, Iohn 10.4. Thoſe are ingrafted into his body, who bring forth no fruites of godlineſſe. For as the branch can bring forth no fruit except it abide in the Vine, ſo neither can wee bring forth any fruits of pietie and righteouſnes except we abide in Chriſt; and therefore if wee doe bring forth theſe fruits, it manifeſtly appeareth that we are in Chriſt, and conſequently truly called and elected, for without him wee could doe nothing, as it is, Iohn 15.4,5.

§.*Sect.*7.
The third effect is our iuſtification.

The third effect of Gods election, is our juſtification, conſiſting in the remiſſion of our ſins, and the imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe: and to this is required a true and liuely faith, which aſſureth vs of the remiſſion of our ſins, and applyeth vnto vs Chriſts righteouſneſſe. If therefore we beleeue that our ſins are forgiuen, and by faith apply vnto vs Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, wee may be aſſured that wee are juſtified, and conſequently elected. Now this perſwaſion and liuely faith, is diſcerned by the fruits thereof; for it purifieth our hearts, and worketh by loue; and it worketh in vs an hatred of ſin, and loue of righteouſneſſe, which is our ſanctification.

Acts 15.9.
*Gal.*5.6.

§.*Sect.*8.
The fourth effect is our ſanctification, which is the touchſtone of all the reſt.

So that our ſanctification which is the laſt effect of Gods election wrought in vs in this life, is the true touch-ſtone of all the reſt: whereby wee may certainly know whether wee be effectually called, that is, ſeparated from the World, and ingrafted as liuely members into the body of Chriſt; and whether wee bee truly juſtified, that is, purged from the guilt and puniſhment of our ſinnes by Chriſts bloud, and adorned with his righteouſneſſe imputed vnto vs. For if we be ſeparated from the world, then doe we not ſet our minds vpon worldly things, but haue our conuerſation in Heauen from whence we looke for a Sauiour, euen the Lord Ieſus Chriſt. If we are ingrafted into the body of Chriſt who is the true Vine, then doe we bring forth the ſweet grapes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe in our liues and conuerſations, as it is Iohn 15.5. If wee haue by a true faith the aſſurance of the remiſſion of our ſins, then will we loue God who hath forgiuen vs ſo great a debt, and labour to expreſſe our loue by glorifying his Name, in cauſing our light to ſhine before men. And if the bloud of Chriſt be effectuall vnto vs for the purging away of the guilt and puniſhment of ſin, then will it alſo in ſome meaſure purge away the corruptions themſelues. For wee are grafted with him into the ſimilitude of his death and reſurrection, and our old man is crucified with him, and the body of ſin deſtroyed, that from henceforth wee ſhould not ſerue ſinne, as it is *Rom.*6.5,6. And as our ſanctification is the onely vndoubted ſigne of our vocation and juſtification; ſo alſo of our election; for the Lord hath choſen vs that wee ſhould be holy, *Epheſ.*1.4. And therefore if we be holy wee haue a manifeſt effect and inſeparable fruit of our election; if we be not holy nor make any conſcience of ſeruing the Lord in the duties of Pietie and Chriſtianitie, wee haue no aſſurance that we are elected: for though the foundation of God remayneth ſure on Gods part being ſealed and confirmed in his eternall counſell, yet it is not ſealed in our hearts vntill we depart from iniquitie, as it is is 2.*Tim.*2.19. Though then there bee no place vnto our ſanctification in Gods Decree, as being any cauſe thereof; and therefore when the queſtion is asked why we are elected, wee muſt anſwere, not for any deſerts or holineſſe in our ſelues, but becauſe of Gods good pleaſure and vndeſerued grace; and when it is demanded in whom wee are elected, we muſt reply in Chriſt Ieſus onely; yet there is chiefe place vnto our ſanctification in the aſſurance of our election, ſo that when the queſtion is asked who are elected, anſwere is to be made, thoſe onely who are alſo ſanctified in Gods good time by his gracious Spirit; for without this holineſſe no man ſhall euer ſee God, as it is *Heb.*12.14.

§. Sect. 9. Wherein our ſanctification conſiſteth, And that thoſe who will be aſſured of their election muſt begin their aſſurance at their ſanctification.

Now our ſanctification doth principally conſiſt in a loue of righteouſneſſe, and a true hatred of ſin; from whence proceeedeth an earneſt deſire, and hearty endeuour of forſaking that which is euill, and of cleauing vnto that which is good: and for the better effecting hereof, a carefull ſtudie of mortifying the fleſh and the luſts thereof, and painfull diligence in vſing all good means wherby the ſpirit may bee ſtrengthened, and the gifts and graces thereof increaſed, that ſo we may not bee ſo prone to fall into that ſinne which wee hate; nor ſo backward in imbracing and following that righteouſneſſe and holineſſe which wee loue. And this is the ſanctification which is an inſeparable fruit and effect of Gods election in al his children, which though it bee the laſt in nature and next vnto ſaluation it ſelfe, for firſt God electeth, and thoſe whom hee hath elected, in his good time he calleth, and whom he calleth thoſe he juſtifieth, and laſtly, whom hee juſtifieth thoſe he ſanctifieth and ſaueth; yet when wee are to gather aſſurance of our election, we are not to obſerue this order, but to begin where the Lord endeth, and ſo aſcend from the loweſt degree till wee come to the higheſt. For as it is a fooliſh thing for a man to thinke that he can leape to the top of an high ladder at the firſt ſtep, and therefore euery one beginneth with the loweſt ſtaffe, and ſo aſcendeth ſtep by ſtep till he come to the higheſt: ſo it is a fooliſh thing for a man to imagine that hee can leape into Heauen, and there ſearch the vnſearchable counſels of God, and ſo know whether hee is elected or no; but wee muſt begin at the loweſt ſtep, namely, our ſanctification which being attained vnto, we may aſcend a ſtep higher in our aſſurance, namely, that we are juſtified, and ſo the next, that wee are effectually called, and laſtly, to the higheſt that we are elected. Otherwiſe if wee curiouſly diue into the bottomleſſe ſecrets of Gods counſels, we ſhall be drowned and ouer-whelmed; if wee approach vnto this approachable light, the eye of our vnderſtanding will be dazled, yea ſtarke blinded; if we preſume to vnderſtand beyond ſobrietie, we ſhall by the juſt judgement of God bee infatuated, and thruſt our ſelues into an endleſſe labyrinth, out of which we ſhall neuer find way, wanting the line of Gods Word to guide vs. And therefore if we would haue any true aſſurance of our election, wee muſt examine our ſelues whether we be ſanctified; and if we find in our ſelues ſanctification by the fruits therof, we may vndoubtedly conclude that wee are juſtified, called, elected, and ſhall be ſaued. If we walke not after the fleſh but after the ſpirit, wee may bee aſſured that wee are in Chriſt Ieſus, and therefore there is no condemnation belonging vnto vs. If wee bring forth the fruits of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, wee may be aſſured that wee are good trees of Gods owne planting. If wee bee fruitfull branches wee may aſſuredly know, that we are ingrafted into the true Vine Ieſus Chriſt, Iohn 15.4,5.

§. Sect. The vſe of former doctrine.

Seeing then our ſanctification aſſureth vs of our election and ſaluation, and without it there is no aſſurance; what ſtronger argument can be imagined to make vs flee ſinne, and labour after mortification and newneſſe of life? What keener knife can bee vſed to cut in ſunder the cords of vanitie, wherein naturally wee are fettered and intangled? What ſharper ſpurre to pricke vs forward in the courſe of godlineſſe, then to know and conſider that by our ſanctification and holineſſe of life, wee are certainly aſſured that God hath elected vs, to be heires of the vnſpeakable joyes of his Kingdome, and that by our wickedneſſe and prophaneneſſe wee haue no leſſe certaine aſſurance that we ſhall haue our portion for euer in the lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone? For if wee liue holily like true Chriſtians on earth, wee ſhall liue happily like glorious Angels in Heauen: but if here wee lie frozen in the dregges of our ſinnes, without any ſenſe of ſorrow for thoſe which are paſt, or any deſire and purpoſe of heart to forſake them in the time to come, wee ſhall bee thruſt from the Lord amongſt the workers of iniquitie, and the wrath of God ſhall purſue, ouertake and conſume vs. What ſinne therefore can be ſo pleaſant to our taſte, which this conſideration will not make more bitter then Worme-wood? What dutie of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe ſo diſpleaſant and grieuous, which this will not make ſweet and delightfull?

Now that wee may not deceiue our ſelues with a counterfeit holineſſe, in ſtead of true ſanctification, we are to know that this aſſurance of ſaluation, doth not proceed from euery kind of holineſſe, but from that which is true and vnfained: for there is an holines of the tongue, ſeuered from the holineſſe of the heart, in ſhew but not in deed, in profeſſion but not in practice. There is an holines in performing outward duties of Gods ſeruice, ſeuered from righteouſneſſe towardes our brethren. There is an holineſſe in leauing ſome or the moſt ſins, without any deſire or purpoſe to forſake ſome one or two ſins by which we receiue greateſt pleaſure or profit. There is an holineſſe in tything Mint and Cummin, which neglecteth the waightie things of the Law, and which maketh cleane the out-ſide of the platter and cup, leauing the in-ſide full of rapine and exceſſe; and outwardly maketh a glorious golden ſhew, when as within there is nothing but putrifaction and rotteneſſe. There is an holineſſe which conſiſteth in the Phariſaicall cenſuring of poore Publicans, and in extolling our owne vertues. The firſt kind is of thoſe whom the Prophet reproueth, Eſay 29.13. who drew neer vnto God with their lips when as their hearts were far from him: & of thoſe whom the Apoſtle brandeth, 2. Tim. 3. 5. who make a ſhew of godlineſſe, but in their liues deny the power thereof: in which ranke many profeſſors alſo in theſe dayes may fitly march. The ſecond kind is of thoſe who are content to ſerue God in the outward duties of his worſhip, becauſe they find them good cheape, yea often gainfull; but cannot away with righteouſnes, becauſe that is ſometimes painfull and ſometimes requireth coſt. And theſe men in ſtead of making godlineſſe their gaine, make a gaine of godlineſſe. The third kind is Herods holineſſe, who heard Iohn gladly and did many things, yet could not abide to leaue his inceſt: and ſuch holineſſe is in ſome now adayes, who will be content to leaue all groſſe outward ſins, ſo they may continue in their couetouſneſſe and voluptuouſneſſe. The fourth is the holineſſe of thoſe Phariſies which are moſt zealous in ceremonies and their owne traditions but keycold in thoſe duties which moſt concerne Gods glory and their neighbours good. The laſt kinde was the holineſſe of the ancient Phariſies, and is the holineſſe of our new Browniſts, who place the moſt of their religion in cenſuring and condemning the corruptions of the Church, and miſdemenours of priuate men, not looking into their owne, pride, bitterneſſe, enuy, and want of charitie.

But none of theſe, no nor yet all theſe joyned together, will euen giue vnto vs any ſound aſſurance of our election; but it is that true ſanctification indeed, which beginneth not in the mouth but in the heart, and ſanctifieth our will and affections, making vs to loue and imbrace to our vttermoſt power, vertue and godlineſſe, and to abhorre and flee from ſinne and iniquitie. And from the heart it proceedeth to the tongue and hands, making the Word of God and all holy conferences hony in the mouth, and inciting vs to the practice of that which wee profeſſe. It alwayes approoueth golden piety to bee pure, and without mixture of the droſſe of hypocriſie, by the touchſtone of righteouſneſſe; it is as carefull in approuing the heart and ſecret actions vnto God, as the outward actions vnto men; it cauſeth vs to hate as well one ſin as another, and that ſin moſt of all into which wee are moſt prone by nature to fall, though it bring neuer ſo much pleaſure and profit; it imbraceth afflicted godlines, attended with loſſe, pouerty, & ſhame as wel as when it is waited vpon with gaine, pleaſure, and the praiſe of men; it is very charitable in cenſuring the faults of others, but moſt ſeuere and ſtrict in judging and condemning the ſinnes which our ſelues haue committed. And therefore if our ſanctification haue theſe properties, we may moſt certainly be aſſured thereby that we are elected & ſhall be ſaued; but if theſe be wanting, it is but a counterfeit holines which affoordeth no ſuch aſſurance.

§. Sect. 13. The miſerable eſtate of thoſe who haue not ſo much as a ſhew of godlineſſe.

Now if this be true, what hope can they haue who haue not ſo much as a ſhew of godlineſſe? How deſperate is their ſtate, who euen in outward appearance ſhew nothing but wickedneſſe and prophaneneſſe? If the figge tree which beareth faire greene leaues be accurſed, what curſes, what miſery and wretchedneſſe are they to beare and ſuffer, who haue not ſo much as leaues, that is, an outward profeſſion of godlineſſe? If Herod be a damned wretch in Hell, who heard Iohn the Baptiſt willingly, and did many things according to his doctrine, becauſe hee nouriſhed one ſin in his boſome; what fearefull condemnation are they to expect, who contemne and neglect Gods Word, not thinking it worth the hearing, and cannot find in their hearts to ſubmit themſelues to the obedience of any part thereof neither will be brought to forſake any one ſin wherewith they are delighted, till it leaue them? And yet ſuch is the blind ignorance, carnall ſecuritie, and vaine preſumption of ſuch men that they will not ſticke to brag that they are ſure of Gods loue, and that they are elected to ſaluation, though there be no ſhew of reaſon, whereupon they may probably ground their fooliſh perſwaſion. But the truth is, that whileſt they continue in this damnable eſtate, conſolation it ſelfe cannot giue vnto them any true comfort, for without ſanctification there is no hope of election or ſaluation. And ſeeing the Lord hath elected vs that wee ſhould be holy, therefore without holineſſe there is n no aſſurance that wee are elected: ſeeing hee hath ſworne that all thoſe whom he hath redeemed and ſaued, out of the hands of their ſpirituall enemies, Hell, Death and the Deuill, ſhall worſhip him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of their life; what hope of redemption and ſaluation can they conceiue, who liue in impiety & vnrighteouſnes, ſeeing by Gods oath they are excluded from both, whileſt they continue in this ſtate?

Chap. XII.

Of the ſignes and infallible notes of our election.

§. *Sect.*1. The firſt ſigne an earneſt deſire after the meanes of our ſaluation.

WEE haue ſet downe the meanes whereby wee may bee aſſured of our election: Now let vs conſider of ſome ſpeciall ſignes which are infallible notes of thoſe that are elected. The firſt ſigne is an earneſt deſire after the meanes of our ſaluation and a conſcionable endeauour in vſing them after we enjoy them. For the end and the meanes are neuer ſeparated in Gods Decree, & therefore thoſe that carefully vſe the meanes may bee aſſured that they ſhall attaine vnto the end. For example, the hearing of Gods Word is the chiefe meanes of our conuerſion, being made effectuall by the inward operation of Gods Spirit; and as thereby we are begotten vnto God, ſo alſo it is that bread of life, wherewith our ſoules are nouriſhed and ſtrengthened in all ſpirituall graces. So that whomſoeuer God hath elected, thoſe he hath decreed to call ordinarily by theſe meanes; and by the ſame alſo to furniſh with his graces being called. Whoſoeuer therfore labour to purchaſe this precious pearle, whoſoeuer hunger after this heauenly Manna, and are content to enjoy it not onely when it is good cheape, but alſo when it is very chargeable; whoſoeuer enjoying it do attentiuely & diligẽtly heare it & receiue it with delight, they vſe the means of their ſaluation, & therefore may be aſſured that they are elected, for the means and the end goe together. And that this is a note of Gods child it appeareth, Iohn 10.3,4. where our Sauiour ſaith, that his ſheepe heare his voice. And Matth. 13.45. he compareth the true member of the kingdome of grace to a Merchant who rather then hee would want the precious pearle of Gods Word, ſelleth all he hath to buy it. Thoſe therefore who make this precious account of Gods Word, and carefully, diligently and attentiuely heare it when they enjoy it, may to their comfort aſſure themſelues that they haue an vndoubted ſigne of their election. And on the other ſide, thoſe who had rather be without it then enjoy it, thoſe who will beſtow no coſt to obtaine it, nor forgoe any pleaſure or commoditie that they may heare it, nor when they doe heare it are affected with any delight, but are glutted with loathing ſatietie, hearing no part of the Sermon with any pleaſure but the concluſion onely; they can haue no aſſurance of their election, becauſe they neglect the meanes of their ſaluation, which are joyned with the end in Gods eternall Decree. The like alſo may be ſaid of other meanes, as Prayer, the receiuing of the Sacraments, meditating in Gods Word, the workes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and the reſt.

§. Se
ſigne, th

The ſecond ſigne of thoſe that are elected, is the ſpirit of ſupplication, when as they powre forth their ſoules in feruent and effectuall prayer vnto the Lord, confeſſing their ſinnes, and imploring his grace, and mercie: for this is a notable fruit of Gods Spirit working in vs, which we cannot by any naturall meanes attaine vnto; for of our ſelues wee know not what to pray as we ought, but the ſpirit helpeth our infirmities, and maketh requeſt for vs with ſighes which cannot be expreſſed, as it is *Rom.*8.26. Prayer therefore is a moſt inſeparable fruit and vndoubted ſigne of Gods Spirit, and Gods Spirit certainly aſſureth vs of our election and adoption, for it beareth witneſſe with our ſpirits that we are the ſonnes of God, as it is Verſe 16. So *Rom.*10.13. it is ſaid, that whoſoeuer call vpon the Name of the Lord ſhall be ſaued. But this prayer muſt proceed from faith; for, as it followeth, How ſhall they call on him in whom they haue not beleeued? and muſt be performed in ſpirit and truth, and not with deceitfull lips; for it is to no purpoſe to draw neere vnto God with our mouthes, if our hearts be farre from him, Eſay 29.13.

The third ſigne of thoſe who are elected & adopted to be the children of God, is, when as their hearts are ſomewhat weaned from the World, and ſeated in Heauen minding the things that are aboue; and when their tongues being ſet a worke by the heart, doe gladly entertaine godly and religious conferences; for there as the treaſure is, there will the heart be alſo, and with whatſoeuer the heart is affected, the tongue is delighted. Now that theſe holy meditations, and religious diſcourſes are ſignes of the childe of God, hereby it plainly appeareth; in that they cannot poſſibly proceed from our corrupt nature, to which they are irkſome and tedious, but from the Spirit of God dwelling in vs, and guiding and directing vs in our thoughts and words; and whoſoeuer are thus led with the Spirit of God, they are the ſonnes of God, as it is, *Rom.*8.14. He that is right heire to a Royall Kingdome, and not yet poſſeſſed thereof, is neuer weary of thinking on it, nor glutted with ſuch diſcourſes as tend to the extolling the riches & glory which there attend him, or ſhew the meanes whereby he may be aſſured to come into ſpeedy and peaceable poſſeſſion of his right: and ſo thoſe who are elected by God, and adopted to be the heires of his euerlaſting Kingdome of glory, are neuer ſatisfied in meditating and ſpeaking of the riches and joyes of this heauenly inheritance, or of the meanes whereby they may be aſſured vndoubtedly to obtaine it, whereas thoſe who haue no ſuch intereſt nor hopes, thinke and talke of theſe things with loathſome wearineſſe, neſſe, as being matters not concerning them; and therefore when ſuch thoughts come into their mindes, they vaniſh as ſuddenly as a flaſh of lightning, and when they are preſent at any ſpirituall diſcourſes the time ſeemeth long, and they ſit vpon thornes vntill they be ended; and they remaine dumbe as though they were tongue-tied, vnleſſe they take occaſion to interrupt ſuch holy conferences, and to diuert them to ſome worldly affaires.

Sect. 4. fourth is the of ſinne ſorrow

The fourth ſigne of the child of God who is elected to ſaluation, is, when hee ſeeth his ſins and imperfections, and truly repenteth of them, that is, bewaileth thoſe which are paſt; and endeuoureth to forſake them in the time to come. For naturally wee are blind, and yet do not perceiue our blindnes, we are moſt ſinfull and miſerable, and yet doe not ſee our ſins and miſery, but with the proud Phariſie, and juſticiary Papiſt, we think our ſelues righteous, and with the Church of the Laodiceans we imagine that we are rich, and haue need of nothing, not knowing that wee are wretched, miſerable, poore, blind and naked; vntill it pleaſe the Lord to annoint our eyes with the eye-ſalue of his ſpirit, whereby we are inabled to diſcerne the pure gold of Chriſts merits, which onely maketh rich, from the droſſe of our owne workes, and the white raiment of Chriſts obedience from the polluted ragges of our owne righteouſneſſe. And though we ſee our ſins, yet naturally we are not ſorry for them, nay, we delight our ſelues with their remembrance; or if we ſuſtaine any griefe, it is not for the ſin, but for the puniſhment which either wee feele preſently inflicted, or feare as being hereafter threatned, vntill it pleaſe the Lord to adopt vs for his ſonnes, and to giue vs the ſpirit of adoption, which mooueth vs to grieue and ſorrow for our ſins not ſo much for feare of puniſhment, as for ſonne-like affection, becauſe by our ſins wee haue diſhonoured and diſpleaſed our gracious and louing Father: and becauſe we cannot wholly mortifie them ſo long as we continue in this life, we lamentably cry out with Paul, Wretched man that I am who ſhall deliuer mee from this body of death? And becauſe we know that we ſhall be neuer freed from it altogether ſo long as we liue, we wiſh earneſtly with the Apoſtle that wee may bee ſpeedily diſſolued, being contented to part with our liues, becauſe we can no otherwiſe part with our ſins. Whoſoeuer therefore hath this ſorrow for ſinne, he may be aſſured of his election and ſaluation: for as it is 2. Cor. 7.10. this godly ſorrow cauſeth repentance vnto ſaluation not to bee repented of, whereas worldly ſorrow cauſeth death; and all the promiſes of life and eternall happineſſe, are made onely to ſuch repentant ſinners, and to them only they appertaine. And as Gods children are grieued for their ſins paſt, ſo doe they hate and deteſt them, as in all others ſo eſpecially in themſelues, which hatred cauſeth them to flee from them, and auoid all occaſions which might cauſe them to fall into the like wickedneſſe, ſtriuing and endeauouring to mortifie their luſts and euill concupiſcences, and to lead their liues in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, becauſe herewith their heauenly Father is well pleaſed. Whereas the wicked man, if hee bee not reſtrained with a ſeruile feare of Gods judgements, or of temporary puniſhments, goeth on in his ſins with pleaſure and delight, adding drunkenneſſe vnto thirſt, and drawing iniquity vnto him with the cords of vanity. Whoſoeuer therefore haue this ſonne-like care, and holy endeuour of forſaking their ſins, and betaking themſelues to ſerue the Lord in the duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, they may be aſſured that they are elected and adopted to be the ſonnes of God; but thoſe who haue no ſuch purpoſe can neuer haue this aſſurance; for if they were the ſonnes of God, they would bee affected like louing children to ſuch a gracious Father.

§. Sect. 5. The fift ſigne is an hungring deſire after Chriſts righteouſneſſe.

The fifth ſigne of the child of God elected to ſaluation, is, when as feeling his owne miſery and wretchedneſſe, he earneſtly deſireth, and euen as it were hungreth and thirſteth after Chriſts righteouſneſſe, looking for life and ſaluation in him alone; for ſuch as theſe our Sauiour Chriſt calleth vnto him: Iohn 7.37. If any man thirſt let him come vnto me and drinke; and to ſuch he promiſeth euerlaſting happineſſe, Reuel. 21.6. I wil giue to him that is athirſt of the wel of the water of life freely, of which whoſoeuer drinketh ſhall neuer be more a thirſt, but it ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing vp vnto euerlaſting life. And to this we may adde alſo, an high and incomparable eſtimation of Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, after that we are aſſured of them, whereby we priſe and value them ſo much aboue all worldly things, that with Paul we eſteeme them all but droſſe & dung in reſpect of gaining Chriſt, Phil. 3.8. and are content not onely with the Merchant to ſell all we haue that we may buy theſe precious pearles, but alſo to ſuffer tribulation, anguiſh, perſecution, famine, nakedneſſe, perill, ſword, yea death it ſelfe, rather then we would be ſeparated from the loue of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom. 8.35.

§. Sect. 6. The ſixt ſigne is the inward fight betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit.

The ſixt ſigne of the child of God, is the inward combat which they feele, betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, whereby on the one ſide they are drawne vnto ſinne, and on the other ſide incited vnto holy obedience; now delighted in the Law of God, and yet ſoone after led captiue vnto ſinne; one while rowing againſt the tide of their carnall affections, and another while carried violently downe the ſtreame, by reaſon of their weakneſſe, and the ſtrength of their inbred corruption.

ruption. For naturally wee goe all one way without any ſtop, oppoſition or reſiſtance, euen the broad way which leadeth to Hell and deſtruction: naturally wee ſerue ſinne, and willingly ſubiect our ſelues to liue in the bondage of our ſpirituall enemies, vntill the Lord do with his holy Spirit renew our wil, and ſanctifie our affections, working in vs an earneſt deſire to come out of this miſerable captiuity, that we may attain to the glorious liberty of the ſonnes of God. Which renuing and ſanctification, becauſe it is done but in part, therefore is it oppoſed by the contrary corruption which we haue by nature, ſo that what the ſpirit loueth the fleſh hateth, what the ſpirit imbraceth the fleſh abhorreth, what the ſpirit would haue vs doe, the fleſh hindreth and inforceth vs to leaue vndone, with whatſoeuer the ſpirit is delighted, with that the fleſh is vexed and diſpleaſed; and this ſpirituall fight is in all Gods children, as appeareth, *Rom.*7.23. *Galath.*5.17. which ſhould be ſo farre from diſcouraging vs, that nothing more can aſſure vs of our election; for naturally wee are all fleſh, wholly ſubmitting our ſelues to be ruled by Satan, neither is there any fight or oppoſition in vs; for Satans kingdome is not diuided againſt it ſelfe, and whilſt the ſtrong man wholly keepeth the houſe, all that hee poſſeſſeth is in peace, vntill our Sauiour Chriſt, by the operation of his ſpirit, thruſteth him out of his poſſeſſion, and ſeeketh to rule in vs by the ſcepter of his Word; and then the Deuill rageth and ſtriueth to keepe his hold, and the fleſh ſtormeth, deſiring ſtill to ſerue his old maſter. When therefore we feele this inward fight within our ſelues, wee may be aſſured that Chriſt is come to dwell in our hearts by his holy Spirit, and conſequently, that we are the children of God, and heires of euerlaſting life, for as many as receiue him, to them hee giues power to be the ſonnes of God, euen to them that beleeue in his name, as it is Iohn 1.12.

§. Sect. 7.
The ſeuenth ſigne, is new obedience.

The ſeuenth ſigne of the child of God is new obedience, when as he applyes his heart to the keeping of Gods Commandements, deſiring and indeuouring to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and newneſſe of life; for if any man keepeth Gods Word, in him is the loue of God perfect indeed, and hereby wee know that wee are in him, as it is, 1.Iohn.2.5. And whoſoeuer abideth in him ſinneth not, whoſoeuer ſinneth hath not ſeene him, neither hath hee knowne him, as it is Chap.3. Verſe 6. So Verſe 10. In this are the children of God knowne and the children of the Deuill, whoſoeuer doth not righteouſneſſe is not of God, &c. So that our new obedience is a ſigne of the child of God, and the neglect thereof a marke of the child of darkneſſe. But we are not to vnderſtand this of that exact obedience which is required in the Law; for thereby none liuing can haue any aſſurance of their election and ſaluation, but rather of reprobation and damnation: but it is to be vnderſtood of an Euangelicall obedience, which conſiſteth in an holy deſire and earneſt endeauour of keeping all Gods Commandements; with which the children of God are ſo wholly poſſeſſed, that after their true conuerſion it is impoſſible that they ſhould fall into any knowne ſin, with full conſent of will and with their whole hearts. And this is the obedience which the Goſpell requireth, and of which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, and thus wee neuer ſin, but keepe all Gods Commandements, namely, in reſpect of our deſire and earneſt endeuour. This is that righteouſneſſe which is accepted, as though it were perfect before God, who ſpareth vs as a man ſpares his ſonne whom hee tenderly loueth, as hee profeſſeth, Malach. 3.17. and therefore meaſureth our obedience not according to our actions, but according to our affections, and accepteth of the will for the deed, as before I haue ſhewed.

But yet that we may not deceiue our ſelues with a counterfeit ſhew, we are to know that this Euangelicall obedience hath theſe properties; firſt, it muſt be totall, and that both in reſpect of the ſubiect and of the obiect; that is, we muſt not ſhare our ſelues betweene God and the World, giuing one the tongue, the other the heart; one our outward actions, and the other our inward affections; but wee muſt performe our obedience with our whole hearts, yea with the whole man, body ſoule and ſpirit: for though we be regenerated and ſanctified but in part, yet is there no part of the whole man vnregenerate and vnſanctified, howſoeuer the fleſh and the corruption of nature be ſpread likewiſe and mixed therewith throughout the whole body and ſoule. And therefore though all our obedience ſauour of the fleſh, and is mingled with manifold imperfections, yet it doth proceed from the whole man body and ſoule, becauſe regeneration from which it proceedeth is not of any part alone, but of the whole man. So alſo it muſt bee totall in reſpect of the obiect; for it is not ſufficient that with Herod, wee obſerue diligently many things, if wee nouriſh willingly any one ſinne taking therein pleaſure and delight, but we muſt deſire and endeuour to forſake all our ſinnes, and to performe obedience vnto all Gods Commandements; for if we nouriſh one ſin in our hearts, it will open a doore to let in more when wee are tempted vnto them; as wee may ſee in the example of Herod and Iudas, the one harbouring inceſt, the other couetouſneſſe: if we neglect willingly, obedience to one precept of Gods Law, it will ſo harden our hearts and ſeare our conſciences, that ſoon after we ſhall neglect all. If therefore we would haue our Secondly, this obedience muſt be perpetuall, continuing in a conſtant courſe from the time of our conuerſion to the end of our liues; for we are not to iudge of our ſelues or others, by one or two or many actions whether they be good or euill, but by the whole tenour and courſe of our liues, ſo that he who in this reſpect is holy and righteous, he is ſo accepted before God, notwithſtanding his many falls and great infirmities; hee that in the courſe of his life is wicked and profane, is ſo eſteemed of God, although he ſeeme to himſelf and others religious by fits, and performeth many excellent duties and good workes. It is not therefore ſufficient that we begin in the ſpirit, if we end in the fleſh, *Gal.*3.3. It is not ſufficient to profeſſe and practice godlineſſe in our youth, if wee breake off in our age; it is not enough that we enter into the Chriſtian race and runne well in the beginning, if wee ſtand ſtill in the midſt, or before we come to the goale; for hee only that endureth to the end ſhall be ſaued, as it is *Matth.*24.13. As for him that layeth his hand on the plough and looketh backe, hee is not fit for Gods Kingdome, as our Sauiour affirmeth, Luke 9.62.

Laſtly, our obedience muſt be grounded vpon Gods Word, and therefore performed becauſe the Lord hath enioyned ſuch duties vnto vs; it muſt proceed from faith, which firſt purifieth the heart, and then worketh by loue; it muſt not bee done for any worldly reſpect, but of a conſcionable care of performing our duties, and in a feruent zeale of Gods glory which is magnified when as our lights ſhine before men; which zeale will make vs goe forward in our courſe of godlineſſe, through euill report, and good report, honour and diſhonour. And if our obedience ſpring from theſe fountaines, and bee referred to this end that God thereby may be glorified; then will we make no leſſe conſcience of ſecret, then of open ſins; then will we be no leſſe ready to ſerue God in the duties of piety and righteouſneſſe, when there is no witneſſe of our actions, then if all the world ſhould looke vpon vs; then will wee be as fearefull to offend God in the breach of any of his Commandements in our ſecret Chambers in the darke night, as in the Church or market place at noone day.

The eight ſigne of the child of God, is the loue of our brethren in obedience to Gods Commandement; when as a man loues intirely a Chriſtian, becauſe he is a Chriſtian, and ingrafted into the ſame body of Chriſt whereof he is a member. For as it is impoſſible that one member of the body ſhould not loue, cheriſh, and defend another, becauſe they are quickned by the ſame ſoule and gouerned by the ſame head; ſo it is not poſſible but that one true Chriſtian ſhould loue, cheriſh, and defend another, becauſe they are quickned by the ſame ſpirit and ruled by the ſame head Ieſus Chriſt. And this is made a marke of Gods child by the Apoſtle Iohn, 1.Iohn 3.14. We know that wee are tranſlated from death to life, becauſe wee loue the brethren: as the want of this loue is a ſure note of the child of wrath; for as it followeth in the ſame Verſe, he that loueth not his brother abideth in death.

1.Iohn 3.14.

Now the vndoubted ſignes of loue and Chriſtian Charitie are two; giuing to thoſe that want, and forgiuing thoſe that offend: for it is a propertie of true loue to be bountifull, 1.*Cor.*13.4. as to all, ſo eſpecially to thoſe that are of the houſhold of faith, as it is *Gal.*6.10. and on the otherſide, He that hath this worlds good, and ſeeth his brother haue need and ſhutteth vp his compaſſion from him, he is deſtitute of the loue of God, and conſequently of the loue of his brethren, which is but a ſtreame iſſuing from this fountaine, 1.Iohn 3.17. And this Chriſtian liberalitie as it is a ſigne of true loue, ſo alſo of our election and ſaluation; for our Sauiour Chriſt hath ſhewed vs, that according to theſe fruits of charitie, and actions of Chriſtian liberalitie, he will pronounce the ſentence of euerlaſting ioy and happineſſe at the day of iudgement, *Matth.*25.34,35,36. and on the other ſide, that hee will pronounce the ſentence of condemnaton againſt the neglectors of theſe duties of Chriſtian charitie, Verſe 41.42,43. The ſecond ſigne of true loue is forgiuing, when as we are ready for Gods ſake, and in obedience to his commandement to remit and pardon thoſe iniuries which are offered vs, for loue is not prouoked to anger, and therefore much leſſe to reuenge; it ſuffereth all things, it indureth all things, as it is, 1.*Cor.*13.5,7. Nay, it doth not only not render euill for euill, but it ouer-commeth euill with goodneſſe, leauing reuenge vnto God, and to his Deputies and Vice-gerents the Magiſtrates, as wee may ſee in the example of our Sauiour Chriſt, and the bleſſed Martyr Steuen, who prayed for their perſecutors; whoſe example we are to imitate, as the Apoſtle exhorteth, *Rom.*12.14. Bleſſe them that perſecute you, bleſſe I ſay and curſe not. And ſo ſhall we haue a certaine ſigne of true loue, and an vndoubted note of Gods Spirit dwelling in vs of the remiſſion of our ſins, and conſequently of our election and ſaluation. For naturally wee are Wolues, Leopards, Lions, yea, Cockatrices who kill with their lookes, as the Prophet ſpeaketh, Eſay 11.6,8. and like bruite and ſauage beaſts willing to offer all iniuries, but impatient of ſuffering any: and therefore when our ſauage crueltie is turned into charity, and wee become as meeke and harmeleſſe, as the Lambe, Calfe, or little Childe, it is a manifeſt ſigne that our ſtout courages are abated and beaten downe with the rod of Chriſts mouth, that wee are borne anew and quickened by his Spirit, and that now we are ſeated in the mountaine of his holineſſe, and ſhall be heires of his Kingdome of glory. So alſo hereby wee are aſſured of the remiſſion of our ſins, when wee find our ſelues ready and willing to forgiue our neigbours; for our Sauiour Chriſt hath promiſed, that if wee doe forgiue men their treſpaſſes, our heauenly Father will alſo forgiue vs, Mat.6.14. & conſequently we may aſſuredly gather, that we are juſtified, called, elected, & ſhalbe glorified.

§. Sect. 10.
The ninth ſigne, is the loue of Gods Miniſters.

The ninth ſigne of the child of God elected to ſaluation is the loue of Gods true Miniſters and Ambaſſadours, not onely becauſe they are Chriſtians, but alſo becauſe they are ſent of God to execute theſe holy functions, for the gathering together of Gods elect. And this our Sauiour Chriſt declareth, Matth.10.41. He that receiueth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, ſhall haue a Prophets reward; that is, euerlaſting joy and vnſpeakable happineſſe in Gods Kingdome; for, they that turne many vnto righteouſnes, ſhall ſhine as the ſtars for euer and euer. And becauſe none ſhould pretend that by reaſon of their pouerty they cãnot ſhew their loue to Gods Miniſters, therefore the Lord encourageth euen the pooreſt, to ſhew their good will and affection vnto them, Matth.10.43. ſaying, Whoſoeuer ſhall giue to any of theſe little ones to drinke, a cup of cold water onely, in the name of a Diſciple, verily, I ſay vnto you he ſhall not loſe his reward, namely, in Gods Kingdome. Moreouer, thoſe that loue Gods Ambaſſadours, doe prooue vnto themſelues and ſhew vnto the world, that they haue receiued good by their ambaſſage, euen reconciliation with God, peace of conſcience and aſſurance of ſaluation, which maketh them to thinke no worldly benefit ſufficient to requite theſe ſpirituall graces, which by their meanes and Miniſterie they haue receiued: and therfore with the Galathians they could be content, if it were poſſible to doe them good hereby, to pull out their owne eyes, and to giue them vnto them, ſeeing by their meanes the blinde eyes of their vnderſtandings, are inlightened with the knowledge of God and Chriſt their Sauiour. And becauſe they haue receiued from them to their comfort the glad tidings of peace and good things; therefore their feet, that is, their approaching and comming vnto them, ſeeme beautifull and delightfull, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom.10.15. If an Ambaſſadour were ſent from a mighty Prince, who was our enemy in time paſt, and able at his pleaſure to deſtroy vs and our Country, to the end he might conclude a peace; and not only ſo, but to offer vs the free vſe of all the riches and commodities of his Kingdome; who would not receiue him with joy, and giue him royall entertainment, if they were perſwaded of the truth of his ambaſſage? But we by our ſins had made the glorious of Heauen and Earth our enemy, who is able euery minute to deſtroy vs with the breath of his noſtrils; and it hath pleaſed the Lord to ſend his Ambaſſadours, not only to offer peace, but alſo to beſeech vs that wee would bee reconciled vnto him, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 2.*Cor.*5.20. and vpon this reconciliation, he aſſureth vs of the riches of his Kingdome; who therefore receiuing and beleeuing this ambaſſage, will not loue the Ambaſſadours that bring theſe bleſſed tidings vnto them? Who can be aſſured of ſuch ineſtimable benefits, and yet ſhew no token of thankfulneſſe towards them, who are the meanes whereby they are deriued vnto them?

Whereby the way wee may note, how few the number is in theſe dayes, who receiue the Lords ambaſſage to their ſpirituall comfort; how few they are to whom it is effectuall for the begetting in them the graces of Gods Spirit; how few hereby come to the true aſſurance of the remiſſion of their ſinnes and euerlaſting happineſſe: ſeeing the number is ſo exceeding ſmal who loue and reſpect the Lords Ambaſſadours in regard of their ambaſſage. Nay, rather the moſt, euen for their Miniſtery ſake doe contemne thoſe, whom otherwiſe in reſpect of their learning, wiſdome and other excellent gifts of body and minde, they would reſpect and highly eſteeme if they were not of the Miniſtery. So that their honourable calling, which aboue all things ſhould commend them, doth aboue all things make them baſe and contemptible; and no maruell, ſeeing the moſt are fleſh and not ſpirit, the children of Mammon, and not the children of God: and therefore, ſauouring only the things of the fleſh, and not perceiuing the things of the Spirit of God, they ſeeme fooliſhneſſe vnto them, and the Preachers of them fooles, and men of ſhallow conceits. But let ſuch know, that God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world to confound the wiſe, and weake things to confound mighty things; and vile things of the world, and things that are deſpiſed hath God choſen and things that are not, to bring to nought things that are, that no fleſh ſhould reioyce in his preſence, as it is, 1.*Cor.*1.Verſ. 27,28. Let them know that this their contempt, or at leaſt ſmall regard of Gods Ambaſſadors, is a moſt manifeſt ſigne that they neuer receiued good by their ambaſſage: for had they receiued from them ſpiritual things, they would neuer grudge to beſtow vpon thẽ their worldly things, which in the true Chriſtians eſteeme are not to be cõpared with thẽ, and and much leſſe would they againſt their own conſcience defraud them of their own right, which by the Lawes of God and man is due vnto them, whereby it commeth to paſſe that whereas all men being induſtrious and frugall, may liue plentifully euen of their meaneſt trades, only the Lords Ambaſſadours, though neuer ſo painfull in their callings, liue in want and miſery.

The laſt ſigne of Gods child elected to ſaluation, which I will ſpeake of, is their earneſt deſire that our Sauiour Chriſt ſhould come to judgement: whence proceedeth that patheticall prayer, Come, Lord Ieſus, come quickly, *Reuel.*22.20. and that prayer which our Sauiour hath taught all the faithfull to pray daily, let thy kingdome come, *Matth.*6.10, Now that this is a note of thoſe that are elected to ſaluation, it appeareth plainly, 2.*Tim.*4.8. where the Apoſtle ſaith, that a crowne of righteouſneſſe is laid vp for all thoſe that loue his appearing. And *Rom.*8 23. he telleth vs, that thoſe who haue the firſt-fruits of the Spirit, doe euen ſigh in themſelues, waiting for the adoption euen the redemption of their bodie, when as their corruption ſhall put on incorruption, and their mortall body immortalitie, as hee ſpeaketh, 1.*Cor.*15.53. So our Sauiour Chriſt hath told vs, that his faithfull children ſhould at his comming, looke vp and lift vp their heads, becauſe their redemption draweth neere, *Luk.*21.28. and on the other ſide, that the kinreds of the earth ſhall mourne, and that the prophane worldlings and reprobates ſhall ſay to the mountaines and rockes, Fall on vs, and hide vs from the preſence of him that ſitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lambe, *Reuel.*6. Verſe 16. So that by theſe places it is manifeſt that if we loue the appearing of the Lord Ieſus, and deſire his comming to judgement; wee are the children of God indued with his Spirit, which aſſureth vs of our ſaluation. For naturally wee abhorre to thinke of this fearefull day, and tremble with feare when mention is made of the appearing of our Iudge, becauſe by our ſins wee haue deſerued euerlaſting damnation: but when the Spirit of God by the Miniſtery of the Word, hath begot faith in vs, whereby we apply vnto our ſelues Chriſt Ieſus, and all his merits, by whom we are reconciled vnto God and made friends who before were enemies, and ſonnes of God and heires of euerlaſting happineſſe who before were the children of wrath and firebrands of Hell, then doe we earneſtly deſire the company of our heauenly Father; when wee are aſſured that our Iudge ſhall bee our Sauiour, then can we go boldly to his judgement ſeate without feare of condemnation; when we are aſſured that we are the beloued Spouſe of Chriſt, then wee long for nothing more then for the comming of our Bridegroome; when we are certainly perſwaded that by Gods Spirit we are ingrafted into the body of Chriſt, and are become liuely members of his body; then doe we heartily wiſh with the Apoſtle to bee diſſolued, that wee may be with Chriſt our head in his kingdom of glory, where together with him we ſhall receiue, and be fully ſatisfied with ſuch incomparable joyes, as neither eye hath ſeene nor eare heard, nor the heart of man conceiued.

CHAP. XIII.

The obiections alleaged againſt the aſſurance of our election anſwered.

§. Sect. 1.
Anſwers vnto teſtimonies alleaged.

AND thus much concerning the ſignes whereby wee may be aſſured of our election. Now I will anſwere ſuch objections as are brought againſt this doctrine by the enemies of Gods truth. And theſe are of two ſorts, firſt teſtimonies of Gods Word, & ſecondly, reaſons: the teſtimonies of Scriptures are diuers: firſt, they object ſuch places as theſe; 1.*Cor.*10.12. Let him that thinketh he ſtandeth take heed leſt he fall. *Prou.*28.14. Bleſſed is the man that feareth alwayes. *Rom.*11.20. Bee not high-minded but feare. *Phil.*2.12. Make an end of your ſaluation with feare and trembling. 1.*Pet.*1.17. Paſſe the time of your dwelling here in feare; to all which and many other ſuch like places, wee may anſwere generally, that the Holy Ghoſt would not hereby take away our certainty of faith, but carnall ſecuritie; hee would not depriue vs of the aſſurance of the remiſſion of our ſins and our election, but rather by theſe admonitions as with a bridle he curbeth in our vnruly affections, and reſtraineth vs from running into all licentiouſneſſe vnder this pretence that we are aſſured of our election; hee would not haue vs doubt of God grace, but he would not haue vs too much truſt and rely on thoſe graces which wee haue receiued. And therefore he putteth vs in minde of our owne weaknes and infirmity, not to the end wee ſhould doubt of our election, and deſpaire of, or feare our perſeuerance, but to the end that diſtruſting our owne ſtrength we may wholly relie vpon the power, loue and promiſes of God, and thereby gather ſo much more certaine aſſurance of our election and perſeuerance, as the power of God is aboue the power of man. Laſtly, he giueth vs not theſe admonitions to bring vs into doubting, but would hereby ſtirre vp our faith vnto the exerciſe of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, that it may not through idleneſſe faint and waxe ſtiffe and benummed, and vnable to performe theſe holy actions, whereby this aſſurance and certainty of our election, on, would bee infeebled and not ſo ſenſibly diſcerned. And therefore theſe and ſuch like ſpeeches tend not to this end that wee ſhould doubt of our electiō, but rather that we ſhold be preſerued from doubting; to which, carnall ſecurity, ſelfe-confidence, negligence in the duties af holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, & continuance in ſinne, would in the end bring vs; all which the Spirit of God by theſe admonitions and exhortations preuenteth. Secondly, I anſwere that theſe and ſuch like admonitions, are not directed only to the faithfull, who may and ought to be aſſured of their election, but in generall to the whole Church, wherein there are many Hypocrites who content themſelues with a bare ſhew of godlines, and many worldly men who pleaſe themſelues with carnall ſecurity, and a carcaſſe of faith, which neuer ſo much as breatheth, and much leſſe performeth any actions of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe: and therefore as it was neceſſary that the faithfull ſhould bee more and more confirmed with the promiſes of the Goſpell, ſo was it requiſite that Hypocrites and ſecure Worldlings ſhould be rouzed out of their ſecuritie, with theſe and ſuch like admonitions and comminations.

§. Sect. 2. Admonitions and comminations profitable for Gods children.

Neither were they neceſſary for Hypocrites and Worldlings alone, but euen for the deare children of God: who becauſe they are partly fleſh and partly ſpirit, therefore as they haue need that the ſpiritual man ſhould be comforted and their faith confirmed againſt diffidence and doubting, with the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell; ſo had they need to haue their vnruly fleſh curbed in, and reſtrained from falling into wretchleſſe ſecurity, by theſe admonitions and comminations. And becauſe by reaſon of this diuiſion which is in our ſelues, we are readie as it were to mutiny, one part of our forces being ready to march cheerefully to the land of promiſe, the other to forſake the way, ſomtimes on the one ſide being ready to turn back again, as vtterly deſpairing of attaining to the end of our iourney, when we conſider the ſonnes of Anakim our ſpirituall enemies, in reſpect of whoſe ſtature and ſtrength we are but as Graſhoppers, and the mightie oppoſitions which are made againſt our weake force; and ſometimes to goe on in a way which God hath not appointed, preſuming vpon our owne ſtrength and abilities. Therefore that we may keepe the ſtrait way without declining on either hand, God doth as it were hedge vs in on both ſides, to reſtraine vs from wandring; on the one ſide with ſweet promiſes, that we may not deſpaire, but relie our ſelues on his ſtrength and aſſiſtance; on the other ſide with ſtrict admonitions & fearefull comminations, that wee may not truſt too much vnto our owne power, nor preſume vpon our owne abilities. And by meanes of the one, he doth as it were pricke vs forward in our iourney, keeping vs from once thinking of ſtanding ſtill, or returning againe into Egypt; and by the other as with an hand hee doth vphold vs, when wee are weary and ready to faint, hauing an eye to the crowne of glory, and the garland of happineſſe, which is prepared for vs at the end of our courſe, and race of Chriſtianitie. And as a ſkilfull Pilot, when his ſhip is in a tempeſtuous and ſtraight Sea, in danger to runne on the rockes, or to ſinke in the ſands, doth caſt out anchor on both ſides, or more carefully looke vnto the ſterne to keepe it in an euen courſe: ſo wee ſailing in the tempeſtuous ſea of this miſerable World, are in danger on the ſide to daſh vpon the rockes of preſumptuous ſecuritie, and on the other ſide to ſinke in the ſands, and to plunge into the gulfe of deſperation: and therefore the Lord doth ſtay vs from both, as it were with two ſtrong cables; the firſt is legall comminations and ſtrict admonitions, to keepe vs from carnall ſecurity, and hypocriticall preſumption; the other is ſweet promiſes, whereby he keepeth vs from falling into doubting and deſperation: neither doth one of theſe hinder another, but both ſtay vs from falling into theſe extremes.

§. Sect. 3. The true meaning of theſe ſeuerall places obiected.

So that theſe admonitions are not giuen to make vs doubtfull of our election, but partly to take away the preſumption and ſecurity of hypocrites and carnall worldlings, and partly to bridle and reſtraine the fleſh from running head-long into ſin, and from growing inſolent ouer the ſpirit euen in Gods children, whereby indeed their aſſurance of ſaluation would be abated, and languiſh. The truth whereof appeareth if we examine the ſeuerall places. For firſt, whereas the Apoſtle, 1. Cor. 10. 12. ſaith, Let him that thinketh hee ſtandeth, take heed leſt hee fall; he doth not moue thoſe that are faithfull, to doubt of their perſeuerance, but thoſe that want true faith, not to deceiue themſelues with vaine preſumption, and with an opinion of faith in ſtead of true faith indeed: and therefore hee ſaith not ſimply, let him that ſtandeth, but let him that thinketh hee ſtandeth, that is, hee that doth not ſtand in deed but in his owne fond opinion. Neither can it neceſſarily be proued, that this falling is to be vnderſtood of finall falling away from God; but rather as the coherence of the text ſheweth, of falling into thoſe ſinnes which the Iſraelies fell into: and though it were, yet is it but an admonition to take away carnall ſecurity, not giuen to make vs doubt of our ſtanding, but to preſerue vs from falling.

1. Cor. 10. 11.

Secondly, whereas the wiſeman ſaith, Pro. 28. 14. Bleſſed is the man that feareth alwayes: hee doth not vnderſtand thereby a doubtfull feare of our election, but a feare to ſinne, Prou. 28. 14.

ſinne, and a conſcionable care of auoiding thoſe things which are diſpleaſing in Gods ſight; which feare is oppoſed to carnal ſecuritie and hardnes of heart, as appeareth in the ſame place where this is added, But he that hardneth his heart ſhall fall into euill. As though hee ſhould ſay, that man is bleſſed which feareth the Lord, for this will worke in him a conſcionable care of auoiding ſin, which is odious in the eyes of God, and of imbracing holineſſe and righteouſnes, which being acceptable vnto God, he will reward with eternall bleſſedneſſe; but he that hardneth his heart and continueth in carnall ſecuritie, runneth head-long into the euill of ſinne, and conſequently the euill of puniſhment, euen euerlaſting condemnation.

Thirdly, whereas the Apoſtle, *Rom.*11.20. exhorteth vs not to be high-minded but feare; hee doth not meane that wee ſhould doubt of our election & ſaluation, but doth hereby beate downe our ſpirituall pride, and opinion of our owne righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, whereby wee are ready to inſult ouer the Iewes, as though wee were choſen and preferred before them, for ſome excellencie or worthineſſe in our ſelues, and ſo derogate from the free grace and goodneſſe of God, whereby he hath choſen vs without any reſpect of our deſerts. And that this is the meaning of theſe words, appeareth in the eighteenth Verſe, where he willeth the Gentiles not to boaſt themſelues againſt the Iewes who were the naturall branches. Neither doth the Apoſtle write this to the faithfull onely, but to the whole Church of the Gentiles, in which were many Hypocrites and carnall men, who contenting themſelues with a bare name of Chriſtians, would inſult ouer the Iewes, whom God had caſt off from being his Church and people whom he warneth, not to be puft vp in pride, as though in this reſpect their ſtate were moſt ſecure & out of all danger; for as (ſaith he) they were caſt off for their infidelity, euen when they were naturall branches, ſo ſhall you much more be reiected, who being wild branches were grafted in their places (that is, called to be the members of the viſible Church) if you continue in the like infidelitie, contenting your ſelues with vaine confidence and fond preſumption, in ſtead of a liuely faith.

Sect. 4.
il.2.12,

Fourthly, whereas the Apoſtle, *Phil.*2.12. doth exhort vs to worke out our ſaluation with feare and trembling; he doth not hereby take away from vs aſſurance of our election and ſaluation, but carnall ſecuritie and ſelfe confi-dence, that ſo deſpairing of our owne ſtrength, as being vnable of our ſelues to thinke a good thought, or to will that which is good, we may in all humility reſt and relie our ſelues wholly vpon the Lord. And that this is his meaning, appeareth by the reaſon which hee adjoyneth in the Verſe following: for ſaith he, it is God which worketh in you both the will and the deed. As though he ſhould ſay, there is no reaſon why you ſhould be ſecure, as though you were able to ſtand by your owne ſtrength; there is no cauſe why you ſhould be lifted vp with fond preſumption, or be carried away with ſelfe confidence, for of your ſelues, you are not able ſo much as to will that which is good, or to performe it though you ſhould will it, vnleſſe it pleaſe the Lord of his owne good pleaſure and free will to worke both in you; and therefore reſpecting your owne infirmities and imperfections, you ſhould be ſo farre from carnall ſecurity or ſelfe confidence, that contrariwiſe you ſhould continually feare, leaſt through your corruption, you ſhould be ouer-taken of ſin, and ſo diſpleaſe the Lord which is your ſoueraigne King and gracious Father. So that the Apoſtle doth not here exhort vs to doubt of our election and ſaluation, but to a godly feare that we doe not fall into ſin: hee would not haue vs to doubt of Gods grace and free promiſes, but of our own ſtrength, by which we are altogether vnable to ſtand if hee leaue vs to our ſelues: he would not haue vs feare leſt we ſhould be rejected and damned, after we are truly conuerted vnto God, but leſt wee fall into ſin, and neglect that dutie which we owe to our heauenly Father. Theſe two therefore may well ſtand together: for the more wee diſtruſt our owne weakneſſe, the more firmely we reſt vpon the power and aſſiſtance of God, and the more we relie vpon him, the more ſure wee are of ſtanding vnto the end: the ſurer wee are of Gods loue and fauour, the more wee loue him againe; and the more we loue him, the more fearefull we are to diſpleaſe him: the more wee ſee our proneneſſe to ſin, the more wee feare leſt we ſhould fall into it; and the more we ſuſpect our ſelues, the more earneſtly wee implore the aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, whereby wee are inabled to withſtand tentations. And therefore Dauid joyneth theſe together, *Pſal.*2.11. Serue the Lord in feare, and reioyce in trembling; noting thereby that Gods children feare, yea, euen tremble in regard of their owne infirmities and corruptions, and yet at the ſame time they rejoyce and are filled with conſolation, in reſpect of that full aſſurance which they haue of Gods loue and fauour, and their election and ſaluation. And as he joyneth them in precept, ſo alſo in his owne practice, *Pſal.*5.7. I will (ſaith he) come into thine houſe in the multitude of thy mercy; and in thy feare will I worſhip towards thy holy Temple: ſo that at the ſame time, when as hee was incouraged by the conſideration of Gods great mercie, to goe boldly and with a liuely faith vnto the throne of grace; hee was alſo touched with a godly feare in regard of his vnwor-

Feare and diſtruſt in our owne weakeneſſe, and aſſurance of our election may well ſtand together.

Pſal.2.11.

Pſal.5.7.

thineſſe and imperfections; not that he doubted leſt hee ſhould not bee accepted of God, but leſt in worſhipping God hee ſhould bewray his corruption, and not doe it in that manner and meaſure which God requireth.

§. Sect. 5.
Obiection.
1.Iohn 4.18.

But againſt this it may bee objected that Iohn ſaith, 1. Epiſt. 4.18. There is no feare in loue, but perfect loue caſteth out feare, &c. I anſwere, that there is a twofold feare mentioned in the Scriptures; the firſt is a ſeruile feare proceeding from incredulity, whereby men feare God as a ſeuere Iudge, who is ready to inflict on them thoſe iuſt puniſhments which by their ſinnes they haue deſerued, which feare is expelled when as we are aſſured of Gods loue and loue him againe. The other is a ſonne-like feare, which is a fruit of faith, whereby wee doe not feare God as an enemy or an angry Iudge, but as a gracious Father, whoſe diſpleaſure wee would by no meanes incurre; not that we feare his wrath and vengeance, as though it were ready to fall vpon vs; but becauſe wee would not thus abuſe his mercie and goodneſſe towards vs, nor doe any thing which might cauſe him to looke vpon vs with a frowning countenance, or if we doe feare Gods judgements, it is as they are inflicted on another ſubject, and not as being ready to fall vpon vs. For this difference is betweene the feare of the wicked and Gods children; they like malefactors which are led out to puniſhment, are filled with horrour and feare when they thinke of the torments which they are to endure, but yet did neuer feare to commit ſuch crimes as deſerued the puniſhments, and though they ſhould eſcape, yet this would be no warning for the time to come; but Gods children ſeeing the judgements which are exerciſed vpon the wicked, doe feare, not leſt they ſhould be inflicted vpon them preſently, but leſt they ſhould ſo offend and deſerue the like puniſhments, firſt auoiding ſin, that they may not receiue the wages thereof. And this ſon-like feare is commended vnto vs in the Scriptures, as being a part of the honour and ſeruice which wee owe vnto God, as appeareth, Malac. 1.6. A ſonne honoureth his Father, and a Seruant his Maſter; if I be a Father, where is mine honour; if I be a Maſter, where is my feare ſaith the Lord? So Pſalme 34.9. Feare the Lord yee his Saints, for nothing wanteth to them that feare him. And Pſalme 112.1. Bleſſed is the man that feareth the Lord and delighteth greatly in his Commandements. In which places we are not to vnderſtand a ſeruile and ſlauiſh feare, but an ingenious and ſon-like feare, which drawes vs backe from falling into ſinne, and incites vs to performe all good duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe to God and our brethren, becauſe would not incurre the diſpleaſure of our heauenly Father, but doe thoſe things which are acceptable in his ſight. Laſtly, whereas the Apoſtle Peter, 1. Epiſt. 1.17. exhorteth vs to paſſe the time of our dwelling here in feare; hee doth not vnderſtand ſuch a feare as maketh vs to doubt of our election and ſaluation, but ſuch an one as prouoketh vs to obey Gods Commandements, and reſtraineth vs from wallowing and defiling our ſelues in ſin: for with this feare in the Verſe following he ioyneth certaine knowledge of our redemption, and conſequently of our election and ſaluation, knowing (ſaith hee) that yee were not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſiluer and gold from your vaine conuerſation, &c. but with the precious bloud of Chriſt. So that this feare doth not take away the certaine knowledge of our election and redemption, but this knowledge cauſeth vs to feare leſt we fall into ſinne after we are aſſured of this great benefit of our redemption, and thereby diſpleaſe our gracious God, and defile our ſoules after they are purged with the precious bloud of Ieſus Chriſt.

Other pla obiected anſwered.

Beſides theſe places, there are others alſo objected, as that Iob 9.21. Though I were perfect, yet I know not my ſoule; therefore I abhorre my life. To which I anſwere, that Iobs ſcope and drift in this place is to ſhew, that euen the moſt juſt and holy man cannot ſtand before Gods judgement ſeate in his owne righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, which is polluted and imperfect, and that therefore it behoueth euery one to deſpaire in himſelfe and his legall righteouſneſſe, as not being able to juſtifie him in Gods ſight, in reſpect of whoſe puritie euen the very Heauens are vncleane, that ſo hee may wholly relie vpon Gods mercy and Chriſts merits: and this appeareth, Verſe 2, 3. I know verily (ſaith he) that it is ſo, (that is, that God is juſt and all men are ſinners, who are righteouſly puniſhed for their demerits, as Bildad had reaſoned in the former Chapter) and therefore how ſhould man compared vnto God be iuſtified? 3. If he would diſpute with him, he could not anſwere him one thing of a thouſand. And Verſ. 20. If I would iuſtifie my ſelfe, mine owne mouth ſhould condemne me; if I would be perfect, he ſhall iudge me wicked. 21. And though I were innocent or perfect, (that is, though I ſeemed juſt in mine owne eyes, and knew nothing by my ſelfe) yet I know not mine owne ſoule, nor what ſecret corruptions may lurke in it, and therefore I will not heereby looke to be juſtified, nay, in this reſpect I abhorre my life, and caſt mine owne righteouſneſſe from mee as a polluted clout. By which manner of reaſoning hee confuteth Bildads objection, who affirmed that Iob and his ſonnes were puniſhed of God for their ſins and that juſtly, and therefore they were not ſo juſt and innocent as they had ſeemed. To this Iob anſwereth, that it is true indeed he could not juſtifie himſelfe in reſpect of his owne righteouſneſſe, if hee compared himſelfe with Gods exact juſtice, but muſt needes condemne himſelfe for a wretched ſinner; yet hence it followed not that therefore God thus afflicted him, ſeeing this was the ſtate not of him onely, but of all men whatſoeuer: and therefore this could not be the onely cauſe of his extraordinary afflictions. So that this place makes nothing againſt the aſſurance of our ſaluation, which is grounded vpon Gods free mercy and Chriſts merits; but againſt that preſumption which relieth it ſelfe in whole or in part, vpon our owne legall righteouſneſſe.

Iob 9.2.

Verſe 20.

.Sect.7.
Cor.4.3,4.

The like place to this is that ſaying of Paul which they object, 1.Cor.4.3,4. I iudge not mine owne ſelfe, for I know nothing by my ſelfe, yet am I not thereby iuſtified, but hee that iudgeth mee is the Lord. For anſwering whereof, wee are to know, that there were diuers in the Church of Corinth, who cenſured Pauls Miniſtery and diſgraced his gifts; againſt which detractions hee bendeth his ſpeech and maketh an apologie for himſelfe, ſaying, that hee would not take vpon him to judge himſelfe, concerning the excellencie and worth of his Miniſterie and gifts, but would leaue the judgement and approbation thereof vnto God, whoſe Ambaſſadour hee was; and though hee knew nothing which might be objected againſt him in regard of his Miniſterie, yet hereby he would not look to bee juſtified in Gods preſence. So that if this be the ſenſe of the words, as appeareth by the coherence and the drift of the place, it maketh nothing for Popiſh doubting. But let it be granted that Paul ſpeakes not of his Miniſterie, but of his righteouſneſſe and obedience to the Law, yet this maketh nothing againſt the certainty of our election; for the Apoſtle ſpeaking of his owne righteouſneſſe and innocency, doth diſclaime it from being any cauſe of his juſtification: neither doth he ſay that in regard thereof he doubteth, as the Papiſts would expound him, but he affirmeth directly that he is not thereby juſtified, and rendreth this as a reaſon, that it is God who judgeth him: and therefore though hee were vnblameable before men, yea though hee knew nothing by himſelfe, yet hee could not hereby be juſtified before the juſt judgement ſeate of God, who requires ſuch perfection and exact obedience as can be found in no man liuing; for he that once only breaketh but one Commandement, is guiltie of all, as it is, Iames 2.10. And therefore it behoued the Apoſtle and all others, not to ſeeke for juſtification in themſelues and their owne righteouſneſſe, but in the righteouſneſſe and obedience of Chriſt, which we may boldly preſent before Gods exact judgement ſeate, and there be accepted as righteous. And of this juſtification the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, not doubtfully or timorouſly, but boldly and certainly, Rom.5.1. Being iuſtified by faith, we haue power towards God through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. 2. By whom alſo wee haue acceſſe through faith vnto his grace wherin we ſtand, and reioyce vnder the hope of the glory of God. So Rom.8.33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods choſen? It is God that iuſtifieth. 34. Who ſhall condemne? It is Chriſt who is dead, yea rather which is riſen againe, &c.

Moreouer, they object theſe places to moue vs to doubt of our election and ſaluation. Ioel 2.14. Who knoweth if hee will returne and repent; and Amos 5.15. It may be that the Lord God of hoſts will be mercifull vnto the remnant of Ioſeph. And Ionas 3.9. Who can tell if God will turne and repent, and turne away from his fierce wrath that we periſh not? To which I anſwere, that the Prophets in theſe places doe not ſpeake of the election or eternal ſaluation of thoſe that truly repent, but of their deliuery from outward afflictions and temporary calamities threatned againſt them for their ſinnes: Which ſometimes the Lord doth inflict on his children after their true repentance, either for their chaſtiſement, that they may thereby hate ſinne for the time to come, when they feele the ſmart of it, or elſe for their triall. And ſometimes alſo the Lord after he hath threatned them againſt the wicked, doth notwithſtanding hold backe his hand, and as it were put vp his ſword of juſtice againe into the ſcabberd, which hee had drawne out to puniſh their ſinnes, vpon their outward humiliation and fained repentance, that hee may ſhew hereby how highly hee eſteemeth the true repentance of his children, as appeareth in the example of the Nineuites, and of Ahab, 1.King.21.29. And therefore ſeeing the Lord keepeth no certaine courſe in theſe temporary chaſtiſements, but ſometime inflicteth them vpon the repentant whom he dearely loueth, and ſometime ſpareth the wicked when they but outwardly humble themſelues before him; therefore the Prophets ſpeake doubtfully and exhort to repentance, referring the euent to Gods wiſe and gracious prouidence. And thus doubtfully doth Dauid ſpeake in this reſpect, 2.Sam.12.22. Who can tell (ſaid hee) whether God will haue mercy on mee that the childe may liue? and Chap.16.12. It may bee the Lord will looke vpon mine affliction; and yet though he were doubtfull whether he ſhould be freed from theſe temporall croſſes, he was notwithſtanding certainly perſwaded of his election and ſaluation; as he profeſſeth, Pſal.16.11. So that theſe places ſpeaking of temporary chaſtiſements, make nothing againſt the certainty of our election.

Acts 8.22.

And like vnto theſe, is that which they alleage to the ſame purpoſe, Acts 8.22. where Peter exhorteth Simon Magus to repent of his wickedneſſe, and to pray vnto God, that if peraduenture the wicked thought of his heart might be forgiuen him. To which I anſwere, firſt, that the originall word εἰ ἄρα, which is tranſlated, if peraduenture, and in our Bibles, if it be poſſible, ſometimes alſo ſignifieth, that truly, and in this ſenſe it maketh nothing for doubting. Secondly, though we vnderſtand it as a ſpeech of doubting, yet it maketh not for their purpoſe; for it is not to be referred vnto God, as though it were doubtfull whether he would forgiue the ſins of the Magician, if he did truly repent and call vpon him; for he hath certainly aſſured vs by his gracious promiſe, that whoſoeuer truly repenteth him of his wicked wayes, he will receiue to mercy, Ezech. 33.11. But it is to be referred to Simon Magus, of whoſe repentance and liuely faith Peter might well doubt, leſt either they would be none at all, or elſe fained and hypocriticall, ſeeing his heart was not right in the ſight of God, but in the gall of bitterneſſe and bond of iniquitie. Laſtly, though it ſhould be a doubtfull ſpeech and be referred alſo to God, yet it maketh nothing againſt the certaintie of faith; for the Apoſtle ſeeing him in the gall of bitterneſſe and bond of iniquitie, thought it not fit to raiſe him vp ſuddenly, by applying vnto him the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell, nor to caſt thoſe precious pearles before ſuch a filthy Swine, vnleſſe he preſerued them as it were in the cabinet of a doubtfull and perplexed ſpeech, from being trampled vnder his bemired feet, till he had waſhed them in the teares of vnfained repentance. Moreouer, he thus doubtfully ſpeaketh to giue him a more cleere inſight of the hainouſneſſe of his ſin, as though it might be well doubted of, whether the Lord would forgiue it or no, that ſo his mind hereby being perplexed, he might by the conſideration of his horrible ſinne be beaten downe and truly humbled, and becauſe thoſe things which are hardly obtained are more earneſtly ſought, therefore Peter intimateth vnto him by this doubtful ſpeech, that it was no eaſie matter to obtain forgiueneſſe for ſuch outragious wickedneſſe, that he might hereby work in the Magician more earneſt and hearty repentance, and incite him to call vpon the Lord for mercy with more vehemencie and feruencie of ſpirit. It is not therefore the Apoſtles meaning to ouerthrow the cerainty of faith, or to call into queſtion Gods mercy, whether hee will extend it or no to hainous offenders who truly repent of their ſinnes and beleeue, for this were contrary to the whole courſe of the Goſpell; but hee vſeth this doubtfull ſpeech to this deſperate ſinner, that hee might not make the ſoueraigne ſalue of Gods gracious promiſes baſe and contemptible, by applying it to the feſtred ſores of a filthy Dogge, which were neuer cleanſed with the ſharpe corraſiues of the Law; and alſo for the good of this malicious ſinner, for he doth not abſolutely aſſure him of mercy and forgiueneſſe, that hee might bee ſtirred vp with more earneſtneſſe and care to ſeeke it; for the eaſines of obtaining maketh the ſuiter careleſſe and negligent in ſeeking and ſuing. Neither doth he abſolutely exclude him from all hope of grace, leſt hee ſhould neuer labour after it, but deſperatly run on in his wickedneſſe; for when hope is cut off, the deſire alſo fainteth, and therefore hee vſeth a perplexed and wiſe tempered ſpeech, which on the one ſide might preſerue him from ſecure preſumption, and on the other ſide from falling into helliſh deſperation.

Ecclus.5.5.

Laſtly, they obiect that ſaying, Ecclus. 5.5. which they thus reade: De propitiato peccato noli eſſe ſine metu, neque adijcias peccatum ſuper peccatum: That is, be not without feare concerning ſinnes forgiuen, neither adde ſin vnto ſin. To which, firſt I anſwere, that this Booke is not Canonicall Scripture, and therefore not to be alleaged for the determining of queſtions in controuerſie, nor for the confirming of the doctrines of faith. Secondly, I anſwere, that they haue corruptly tranſlated the originall text, for he willeth vs not to feare concerning our ſins forgiuen, but concerning the forgiueneſſe of them before they are remitted, leſt we ſhould ſecurely adde ſinne vnto ſinne, becauſe forgiuenes is promiſed whenſoeuer we repent, and ſo abuſe the mercy and long ſuffering of God to our iuſt condemnation. So that hee forbiddeth not to beleeue certainly, that our ſinnes are remitted whē God hath pardoned them, but hee forbiddeth vs to runne on in ſinne ſecurely preſuming vpon forgiuenes, as plainly appeareth by the originall text and the whole drift and ſcope of the place. For in the Verſe going before he vſeth this ſpeech: Say not I haue ſinned, and what euill hath happened vnto me, for the Lord is long ſuffering, but yet he will not diſmiſſe or acquite thee; and in this Verſe hee biddeth vs not to bee without feare concerning the forgiueneſſe of ſin, adding ſin vnto ſin, that is, we muſt not goe on in ſin preſuming vpon forgiueneſſe: and Verſe 6. Doe not ſay that his mercie is great, he will forgiue my manifold ſinnes: 7. For mercie and wrath are ſwift with him; but vpon ſinners his indignation ſhall reſt. 8. Doe not deferre to turne vnto the Lord, neither put it off from day to day; for ſuddenly the wrath of the Lord ſhall breake forth, & in thy ſecuritie thou ſhalt be deſtroyed, and thou ſhalt periſh in the time of vengeance. In all which words he doth not take away the aſſurance of the forgiueneſſe of our ſins after we haue truly repented of them, but carnall ſecurity and vaine preſumption, whereby men deferre their repentance vpon hope of mercy and forgiueneſſe whenſoeuer they repent. Laſtly, though this place were to be vnderſtood concerning ſins forgiuen, yet the ſcope thereof is not to hinder our aſſurance of forgiuenes when wee haue truly repented, but only that we doe not after wee haue obtained remiſſion of our ſins, take occaſion thereby of falling into ſin againe, and ſo abuſe the mercy and goodnes of God, vſing it as an argument to moue vs to goe on in ſin, because the Lord vpon our repentance is alwayes ready to receiue vs to mercie.

The reaſons alleaged againſt the aſſurance of our ſaluation, anſwered.

Sect.1.

ANd ſo much concerning the teſtimonies of Scripture, which are alleaged againſt the certaintie of faith: Now let vs conſider their reaſons. Firſt, they obiect that it is proud arrogancie and hereticall preſumption for a miſerable Sinner, without all doubting to aſſure himſelfe that hee is elected and ſhall be ſaued. To which I anſwere, that if with the Phariſaicall Papiſts and proud Iuſticiaries, wee did build our aſſurance vpon our owne merits and worthineſſe, it were indeed intolerable arrogancie and proud preſumption, not only certainly to beleeue, but euen to doubt whether wee are elected and ſhall be ſaued (for whereas doubting is, there is ſome hope alſo) whereas the Sciptures peremptorily conclude, that they who looke for righteouſneſſe and ſaluation by the Law, are vnder the curſe, Galath.3.10. and that by the workes of the Law ſhall no fleſh be iuſtified in Gods ſight, Rom.3.20. and that wee are iuſtified not by our deſerts in whole, or in part, but freely by Gods grace through the redemption which is in Chriſt Ieſus, as it is, Verſe 24. But ſeeing wee wholly diſclaime our owne righteouſneſſe, and humbly acknowledging our miſery and wretchedneſſe, doe wholly rely our ſelues vpon the gracious promiſes of God, and the merits of Chriſt Ieſus; ſeeing we become nothing in our ſelues in the worke of our ſaluation that God may be all in all; ſeeing wee caſt away all glory from our ſelues, that wee may wholly glory in the Lord; according to that Ierem.9.24. Let him that glorieth glory in this, that hee vnderſtandeth and knoweth me: This is not proud arrogancy nor hereticall preſumption, but Chriſtian humility which giueth all glory vnto God, leauing nothing to our ſelues but the comfort which is wrought in our hearts, by the aſſurance wee haue of Gods promiſes. Nay, the more vndoubtedly wee truſt in Gods promiſes, the greater is our humility; for the more wretched we are in our owne eyes, the more wee ſee our imperfections, yea our nothing in Gods ſight; and hereby we are moued to go out of our ſelues, to ſeeke for ſaluation onely in Gods free grace and Chriſts merits, and to reſt in them with full aſſurance, as being in themſelues al-ſufficient without our workes and worthineſſe. On the other ſide the more wee doubt of our ſaluation, in reſpect of our vnworthineſſe, the more is our pride and arrogancie. For we would not doubt in regard of our vnworthineſſe, vnleſſe we looked for ſaluation by our worthineſſe, and therefore we come ſo farre ſhort in faith and hope, as wee finde our ſelues ſhort in merits. And whence can this proceed but from arogancie and pride, which maketh men to looke for ſaluation in themſelues, & to doubt of Gods mercie and Chriſts merits, vnleſſe they find that they haue deſerued them by their owne workes and worthineſſe? Let vs therefore abhorre this proud humilitie of the Papiſts, which maketh them doubt of Gods mercifull promiſes, and conſequently of his truth; for as it is, 1.Iohn 5.10. Hee that beleeeueth not God, hath made him a lier; and alſo of the ſufficiencie and value of that ineſtimable price, which Chriſt Ieſus hath giuen for our redemption, as though it were imperfect in it ſelfe, vnleſſe it bee itched and parched vp with our owne merits and worthineſſe: and though we are moſt abiect, wretched, and in a deſperate caſe in reſpect of our ſelues, yet let vs haue aſſured truſt and confident boldnes, yea a triumphant boaſting and glorying in reſpect of our Sauiour Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Epheſ.3.12. Rom.5.2. Notable is the ſaying of Auguſtine to this purpoſe, Ideo præſume non de operatione tua, ſed de Chriſti gratia, preſume therefore (ſaith hee) not of thine owne working, but of Chriſts grace, for yee are ſaued by grace, ſaith the Apoſtle; therefore here is no arrogancy but faith, to ſhew what thou haſt receiued; it is not pride but deuotion. So in another place, Hoc dixit Deus, hoc promiſit, ſi parum eſt, hoc iurauit: The Lord hath ſaid this, he hath promiſed it, and if this be not enough hee hath ſworne it. Becauſe therefore the promiſe is ſure and confirmed, not according to our merits, but according to his mercie, let no man profeſſe that with feare, of which hee cannot doubt. But they further vrge, that humble doubting is better then preſumptuous aſſurance; I anſwere, firſt that their doubting is full pride, which maketh them looke for ſaluation in their owne worthineſſe, rather then in Gods free mercie and Chriſts merits. Secondly, that our faith and certaine aſſurance is full of humilitie; for wee freely confeſſe our owne vnworthineſſe, and dare not offer before the ſeate of Gods iuſtice that righteouſneſſe which is in vs, vs, as deſiring in whole or in part to be iuſtified thereby; nay, rather we pray with the Prophet, *Pſal.*143.2. Enter not into iudgement with thy ſeruant, for in thy ſight ſhall none that liueth be iuſtified; and though wee know nothing by our ſelues, yet doe wee plainly affirme with the Apoſtle, that we are not hereby iuſtified, 1.Cor.4.4. But this humility doth not abate our faith and certaine aſſurance, yea rather it doth confirme and increaſe it, for it maketh vs to goe out of our ſelues, as finding no hope of ſaluation wherupon wee may reſt, and mooueth vs to ſeeke for ſaluation in Chriſt, who is ſuch a ſure anchor-hold, that whoſoeuer pitch the anchor of their hope on him, ſhall finde it ſure and ſtedfaſt, and whoſoeuer build their faith on this foundation & corner ſtone, the power of Hell ſhall neuer preuaile againſt them.

Our vnworthineſſe no cauſe why we ſhould doubt of our election

Secondly, they obiect that we are vnworthy of Gods loue, or to be elected, and therfore we cannot be aſſured thereof. I anſwere, this were true if Gods election depended vpon our worthineſſe and deſerts; but ſeeing the Lord reſpecteth not any thing in vs, but elected vs freely of his vndeſerued grace and meere good will; our vnworthineſſe in our ſelues may well ſtand with the aſſurance of our election. For thoſe who are moſt vnworthy need not to doubt of Gods loue and their election and ſaluation, ſo that they wholly rely vpon Gods mercy and Chriſts merits by a true and liuely faith; for as much as they are not grounded vpon their worthineſſe, and therefore cannot be ouerthrowne by their vnworthineſſe. Notable is the ſaying of Auguſtine to this purpoſe. There are three things (ſaith hee) which ſo ſtrengthen and confirme my heart, that no merits, no conſideration of mine owne vileneſſe, no eſtimation of the heauenly bleſſedneſſe, can deiect me from the height of my hope: vpon them my ſoule is ſurely ſettled. Wilt thou know what they are? I conſider three things vpon which my hope wholly relieth, to wit, the loue of adoption, the truth of the promiſe, the abilitie of performance. Let now my fooliſh cogitation murmure as much as it will, ſaying, but who art thou, or how great is that glory, or with what merits doeſt thou hope to obtaine it? And I will boldly anſwere, I know whom I haue beleeued, and I am aſſured, becauſe God hath adopted me in great loue, becauſe hee is true in his promiſe, becauſe he is powerfull in performance, for he may doe what he will.

*Tria ſunt quæ ſic roborant & confirmant cor meum, vt nulla me penuria meritorum, &c. Aug.Manual, cap.*23.

§. Sect. 3.
Weakneſſe of faith and certainty may well ſtand together.

Thirdly, they obiect that our faith is weak and feeble, and by reaſon thereof the faithfull (as appeareth by continuall experience) are aſſaulted with doubting, and grieuouſly ſhaken with Sathans tentations, ſo as there can be no ſuch certaintie of faith as we ſpeak of. To which I anſwere, that weakneſſe of faith is not oppoſed as contrary to certainty, but to ſtrongneſſe and full perſwaſion, and therefore weakneſſe and certainty may well ſtand together. Neither doe we imagine ſuch a certainty of faith which is neuer ſhaken with doubting, nor aſſaulted with tentations; yea, rather we teach that thoſe whom God endueth with moſt faith, he moſt exerciſeth in the conflict of tentations, like a wiſe Captaine who ſetteth that ſouldier which is beſt armed and ſtrongeſt, to beare the brunt in the fore-front of the battell. And the Deuill is moſt readie to aſſault thoſe who moſt reſiſt him, and moſt violently to ſtrike where he ſeeth the ſhield of faith held vp to defend; and therefore our Sauiour hath taught all his faithfull children to pray, lead vs not into tentation, but deliuer vs from euill. But withall wee affirme that though this weake faith be aſſaulted with Satans tentations, yet is it neuer ouercome; though it be oppoſed with doubting, yet it neuer falleth from aſſurance and certaine perſwaſion; though it be ſometimes ſhadowed, and the ſhining light thereof dimmed, yea though it be for a time hid and couered, yet in it owne nature it remayneth firme and ſtedfaſt; like the Sun which alwayes ſhineth, though oftentimes by reaſon of the interpoſition of the clouds or the earth, we cannot diſcerne the beames thereof; or like vnto the fire which being hid vnder the aſhes doth retaine his naturall heate, although we feele it not: So our faith retaineth in it ſelfe his certaintie and aſſurance, as it were his light and heate, when as it is ſhadowed with the clouds of doubting, and couered vnder the aſhes of Sathans tentations.

§. Sect.
A weak

ſtronge

But it may bee demanded how a weake faith aſſaulted with Sathans tentations, can continue certaine, ſeeing the ſtrongeſt faith can doe no more but certainly perſwade? I anſwere, that our certainty reſpecteth not our faith it ſelfe, but the obiect thereof, namely, Gods mercy and Chriſts merits. And therefore ſeeing a weake faith doth as well apply vnto vs the mercies of God and merits of Chriſt as a ſtronger, therefore alſo it certainly perſwadeth vs as well and truly, though not ſo ſtrongly and fully of our election and ſaluation, as a ſtronger doth. So that when we haue the leaſt ſparke of faith, it doth illuminate our mindes, ſo as wee can truly diſcerne the louing countenance of the Lord ſhining vpon vs though ſomewhat dimly, and as it were afarre off; euen as he that is pore-blind doth as certainly ſee the Sunne, as hee who is moſt ſharp-ſighted, though not ſo cleerly. And as he who is in a darke dungeon doth diſcerne the light as ſurely at a little hole, though he be compaſſed about with blacke darkneſſe, as he who is in the open fields; ſo when wee are as it were pore-blind, and compaſſed about with the darke miſt of ignorance, yet by the dim ſight of faith wee certainly diſcerne Gods loue and fauour ſhining vpon vs, though the more wee increaſe in knowledge and faith, the more cleerely wee perceiue it, till at laſt hauing attained vnto fulneſſe of faith we ſee him neere at hand, and as it were face to face. True it is that our faith which is in it ſelfe weake and feeble, and compaſſed about with the darkneſſe of ignorance, is mixt and turmoiled with much feare & doubting, by reaſon of our naturall inclination vnto diffidence and incredulity, the manifold tentations of Satan, and the burthen of our ſins lying heauy vpon our conſciences: which maketh Gods deere children to grone and complaine, yea ſometime to murmure and repine againſt God himſelfe, as though hee were their enemy, becauſe he ſuffereth them thus to be vexed; but ſtill it riſeth after it hath receiued a foile, and gathereth new ſtrength againſt all new aſſaults, vntill in the end it obtaineth full victory, ſo as all the faithful may ſay with the Apoſtle, 2.*Cor.*4.8 We are afflicted on euery ſide, yet are wee not in diſtreſſe; in pouertie but not ouercome of pouertie. 9. We are perſecuted, but not forſaken, caſt downe but wee periſh not. For though their faith be weake, and their tentations vehement and violent, yet this bruiſed reed is not broken, this ſmoking flax is not quenched; but as the reed in a boyſterous tempeſt is blowne downe euen to the ground, but when the tempeſt is paſt riſeth vp againe to his former eſtate; ſo though the boyſterous blaſts of Satans tentations beate vs downe euen to the earth, yet by faith wee riſe againe when the ſtorme is ouer-blowne.

Sect.5.
our faith gh aſſaulmay be aine.

Secondly, it may be demanded how the faith of Gods children can be ſaid to be certaine, ſeeing it is continually aſſaulted and often foiled with doubting, which is oppoſed to the certainty of faith. To which wee may eaſily anſwere, if wee know and remember that euery Chriſtian is diuided into two parts, the fleſh and the ſpirit, which continually fight and ſtriue the one againſt the other. And as they themſelues are thus oppoſed, ſo are their qualities and fruits, for in the ſpirit is faith, loue, hope, zeale, ioy in the Holy Ghoſt, and ſuch other ſanctifying graces; in the fleſh is doubting, and infidelitie, hatred of God, preſumption and deſperation, coldneſſe, dulneſſe, yea, deadneſſe in religion, feare, horrour and ſuch like corruptions, ſo as we may ſay with the Apoſtle, I know that in my fleſh, that is, my vnregenerate part, *dwelleth no good thing, Rom.*7.18. Now as there is a continuall warre betweene the fleſh & the ſpirit, ſo alſo betweene their qualities and fruits; for faith is continually aſſaulted with doubting and infidelity; loue of God with the hatred of God, hope with preſumption and deſperation; zeale with coldneſſe and dulneſſe in religion; the ioy in the Holy Ghoſt with horrour and feare of Gods anger, the curſe of the Law and condemnation; and ſometimes the one, ſometimes the other hath the vpper hand, both in the meane time retaining their nature and properties, although (as we ſay) remiſſis gradibus, not exerciſing them in that meaſure and degree, as they doe when they haue victory and giue the other the foile. For example, when in ſome grieuous affliction, the hatred of God doth aſſault the loue of God in our heart, and doth ſo foile and wound it, that we can ſcarſe diſcerne that it breatheth or retaineth life, yet notwithſtanding the loue of God euen at that inſtant is not turned into hatred, nor receiueth any properties thereof, but ſtill retaineth his owne nature and properties, which againe cleerely appeare and ſhew themſelues when the conflict is ended. The like may be ſaid of our hope, zeale, ioy in the Holy Ghoſt, and other graces, when they are moſt foiled by the corruption of the fleſh, which fights againſt them, ſo as they cannot poſſibly exerciſe their owne actions and functions, yet doe they not receiue any carnall properties, nor loſe any of their own, but retaine ſtill their owne nature, which againe manifeſteth it ſelfe when the aſſault is ended. Euen as fire couered ouer with aſhes retaineth ſtill his owne nature of light and heate, though then by reaſon of the aſhes the light be not ſeene, nor the heat felt; but when the aſhes are remoued and new matter added vnto it, then it ſhineth, and burneth, and heateth as much as it did before: ſo when the graces of Gods Spirit are couered (as it were) vnder the aſhes of our corruption, they are not diſcerned by their properties and effects; but when the corruptions are remoued by vertue of Gods Spirit, and the graces nouriſhed with hearing of the Word, Prayer, holy conferences, and ſuch like ſpirituall exerciſes, as it were with new matter added vnto them, then doe they againe ſhine in their brightneſſe, and exerciſe their wonted ſtrength in all good duties to God and our Neighbour.

*Q. Sect.*6.
Faith aſſaulted with doubting, retaineth his owne nature and properties.

And as it is with all other graces, ſo alſo with faith, which is often aſſaulted with doubting and infidelitie, and ſometimes alſo ſo foiled that wee can hardly diſcerne any breath or life in it; but yet euen then it retaineth it owne nature and properties, and doth not receiue the nature & properties of doubting, but as the tree which is ſhaken with boyſterous blaſts of winde and is not ouerthrowne, doth in the middeſt of the tempeſt liue and ſucke nouriſhment out of the earth, and ſtill retaines his owne nature and properties; ſo when our faith is ſhaken with the boyſterous blaſts of Sathans tentations, and with our own naturall doubting and infidelitie, yet it ſtill liueth and ſucketh nouriſhment out of Gods gracious promiſes, and ſtill it retaineth his owne propertie of certaine perſwaſion, though then it doe not exerciſe it in action, ſo manifeſtly as before and after the conflict of tentations. And as the ſhaking of the tree is not of the nature thereof, for of it ſelfe it ſtandeth firme and ſteady, but by outward accident, namely, the winde blowing vpon it: ſo is not vncertaine wauering and vnconſtant doubting of the nature of faith, for of it ſelfe it is firme and certaine, but it commeth by outward accident from the boyſterous blaſts of infidelitie, and the tentations of Satan, which (as it were) violently blow vpon it, which being paſt, it remayneth like the tree firme and conſtant. And as the graces of Gods Spirit, and the fleſh and the corruptions thereof doe ſtill retaine in themſelues their owne nature and properties, ſo alſo doe they moſt commonly ſhew themſelues in their diuers fruits and effects, and that oftentimes in the conflict and time of tentation, ſo that the regenerate man, may at the ſame time feele in himſelfe contrary affections and actions; for the Spirit acknowledging Gods goodneſſe, mercie and truth in his promiſes, is repleniſhed with joy, being in hope to enjoy them; on the other ſide the fleſh feeling preſent miſery, and the ſharpneſſe of afflictions, ſorroweth and grieueth. The Spirit apprehending and applying vnto it the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell, doth quietly reſt vpon them; the fleſh ſeeing it owne corruption, and the huge waight of ſin that preſſeth it downe, feareth and doubteth. The Spirit being aſſured of euerlaſting happineſſe, triumpheth with joy, deſiring nothing more then to be diſſolued and to bee with Chriſt; the fleſh finding it ſelfe guilty of ſin, and in this reſpect ſubject to the anger of God and condemnation, feareth and trembleth to thinke vpon death. The Spirit conceiueth of God as of a mercifull Father in Chriſt, and in all neceſſities flieth vnto him by hearty prayer; the fleſh conceiueth of him as of an angry and ſeuere Iudge, and therefore flieth from him, deſiring rather to ſeeke for helpe any where elſe then of the Lord. So that the Chriſtian by reaſon hereof, at the ſame time findeth in himſelfe oppoſition betweene action and action, affection and affection. For at the ſame inſtant, while the fleſh, hauing in it the conſcience of ſin and ſenſe of guiltineſſe, doth murmure, repine and complaine againſt God, as an enemy which is ready to deſtroy vs; the ſpirit doth flie vnto God by a liuely faith, and committeth it ſelfe to his prouidence, will and protection, expecting ſaluation from him only; which it could neuer doe, if it were not aſſured that wee were in his loue & fauour. And in this the Chriſtian may not vnfitly be compared to a child, who hauing beene ſharply corrected by his Father, doth auoid his preſence as though he were his enemie; but if at the ſame time ſome ſudden danger affright him, before all other he runneth to his Father for ſafegard and protection: ſo when our heauenly Father hath ſharply corrected vs, either with ſome outward or inward afflictions, we flie from his preſence as though he were our enemy; but when an imminent danger ouer-taketh vs, and we be in perill to bee ſupplanted with Satan and his aſſiſtants, who are our enemies indeed, then the ſon-like affection which is wrought in our hearts by Gods Spirit, doth mooue vs to run vnto him before all other, deſiring and crauing his aide and aſſiſtance. And thus it appeareth, that though the fleſh and the ſpirit bee mixt together, yet they retaine their owne natures, properties and effects; and though faith which is a grace of the Spirit, be mingled with doubting, yet this doubting is not of the nature of faith, which in it ſelfe is certaine and aſſured, nay, it is not an infirmity of faith, as lameneſſe is an infirmity of the joynts, and dimneſſe of the ſight, for it is not any way incident to the nature thereof. And therefore much leſſe is it a commendable vertue of faith, as the Papiſts teach, but a fruit of vnbeliefe which is in the part vnregenerate, and oppoſed vnto faith, as appeareth, Rom.4.20. And conſequently, though faith be aſſaulted with doubting, yet in it owne nature it may and doth remaine certaine and aſſured,

Rom.4.20.

Fourthly, they object that it is raſh preſumption, and proud boldneſſe for any man to ſearch into the myſtery of Gods ſecret counſels, or to take vpon him peremptorily to determine that he is one whom God hath elected. For who hath knowne the minde of the Lord? as it is 1.Cor.2.16. I anſwere that it is true indeed, whoſoeuer prieth into Gods hidden counſels and ſecret Decree of Predeſtination, is proud and preſumptuous, & ſhal in the end receiue the puniſhment of both, being giuen ouer of God to fall into many errours and in the end vtter deſperation. And therefore it is very dangerous, yea pernicious to our ſoules, if we labour after the aſſurance of our election by vſing theſe meanes, and judge of Gods Decree, according to the conceit of our owne reaſon and doubtfull ſpeculations. But yet though the will of God be in it ſelfe ſecret and not to be ſearched into; this muſt not hinder vs from looking into his will reuealed, though wee can gather no certainty of our election by ſearching into his ſecret Decree, yet this is no impediment why wee may not gather it out of his Word, where hee hath reuealed his Decree and the execution thereof: though wee can haue no aſſurance by our owne ſpeculations, yet we may attaine vnto it by the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, which witneſſeth to our ſpirits that we are the ſonnes of God, which alſo ſearcheth all things, euen the deepe things of God,

God, and is giuen vnto vs that wee alſo might know the things which God hath giuen vs, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, 1.*Cor.*2.10,12. and therefore it is no pride or preſumption to be certaine and aſſured of that which the Lord hath reuealed in his Word, to this end that we might be certainly aſſured thereof. But it may be demanded how this certainty can be gathered out of the Scriptures? I anſwere, that if wee would attaine vnto it, wee muſt not ſeeke it in the Law, where the promiſes of life and ſaluation are made vpon the condition of our owne works and worthineſſe, which condition we can neuer performe, and therefore can neuer be aſſured of the promiſe: but out of the Goſpell, which doth not onely ſhew that ſome are predeſtinated to life, and ſome rejected, neither doth it only ſpeake of our election, as it was ordained in Gods ſecret Decree in it ſelfe, or reuealed in his Word, but alſo it ſetteth out vnto vs the execution of the Decree, with the cauſes, meanes, ſignes and effects of our election, and how it is accompliſhed for the bringing vs to thoſe joyes to which God hath choſen vs. Firſt, therefore it ſheweth the Decree of God concerning our election. Secondly, Gods Decree concerning our redemption by the death and obedience of Chriſt our Mediatour. Thirdly, the Decree of God concerning the calling of his Church by the Miniſtery of the Word, that they may be ingrafted into the body of Chriſt, and ſo participate with him in all his benefits to their ſaluation. Fourthly, the Decree concerning the ſending of his Spirit into the hearts of his choſen, by the inward operation whereof the Word is made effectuall for the begetting of faith and repentance. Fiftly and laſtly, his Decree concerning the juſtifying and ſauing of thoſe who repent truly of their ſins, and apprehending and applying vnto themſelues by a liuely faith, Chriſt and his merits and obedience, doe approch vnto the throne of grace to receiue mercy and forgiueneſſe. And all theſe are ſo linked together that they can neuer poſſibly be ſeuered, ſo that he who is aſſured of one, may be aſſured of all; whoſoeuer is certaine that hee hath faith and repentance, may be certaine alſo of his election, though hee neuer preſumptuouſly ſearch into Gods ſecret coūſell.

Fiftly, they object that there is no certainty of faith which is not grounded vpon Gods Word: but there is no place of Gods Word which aſſureth vs of our particular election & ſaluation, & therfore we can haue no certainty of faith concerning our particular election & ſaluation. I anſwere, though the Lord giue vs no particular promiſe in his Word, yet hee giueth vs that which is equiualent and of like force; namely his generall promiſe without any limitation, exception or condition, but the condition of faith and repentance, with a commandement to apply the ſame. And becauſe naturally we are vnable in our ſelues to performe this, therefore hee hath ordained the Miniſtery of the Word, and the vſe of the Sacraments, which he maketh effectuall by the inward operation of his Spirit, for the begetting and confirming of our faith and ſtirring vs vp to repentance; which being wrought in vs, wee may as certainly bee perſwaded that the generall promiſes belong vnto vs, as if they were made vnto vs particularly & by name.

§. Sect. 9.
That our aſſurance of election dependeth not vpon the ſufficiency of our faith & repentance.

Sixtly, they object that wee cannot be aſſured of the ſufficiencie of our faith and repentance, and therefore we can haue no certaine aſſurance of our election and ſaluation: I anſwere; this reaſon were good if our election and ſaluation depended vpon the worthineſſe or meaſure of our faith and repentance; but ſeeing they depend not thereupon, but vpon Gods free mercy, and the worthineſſe and ſufficiencie of Chriſts merits and obedience, therefore though our faith be neuer ſo weake, and our repentance but in ſmall meaſure, yet ſo they be true and vnfained, not diſſembled and hypocriticall, wee may certainly be aſſured of our election and ſaluation, for a weake faith doth apply Chriſt and all his benefits vnto vs as well as a ſtrong, though not in ſo ſtrong and perfect a manner, as ſhall appeare hereafter. But yet wee muſt not content our ſelues with a ſmall and weake meaſure, but labour to grow vp from faith to faith, till wee become perfect men in Chriſt.

§. Sect. 10.
The ſight of our imperfections no cauſe why we ſhould doubt of our election.

Seuenthly, they object that though there were no cauſe of doubting, ſo long as wee looke vpon Gods mercy and truth in his promiſes, and Chriſts obedience and merits; yet at leaſt there is cauſe of doubting when we looke vpon our ſelues, and find our great indiſpoſition to performe the condition of faith and repentance, which God requireth of all who ſhall be partakers of his promiſes, and our manifold imperfections & great vnworthineſſe of the leaſt of Gods mercies. And thus theſe Iugglers play faſt and looſe, making their faith like vnto the ignis fatuus, or going fire, which interchangeably ſometimes ſhineth cleerely, and ſometimes vaniſheth and leaueth behinde it nothing but blacke darkneſſe. But let vs conſtantly oppoſe our ſelues againſt ſuch inconſtancie, and in no wiſe admit of ſuch mutable varietie in our faith, which maketh it more changeable then the Moone, which one while ſhineth with full brightneſſe, and in ſmall diſtance of time cannot be diſcerned. And to this end let vs know, firſt, that though in our ſelues we be not worthy of the leaſt of Gods mercies, yet our vnworthineſſe maketh vs not vncapable of the greateſt; for all Gods benefits are his free gifts, which hee promiſeth and beſtoweth without any reſpect of our worthineſſe or deſerts, of his meere grace & vndeſerued loue. And therefore as when we are moſt worthy in our owne conceit, there is no reaſon why wee ſhould preſume the more; ſo when we find our ſelues vnworthy, there is no cauſe why wee ſhould hope the leſſe, or bee more weakly aſſured of Gods promiſes; for as they are not made vpon the condition of our worthineſſe, ſo they are not diſanulled and made void by our vnworthineſſe, otherwiſe no man liuing could haue aſſurance of them, ſeeing all men liuing are vnworthy of them. But the Lord hath made all his promiſes vnto vs in Chriſt, who was ſent to be our Mediatour, to the end that wee who were altogether vnworthy in our ſelues, might be made worthy in him of all Gods mercies and benefits. And therefore whoſoeuer lay hold vpon Chriſt, with a true though a weake faith, and bring forth the fruits thereof in repentance, they may certainly be aſſured of their election and ſaluation, notwithſtanding their vnworthineſſe. Secondly, wee are to know that our faith doth not reſpect our ſelues in our ſelues, neither are we the object thereof, but Chriſt, his merits and obedience; whom our faith doth not behold ſtanding aloofe off (as the Papiſts dreame) but as hee is vnited vnto vs, and become our head and wee his members; ſo as now wee cannot looke vpon our ſelues, but we muſt looke vpon Chriſt, becauſe he is in vs and we in him. And therefore when we conſider the greatneſſe of our ſinnes wee deſpaire not, becauſe now we looke vpon them as they are tranſlated from vs and laid vpon Chriſt, who hath fully ſatisfied his Fathers juſtice by his alone, and al-ſufficient ſacrifice vpon the Croſſe; when wee behold our imperfections we doubt of Gods promiſes, becauſe they are couered with his perfect righteouſneſſe; when wee thinke vpon our vnworthineſſe wee are not diſcouraged, ſeeing by communicating of Chriſts worthineſſe we are made worthy; when we conſider that in our ſelues wee are ſubject to the curſe of the Law, the anger of God and eternall condemnation, wee are neuertheleſſe aſſured of euerlaſting life and ſaluation, becauſe we are vnited to Chriſt our head, who hath taken away our curſe and nailed it to his Croſſe, borne his Fathers diſpleaſure to reconcile vs vnto him, and was condemned and ſuffered death to free vs from death and condemnation, and to make vs heires of life and ſaluation. So that now we behold the huge debt of our ſins, but as it is diſcharged and cancelled with his merits and full ſatisfaction; wee behold our imperfections, but as perfected by his perfections; wee looke vpon our vnworthineſſe, but as it is ennobled with his worthines; and when wee ſet before vs the curſe of the Law, the anger of God and ſentence of condemnation, wee conſider them as taken away and ſwallowed vp of Chriſts death and full obedience; becauſe now wee are vnited vnto Chriſt, and hee is become ours, that we might become his; he hath taken vpon him our ſinnes and vnworthineſſe, that he might make vs partakers of his righteouſneſſe and worthineſſe. And therefore thoſe things which God hath wiſely joyned together, let not our faith fondly ſeparate; for if it be vnlawfull in carnall marriages, then much more in the ſpirituall marriage betweene Chriſt and his Church. But let vs looke vpon our ſelues, not in our ſelues, but as wee are vnited vnto Chriſt, and then our ſelfe worthineſſe of Hell and deſtruction will not abate our aſſurance of life and ſaluation.

Eightly, they object that euery Heretick, Epicure and Worldling, continuing in their ſins and wickednes, may faine to themſelues ſuch a perſwaſion of the certainty of election. But this is nothing to the purpoſe; for the queſtion is not of Epicures and Worldlings, who haue no faith or a dead faith, but of true beleeuers, who bring forth the fruits of their faith, at leaſt in an holy deſire and endeuour of ſeruing the Lord in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. For they that cannot bee aſſured that they haue faith, cannot haue any certainty of their election; but none can haue any aſſurance of faith, vnleſſe they bring forth the fruits of their faith in dying to ſin and riſing againe to newneſſe of life, for faith purifieth the heart and worketh by loue: and therefore ſuch as liue in their ſinnes without repentance hauing no faith, can haue no certaintie of their election, though they may delude themſelues with a fond perſwaſion which hath no other ground but carnall ſecurity and fond preſumption. But hence it followeth not, that becauſe a dead faith affoordeth no true certainty, therefore a liuely faith doth it not; becauſe a prophane Epicure or carnall Worldling, deceiueth himſelfe with a vaine opinion, therefore thoſe that are truly conuerted, mortified vnto ſin, and raiſed vp to newneſſe of life, can haue no certainty of their election and ſaluation. For what ſimilitude is there betweene light and darkneſſe, righteouſneſſe, and vnrighteouſneſſe, the children of God and the children of Beliall, the repentant and vnrepentant, faith and no faith?

Laſtly, they object that if they teach this doctrine of the certainty of election, men wil abuſe it to nouriſh in them carnall ſecuritie and preſumption. To which I anſwere, that wicked men abuſe the whole doctrine of the Goſpell to their deſtruction; for when they are taught that God is moſt gracious and mercifull, that Chriſt hath died for vs, and giuen himſelfe as a ſufficient price to redeeme vs out of the power of ſin, Satan, death and damnation, and maketh interceſſion for vs to God his Father; that the Lord is ſlow to wrath and ready to forgiue, they take occaſion hereby of continuing in their ſins, and deferring their repentance, till God take them away and conſume them in his heauy diſpleaſure. But hence it followeth not that the Goſpell muſt not be taught, becauſe carnall men abuſe it to their juſt condemnation; for though to theſe it be the ſauour of death vnto death, yet to thoſe who are ſaued, it is the ſauour of life vnto life, as it is, 2.Cor.2.16. Though it be fooliſhneſſe to thoſe that periſh, yet it is the power of God to thoſe who are ordained to ſaluation, and God is no leſſe glorified in the one by ſhewing his mercy, then in the other by ſhewing his juſtice. Though worldly men abuſe it to carnall ſecuritie, yet the godly are the more incited thereby to ſerue the Lord in holines and newnes of life. For like louing children, the more they are aſſured of the loue of their heauenly Father, and ſecured of his mercie and bountifull benefits, the more they loue him againe, the more they loue him, the more zealous they are of his glory, and the greater their zeale is, the greater is their care in making the light of their godly and Chriſtian liues to ſhine before men, that their heauenly Father may be glorified. So that it is not the fault of this precious ſeed, but the barrenneſſe of the ground which maketh it fruitleſſe, or elſe for good wheate, ſendeth tares, cockle and darnell; it is not any defect or ill diſpoſition in this ſweete ſmelling flower, but the venemous nature of theſe Spiders which turne hony into poyſon: and therfore the ſeed muſt be caſt vpon the earth, though there bee ſtones with the good ground which will neuer bring forth fruit; the flowers of ſweet conſolation muſt not be pulled vp by the rootes and caſt away: for though the Spider gathereth poyſon, yet the profitable Bee will gather honie out of them. Secondly, when we teach the certainty of election, we doe not teach that men muſt gather it out of Gods ſecret counſaile, but from their owne ſanctification, by which they may be aſſured that they are juſtified, called and elected: and therefore whoſoeuer are not ſanctified but continue in their ſins without repentance, can haue no aſſurance by our doctrine that they are elected or ſhall be ſaued; yea contrariwiſe, wee teach out of Gods Words that whoſoeuer liue in the fleſh ſhall die, Rom.8.13. that they which performe the luſts thereof ſhall neuer inherit the kingdome of God, Gal.5.19,20,21. that none who continue in their vnrighteouſneſſe and vncleanneſſe ſhall enter into the heauenly Ieruſalem, 1.Cor.6.9,10. Reuel.21.27. but ſhall haue their portion in the lake which burneth with fire and brimſtone; as it is Verſe 8. Now what ſtronger bridle to curbe in our vnruly fleſh, when it is ready to run into ſin, then to be aſſured that if we liue in ſin, and fulfill our carnall luſts, wee are in the ſtate of condemnation? What ſharper ſpurre to pricke vs forward when wee are ready to faint, or ſlack our pace in the Chriſtian race of holines and righteouſnes, then to conſider that our ſanctification and newnes of life, is the onely meanes whereby we may come to the aſſurance of our election and ſaluation?

CHAP. XV.

Of our Redemption.

§. Sect. 1. That whom God hath elected, vnto thoſe alſo he giueth Chriſt to be their Redeemer.

THe next cauſe of our ſaluation is our redemption by Ieſus Chriſt: for as the Lord hath from all eternitie elected vs to ſaluation of his meere mercy without any reſpect of our workes or worthineſſe; ſo he hath ordained in this his eternall Decree, our Sauiour Chriſt to be the Mediatour, who ſhould worke the worke of our ſaluation, and as it were the conduit whereby he would conuey his grace, mercie and euerlaſting ſaluation vnto vs; and hath ſet him apart to be our Sauiour and Redeemer, who ſhould ſaue and deliuer vs out of the captiuitie and bondage of our ſpirituall enemies, and reſtore vs to the glorious libertie of the ſonnes of God. This our redemption is an effect of Gods election, whereby our Sauiour Chriſt (being ſet apart of his Father for this purpoſe) hath freed and deliuered all Gods elect out of the captiuitie of their ſpirituall enemies, ſin, death and the Deuill; by offering himſelfe for the price of their redemption, and a ſufficient ſacrifice for ſin, for the appeaſing of his Fathers diſpleaſure and ſatisfying of his juſtice; to the end that being deliuered, they may glorifie him by ſeruing him in holines and righteouſnes all the dayes of this life, and afterwards may inherit the Kingdome of glory, and the crowne of eternall happineſſe which is purchaſed for them.

Redemption what it is.

The definition explaned.

Firſt, I ſay, that it is an effect of Gods election; for whom hee had choſen to euerlaſting life in Chriſt, thoſe by Chriſt hee hath ſaued and redeemed, and thoſe onely as wee ſhall ſee afterwards.

Secondly, I ſhew who is our Sauiour and Redeemer, namely Chriſt Ieſus, who onely saueth vs from our ſinnes, as it is Matth.1.21; Neither is there ſaluation in any other, as it is Acts 4.12. For as there is but one God, ſo there is but one Mediatour betweene God and man, which is the man Ieſus Chriſt, as it is, 1.Tim.2.5. And by him alone wee haue redemption through his bloud, euen the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, and that without reſpect of our worthineſſe, but according to his rich grace, Epheſ.1.7. exclude God the Father, frō the work of our redemption, for he is the author & firſt cauſe, who hath ſo loued vs that hee ſent his Sonne to ſaue and redeeme vs; nor the Holy Ghoſt who applieth vnto vs the merits and efficacie of Chriſts death, making them effectuall for our ſaluation; yet if wee ſpeake properly, our Sauiour Chriſt only can bee called our Redeemer, and that in theſe reſpects; firſt, becauſe hee alone was ordained and deputed to perfect the worke of our Redemption; ſecondly, becauſe he onely was God and man, both which were neceſſarily required in our Mediatour and Redeemer, that hee might haue full right and abilitie to redeeme vs; thirdly, becauſe he alone gaue himſelfe to be the price of our redemption; and laſtly, becauſe in him onely there is perfect redemption as being our head, who not only hath ſaluation in himſelfe, but alſo deriueth it to all the members of his body.

Thirdly, I ſet downe the captiuitie it ſelfe out of which wee were redeemed; namely, not the captiuitie of Egypt or Babylon, not out of the ſlauery of the Turke, Spaniard, or any other earthly Tyrant, whoſe thraldome might well be bitter but not long, becauſe our liues are ſhort and grieuous to the body, but extendeth not to the ſoules: but Chriſt hath deliuered vs out of the bondage of ſin, Satan, Hell and Death, in which we ſhould haue beene enthralled and fearefully tormented for euer and euer, not in body alone but in ſoule alſo.

§. Sect. 2.
1. Pet. 1. 18.
How Chriſt is ſaid to haue bought vs with a price.

Fourthly, I ſhew the price which he hath giuen for our redemption, namely, not ſiluer and gold, or any corruptible thing, but himſelfe; euen his body to be crucified and his bloud to be ſhed, that ſo his Fathers iuſtice being ſatisfied and his wrath appeaſed, wee might be ſet free out of the thraldome of our ſpirituall enemies. But it may be demanded, how it can truly be ſaid that Chriſt hath redeemed vs by paying the price of our redemption, ſeeing the Scriptures teſtifie that by his power hee hath forcibly deliuered vs out of the hands of our ſpirituall enemies. So Heb. 2. 14. it is ſaid, that Chriſt deſtroyed him who had the power of death, that is the Deuill. And Col. 2. 15. the Apoſtle ſheweth, that he hath ſpoiled principalities and powers, and hath led them openly and triumphed ouer them. And Luke 11. 22. he is compared to a valiant Champion who hath thruſt the ſtrōg man Satan out of his poſſeſſion: by which it may appeare, that our Sauiour hath not redeemed vs by giuing a price after a legall manner, but by force, and as it were by conqueſt. I anſwere, that Chriſt hath both paid the price of our redemption, and alſo hath deliuered vs forcibly by his power; for hee paid the price vnto God to whom he offered the ſacrifice of himſelfe, that it might be a full ſatisfaction for ſin, and a ſufficient price to redeeme vs out of the captiuity of our ſpirituall enemies, and to purchaſe the fauour of God, and our heauenly inheritance in his Kingdome: and therefore in reſpect of God the Father, to whom our Sauiour offered himſelfe, hee is ſaid to haue redeemed vs by giuing a ranſome for vs. But when Gods iuſtice was fully ſatisfied, Chriſt dealt not with our ſpirituall enemies by intreatie, (much leſſe offered hee this price of our redemption to Satan; for if no ſacrifice might lawfully be offered vnto any ſaue God alone, much more vnlawfull was it that this ſacrifice of Chriſts body, ſhould be offered vnto the Deuill) but by his Almighty power hee ouercame the power of darkneſſe, vanquiſhed Satan, ſubdued Death, and broke open the priſon of the graue, and ſo by ſtrong hand ſet all Gods elect at liberty. For after that the debt of our ſins was diſcharged, our ranſome paid, and the hand-writing of Ordinances cancelled and nailed vnto the Croſſe, theſe our ſpirituall enemies had no iuſt intereſt vnto vs, nor any thing to alleage why they ſhould longer hold vs in their captiuitie; but yet the ſtrong man who had taken poſſeſſion would not willingly loſe it, vnleſſe hee were ouercome with a greater ſtrength: & therefore our Sauiour Chriſt hauing bought vs of his Father, and ſo become our true owner, buckled with our ſpirituall enemies, ouercame theſe principalities and powers, triumphed gloriouſly ouer them, and freed vs out of their tyrannicall iuriſdiction.

§. Sect. 3.
That the pri of redemptio was not pay vnto Satan
but vnto God.

But if it may bee obiected that wee were captiues vnto Satan, and therefore the price of redemption was to bee paied vnto him, and not vnto God the Father who held vs not in his captiuitie. I anſwer, that though Satan held vs in his captiuitie, yet not in his owne right, for wee had not ſinned againſt him to whom wee were not bound to performe obedience, nor were indebted vnto him; but wee had ſinned againſt God, whoſe ſeruants wee were by right of creation, and had infinitly runne into his debt, which wee were altogether vnable to pay. And therefore like a iuſt Iudge he condemned vs to the perpetuall priſon of death, and committed vs to the cuſtodie of Satan, as vnto a Iaylor, to bee kept in his bondage, till we had ſatisfied for our ſinnes and diſcharged our debt, which being impoſſible to vs, our Sauiour Chriſt hauing aſſumed our nature and become our ſuretie and Mediatour paied that we owed, and ſuffered that which we had deſerued, and ſo fully ſatisfying his fathers iuſtice, hath purchaſed our redemption; So as now Satan had no more authoritie to retaine vs in his captiuitie, then the Iaylor hath of holding him in priſon who by the Iudge is releaſed, or the executioner of hanging him whō the Iudge hath acquitted or pardoned.

And therefore tyrannically exerciſing ſtill his juriſdiction, our Sauiour by ſtrong hand ouercame him and all the power of Hell, that ſo he might ſet vs at libertie whom his Fathers juſt ſentence had acquitted and his mercie pardoned.

The laſt thing to be conſidered is the end of our redemption, namely, that we ſhould no longer ſerue ſin and Satan, out of whoſe bondage we are releaſed; but become the ſeruants of Chriſt, who hath redeemed vs, ſeruing him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of our liues; that ſo glorifying him here on earth, he may glorifie vs in Heauen, and make vs partakers of thoſe euerlaſting joyes, which by his death and bloud-ſhed he hath purchaſed for vs.

Satans tentations concerning our redemption, wherewith he moueth the worldling to preſumption, anſwered.

ect. 1.
ni tenta-grounded e vniuerof re-tion.

HAuing ſhewed what our redemption is; let vs now conſider of thoſe tentations of Satan which he ſuggeſteth into the mindes of men, whereby he laboureth to depriue them of this great benefit, and to keepe them ſtill in his captiuitie, or to pull them back againe when they are eſcaped. And theſe are of two ſorts, the firſt leading to ſecuritie and preſumption, the other to doubting and deſperation. For if hee haue to deale with worldly men; who were neuer truly conuerted vnto God, hee laboureth to perſwade them that they are redeemed by Chriſt, and therefore though they liue in their ſins, yet they ſhall be ſaued, for Chriſt came into the world to ſaue Sinners: but when he aſſaulteth the true Chriſtian, who is indeed the redeemed of the Lord; then hee moueth him to doubt and deſpaire, either of the ſufficiencie or of the efficacie of the worke of our redemption wrought by Ieſus Chriſt. That he may continue the worldly man in his carnall ſecuritie, and fond preſumption, he vſeth two principall reaſons; the firſt, that the redemption wrought by Chriſt is vniuerſall, and effectuall for the ſaluation of all the World; out of which he frameth this tentation. Chriſt hath ſhed his precious bloud, and ſuffered death for all the World, and hath redeemed all mankind which were loſt in Adam, out of the bondage of Satan, Death and Hell; why therefore ſhouldeſt thou bee ſo ſtrict in flying ſin, with which thou art ſo much delighted? Why doeſt thou ſtriue againſt the ſtreame of thy corruptions? And wherefore ſhouldeſt thou take any great paines in the workes of holineſſe and righteouſnes, which are ſo bitter and vnpleaſant to thy taſte and appetite? For Chriſt came into the world to ſaue all men, and not thoſe only who are ſo ſtrict in their wayes; he came to redeeme the whole world, and gaue himſelf as a ſufficient ranſome for all men. And therefore doubtleſſe he will not loſe his labour, nor ſpill his bloud in vaine; he will not willingly let any periſh, whom he hath purchaſed at ſo high a rate, and redeemed with ſo deare a price: hee is alſo ſo powerfull that nothing ſhall be able to pull them out of his hand, and ſo wiſe that he would not ſhed his bloud, for thoſe whom hee would not ſaue. And who can imagine that God who is moſt juſt will impute thoſe ſins vnto thee for which Chriſt hath ſuffered, inflict death on thee for whom Chriſt died, and require that debt againe which is already diſcharged? Or who can imagine that God, who is immutable, ſhould ſhew ſuch inconſtancie as to ſend his ſonne into the World, to ſuffer death for the redemption of thoſe whom he now will not ſaue; for if hee would, who could reſiſt his will or withſtand his power? And therefore if hee hath redeemed all, ſurely hee will ſaue all, and conſequently thee amongſt the reſt, though thou liue as thou liſt and follow the luſts of thine owne heart: for thy ſins and vnbeliefe cannot make his purpoſe void, nor annihilate the worke of thy redemption; yea the more thy ſins abound, the more his grace will abound alſo.

Iohn 10.28.

§. Sect. 2.
The anſwere to the former tentation.

For the anſwering of which tentation, we are to know, that vniuerſall redemption which is the ground and foundation thereof, is an idle dreame of mans braine, which cannot bee juſtified by the Word of God the touchſtone of all truth; neither hath our Sauiour Chriſt redeemed any other, then thoſe whom hee effectually calleth vnto the ſauing knowledge of their redemption, indueth with true faith and vnfained repentance, juſtifieth, ſanctifieth, and laſtly ſaueth, if we reſpect the purpoſe of God, and the will of our bleſſed Sauiour; although indeed the price hee gaue for our redemption, was of ſufficient value for the ſinnes of all the World, if it were applied by a liuely faith.

Teſtimonies of Scripture alleged againſt vniuerſall redemption.

But becauſe this doctrine hath many enemies, it is not ſufficient to propound it vnleſſe I proue it: and therefore I will ſhew firſt by teſtimonies of Scriptures and after by ſtrong reaſons, that our Sauiour Chriſt hath died for, and by his death redeemed thoſe only whom hee indueth with true faith and vnfained repentance, and not for all the world, as they imagine. Matth. 20.28. it is ſaid, that hee came into the world to giue his life a ranſome for many. And 26.28. that his bloud was ſhed for many for the remiſſion of ſinnes. And Eſay 53.11. that Chriſt ſhould iuſtifie many by bearing their iniquities. So that hee hath not giuen his life a ranſome,

and ſhed his bloud, and by bearing their iniquities juſtified all, but many, that is, part of all. Luke 2.34. Simeon ſaith, that Chriſt was appointed by Gods Decree for the fall and riſing againe of many, that is, for the fall of many reprobates, and the riſing againe of many who are elected, and therefore not for the redemption of all. So Chriſt ſaith that hee layeth downe his life for his ſheepe, and therefore not for his wicked enemies; for vs, that is, for the company of the faithfull beleeuers, and therefore not for the Synagogue of Satan and wicked vnbeleeuers. So he is ſaid to be the Sauiour of his people, and not of aliants and ſtrangers; and to haue giuen himſelfe for his Church, and not for thoſe who haue no fellowſhip in the communion of Saints; that he ſhould die for the Nation, that is, as Iohn ſaith for all Gods children Iewes and Gentiles, and therefore not for the wicked, and the children of Satan. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that the righteouſneſſe of God (that is, the righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt imputed vnto vs by God, or the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt God and man) is manifeſted vpon all, and vnto all that beleeue; that God hath ſet forth Chriſt to be a reconciliation through faith in his bloud. And that he is the iuſtifier of him, which is of the faith of Ieſus. Where the imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, reconciliation with God, and juſtification, is reſtrained to the beleeuers only. And to the ſame purpoſe is that of the Apoſtle, *Heb.*5.9. where Chriſt is ſaid to be the author of eternall ſaluation vnto all that obey him, and therefore not vnto them who continue in their rebellion not obſeruing his will, nor ſubmitting themſelues to bee ruled by the ſcepter of his Word. And as by theſe places it is apparant, that Chriſt and his benefits are reſtrained to the faithfull, ſo alſo in other places the vnbeleeuers and ſuch as continue in their wickedneſſe, are flatly excluded from the participation of them, Iohn 3.18. He that beleeueth in him ſhall not be condemned, but he that beleeueth not is condemned alreadie. And Verſe 36. He that beleeueth in the Sonne hath euerlaſting life, and he that obeyeth not the Sonne ſhall not ſee life, but the wrath of God abideth on him. So *Rom.*8.9. If any man haue not the Spirit of Chriſt, the ſame is not his; and conſequently it followeth that if hee bee not Chriſts, then Chriſt and his benefits belong not vnto him. And the Apoſtle 1.Iohn 3.8. plainly affirmeth, that hee who committeth ſinne (that is, hee who liueth in ſin without repentance) is of the Deuill, and that he who is borne of God (that is, regenerate by his Spirit) ſinneth not, that is, liueth not in his ſinnes, neither committeth them with full conſent of will. And Paul willeth Timothy to inſtruct his hearers, that they might come to amendment out of the ſnare of the Deuill: whereby it is manifeſt that thoſe in whom ſin raigneth, are not of Chriſt but of Satan, and that notwithſtanding Chriſts death they are ſtill in the ſnare of the Deuill, till they come to amendment of life; becauſe the bloud of Chriſt is not effectuall to free any out of their ſpirituall bondage, till it be applied vnto them by a liuely faith.

And thus it appeareth by plaine teſtimonies, that the redemption wrought by Chriſt belongeth onely to the faithfull; which alſo by vertue of Chriſts death and bloudſhed, haue their ſins and corruptions in ſome meaſure mortified; and not vnto the wicked, who liue and die in their ſins without repentance.

1.Reaſ

Now I will alſo confirme this truth by ſtrong reaſons: Firſt, thoſe who were neuer knowne of Chriſt (that is, acknowledged for his) were neuer redeemed by his precious bloud-ſhed; neither is it probable that the Father would giue his welbeloued Sonne, & that the Sonne would giue himſelfe for the redemption of thoſe, whom in his eternall counſell he had decreed to reject, or (as all confeſſe) whom hee foreſaw ſhould periſh: but our Sauiour will profeſſe to the workers of iniquitie that he neuer knew them, *Mat.*7.23. and therefore he neuer gaue himſelfe for their redemption.

*Matth.*7.2

2.Reaſ

Secondly, our Sauiour Chriſt gaue himſelfe for none but thoſe whom his Father eternally loued, and out of this loue elected to life eternall, for theſe are the firſt and principall cauſes of ſaluation vpon which all the other depend as ſubordinate vnto them, and the effect cannot extend it ſelfe further then the cauſe which produceth it. Chriſt therefore gaue himſelfe for none, but thoſe alone whom God his Father loued, and out of this loue gaue vnto him to be ſaued by that all-ſufficient Sacrifice which he ſhould offer for the ſatisfying of his juſtice; and theſe were thoſe only that ſhould beleeue in him; according to that of our Sauiour; So God loued the World that he gaue his only begotten Son, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him, ſhould not periſh but haue euerlaſting life. And they who are thus giuen vnto Chriſt by his Father, and for whom hee gaue himſelfe are ſaued by him and cannot periſh. For being redeemed by him they become his, and he being ſtronger then all, none is able to pull them out of his hand, who by right of redemption belong vnto him. Now God loueth none but whom hee electeth, nor electeth any whom he doth not alſo ſaue; and on the other ſide hee firſt rejecteth whom hee afterwards condemneth, and hateth thoſe whom he rejecteth; according to that, Iacob haue I loued, but Eſau haue I hated. And therefore ſeeing God out of this loue hath choſen the leaſt part of the World to eternall life; it followeth that Chriſt hath giuen himſelfe as a price of redemption for the leaſt number.

For how abſurde is it to thinke, that Chriſt would ſo loue thoſe whom his Father hateth, as to giue himſelfe for them vnto the death? or that he would be ſo vnwiſely prodigall of his precious bloud, as to powre it out in vain for the veſſels of wrath fitted to deſtruction, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, and to whom is reſerued the blackneſſe of darkneſſe for euer? as it is, Iude Verſe 4.13.

Reaſon.

Thirdly, for whomſoeuer Chriſt hath offered a ſacrifice vnto his Father, for them alſo hee maketh interceſſion and is become their Aduocate; neither is it probable that Chriſt would die for thoſe, for whom hee will not intreate, and that hee would offer the ſacrifice of his body for thoſe, for whom he would not offer the ſacrifice of his lips. Beſides, it was the office of the ſame High Prieſt, to offer Sacrifice, and to pray for the people, and conſequently of our Sauiour Chriſt, as appeareth, 1. Iohn 2.1,2. where he is ſaid as well to be our Aduocate, as the propitiatory ſacrifice of our ſinnes; and the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that as Chriſt died for vs, ſo he maketh interceſſion for vs. But our Sauiour Chriſt flatly excludeth, from all participation of the fruit of his interceſſion, all thoſe who are of the World, that is, all meere Worldlings. Iohn 17.9. I pray not for the world, but for them which thou haſt giuen me; and the Apoſtle ſaith, that as he perfectly ſaueth, ſo alſo hee maketh interceſſion for thoſe who come vnto God by him, that is, true beleeuers only: and therefore for them alone hee hath offered himſelfe a ſacrifice vnto his Father.

Fourthly, Chriſt hath died for thoſe alone, in whom he hath attained vnto the end of his death; for whatſoeuer attaineth not his end is done in vaine, which argueth want of wiſdome, or power, in the agent and efficient, neither of which without blaſphemy can be aſcribed vnto Chriſt, who is in both infinite: but the end of Chriſts death (that is, the eternall ſaluation of thoſe for whom hee died) is attained vnto only in the elect and faithfull; for as it is Mark. 16.16. He that ſhall beleeue, ſhall be ſaued; but hee that will not beleeue, ſhall be damned. And Iohn 3.36. He that beleeueth in the Sonne hath euerlaſting life, and he that obeyeth not the Sonne ſhall not ſee life, but the wrath of God abideth on him: And therefore, Chriſt hath died for thoſe alone, who beleeue & bring forth the fruits of their faith in obedience, and not for the vnbeleeuers and diſobedient.

Reaſon.

Fiftly, if all were redeemed by the death of Chriſt, then ſhould they alſo bee ſaued: for what ſhould hinder them from ſaluation, who are redeemed, ſeeing they haue receiued the pardon and remiſſion of their ſinnes, as appeareth, Epheſ. 1.7. In whom wee haue redemption through his bloud, euen the remiſſion of our ſinnes: Col. 1.14. And conſequently whoſoeuer are redeemed are juſtified, and alſo heires of eternall bleſſedneſſe; for bleſſed are thoſe whoſe iniquity is forgiuen, and whoſe ſinne is couered, as it is Pſal. 32.1. Seeing alſo Chriſt who hath redeemed vs is ſtronger then Satan and all the power of Hell, and therefore all their ſpirituall enemies conjoyned together, cannot plucke thoſe whom he hath redeemed out of his hand violently and againſt his will, neither can wee with any probable ſhew of reaſon imagine that he would willingly loſe thoſe whom he hath redeemed with the ineſtimable price of himſelfe, neither will it ſtand with the juſtice of God to impute the ſinnes of any to their condemnation for which Chriſt hath fully ſatisfied: nor to exact that debt againe which hee hath paid: and therefore if Chriſt had died for all, God in his juſtice could not chuſe but ſaue all: and Chriſt might well ſay to his Father, To what purpoſe haue I died, if thou deſtroyeſt thoſe whom I haue ſaued? What profit is in my bloud, if thou condemneſt thoſe whom I haue redeemed?

6. Reaſon.

Laſtly, if he died and by his death redeemed all; then alſo he died for and redeemed the Pagans, Turks, Atheiſts and Epicures, who were out of the Church and Couenant of grace; and ſo juſtification, redemption and ſaluation ſhould bee out of the Church, and be extended to thoſe whom God neuer receiued into his Couenant; which is quite contrary to the whole courſe of the Scriptures, where it is ſaid, that all who are ſaued are alſo added vnto the Church, Acts 2.47: and that Chriſt hath giuen himſelf only for his Church, Epheſ. 5.25. Yea, if Chriſt died for all, and by his death redeemed them, then it muſt neceſſarily follow that hee had redeemed euen thoſe damned ſoules, who were in Hell before his comming, which is moſt abſurd to be imagined; for if they were redeemed, how did they againe fall into condemnation, ſeeing they being once become Chriſts can neuer periſh, neither is any able to pull them out of his hands, as it is Iohn 10.28.

§. Sect. 4.
In what ſenſe Chriſt is ſaid to haue died for all men,

But againſt this it is objected, that in the Scriptures Chriſt is ſaid to haue died, and to haue giuen himſelfe a ranſome for all men, 1. Tim. 2.6. Who gaue himſelfe a ranſome for all men. And Heb. 2.9. he is ſaid to haue taſted death for all men; and 1. Iohn 2.2. hee is ſaid to be a reconciliation for the ſinnes of the whole world. To which I anſwere; firſt, that theſe ſpeeches are not to be vnderſtood of all and ſingular men, but of all the faithfull which are gathered out of the whole world; for the drift of the Apoſtle is to ſhew, that our Sauiour Chriſt died not onely for the beleeuing Iewes, but for the Gentiles alſo, of what Country, Nation or condition ſoeuer they were. And ſo theſe generall ſpeeches are expounded, Iohn 11.52. where our Sauiour Chriſt is ſaid to haue died, not onely for the Iewiſh Nation, but that alſo he might gather together in one, the children of God which were ſcattered. So alſo he is ſaid, Reuel. 5.9. to haue redeemed vs (that is, all the faithfull) vnto God by his bloud, out of euery kinred, tongue, people and Nation: and Galath. 3.26. that all are the ſonnes of God by faith in Chriſt Ieſus; and Verſe 28. That there is neither Iew nor Grecian, bond nor free, male nor female, but all are one in Chriſt Ieſus. So that theſe places are not to bee vnderſtood of all and ſingular men, but of all beleeuers, of what Nation or condition ſoeuer they bee. For all the promiſes and benefits promiſed in the Goſpell, which is the Couenant of grace, are to be reſtrained to the condition of the Couenant, be they neuer ſo generall and vniuerſall; and this condition is ſometimes expreſſed, and ſometimes vnderſtood, but neuer excluded. So Iohn 3.16. So God loued the world, that he hath giuen his onely begotten Sonne, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh, but haue life euerlaſting. And the Apoſtle ſaith, that the righteouſnes of God by faith in Ieſus Chriſt, is giuen to all that beleeue. And that the Scripture hath concluded all vnder ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt ſhould bee giuen to them that beleeue. So alſo Acts 10.43. It is ſaid that through his Name whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhall haue remiſſion of ſinnes. Secondly, I anſwere, that Chriſt in ſome ſenſe may bee truely ſaid to haue died for all the world, namely, in reſpect of the ſufficiency of his death, though not in reſpect of the efficacie; for by his death he payed a ſufficient price for the ſins of all the world, and a full ranſome for all mankind, if all would or could apply his merits and obedience vnto themſelues by a liuely faith: but in reſpect of Gods counſell, Chriſts will, and the euent, his death was not effectuall for the redemption of all, but the faithfull onely. And as a ſoueraigne ſalue, may haue ſufficient vertue in it ſelfe to cure innumerable wounds & ſores, but yet it is effectuall for the healing of thoſe onely to which it is applyed; ſo the precious balme of Chriſts bloud, is of ſufficient vertue to heale the wounds of all ſinners whatſoeuer, but notwithſtanding it is effectuall to thoſe onely, to whom it is applyed by a true and liuely faith. Yea, but the Apoſtle Iohn ſaith indefinitely of all men, that if any whatſoeuer ſinne, we haue an Aduocate with the Father Ieſus Chriſt the righteous, and he is the propitiation for our ſins; and not for ours only, but alſo for the ſins of the whole world. To this I anſwere, that he writeth not this to all men indefinitely, but to the faithfull and the true members of the Church alone vnto whom his Epiſtle is directed and no other; neither doth hee caſt theſe holy things vnto Dogges, or theſe precious pearles of Chriſtian conſolation before Swine, who would trample them vnder their filthy feet, but vnto thoſe beleeuers who laboured vnder the heauy burthen of their ſins, and deſired eaſe. For he reſtraineth thoſe indefinite words, if any man ſinne, only to the faithfull in that which followeth, we haue an Aduocate; and he is the propitiation for our ſinnes, joyning himſelfe with all other beleeuers. Neither can they be extended to the wicked and reprobate, ſeeing Chriſt is not an Aduocate to plead for them, nor is a propitiatory Sacrifice vnto God his Father for their ſinnes. For he is heard for all for whom he pleadeth, and God is propitious, reconciled vnto, and well pleaſed with them for whom he offereth this ſacrifice to this end, or elſe it ſhould be offered as vaine, as not attaining the end for which it is offered. But (ſay they) the Apoſtle extendeth this propitiation by Chriſt generally to all, for hee ſaith not for ours only, that is, for all the faithfull, but alſo for the ſinnes of the whole world. I anſwere, that the Apoſtle by ours, vnderſtandeth the faithfull to whom hee writeth, and by the whole world all other beleeuers that either then liued or ſhould afterwards liue in all ages and in all places throughout the world, of what language or kinred, country or condition ſoeuer they were, as it is expounded in the ſong of the foure and twenty Elders. Apocalyp. 5.9.

But it is further vrged that it is plainely ſaid in the Scriptures, that hee died for all without exception. I anſwere, that it is an vſuall thing in Gods Word, to put this word (all) for many, or for all thoſe which are of one kind. So it is ſaid that all the country of Iudea, and they of Ieruſalem, went out vnto Iohn the Baptiſt, and were baptiſed of him; that is, not euery man without exception, but great multitudes. That our Sauiour Chriſt healed euery diſeaſe and ſickneſſe amongſt the people, that is, many that were diſeaſed, or diſeaſes of all kinds. And that Chriſt healed all that were oppreſſed by the Deuill, that is, very many, for otherwiſe great numbers oppreſſed of the Deuill neuer came into our Sauiours preſence. Thus alſo it is ſaid that there was in the ſheet which Peter ſaw in his Viſion (πάντα τὰ τετράποδα) all forefooted beaſts, that is, beaſts of all kinds. And thus ſometimes, by (all) wee are to vnderſtand all the elect and them onely, and ſometimes all the reprobate and them alone. In the firſt ſenſe are theſe places to be vnderſtood. Iohn 12.32. our Sauiour ſaith, that after hee is crucified, he will draw all men vnto him, that is, all the faithfull and elect, for they only are conuerted vnto God, and drawne vnto Chriſt. So it is ſaid, Eſay 54.13. that all ſhall be taught of God. And Ier. 31.34. that all ſhall know him from the leaſt to the greateſt. And Ioel 2.28.

And Iohn 3. 32. the Baptiſt ſaith, that no man hath receiued Chriſts teſtimony, that is, none of the wicked and reprobate, for all the faithfull and elect receiue it and beleeue. By all which places it is euident that this word (all) ſometimes ſignifieth many, and ſometime all of one kinde; and therefore in thoſe places where it is ſaid, that Chriſt hath died for all men, wee may vnderſtand it of many, as it is expounded Matth. 26. 28. or of all the faithfull, as in many places it is reſtrained.

Secondly, it is objected, that Chriſt died euen for the wicked and damned; for it is ſaid, that ſome ſhall deny the Lord who hath bought them, 2. Pet. 2. 1. that ſome who are purged afterwards become blind and forgetfull, 2. Pet. 1. 9. that he may be deſtroyed for whom Chriſt died, Rom. 14. 15. that they who are ſanctified may count the blood of the Teſtament an vnholy thing, and tread it vnder their feet, Heb. 10. 29. To which I anſwere, that theſe and ſuch like places are to be vnderſtood of men, not as they are in truth, and in Gods ſight, but as they are in outward ſhew, profeſſion, and in the eſtimation of men, who according to the rule of charitie judge the beſt, when they ſee not euident reaſon to the contrary: or it may be vnderſtood of hypocrites as they are in their owne opinion, or according to their vaine boaſting; and ſo thoſe that are in ſhew, or in their owne opinion redeemed by Chriſts death, may be reprobates & condemned, but not any who are redeemed in truth. Secondly, thoſe Hypocrites that are in the outward viſible Church are ſaid bee redeemed, in reſpect that they are numbred for a time amongſt the faithfull, till they bewray their hypocriſie, and depart from the communion and fellowſhip which they haue outwardly with the Saints, though they are not in truth redeemed, vnleſſe they be of the Church, and members of Chriſts Bodie.

Laſtly, it is objected, that as in Adam all die, euen ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made aliue, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1. Cor. 15. 22. but all died in Adam, and therefore all are made aliue in Chriſt. I anſwere, that the Apoſtle here vnderſtandeth all the faithfull, of whoſe reſurrection hee here diſputeth; and it is as much as if hee had ſaid, as all the faithfull died in Adam, ſo all ſhall be made aliue in Chriſt; or though it be vnderſtood of all, that they died in Adam, yet it proueth not that all are redeemed by Chriſt, for then the ſenſe is thus much; as Adam deriued death vnto all his, by naturall propagation, ſo Chriſt hath deriued life to al his by grace. And this appeareth in the Verſe following, where he ſaith, that firſt Chriſt roſe, and afterwards they that are of Chriſt ſhall riſe at his comming: now they onely are Chriſts who are led by his Spirit; and therefore they who haue not their part in the firſt reſurrection, whereby being ſanctified they riſe againe from the death of ſinne to newneſſe of life, ſhall not haue their part of the ſecond reſurrection, whereby they riſe to inherit thoſe joyes which Chriſt hath purchaſed for them.

But it may be further vrged, that if all doe not liue in Chriſt who died in Adam, Adams ſin ſhall be of more force then Chriſts death and ſatisfaction, and Adam ſhall be more ſtrong to deſtroy, then Chriſt to ſaue. I anſwere, that their power and ſtrength is not to be meaſured by the number of thoſe who are deſtroyed and ſaued; but according to the manner whereby they were deſtroyed and ſaued, or according to the vertue and force required to ſauing and deſtroying: for it is farre more eaſie to hurt many, then to helpe a few, to kill a multitude, then to reſtore one to life; for euen bruit beaſts can kill and deſtroy, but neither man, Angell, nor other creature can giue life ſaue God alone. And ſo it was no hard matter for Adam to plunge all mankind into the gulfe of perdition, but to ſaue and deliuer vs out of this wretched eſtate, neither hee nor any other could performe ſaue Chriſt alone. And therefore though our Sauiour had freed and reſtored to life but only one, and Adam by his ſinne deſtroyed all the reſt, yet Chriſts death was ſtronger, and of more vertue in ſauing, then Adams ſinne in deſtroying. Secondly, I anſwere, that Chriſts death is as ſufficient for the redemption of all the world, as Adams ſinne for their condemnation, in reſpect of the infinite value and price thereof; if, as Adams ſinne was deriued vnto all by naturall propagation, ſo Chriſts death and merits were applyed vnto them by faith. For there is no want of vertue in this precious ſalue to heale, but the cauſe why it healeth not, is becauſe it is rejected and caſt away through incredulitie. Thirdly, Chriſts death is of farre more vertue and force then Adams ſinne, in that it bringeth vnto vs farre better things then we loſt in Adam; for wee loſt by Adam but earthly benefits, but we haue deriued vnto vs by Chriſt heauenly glory, and euerlaſting happineſſe. Adam caſt vs out of the poſſeſſion of the earthly Paradiſe, but Chriſt giues vs poſſeſſion of the heauenly Ieruſalem. Adam made vs of the ſeruants of God, the bond-ſlaues of Satan, but Chriſt made vs of the bond-ſlaues of Sathan the ſonnes of God, and heires of his Kingdome.

Chap. XVII.

That all who are redeemed are alſo ſanctified.

§. Sect. 1.
Satans tentation to perſwade men to all licentiouſneſſe.

ANd thus I haue taken away the ground of Satans firſt tentations, whereby he moooueth carnall men ſecurely to continue in their ſins, becauſe Chriſt hath redeemed, and will ſaue the wicked as well as the godly, by prouing that Chriſt hath redeemed the faithfull only. The ſecond tentation which hee vſeth to the ſame purpoſe, he thus frameth; Chriſt hath redeemed all, at leaſt who beleeue in him, be their ſinnes neuer ſo many and grieuous: and therefore thou mayſt continue in thy ſinnes with pleaſure and delight, and ſatisfie the luſts of thine owne fleſh; only belieue and thou ſhalt be ſaued, for Chriſt requireth no other condition. Neither is there any other end of Chriſts comming, but that hee ſhould by his ſuffering take away thy ſins; and therefore why ſhouldeſt thou vexe and torment thy ſelfe, in imbracing bitter mortification and newneſſe of life, and in ſhunning thy ſweet and pleaſing ſinnes, ſeeing Chriſt redeemeth the greateſt ſinners as well as the leaſt.

The anſwere.

To this wee are to anſwere, that there are no ſinnes ſo innumerable in multitude, and ſo hainous in their qualitie and nature, which will exclude vs from the benefit of our redemption wrought by Chriſt, ſo we applie his death and merits vnto vs, by a true and liuely faith. But yet notwithſtanding, this can be no incouragement for any to continue in their ſinnes; for firſt, we are to know, that none haue part in this redemption wrought by Chriſt, but thoſe only who are made partakers thereof by a true and liuely faith; which is neuer ſeparated from the fruits thereof, true repentance and holineſſe of life, neither is it poſſible that any ſhould bee aſſured of Gods loue, but this aſſurance will make them to loue God againe, and this loue will worke in their hearts a zeale of his glorie, and a care to glorifie his name, by cauſing the light of their godly liues to ſhine before men. It is not poſſible that any who truely beleeue that they are redeemed with the precious bloud of Chriſt, ſhould not highly eſteeme and bee exceedingly thankfull to Chriſt for this ineſtimable benefit, which none can doe who tread the blood of Chriſt vnder their feet, and voluntarily caſt themſelues into the bondage of ſinne, out of which we are redeemed with ſo precious a price, and ſo ſcorne this benefit, and deſpite our Sauiour who hath beſtowed it. It cannot be that any ſhould be ſo fooliſh to ſell their ſoules vnto ſinne for euery vaine pleaſure and trifling commoditie, if they be aſſured that Chriſt redeemed them with the price of his precious blood which was of more value then many worlds; and therefore whoſoeuer make no conſcience of ſinne haue no true faith, and conſequently the worke of our redemption wrought by Chriſt, doth not appertaine vnto them.

That whom Chriſt rede-meth thoſe ſanctifieth.

Secondly, whomſoeuer Chriſt redeemeth with his blood, thoſe he ſanctifieth with his ſpirit; and in whomſoeuer his death is effectuall for the taking away of the guilt and puniſhment of ſin, in them it is effectuall for the mortifying of their corruptions and the ſin it ſelfe, for, being the members of Chriſt, we are grafted with him into the ſimilitude of his death and reſurrection, and our old man is crucified with him, that the body of ſinne might be deſtroyed, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerue ſinne, as it is Rom. 6. 5.6. And as our Sauiour Chriſt is our wiſedome, righteouſnes and redemption, ſo he is our ſanctification alſo as it is 1. Cor. 1. 30. So that whomſoeuer he redeemeth and iuſtifieth, thoſe alſo hee ſanctifieth, as it may further appeare by many & euident teſtimonies. Tit. 2. 14. he is ſaid to haue giuen himſelfe for vs, that hee might redeeme vs from all iniquitie, and purge vs to be a peculiar people vnto himſelfe zealous of good workes. Luk. 1. 74. 75. the Lord bindeth it with an oath, that whomſoeuer hee redeemeth out of the hands of their ſpirituall enemies, they ſhall worſhip him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of of their life. 1. Pet. 2. 24. the Apoſtle ſaith, that our Sauiour bare our ſinnes in his bodie on the tree, that we being deliuered from ſinne ſhould liue in righteouſneſſe. And Paul ſheweth Rom. 6. 18. that aſſoone as wee are freed from the bondage of ſinne, we are made the ſeruants of righteouſneſſe. So Heb. 9. 14. it is ſaid that the bloud of Chriſt doth purge our conſciences from dead workes, that wee may ſerue the liuing God; neither are wee only juſtified, but alſo ſanctified by the offering of the body of Chriſt once made, as it is Chap. 10. Verſe 10. 14. And as hee is appointed of God to be a Prince and Sauiour to giue remiſſion of ſinnes, ſo alſo to giue repentance, as appeareth, Acts 5. 31. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that Chriſt gaue himſelfe for his Church, not that it might continue ſtill in pollution and the filthineſſe of ſinne, but that he might ſanctifie it and cleanſe it by the waſhing of water through the word, Epheſ. 5. 25, 26. If therefore we walke in the light as he is in the light, then his bloud purgeth vs from all our ſinnes, 1. Iohn 1. 7. If we are ſprinkled in our hearts from an euill conſcience, then we may draw neere with a true heart in aſſurance of faith, Heb. 10. 22. But if we continue in our ſinnes without repentance tance and commit them with delight and greedineſſe, then let vs brag as much as we will that we are redeemed by Chriſt, yet we are ſtill in the bondage of the Deuill; for Chriſt appeared, not onely to free vs out of his captiuitie, but alſo that he might looſe the workes of the Deuill, as appeareth 1. Iohn 3. 8. He hath redeemed vs out of the thraldome of Satan, that wee might become his owne ſeruants, whom he will rule and gouerne by his Word and Spirit. And therefore if wee haue not this ſpirit to lead vs, we are none of his, as it is *Rom.*8.9. if wee will not ſubmit our ſelues to the ſcepter of his Word, we are none of his ſubiects, but continue ſtill the ſeruants of ſinne and Satan. Seeing then it is manifeſt by Gods Word, that whoſoeuer are redeemed are alſo ſanctified, and whomſoeuer Chriſt hath waſhed with his bloud, from the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, hee doth alſo purge and cleanſe them by vertue of the ſame bloud, from the ſinnes and corruptions themſelues; and ſeeing hee hath redeemed vs out of the hands of our ſpirituall enemies, to the end wee ſhould become his ſeruants, worſhipping him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of our life: let vs neuer bee perſwaded by Sathans tentations, fooliſhly to imagine that wee may the more ſecurely liue in our ſinnes, becauſe Chriſt Ieſus hath paid a ſufficient price for our redemption. For firſt, what horrible ingratitude is this vnto God, to take occaſion by this ineſtimable benefit the more to offend him? What a blaſphemous imagination is this againſt Ieſus Chriſt; to thinke that hee came into the World, to be a bolſter wherevpon wee may more ſecurely ſleepe in ſinne; and that hee ſhed his precious bloud to purchaſe libertie for vs, that wee may liue in all wickedneſſe; that he reconciled vs vnto his Father by his death, that we might the more freely offend him; that hee hath redeemed vs out of the bondage of Satan, that wee may more diligently ſerue him; that he hath with his bloud waſhed vs from the filth of ſinne, that wee may more ſecurely wallow in this ſtinking puddle againe? For, what were this but to make Chriſt another Siſiphus, who aſſoone as hee hath ended his labour is new to begin againe? What is it but euery day to crucifie the Lord of life afreſh, and to tread his precious bloud vnder our feet as an vnholy thing? What is it but to contemne & baſely to eſteeme of the ineſtimable price of our redemption, if wee will not ſticke to ſell againe our ſoules vnto ſinne, for euery beaſtly pleaſure and baſe commoditie, which Chriſt hath purchaſed at ſo high a rate? Secondly, as hereby we ſhall ſhew horrible ingratitude againſt God and our Sauiour Chriſt, ſo alſo ſhall wee be moſt iniurious to our owne ſoules, ſeeing we can neuer attaine vnto any true aſſurance of our redemption, till wee find our ſelues freed in ſome meaſure from the power of ſinne, and ſanctified by Gods Spirit: for the Lord who is truth it ſelfe hath ſaid it, and if this be not enough he hath ſolemnely ſworne it, that all thoſe whom hee hath redeemed out of the hands of their ſpirituall enemies, ſhall worſhip and ſerue him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of their life. And therefore as well may God ſpeake, nay, ſweare an vntruth, as thoſe may bee redeemed who liue in their ſinnes, deſtitute of all holineſſe towards God, and righteouſneſſe towardes their Neighbour.

§. Sect. 3.
A two fold end of our redemption, Gods glory and our happineſſe.

Thirdly, we are to conſider that the Lord hath redeemed vs to a twofold end: the firſt and principall is his owne glory, the ſecond which is ſubordinate vnto the other, is our ſaluation, and euerlaſting happineſſe: both which concurre in all thoſe, to whom the redemption of Chriſt is made effectuall. Now God is not glorified by redeeming ſuch as continue in their rebellion towards him, and will not by any meanes leaue the ſeruice of ſinne and Sathan, but rather in ſhewing his iuſtice and power, in puniſhing their ſinnes which they commit with greedineſſe: but he is glorified when hee mercifully deliuereth repentant ſinners, out of the bondage of ſinne and Satan, who are weary of their captiuitie, and deſire nothing more then freedome, that they may in the reſt of their liues ſerue him their Redeemer in the duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. And therefore they who liue in their ſinnes without repentance, continuing ſtill Traytors to God, and ſeruants of Sathan, can haue no aſſurance of their redemption; for the Lord hath therefore bought vs with a price, that wee ſhould glorifie him both in our bodies and ſoules. And therefore thoſe who in ſtead of letting their lights of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe ſhine cleerely before men, that their heauenly Father may be glorified, doe nothing elſe but diſhonour him by their ſinnes and wicked conuerſation, ſhew plainly that the redemption wrought by Chriſt doth not as yet appertaine vnto them.

§. *Sect.*4.
Three degrees of our redemption which alwayes concurre.

Fourthly, we are to know that the worke of our redemption wrought by Chriſt, conſiſteth of three parts or degrees; for firſt Chriſt redeemed vs by paying the price of our redemption, and thus hee is ſaid in the Scriptures to haue redeemed vs with his bloud. Secondly, hee redeemeth vs when as hee applyeth this benefit of our redemption vnto vs in particular, and doth thereby free and deliuer vs from the Deuill, Sinne and Death, ſo as wee are no longer in their bondage, ſubiect to their power & gouernment, although wee bee continually aſſaulted and often foiled by them. Thirdly, he redeemeth vs when as he perfectly freeth vs, not only from the power and gouernment, but alſo from the aſſaults and moleſtations of our ſpirituall enemies, and giueth vs eternall peace in his kingdom. The firſt was wrought immediatly by himſelfe, when as hee paid a ſufficient price for our redemption, and therby fully ſatisfied his Fathers juſtice. The ſecond he worketh by his owne Spirit, whereby he doth diſpell out of our minds & hearts the darke miſts of ignorance and infidelitie, and by the glorious light thereof doth illuminate our vnderſtandings, with the beames of true knowledge and a liuely faith, ſo that wee know, acknowledge and beleeue that Chriſt is our Sauiour and Redeemer, and are aſſured that hee hath freed vs from the bondage of our ſpirituall enemies after which aſſurance hee begetteth in vs an earneſt deſire of being more and more freed from them actually, and an holy endeauour of withſtanding all their aſſaults and tentations, whereby they labour againe to bring vs into their captiuity, and withall enableth vs with ſome meaſure of ſtrength, to withſtand and ouercome them; and reneweth and confirmeth this ſtrength receiued, when in the conflict of tentation we are weakned, and haue receiued the foile, that we may riſe vp againe and afreſh maintaine the fight. Laſtly, our Sauiour Chriſt redeemeth vs, when as he perfectly freeth and deliuereth vs from our ſpirituall enemies at his ſecond comming, when as we ſhall not onely not be ouercome nor foiled of them, but alſo not ſo much as once aſſaulted. And of this redemption our Sauiour ſpeaketh, Luke 21.28. When (ſaith hee) theſe things begin to come to paſſe, then looke vp and lift vp your heads; for your redemption draweth neere. And theſe are the three degrees of our redemption, which alwayes follow one another, for, for whomſoeuer Chriſt hath giuen himſelf as the price of their redemption, to thoſe alſo hee giueth his holy Spirit, which doth illuminate the eyes of their vnderſtanding blinded with ignorance, and ſanctifieth their will and affections, working in them a deſire and holy endeuour of ſeruing the Lord in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and of withſtanding the tentations of the fleſh, the World and the Deuill. And whomſoeuer hee thus redeemeth out of the power and gouernment of their ſpirituall enemies, thoſe hee will perfectly redeeme and deliuer from all their malicious attempts, and giue them the eternall peace of his kingdome. But thoſe who haue not their part in the ſecond degree, that is, thoſe who continue in their blind ignorance, and in the naturall pollution of their will and affections, willingly ſubjecting themſelues to the ſeruice of ſinne and Satan, and ſtubbornely withdrawing their ſtiffe neckes out of the yoke of holy obedience vnto Gods Commandements; they can neuer haue any aſſurance that Chriſt hath redeemed them by paying the price of his bloud, nor will deliuer them at his ſecond comming out of the bondage of Satan, in which they haue liued all their life time, with pleaſure and delight. For, whomſoeuer hee ranſometh with the price of his bloud, thoſe he freeth out of the gouernment of their ſpirituall enemies, Sin, Death, and the Deuill; and therefore they that ſtill liue in ſinne with pleaſure and delight, are ſtill the ſeruants of ſinne, as our Sauiour ſaith, Iohn 8.34. yea the ſeruants of Satan alſo, as the Apoſtle teacheth, 1. Iohn 3.8. For their ſeruants we are to whom we obey, whether it be of ſinne vnto death, or of obedience vnto righteouſneſſe, as it is Rom. 6. 16. and thoſe who ſtill remayne in the ſeruice and ſlauery of ſinne and Satan, haue no part in the firſt redemption, wrought by the ſhedding of his bloud, nor ſhall haue any part in the laſt redemption, at his ſecond comming to judgement.

That Chri hath redemed the wh man,

Laſtly, wee are to know that Chriſt hath redeemed the whole man, bodie and ſoule, and hath freed and deliuered euery part and facultie of them, out of the bondage of our ſpirituall enemies, that all and euery of them may performe ſeruice vnto God. For example, our vnderſtandings were captiued in the darke priſon of ignorance and blindneſſe, as appeareth, Epheſ. 4.17,18. but our Sauiour Chriſt hath redeemed vs, and hath diſpelled theſe miſts of darkneſſe with the preaching of the Goſpell, which like a glorious ſunſhine hath appeared vnto vs, and by the operation of his holy Spirit, he hath cauſed the ſcales of ignorance to fall from the eyes of our vnderſtanding, ſo that wee can ſee the myſtery of our redemption, and worke of our ſaluation wrought by him, as it is Luke 1.77,78,79. Our wils which were ſo inthralled that we could not ſo much as deſire any thing pleaſing and acceptable vnto God, as appeareth Phil. 2.13. hath our Sauiour redeemed and freed out of this ſpirituall bondage, and by the good motions of his holy Spirit doth ſo rule and encline them, that to will is preſent with vs, and we are delighted in the Law of God concerning the inner man, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of himſelfe, Rom. 7.18.22. And though the law of our members and corruptions of the fleſh, doe rebell againſt the law of our minde, leading vs captiue to the law of ſinne; yet doe we abhorre this ſin, and earneſtly deſire to be freed from it, and to ſerue the Lord in holines and righteouſneſſe; endeuouring and ſtriuing to mortifie the fleſh and the corruptions thereof, and to riſe againe to newneſſe of life. Our affections alſo were wholly corrupted and diſordered, ſo that we hated God, and loued the World, feared man, and not the Lord, truſted vpon the inferiour meanes, neuer regarding the fountaine of all goodneſſe, in a word we were giuen ouer to our owne hearts luſts, and vnto vile affections, as it is Rom.1.24.26. but by the redemption wrought by Chriſt becomming his, and being quickned and ſtrengthned by his holy Spirit, we haue crucified the fleſh with the affections and luſts thereof, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Galath. 5. 24. Laſtly; the members of our body were ſeruants to vncleanneſſe, and iniquity, to commit iniquitie. Rom. 6.19. our eyes full of adultery, our tongues forges of lies, our feet ſwift to ſhed bloud: but our Sauiour Chriſt redeeming vs hath deliuered our bodies alſo from the thraldome of ſinne and Satan, ſo as though ſinne dwell, yet it ſhall no longer raigne in our mortal bodies, that we ſhould obey the luſts thereof, as appeareth Rom.6.12. In a word, both body and ſoule were in miſerable captiuity to our ſpirituall enemies: but our Sauiour hath bought vs with a price, to the end we may gloriſie God in our bodies and in our ſpirits, for they are Gods, as it is, 1.Cor.6.20. And hath redeemed vs not with corruptible things, as ſiluer and gold from our vaine conuerſation, but with his owne moſt precious bloud, as Peter teacheth vs, 1.*Pet.*1.18,19. If therefore we are redeemed by Chriſt, then our blind vnderſtandings are inlightned by the preaching of the Goſpell, and we freed from our former ignorance: our wils which were rebellious are inclined to obedience, ſo as wee earneſtly deſire to leaue our ſinnes, and to ſerue the Lord in the duties of ſanctification, and haue an endeuour of mortifying our ſins, and riſing againe to newneſſe of life; our affections alſo are purged from their corruptions, ſo that we loue, feare, truſt in, hope, and expect all good from him, who is the fountaine of all goodneſſe; our bodies which were giuen as ſeruants vnto ſinne, are now become the ſeruants of righteouſneſſe vnto holineſſe; In a word, both in body and ſoule we are freed from ſinne, and made ſeruants vnto God. But if our vnderſtandings are ſtill blind and ignorant, our wils backward to imbrace any goodneſſe, and moſt prone vnto all euill, our affections as corrupt as euer they were, and our bodies the ready inſtruments to act all ſinne and wickedneſſe, then haue wee as yet no fruit of the redemption wrought by Chriſt. For it is not a titulary but a powerfull redemption, which indeed and truth deliuereth vs euen in this life, from our ſpirituall enemies: ſo that though they may aſſault, and grieuouſly vexe vs, yet they ſhall neuer gouerne and raigne ouer vs. And therefore whoſoeuer feel not the redemption wrought by Chriſt, powerfull in this life to free them in ſome meaſure, from the rule and juriſdiction of Sinne, Satan, the World and the Fleſh, ſhall neuer find it fruitfull and effectuall to free and deliuer them, from condemnation, Hell and deſtruction in the life to come.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of thoſe tentations which Sathan vſeth againſt the faithfull concerning their redemption.

§.Sect. 1.
That it is not repugnant to Gods iuſtice to puniſh Chriſt for vs.

WE haue ſpoken concerning thoſe tentations which Sathan ſuggeſteth into mens minds to nouriſh in them carnall ſecuritie: Now wee are to conſider of thoſe which hee vſeth to mooue men to doubting and deſperation. Firſt, therefore he obiecteth that it is a thing vnreaſonable and vtterly repugnant to Gods juſtice, that Chriſt who was innocent ſhould be puniſhed for vs who are guilty; that wee ſhould deſerue the blame, and hee ſuffer the ſtripes; that the righteous ſhould bee condemned, and the wicked acquitted; that wee who like Barrabas were cruell murtherers & wicked Sinners ſhould be let looſe, & the immaculate Lambe of God in whom there was no fault ſhould be deliuered vp to be crucified. For what were this but to make the juſt God like vnjuſt Pilate? what were this, but to denie his owne Word, hauing ſaid that the righteous ſhould liue in his righteouſnes, and the Sinner die in his iniquitie? To which I anſwere, firſt, that it would not indeed haue ſtood with Gods juſtice, to haue puniſhed Chriſt as he was innocent and righteous, nor to haue acquitted and abſolued vs who were vnrighteous and wicked, but hee puniſhed Chriſt in reſpect that he had taken vpon him the ſins of all the faithfull, and abſolueth vs as wee are freed from our ſins, and clothed with his righteouſneſſe and obedience. Hee puniſhed Chriſt, not as he was moſt juſt and free from ſinne, but as he was our ſuretie who had taken vpon him to diſcharge our debt, and to ſatisfie for our ſins. And thus the Creditor may juſtly require his debt of the ſuretie, though in reſpect of himſelfe hee owed him nothing; and thus hee may, yea ought to releaſe the principall, when the ſuretie hath already diſcharged the debt. Secondly, I anſwere that it had beene injuſtice in God, if hee had forced our Sauiour Chriſt, who was juſt and innocent, to vndergoe the puniſhments which were due vnto vs, who were Malefactors & offenders; for this were to condemne the righteous, and to juſtifie the wicked: but our Sauiour Chriſt of his owne free accord, did voluntarily offer himſelfe to ſtand in our place, and to diſcharge that debt which we owed, and to make ſatisfaction to his Father, by ſuffering that puniſhment which we had deſerued. And this appeareth, Iohn 10.18. where our Sauiour ſaith, that no man tooke his life from him, but that hee layed it downe of himſelfe. And the Apoſtle telleth vs that *hee humbled himſelfe, and became obedient vnto death, Phil.*2.8. In which reſpect, his death is called a ſacrifice or free oblation, which he voluntarily offered vnto

Iohn 10.18.

Heb 9.14.

his Father, Heb.9.14. And therefore the Lord might juſtly take that which Chriſt freely gaue, yea, it had beene cruelty and injuſtice if hee ſhould haue refuſed the payment of ſuch a ſufficient ſurety, when he voluntarily offered it for our diſcharge, chuſing rather ſtill to haue kept vs in priſon, bound in the chaines of euerlaſting death. Laſtly, there might haue beene ſome ſhew of rigour and injuſtice, if Chriſt the innocent had bin ouer-whelmed, in ſuffering the puniſhments which were due vnto vs, who were the offenders; but being not only man which ſuffered but God alſo, and therefore of infinite power and majeſtie, hee was able to pay our great debt, and yet is neuer the poorer; to ſuffer death and ouercome it by ſuffering, and by yeelding a while to the malice of our ſpirituall enemies, he finally vanquiſhed and gloriouſly triumphed ouer them all. And therefore it was not injuſtice in God to ſuffer our Sauiour Chriſt, to vndergoe that which hee was ſure to ouercome; but vnſpeakable mercy towards vs, in ſending his Sonne to pay that debt which wee could neuer haue diſcharged, and to ſuffer puniſhments for a time, which otherwiſe wee ſhould haue endured for euer. By this then it appeareth, that God might juſtly receiue the price of our redemption, which Chriſt freely offered. But ſeeing by the lawes of redemption there is required, not onely that the Redeemer pay a price or ranſome, but alſo that hee haue right to that which he doth redeeme, it may be demanded what right our Sauiour had ouer vs, that hee ſhould pay this price for vs? I anſwere, that as our Sauiour Chriſt conſiſteth of two natures, ſo alſo hee had a twofold right vnto vs; for as he was God, he had the right of propriety, and was our true owner, hee was our Lord, and therefore had right to redeeme his owne ſeruants; hee was our King, and therefore had right to redeeme vs who were his ſubjects; yea, hee was our Creatour, and therefore hee had more right then any Lord or King to redeeme vs who were his creatures; as he was a man he was our kinſman, fleſh of our fleſh, and bone of our bone; yea hee was our brother, as it is Heb.2.11,12. and Iohn 20.17. and therefore had alſo the right of propinquitie, which was required by the Law of Redemption, Leuit.25.25.

§. Sect. 2.
That Chriſt hath offered a ſufficient price for our redemption.
Acts 20.28.

Secondly, Satan may object that the death of Chriſt is not a ſufficient price for our Redemption; for how could the death of one, be a ſufficient ſatisfaction for the ſinne of all the faithfull, ſeeing euery one by their innumerable ſinnes, had deſerued innumerable deaths. And how could the temporary and ſhort puniſhment which Chriſt indured, free vs all that belieue frõ the euerlaſting puniſhments of Hell fire, ſeeing the juſtice of God requireth that there ſhould bee ſome proportion, betweene the puniſhment which wee deſerued, and the ſatisfaction which Chriſt made and offered? I anſwere, that Chriſt who ſuffered for vs, was not man only but God alſo; in which reſpect it is ſaid, that God purchaſed his Church with his bloud; not that God hath bloud, but becauſe he that ſhed his bloud, was not only man but alſo God; and therefore his ſhort ſufferings were of more worth, vertue and value, then the euerlaſting ſufferings of all the World; for they ſhould euer haue ſuffered, but could thereby neuer haue ſatiſfied, becauſe our ſins deſerued infinite puniſhments, in that wee had by them offended the infinite juſtice and Majeſtie of God; which becauſe finite creatures could not beare, Gods juſtice required that they ſhould be infinite in time and euerlaſting, ſeeing they could not be infinite in meaſure. But the ſufferings of Chriſt, though ſhort in time, yet were they infinite in value, worth and merit, becauſe hee was not man alone, but God alſo; and therefore at once he put away ſin by the ſacrifice of himſelfe, and by his owne oblation hee tooke away the ſinnes of many, as it is Heb.9.26,28. As therefore Adams ſinne, which in it ſelfe was finite, as proceeding from a finite creature, notwithſtanding deſerued infinite puniſhment, becauſe God whom by his ſin he offended was infinite; ſo contrariwiſe Chriſts ſufferings were but of ſhort continuance in reſpect of time, but yet of infinite merit and worth, becauſe hee that ſuffered was not man alone, but alſo God, and therefore infinite. Neither did Gods juſtice primarily require eternitie in our ſufferings but ful payment of our debt; which becauſe we were vnable to doe in any time our debt being infinite, therefore in the ſecond place it exacted that becauſe they could not bee equiualent in quantitie; they ſhould be in time. But our Sauiour paid our whole debt at once, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, and thereby more fully ſatisfied Gods juſtice than all the World could haue done though they ſhould haue ſuffered euerlaſting puniſhment, ſeeing the debt would haue beene euer in paying, but neuer fully ſatisfied. Euen as an able ſuretie ſhould better ſatisfie a Creditour, who would at once wholy pay the debt, of a 1000. pound, then the debter that ſhould be euer in paying of it in his whole life, but bee neuer able wholly to diſcharge it.

§. Sect.
That Ch
death and rits belong euery par
lar bele

Laſtly, the tempter will object that Chriſts death and merits, though they be in themſelues a ſufficient price for our redemption, yet they doe not belong vnto vs, neither will be effectuall for our ſaluation. Let it be granted (will he ſay) that the death and merits of Chriſt are ſufficient for the ſaluation of all: yet what comfort canſt thou receiue hereby, ſeeing thou canſt haue no aſſurance that they belong vnto thee, or will be effectuall for thy redemption. For either he hath redeemed all, or but ſome only; if all, then ſome who are redeemed may periſh notwithſtanding, ſeeing the Scriptures ſhew that the greater part of the world are the children of deſtruction, and it is not vnlikely but that thou art in the greateſt number. But if he haue redeemed ſome only, how canſt thou conclude that thou art one of theſe whom hee hath redeemed, ſeeing out of meere particular propoſitions thou canſt not inferre any ſound conſequence? For example, if thou doeſt thus conclude, ſome men are redeemed by Chriſt, but I am a man, therefore I am redeemed: thou mighteſt as well reaſon thus. Some men are Kings, but I am a man, therefore I am a King. To this we muſt anſwere, that though Chriſt hath only redeemed ſome, yet we may after a more ſound manner conclude that we are in this number, not vſing the helpe of Sathans abſurd fallations; but inferring our concluſion out of generall propoſitions grounded vpon Gods Word after this manner; Whoſoeuer beleeue in Chriſt, thoſe he hath redeemed and will ſaue; for this is the voice and promiſe of Chriſt in the Goſpell: but I (may euery faithfull man ſay) doe truly beleeue in Chriſt; and therefore I am redeemed and ſhall eternally bee ſaued.

§. Sect. 4. atans tentations againſt the particular application of Chriſts merits anſwered. Epheſ.5.25,27.

But againſt this particular application of Chriſt and his merits vnto vs, the tempter vrgeth diuers obiections; firſt, that Chriſt only ſaueth and redeemeth his own body which is his Church, and that this his Church is glorious without ſpot or wrinkle, holy and vnblameable, as it is Epheſ.5.25,27. and therefore (will he ſay) what hope of redemption or ſaluation canſt thou haue, who art defiled not only with originall corruption, but alſo with innumerable actuall tranſgreſſions? To this wee muſt anſwere that the Apoſtle ſaith not, that the Church which Chriſt redeemeth and ſaueth, is now alreadie without ſpot or wrinkle; but that he hath by giuing himſelfe for it, redeemed it, that hereby he might waſh & clenſe it from all ſpots, and might make it holy and without blame; either by his merits and righteouſneſſe imputed vnto it, which is done in this life; or by freeing it altogether from corruptions, and the filthy ſpots of ſin, wherewith naturally it is defiled; which is begun in this life, but ſhall not be perfected vntill the life to come.

Our falling into ſinne, no reaſon to proue that we are not redeemed. Col.1.14.

Secondly, he obiecteth, that if Chriſt had redeemed vs out of the thraldome of ſinne, then wee ſhould not ſtill be ouercome thereby, nor ſo often, will we nill we, tranſgreſſe Gods Commandements. To which wee are to anſwere, that our Sauiour Chriſt hath deliuered vs from our ſins; firſt in regard that for his merits and ſatisfaction ſake, the Lord hath pardoned and remitted them, ſo as they ſhall neuer be imputed vnto vs, nor ariſe vp in judgement to our condemnation, neither in this world nor in the world to come. Secondly, he doth deliuer vs from our ſinnes, whileſt he doth giue vnto vs his holy Spirit, whereby our ſinnes are in ſome meaſure mortified, and the ſtrength of them abated, ſo that they doe not raigne and rule in vs as in former times, although we cannot wholly expell them from dwelling in vs, according to that Rom.6.12. Sinne ſhall not raigne in your mortall body that you ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof. And though we cannot vtterly ſubdue this Cananitiſh brood of our corruptions, but that ſtill whileſt wee continue in this life, they are as thornes in our ſides, alwayes vexing and grieuing vs: yet by the helpe of Gods Spirit aſſiſting vs, we weaken their force, abate their courage, and make them become tributaries. And if at any time they rebell, we curbe them in, and giue them the ouerthrow; yea, though ſometimes they gaine ground, and giue vs the foile, yet wee riſe againe by vnfained repentance, and recouer our ſelues, being aſſiſted with the freſh ſupply of Gods Spirit, till at laſt by death we obtaine a finall victorie.

Rom.6.12.

§. Sect. 5. That our obedience to the Law, prooueth not that wee are not redeemed. Gal.3.13.

Thirdly, he obiecteth that we are ſtill vnder the Law, and tied to the obedience therof, and therfore Chriſt hath not freed vs from it. I anſwere, that though Chriſt hath not freed vs from the obedience of the Law, yet hee hath freed vs from the curſe and malediction, as it is Gal.3.13. ſo as although wee doe not perfome it in that exact manner and meaſure which God requireth, yet our tranſgreſſion ſhall not be imputed vnto vs; for he hath perfectly fulfilled the Law for vs, that his righteouſneſſe might become our righteouſneſſe, and he hath ſuffered death, that by his bloud hee might waſh away our ſins. And thus when the Law was impoſſible to be performed, by reaſon of the weaknes and corruptions of our fleſh, the Lord ſent his Sonne in the ſimilitude of ſinfull fleſh, and for ſinne condemned ſinne in the fleſh, that the righteouſneſſe of the Law might be fulfilled in vs, as it is Rom.8.3,4. Moreouer, we are not now tied to performe obedience to the Law, to the end that thereby we may be juſtified, nor yet ſhall we for the imperfections of this our obedience be in danger of condemnation, but now onely it is a meanes before our conuerſion to bring vs to Chriſt, by ſhewing vnto vs our ſinnes and inſufficiencie in our ſelues, and after our conuerſion it ſerueth for a rule or ſquare, according to which wee are to frame our liues in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, that ſo wee may ſhew our thankfulnes vnto our heauenly Father for his ineſtimable benefits, by glorifying his Name in a godly life. And becauſe this alſo is bitter and vnpleaſant to fleſh and bloud, therefore the Lord hath alſo granted and giuen vnto vs his holy Spirit, which mortifieth our corruptions, ons, whereby we are made leſſe prone vnto ſinne; and quickeneth vs in the inner man, inabling vs to performe obedience in ſome meaſure to the Law of God, with alacritie and cheerefulneſſe, ſo that now his commandements are not grieuous vnto vs, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1.Iohn 5.3. but his yoke which ſo much galled vs while wee were rebellious and like vntamed Oxen, is now become eaſie, as our Sauiour telleth vs, Matth. 11.30.

§. Sect. 6.
That God is not angry with the faithfull, though he ſeemeth to frowne vpon them.

Fourthly, the tempter may object to the weak conſcience which laboureth vnder the burthen of ſin, that our Sauiour Chriſt hath not redeemed vs from the anger of God due for ſin, ſeeing we ſtill ſee his frowning countenance, and apprehend the ſcorching heat of his wrath inflamed againſt vs: but let all know, that if they truly beleeue in Chriſt, and only rely themſelues vpon this their Mediatour, if their ſins paſt grieue them, and they purpoſe for the time to come, to labour that they may forſake them; then they are reconciled vnto God by Chriſt, and in him hee is become their louing and gracious Father, as the Apoſtle telleth vs, *Col.*1.20,21. Let not ſuch therefore be diſcouraged, if God ſeeme to frowne vpon them for a time, for he will not frowne for euer, nor alwayes retaine his anger, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, *Pſal.*103.9. Yea in truth hee is not angry with vs at all as a Iudge to puniſh, but as a Father to correct and amend vs: and if wee will ſpeake properly, he alwayes loueth and delighteth in vs. For as hee is well pleaſed with Chriſt our head, ſo is hee alwayes well pleaſed with vs in him, as being members of his body: notwithſtanding as a tender Father when his Sonne offendeth, maketh ſemblance as though his Wrath were kindled, to the end that hee may bee carefull in the time to come, to auoide the like fault, and to amend: ſo the Lord who is our gracious Father, ſeemeth oftentimes to bee grieuouſly diſpleaſed with his children when they haue ſinned againſt him, hiding from them his amiable louing countenance, and ſhewing nothing but ſignes of wrath, not that he hath in truth caſt them out of his loue and fauour; (for hee neuer falleth out with thoſe whom Chriſt hath reconciled vnto him, neither can hee ceaſe to loue the members of Chriſt, nor Chriſts members ceaſe to be his members after they are once ingrafted into his bodie by his holy Spirit and a liuely faith) only like a wiſe Father he frowneth vpon them, and ſeemeth angry, to make them in the time to come forſake their ſinnes, whereby they haue incurred his diſpleaſure.

§. Sect. 7.
That though Satan tempt vs, yet we may be aſſured that Fiftly, the tempter will object that we are not freed and deliuered out of his power and juriſdiction, ſeeing he doth often aſſault and ouercome vs with his tentations, and leadeth vs captiue faſt bound in the fetters of ſin. To which wee muſt anſwere, that our Sauiour Chriſt by his death hath deſtroyed him that had the power of death, that is the Deuill; that he might deliuer all them, which for feare of death were all their life time ſubiect to bondage, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, *Heb.*2.14, 15. That God hath deliuered vs from the power of darkneſſe, and hath tranſlated vs into the kingdome of his deare Sonne, as it is *Col.*1.13. That our Redeemer Ieſus *Chriſt hath ſpoyled the principalities and powers, and hath made a ſhew of them openly, and hath triumphed ouer them vpon his Croſſe, and that not only for himſelfe, but for all his members, Col.*2.15. That hee hath now broken the Serpents head, ſo that well may hee hiſſe againſt vs, but yet hee cannot ſting vs. And whereas heretofore he was the Prince of the World, who did rule and gouerne vs at his pleaſure, and according to his will, now hee is caſt out by the Prince of Princes, as it is Iohn 12.31. and our Sauiour Chriſt hath eſtabliſhed his Kingdome in vs, ruling and gouerning vs with the ſcepter of his Word and holy Spirit. Whereas hee was the ſtrong man who quietly kept his poſſeſſion in vs, our Sauiour Chriſt who is ſtronger then hee, hath ſpoiled him of his armour wherein hee truſted, and hath thruſt him out of his poſſeſſion. Whereas he was a cruell Tyrant who held vs faſt bound in his captiuitie, our Sauiour Chriſt hath redeemed vs out of his thraldome, ſo as now hee cannot hurt vs though hee neuer ceaſeth to aſſault vs. And though hee goeth like a roring Lion ſeeking whom he may deuoure, yet now we are enabled by Gods Spirit to reſiſt him ſtedfaſtly in the faith, and ſo armed with the coat-armour of Gods ſpirituall graces, that though he may with the violence of his aſſaults foile vs, yet ſhall he neuer be able to ouercome vs. God doth indeed ſuffer this wicked enemy to make warre againſt euen his deareſt children, and that ſometimes after a ſtrange and extraordinary manner, not that he will giue them ouer againe vnto his thraldome, out of which he hath purchaſed them with ſo deare a price, but partly to driue them hereby to flie vnto him by earneſt and effectual prayer, imploring his aide againſt Satans crueltie, and that hauing receiued it, they may aſcribe the whole glory of the victory to him alone, by whoſe ſtrength they haue ouercome; and partly to ſhew vnto thē their own weaknes, that they may not relie nor reſt vpon it. Somtimes hee ſuffereth them to be thus aſſaulted, that his power may bee magnified in their weakneſſe; and ſometimes that the graces which hee hath beſtowed vpon them, may ſhine glorioſly to all the World. perience of Gods loue & power and fatherly aſſiſtance; and ſometimes that they may the more ſtrengthen themſelues in his ſpirituall graces, and confirme them more fully in the aſſurance of his loue and their ſaluation. For as a Citie which hath once beene beſieged and not ſacked, will euer after be more ſtrong to hold out if it be aſſaulted by the like danger, becauſe the Citizens will carefully fortifie their walls and increaſe their bulwarks; and as he who hath beene once robbed by theeues, will euer after ride better prouided to make reſiſtance, that he doe not againe fall into their hands; ſo thoſe who are beſieged and aſſaulted by their ſpirituall enemies, will euer after more carefully arme themſelues againſt them with the graces of Gods Spirit, that they may not be ouercome nor foiled by them. Wee know that whileſt men quietly enjoy their poſſeſſions and inheritance they reſt ſecure, keeping their writings in a boxe without euer looking on them from yeere to yeere, but when their title and right is called into queſtion, & ſome man labours to thruſt them out of their poſſeſſion, then they peruſe their Writings and Deeds with all diligence: and not ſatisfied with their owne judgement they reſort to skilfull Lawyers, crauing their counſell how they may mayntaine their right, and anſwere the plea which their aduerſarie makes againſt them. Whereby oftentimes it commeth to paſſe that they make their title not only much more ſtrong in it ſelfe, but alſo more cleere and euident vnto all others, ſo that afterwards none dare once aduenture to trouble them againe, or call their right into queſtion: ſo whileſt we neuer doubt of our heauenly inheritance we reſt ſecure, and let the Booke of God which is our beſt Deed and Euidence, lie vnder our cupboords till it mould for want of vſe; but when Satan by his tentations doth call our title into queſtion, and pleads that wee haue no right to Gods Kingdome, then doe wee moſt carefully and diligently peruſe the Booke of God, then doe wee goe vnto Gods Miniſters, deſiring their counſell how wee may anſwere Satans plea and cleere our title, then doe wee moſt carefully vſe all good meanes to increaſe our knowledge, that therby wee may throughly informe our ſelues of our right, and confirme our aſſurance againſt all cauils and objections. And hereby it commeth to paſſe, that thoſe who before had very weake titles to their heauenly inheritance, whileſt they remained wretchleſſe & ſecure, and had but ſlender aſſurance euer to enjoy it; now, by their care, paines and diligence, haue ſo confirmed it vnto themſelues, and ſo cleered it to all the World, that Sathan dare neuer after call it into queſtion, vnleſſe he do it (like many contentious men in theſe daies) rather that hee may trouble and vexe them with a tedious ſuit, then for any hope of preuailing in the end. And thus you ſee that Chriſt hath redeemed all the faithfull out of Satans thraldome, notwithſtanding that he ſtill aſſaulteth them with his tentations, neither doth hee hereby ouercome them and againe inthrall them in his captiuitie, but rather by Gods bleſſing they ſerue to ſtrengthen them in the ſpirituall graces of Gods Spirit, and to confirme them in the full aſſurance of their ſaluation.

§. Sect. 8. That though we die, yet we are redeemed from death.

Sixtly, the tempter will object that wee ſtill die, and therefore are not redeemed and deliuered out of the bondage of death. To which we may anſwere, that Gods juſt ſentence once denounced could not be reuoked, Ge.3.19. Duſt thou art & into duſt thou ſhalt returne; & therfore the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb.9.27. It is appointed vnto all men that they ſhall once die. But as Ahaſhuerus though hee could not reuoke the ſentence of death againſt the Iewes after it was once pronounced, becauſe it was a Decree of the Medes & Perſians which might not be altered; yet at Heſters ſuit ſent out another Decree, whereby hee armed and ſtrengthened the Iewes againſt their enemies, to the end they might reſiſt, ouercome and deſtroy them: ſo the Lord hauing pronounced the ſentence of death againſt all the ſonnes of Adam, could not reuoke his Decree and Sentence, as being farre more vnchangeable then the Decree of the Medes and Perſians, yet at the ſuit of our Sauiour Chriſt hee made another Decree, whereby we might be armed againſt our enemy Death, and ouercome him. So that now though we die, yet are wee not ſubject vnto death, neither ſhall we be held vnder the dominion thereof; though we are not wholly exempted from death, yet now the nature thereof is quite altered. For heretofore it was vnconquerable, but now eaſily ouercome; heretofore it was a curſe for ſinne, but now turned into an exceeding bleſſing, as deriuing vnto vs many benefits. For firſt it freeth vs from all our afflictions, with which in this life wee are ſo much moleſted; it deliuereth vs from the irkſome company of prophane wicked men, who grieue the very ſoules of the righteous, and make them to cry out with Dauid, Woe is me that I remaine in Meſhech, and dwell in the tents of Kedar; it wholly freeth vs from ſinne, and purgeth away thoſe corruptions which in this life cleaue ſo faſt vnto vs. So that though heretofore there was great amitie betweene ſinne and death, (for ſinne was the only cauſe which inlarged deaths dominions, and made all the World to become his tributaries,) yet now they are at oddes, and death now is the meanes to free vs out of ſins thraldome and vtterly to deſtroy it. And thus hath the viper ſinne, bred a young one which eateth out it owne belly; for ſinne brought forth death, and death deſtroyed ſinne: had it not beene

*Gen.*3.19.
*Heb.*9.27.
*Heſt.*8.
*Pſal.*120.5.

for ſinne, death had neuer entred into the world, and were it not for death, ſin would neuer goe out of the World. Moreouer, by death wee obtaine a full and perfect victorie ouer the Fleſh, the World, and the Deuill; for whereas in this life we are in a continuall fight, and ſometimes Ameleck, ſometime Iſrael hath the vpper hand: death puts an end to this battell, and giueth vs full victory ouer the Fleſh, the World, and the Deuill; ſo as they ſhall neuer afterwards not onely not preuaile, but not ſo much as aſſault or trouble vs. And thus doth euery Chriſtian, with Dauid cut off Goliahs head with his owne ſword; for Death was the weapon which Satan vſed to deſtroy vs, and with this weapon wee giue Satan a finall ouerthrow. Laſtly, Death which heretofore was the high way to Hell and deſtruction, is now become the ready entrance into Gods Kingdome, and like a foule gate whereby wee enter into a faire Palace; heretofore it was a fiery Serpent which by ſtinging killed and deſtroyed vs, but now our Sauiour hauing pulled out the ſting, it is become ſo harmeleſſe that wee may ſafely put it into our boſome, without receiuing any hurt. And in this reſpect it may not vnfitly bee compared to the brazen Serpent, which looked like other Serpents, but in ſtead of wounding it preſently cured, in ſtead of killing it preſerued life; ſo though death retaine his former ſhape, ſo that wee are afraid and ready to flee from it, yet it is but in outward appearance; for in ſtead of an euer liuing death, it giueth vs poſſeſſion of a neuer dying life and endleſſe happines. Heretofore it was the Deuils Sergeant to arreſt and carry vs without baile, into the perpetuall priſon of vtter darkneſſe; but now it is the Lords Gentleman vſher to conduct and place vs in the Kingdome of Heauen. Heretofore it was like the Deuils cart wherein we were carried to execution; but now it is like Elias fiery Chariot whereby wee mount vp into Heauen. And this Paul ſheweth. 2.Corinth.5.1. Wee know (ſaith hee) that if the earthly houſe of this tabernacle be deſtroyed, we haue a building giuen vs of God, a houſe not made with hands, but eternall in the Heauens. Why therefore ſhould we feare, yea, why ſhould we not deſire death, ſeeing now it is vnto vs aduantage? Why ſhould we not deſire to be diſſolued and to be with Chriſt, ſeeing that is beſt of all? For now wee may ſay, not that we die, but that wee depart and goe to our Father, as our Sauiour ſpeaketh, Iohn 8.21. But yet we muſt take heed that wee doe not imagine, that death in it owne nature worketh and procureth for vs theſe great benefits; for in it ſelfe this temporary death is but a ſtep to euerlaſting death, and as it were a fearefull Prologue to a more fearefull Tragedie. But our Sauiour Chriſt it is alone who hath gathered ſome Honey out of this pernicious poyſon, and by mingling the fleſh of this venemous Serpent with his owne moſt precious bloud, he hath made thereof a holeſome Triacle.

And thus haue I proued, notwithſtanding Satans tentations and objections, that Chriſt hath perfectly redeemed vs, out of the hands of all our ſpirituall enemies; now in the laſt place Satan ſuggeſteth, that though Chriſt hath once redeemed vs, yet we may come into their bondage againe; and then there is no hope of a ſecond redemption. But we are to know that our Redeemer is God Omnipotent, whoſe power all the power of Hell cannot withſtand; & therefore nothing is able to pluck vs out of his hand, as himſelfe ſpeaketh. Iohn 10.28. neither are we to thinke, that he wil eaſily & willingly loſe them, which he ſo intirely loues that he ſpared not his precious bloud, but freely gaue it as a price of their redemption. And therefore, as he is able, perfectly to ſaue all thoſe who come vnto God by him; becauſe he euer liueth to make interceſſion for them, as it is Heb.7.25. ſo we need not doubt of his will, ſeeing hee hath redeemed vs with ſo deare a price: For if he would not loſe vs when wee were his enemies, much leſſe will he ſuffer vs to periſh when wee are become his ſubjects, yea his Spouſe, nay, members of his owne body. And therefore we may aſſure our ſelues that if our Sauiour, our Spouſe and Head hath once redeemed vs, then he hath alſo obtained eternall redemption for vs, as the Apoſtle affirmeth, Heb.9.12. So that though the Deuill rage like a roaring Lion, and the fleſh betray vs and harbour whole legions of vnlawfull luſts which fight againſt our ſoules, and the world ſometime frowne, and ſometime fawne, and all of them by all meanes labour to deſtroy vs; yet our Omnipotent Redeemer, our louing and carefull Spouſe and Head, will not ſuffer vs to be loſt whom hee hath ſo dearely bought, but will giue vs the poſſeſſion and fruition of that heauenly inheritance, and thoſe vnſpeakable joyes which he with his own moſt precious bloud hath purchaſed for vs.

CHAP. XIX.

Of our Vocation.

§. Sect.
Of Calling,
what it is,
the kinds thereof.

AND thus much concerning our Redemption; the next cauſe of our ſaluation is our vocation: for, whomſoeuer the Lord hath elected vnto euerlaſting life, thoſe alſo hee hath redeemed out of the hands of their ſpirituall enemies; and whom he hath redeemed, thoſe in his good time he effectually calleth, and applyeth this great benefit of their Redemption vnto them, by ſeparating them from the World, and ingrafting them into the body of our cal-of Chriſt, whereby they become his, and he with all his benefits becommeth theirs. In ſpeaking hereof, I will ſhew firſt what this calling is, and afterwards anſwere Satans tentations, whereby hee laboureth to make it fruſtrate and vnprofitable vnto vs. For the firſt, our vocation or calling is an effect of Gods election, whereby our Sauiour Chriſt, God and Man, doth by his Kingly authority call and inuite vs whileſt wee liue here, vnto the participation and imbracing of the ineſtimable benefit of our Redemption, that thereby we may attain vnto euerlaſting life. And thus we are called ſometimes ſooner, & ſometimes later, when it ſeemeth good vnto the Lord: as appeareth in the Parable of the Houſhoulder, who hired labourers into his Vineyard, ſome at the dawning of the day, others at the third, ſixth, and ninth houre, others at the eleuenth houre, not long before Sun-ſetting, as it is, Matth. 20. Moreouer, this our calling, is either common and generall, or elſe ſpeciall and effectuall. The generall calling is, whereby all indifferently, good and bad, elect and reprobate, are outwardly inuited by the Miniſtery of the Goſpel, to imbrace the benefit of our redemption wrought by Chriſt: which outward calling is vneffectuall to the wicked and reprobates, becauſe being inuited to the ſupper of the King they refuſe to come, that is, they either altogether neglect the hearing of the heauenly ambaſſage of the Goſpell, or elſe contemne thoſe ineſtimable benefits which are therein offered, preferring before them Honours, Riches and Pleaſures of this life; whereby it commeth to paſſe, that the Word of God findeth no place in their hearts, but vaniſheth away, leauing nothing behind it but the ſauour of death, to their more deepe condemnation.

Sect. 2. our ef- all calling

The ſpeciall and effectuall calling is, that which is proper to Gods elect, when as with the outward Miniſterie of the Word, wherein grace and ſaluation is offered to all beleeuers, our Sauiour Chriſt ioyneth the inward operation of his holy Spirit; which openeth our deafe eares, enlighteneth our blind vnderſtandings, and ſoftneth and ſanctifieth our hard and corrupt hearts, ſo as we attentiuely heare, truly vnderſtand, and by a liuely faith apply, the doctrine of grace and ſaluation which is preached vnto vs: whereby alſo wee are ſeparated from the World, giuen to Chriſt and he to vs, wherevpon followeth that neere vnion, whereby we being ingrafted into his body, myſtically doe become his members, and he our Head. That this effectuall calling is proper to thoſe that are elected and ſhall be ſaued, it appeareth by the Parable of the Supper, where many, outwardly inuited to the great Supper of the King, refuſe to come, and therefore are excluded from the Marriage. Matth. 22. 3,8. And Rom. 8.30. the Apoſtle ſaith, that whom he did predeſtinate, them alſo he called, and theſe alſo he iuſtifieth. So Acts 13.48 it is ſaid, that as many as were ordained to euerlaſting life, beleeued at the preaching of Paul and Barnabas, and therefore theſe only were effectually called. And Iohn 6.45. our Sauiour ſaith, that euery one who hath heard and hath learned of the Father, commeth vnto him. So that, outward hearing is not ſufficient to bring vs to Chriſt, vnleſſe the Father alſo inwardly inſtruct vs with his holy Spirit, opening our deafe eares, enlightning our blind vnderſtandings, enclining our wils, & ſanctifying our affections, that wee may attentiuely heare, truly vnderſtand, and heartily imbrace the Goſpell preached vnto vs. And this appeareth in the example of Lydia, Acts 16.14. whoſe heart the Lord is ſaid to haue opened, that ſhee might attend vnto the things which Paul ſpake, and be conuerted: by which ſpeech the Holy Ghoſt implyeth thus much, that her heart was (as it were) cloſe ſhut, and faſt locked vp, ſo as ſhe could not receiue the Word preached, till the Lord had opened it by the inward operation of his holy Spirit. Which matter needs not ſeeme ſtrange vnto vs, ſeeing it is continually confirmed by our owne experience: for how comes it to paſſe that many amongſt vs, heare the Word preached from day to day, and yeare to yeare, and yet are neuer the neerer, but ſtill remaine as ignorant in their minds, as peruerſe in their wils, as corrupt in their affections, as prophane in their liues as euer they were? On the otherſide, how happeneth it that ſome attentiuely heare Gods Word, treaſure it vp in their memories, and thereby haue their minds inlightned with the knowledge of God, their wils inclined to holines and righteouſneſſe, their affections ſanctified, their liues reformed? Surely becauſe the Lord doth ioyne in theſe, the inward operation of his Spirit, with the outward Miniſtery of his Word, making it effectuall for their true conuerſion; whereas hee leaueth the other to their owne corrupt affections and hardneſſe of heart.

And thus it appeareth that the elect onely are effectually called: as for the wicked and reprobate, though they heare the outward preaching of the Word, by which they are inuited vnto Chriſt; yet they ſtubbornly refuſe to come vnto him, and reject all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell, to their eternall perdition; becauſe the Lord leaueth them to their owne luſts and corruptions, not opening their hard hearts, nor inclining their peruerſe wils, nor ſanctifying their corrupt affections.

§. Sect. 3. Of the parts of effectuall calling, and

In the next place let vs conſider, the parts of our effectuall calling; the firſt is our ſeparation from the World, of which in former time we were Citizens & true members, that from first, of our ſeparation from the world.

from henceforth wee ſhould bee of Gods houſhold and family: for naturally wee are meere worldlings, dead in our ſins, and to euery good worke reprobate, liuing without God and ſeruing Satan, the world, and the corrupt luſts of our fleſh, vntill it pleaſe the Lord to make choice of vs among many other, calling and ſeparating vs from this corrupt maſſe of mankind, that hee may make vs ſubiects firſt of his Kingdome of grace, and afterwards of his Kingdome of glory. Of this our Sauiour ſpeaketh, Iohn 15.19. If you were of the world, the world would loue his owne; but becauſe you are not of the world, but I haue choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. And the Apoſtle ſaith, that after our calling and conuerſion, we are no more ſtrangers and forreiners, but Citizens with the Saints, and of the houſhold of God. Now the Lord maketh his choiſe of vs before others, not for any reſpect of worthineſſe or excellencie in vs more then in them, but of his meere mercie, vndeſerued grace, and free good will; neither doth hee therefore intertaine vs into his Church and Family, becauſe wee are alreadie, or becauſe hee knoweth wee will be hereafter holy and righteous; but hauing freely called vs without any our deſerts, he doth alſo of his owne vndeſerued loue giue vs his holy Spirit, whereby wee are purged from our corruptions, ſanctified, and raiſed vp from the death of ſinne to newneſſe of life; ſo that our holines is not a cauſe of our calling, but Gods election and calling is a cauſe of our holineſſe. And this appeareth both by teſtimonies of Scripture and examples. For the firſt, the Lord profeſſeth, Eſay 65.1. that he offered himſelfe to thoſe that asked not after him, and was found of them that ſought him not, &c. The Apoſtle, affirmeth that euen thoſe who are the Church and people of God, were before their calling and conuerſion, not ſicke onely, but euen dead in their ſinnes, in which they walked according to the courſe of the world; that they were by nature the children of wrath as well as others, and that they were without Chriſt, aliants from the Common-wealth of Iſrael, ſtrangers from the couenant of promiſe, and had no hope, and were without God in the world. So 1.Cor. 6.11. hee ſaith, that thoſe who were now ſanctified and juſtified, were in time paſt fornicators, idolaters, adulterers, wantons, buggerers, &c. The Apoſtle Peter likewiſe writing to the Church of Chriſt, ſaith both of himſelfe and them alſo, that they had ſpent the time paſt before their conuerſion, after the luſt of the Gentiles, walking in wantonneſſe, luſt, drunkenneſſe, gluttonie, and in abominable idolatries, 1.*Pet.*4.3. And the Prophet Eſay ſaith, that we all were wandring ſheepe, vntill the Lord gathered vs into his ſheepfold. So that it was ſo farre off, that wee ſhould deſerue any grace or mercie at Gods hand that in his juſtice he might rather haue conſumed vs as his enemies, then called vs to be his Church and people. This alſo is plaine in the examples ſpecified in the Booke of God: for, what excellencie or worthineſſe was in Abraham who before his calling was an idolater? or in Rahab who had ſpent her time in luſt and filthines? or in Manaſſes who was a cruell idolater, a murtherer, a ſorcerer? or in Matthew who was a Publican? or in Paul who was a bloudie perſecutor? or in the thiefe, who had ſpent his life in all outrage and wickedneſſe? what excellencie or deſert was in any of vs, who haue not ſo much as a thought, or inclination to any good thing, or any power to performe it? And therefore we muſt conclude with the Apoſtle, that wee are called with an holy calling, not according to our workes, but according to his owne purpoſe of grace, &c. 2.*Tim.*1.9.

The ſecond part of effectuall calling, is that reciprocall donation whereby God the Father giueth Chriſt Ieſus his onely begotten Sonne, truly and effectually to all his elect, to be their Head, Redeemer, and Sauiour; & alſo whereby he giueth his elect vnto Chriſt to become his members, that ſo they may be ſaued and redeemed by him. Whereupon all Gods elect may truly ſay, that this Chriſt Ieſus, God and Man, is mine Head, my Sauiour and Redeemer; and all his merits, obedience and benefits, purchaſed by both, are become mine by this right, as being a member of his bodie; and our Sauiour alſo, may as truly ſay of Gods elect, that they are his whom he hath right to redeeme and ſaue, becauſe he is their Head, and they his members. Of this mutuall donation and gift, the Scriptures ſpeake euidently; and firſt that Chriſt is giuen vnto vs; Eſay 9.6. Vnto vs a child is borne, and vnto vs a Sonne is giuen. Iohn 3.16. So God loued the world, that hee gaue his onely begotten Sonne, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life. *Rom.*8.32. Secondly, that wee are giuen vnto Chriſt, it is manifeſt, Iohn 17.6. I haue declared thy name vnto the men which thou gaueſt mee out of the world, thine they were and thou gaueſt them me, &c. So, Iohn 10.29. My Father which gaue them me is greater then all, and none is able to take them out of my Fathers hand. By which places it plainly appeareth, that Chriſt is giuen vnto vs by God his Father, and wee vnto Chriſt. But in what manner is this mutuall donation made? Surely not groſly and corporally; but ſpiritually and after a celeſtiall manner: for the meanes whereby it is brought to paſſe on Gods part, is his diuine and holy Spirit, and on our part a true and liuely faith.

vnion and communion which is betwixt Chriſt and Gods elect: which followeth vpon the donation before ſpoken of, whereby Chriſt Ieſus and they are myſtically coupled together into one body, he becomming their Head, and they becomming his members. Of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Epheſ. 4.15,16. where he exhorteth the faithfull, to grow vp into him which is the head, that is Chriſt, by whom all the body being coupled together by euery ioynt, &c. receiueth increaſe. And Chap. 5.30. We are members of his body, of his fleſh, and of his bones. And of this our Sauiour Chriſt ſpeaketh in the parable of the Vine, Iohn 15.1. where he compareth himſelfe to the ſtocke and root, and all the faithfull to the branches. And the Apoſtle expreſſeth it by a metaphoricall ſpeech taken from a building, comparing Chriſt to the foundation, and the Church to the reſt of the building, Epheſ. 2.20,21,22. Now we muſt not conceiue of this vnion, that it is either naturall, as the three perſons in Trinitie are vnited in the ſame diuine nature; or perſonall as the body and ſoule being vnited make one man, or corporall as the parts of a building are coupled one with another: but this coniunction and vnion is made by the Spirit of God, which dwelling in the manhood of Chriſt aboue meaſure, filling it with the graces thereof, is from it deriued vnto all the faithfull and true members of Chriſts Body, filling them with the like graces in meaſure; and on our part by a true and liuely faith, whereby we do apply vnto vs Chriſt Ieſus and all his benefits. And this appeareth Epheſ. 2.22. where the Apoſtle ſaith, that we are the habitation of God by the ſpirit. And 1. Iohn 4.13. Hereby wee know that wee dwell in him and he in vs, becauſe he hath giuen vs of his Spirit. So that by the Spirit of God dwelling in vs, we are made one with Chriſt and Chriſt with vs. Now the manner whereby this vnion is made is this; the faithfull man, body and ſoule is vnited vnto whole Chriſt God and man; but firſt and immediatly to the humane nature, and mediatly thereby to the diuine nature. Both which are moſt neceſſary; for life and ſaluation is wrought for vs by vertue and power of the Deitie, but it is deriued and communicated vnto vs by the humane nature of Chriſt. According to that Iohn 6.54. Whoſoeuer eateth my fleſh and drinketh my bloud, hath eternall life, and I will raiſe him vp at the laſt day. And this is the vnion which is betweene Chriſt our Head and vs his members by vertue whereof wee haue ſure intereſt and iuſt title, both to Chriſt and all his benefits, his obedience, death and merits, by which wee are iuſtified, ſanctified and ſaued.

alling.

And ſo much concerning the parts of our effectuall calling; the meanes whereby the Lord thus calleth vs, are firſt on Gods part the preaching of the Word, which is made effectual by the inward operation of his Spirit; firſt to mollifie our hard hearts, and truly to humble vs, by ſetting before vs our ſins and corruptions, and this is done by the preaching of the Law: and after we ſee our inabilitie and inſufficiencie of working our owne ſaluation, we are thereby brought out of our ſelues, to ſeeke for ſaluation in Chriſt Ieſus, applying him and his merits vnto vs by a true and a liuely faith, and this is done by the preaching of the Goſpell. The meanes on our part is the ſauing hearing of the Word, whereby our hard hearts are mollified, and wee truely humbled, and brought out of our ſelues to ſeeke for ſaluation in Chriſt, whereby alſo true faith is begot in vs, wherewith we apply Chriſt vnto vs, and rely vpon him alone for our ſaluation. And thus haue I ſhewed what our vocation is, and the meanes thereof. Now let vs conſider of thoſe tentations, which Satan ſuggeſteth into mens minds in reſpect of their vocation, to the end he may hinder them from the participation and fruition of Chriſt and his benefits, whereunto in the preaching of the Word they are called and inuited. And theſe are of two ſorts, firſt, thoſe wherewith he aſſaulted them who are not called: ſecondly, thoſe wherewith hee aſſaulteth them who are truly called and conuerted.

§. Sect. 1.
Of the neceſſitie of our effectuall calling.

THoſe who are not called hee tempteth diuers wayes, that hee may hinder their effectuall calling; & firſt hee laboureth to perſwade them, to neglect this their calling, as a thing not neceſſary, and to contemne the Miniſtery of the Word, which is the meanes wherby we are effectually called. But wee are to withſtand theſe tentations: and to this end we are firſt to know, that before our effectuall calling wee are not true members of the Church, though wee may outwardly thruſt our ſelues into this ſocietie; for what elſe is the Church but that company or congregation which is truly called and ſelected out of the World? and from hence it hath it name, for it is called Eccleſia ἀπὸ τοῦ καλεῖν, from the calling thereof: vnleſſe therefore wee be called wee are not members of the Church, and if wee be out of the Church there is no ſaluation; for our Sauiour gaue himſelfe for his Church alone, and hee is the Sauiour of his owne body, as it is Epheſ. 5.23,25. and hee addeth daily vnto the Church ſuch as ſhall be ſaued, as it is Acts 2.47. wee be truly called, wee ſhall neuer be truely juſtified, and if we be not juſtified, we cannot be ſanctified; and without ſanctification there is no glorification: for this is the golden chaine of our ſaluation, as appeareth, *Rom.*8.30. Laſtly, wee can neuer come vnto Chriſt, nor communicate with him in any of his benefits, nor receiue any ſanctifying and ſauing grace of Gods Spirit, till by the grace of God we are made partakers of this holy calling; for naturally wee are meere worldlings, deſtitute of all grace and goodneſſe, & ſo wee remayne till by this holy calling wee are ſeparated from the World, and ingrafted into the body of Chriſt, by whoſe Spirit we are quickned who were dead in our ſinnes, and haue ſanctifying graces begotten, nouriſhed, and increaſed in vs. Seeing therefore this our effectuall calling is ſo neceſſary, let not Satan perſwade vs to neglect it, neither let vs when the Lord inuiteth vs to this royall Feaſt pretend excuſes, one that he muſt go ſee his Farme, another that hee muſt goe trie his Oxen, a third that he muſt goe about his Merchandize, and a fourth that he is hindred by a carnall marriage: for if wee will not come when the Lord inuiteth vs, like vnworthy gueſts we ſhal be ſhut out of the doores, and not ſuffered to be partakers of this banquet of eternall bleſſedneſſe. Whileſt to day wee heare his voyce let vs not harden our hearts, for hee hath not promiſed that hee will call againe to morrow; whileſt now he ſtandeth at the doore and knocketh and calleth for entrance, let vs hearing his voice open the doore of our hearts, that hee may come in and ſup with vs and wee with him; for if vnkindly we deny him entertainment, wee can haue no aſſurance that hee will returne againe to ſuch churliſh and vngratefull Hoaſts. In a word, ſeeing the Lord paſſing by many other in the world maketh choice of vs, calling and inuiting vs to the participation and fruition of eternall bleſſedneſſe and happineſſe, let no worldly buſineſſe, though it ſeeme as neceſſary as the burying of our deare Father, hinder vs from hearkening and obeying this heauenly call; let no tranſitorie trifle ſtay vs from comming to God, when he offereth to make vs good aſſurance of his Royall Kingdome: for though many things be conuenient, yet one thing is neceſſary, and thrice happy are they which make choice of the better part.

Satans tentations whereby he moueth vs to neglect the meanes of our effectuall calling.

But it is impoſſible that euer we ſhould be truely called, vnleſſe wee carefully vſe the meanes when the Lord offereth them vnto vs, and attentiuely liſten vnto the Lords voice when he inuiteth vs to come vnto him: and therefore Satan laboureth, not ſo much to perſwade vs that our vocation is a thing vnneceſſary to ſaluation, ſeeing this is manifeſtly repugnant to plaine teſtimonies of Scriptures, as to mooue vs to neglect the meanes whereby wee are called, namely the Miniſtery of Gods Word: partly working vpon our inbred corruption, which not conceiuing the things of God condemneth them of fooliſhneſſe, and not being delighted with thoſe things which it vnderſtandeth not, they ſeeme irkſome and tedious; and partly inticing vs with the commodities and pleaſures of the World, which are more pleaſant to carnall men then their meate and drinke, hee cauſeth vs to ſpend that time in our earthly buſineſſes or vaine delights, which we ſhould beſtow in the hearing of Gods Word, wherby we ſhould be effectually called, that is, ſeparated from the World, and ingrafted as liuely members into the body of Chriſt Ieſus.

Let vs therefore ſtrongly arme our ſelues againſt this tentation, as being moſt pernicious vnto our ſoules: and to this end let vs briefly conſider of ſome reaſons, whereby we may be ſtirred vp diligently to frequent Gods holy aſſemblies, to be made partakers of this heauenly ambaſſage. Firſt, therefore we are to know, that the Miniſtery of the Word is Gods owne Ordinance, which hee hath inſtituted and ordained for the gathering together of the Saints, and building the bodie of his Church, as appeareth, *Epheſ.*4.11,12. Neither doth he vſe ordinarily any other meanes (eſpecially where this is to bee had) for the true conuerſion of his children, and for the working of the ſanctifying graces of his Spirit in them. And therefore though hee could by extraordinary meanes, haue ſufficiently inſtructed the Eunuch in the wayes of ſaluation, yet he would not, but rather vſeth his owne Ordinance, and ſendeth Philip to preach vnto him. Though he could haue illuminated the eies and vnderſtanding of Paul, by the immediate worke of his ſpirit, yet he choſe rather to ſend him to Ananias. Though hee could by the Miniſtery of his Angell, haue ſufficiently informed Cornelius in things neceſſary to ſaluation, yet hee would not offer ſo great diſparagement to his owne Ordinance, but rather cauſeth him to ſend for the Apoſtle Peter. And therefore if wee would haue any aſſurance of our effectuall calling and true conuerſion vnto God, let vs with all care and diligence heare the Word of God preached vnto vs.

Secondly, let vs conſider that it is euen God himſelfe, who ſpeaketh by the mouthes of his Ambaſſadours, and that they come not in their owne names but in Chriſts ſtead, to intreat vs that wee would bee reconciled vnto God. That though they be but earthen veſſels, yet they bring from God a heauenly treaſure which heretofore hath bin hid from the World, and is yet hid to thoſe that periſh. Thirdly, the titles which are giuen vnto the Word in the Scriptures, may ſerue as ſtrong arguments to mooue vs carefully to heare the ſame; for it is called the Miniſtery of reconciliation, whereby wee are reconciled vnto God, 2. Cor. 5.18. and therefore without it, there being no other ordinary meanes of reconciliation, we remayne ſtill Gods enemies. It is called the Goſpell of peace, without which wee haue neither peace with God, nor the peace of Conſcience; It is called the Word of Grace, becauſe it is the meanes whereby the Lord deriueth vnto vs his grace and mercie, and all the ſpirituall graces of his ſanctifying Spirit; It is called the Word of life, and the Word of ſaluation, becauſe it is the meanes whereby wee are ſaued out of the hands of ſpirituall enemies, and are certainly aſſured of euerlaſting life and happineſſe. It is called the Kingdome of God, becauſe thereby wee are brought, firſt into the Kingdome of Grace, and afterwards into the Kingdome of Glory. It is that heauenly ſeed whereby we are begotten vnto God, in which reſpect the Miniſters thereof are called ſpirituall Fathers; and therefore without it wee can neuer be regenerated and borne vnto God; It is the food of our ſoules, euen milke for babes, and ſtrong meate for men of ripe yeares, wherby wee are nouriſhed vnto euerlaſting life; and therefore let vs not refuſe this heauenly food like wayward children when our heauenly Father offereth it vnto vs, for ſo our ſoules being hunger-ſtarued, nothing can follow but eternall death and deſtruction. It is the Phyſicke of our ſoules, whereby being ſicke in ſinne they are cured and reſtored: for as Chriſt is our heauenly Phyſition, ſo is his Word the potion which hee giueth to purge vs from our corruptions, and the preſeruatiue which confirmeth vs in health, and preſerueth vs from the leprous infection of ſinne, yea, this Phyſick is ſo ſoueraigne, that though with Lazarus wee haue lien dead in our graues foure dayes, that is, continued long in our naturall corruptions, yet being applied it will raiſe vs vp to newneſſe of life; and therefore thoſe who neglect this diuine Phyſicke, are ſubiect to all infection of ſin, and being infected can neuer attaine to their health againe. It is the ſquare and rule of our liues, from which wee muſt not decline either on the right hand nor on the left. And therefore without it our workes muſt needes be crooked in Gods ſight. It is a lampe to our feet, and a light vnto our paths, whereby we are guided in the wayes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe which lead vs to euerlaſting happineſſe, which being taken away wee ſhall walke in darkneſſe, and be euery ſtep readie to fall into ſin and eternall deſtruction. It is the Sword of the Spirit, wherewith we defend our ſelues and offend our ſpirituall enemies, which being neglected, or not skilfully vſed, wee ſhall lie open to all thruſts and blowes, and be eaſily ouercome. In a word, it is profitable for all vſes, as being the only ordinary meanes ordained to conuey vnto vs all good, and to preſerue vs from all euill; and therefore great folly it is for any man to contemne it, or to prefer before it vaine pleaſures, or trifling cōmodities, which alſo are momentanie and vncertaine.

§. Sect. 6.
The fourth
Motiue.

Fourthly, the manifold benefits which by the Word of God are deriued vnto vs, may ſerue as a ſtrong argument to ſtirre vs vp to the diligent and carefull hearing thereof; for firſt thereby we become true members of the Church, out of which there is no ſaluation, and being ingrafted into the body of Chriſt, are made partakers of all his benefits. And this appeareth, Epheſ. 4.11,12. where the Apoſtle ſheweth that the end of the Miniſterie is for the gathering together of the Saints, and for the edification of the body of Chriſt. A notable example whereof wee haue Acts 2.41. where, by one Sermon three thouſand ſoules were added to the Church. Secondly, hereby we are regenerated and begotten vnto God, and therefore in this reſpect Paul profeſſeth himſelfe, the Father of the Corinthians, 1. Cor. 4.15. and without this regeneration and new birth, none ſhall euer enter into the Kingdome of God, as our Sauiour ſheweth vs, Iohn 3.5. Thirdly, vnleſſe the blind eyes of our vnderſtandings be illuminated, wee ſhall fall into a labyrinth of errours, and neuer finde the hard way which leadeth to Gods Kingdome; but the Word of God is that heauenly Light, which ſhineth vnto vs who ſit in darkneſſe, and in the ſhadow of death, guiding our feet into the way of peace, as it is Luke 1.79. and in this reſpect, Gods Miniſters are called the light of the world, becauſe, as Lights, they guide and direct men in the wayes of ſaluation, and reueale vnto them the great Light, euen the Sunne of righteouſneſſe, Chriſt Ieſus. Fourthly, through faith wee are ſaued, Epheſ. 2.8. Neither is it poſſible, that without faith wee ſhould euer attaine vnto ſaluation, for this is the condition of all the promiſes of the Goſpell, without which we cannot haue any aſſurance of them, Iohn 1.12. and 3.16,18. Moreouer, whatſoeuer is not done of faith is ſinne, Rom. 14.23. And without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God, Heb. 11.6. But the preaching of the Word is the ordinary meanes of begetting faith in vs, as appeareth *Rom.*10.17. Faith commeth by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. And therefore whoſoeuer contemne or neglect the hearing of Gods Word, they refuſe the meanes of faith; and being without faith, all they doe is ſinne and cannot pleaſe God, neither can they euer haue any aſſurance of Gods promiſes, or their owne ſaluation. Laſtly, by the hearing of Gods Word we are ſaued, and therefore Gods Miniſters in this reſpect are called Sauers of the people, 1.*Tim.*4.16. Take heed vnto thy ſelfe and vnto learning; continue therein, for in ſo doing thou ſhalt both ſaue thy ſelfe and them that heare thee; becauſe they are the Miniſters of God, whom hee vſeth as meanes and inſtruments in working the ſaluation of the elect. And therefore ſeeing by the preaching of the Word, we are made members of the body of Chriſt, regenerated and enlightned; ſeeing thereby wee attaine vnto faith, and euerlaſting ſaluation, let vs as we loue our owne ſoules, diligently heare the Word, and not ſuffer our ſelues to bee hindered from frequenting the holy aſſemblies of Gods Saints, with euery vaine pleaſure and baſe commoditie.

§.Sect.7. Satans tentations, whereby he withdraweth men from the diligent hearing of Gods Word, anſwered.

But here the tempter will be ready to obiect, that though the Word preached be thus neceſſary and profitable at ſome times when wee are at leaſure, yet this ſhould be no reaſon to mooue vs to neglect our buſineſſe, or abandon our pleaſures; for when once by the hearing thereof wee are conuerted, enlightned (with the knowledge of Gods true Religion, and endued with faith, it is ſufficient if wee but ſeldome heare it; for what in ſubſtance can we learne, which we haue not alreadie learned, or what can the Preacher teach vs, which wee doe not know as well as he? Againſt which tentation, which is ſo common and pernicious, it behoooueth euery Chriſtian moſt carefully to arme himſelfe. And to this end let vs know, firſt, that this neglect of Gods Word is a manifeſt ſigne, that ſuch are not as yet truly conuerted, nor indued with any meaſure of ſauing knowledge and true faith; for whoſoeuer are of God heare his Word, Iohn 8.47. and all Chriſts ſheepe heare his voice and follow him, as it is Iohn 10.3,4.27. Whoſoeuer haue attained vnto knowledge, faith and the reſt of the graces of Gods ſanctifying Spirit, they will bee ſo rauiſhed with the excellencie of them, that it is not poſſible for them to content themſelues with a ſmall meaſure, but ſtill they will labour to grow from knowledge to knowledge, from faith to faith, from one grace to another, till they become perfect men in Chriſt. And as thoſe who haue but once taſted of ſome delicious meate, are not ſatisfied therewith, but againe and againe feed vpon it if eaſily they may come by it, becauſe their taſt is exceedingly delighted therewith, ſo if euer wee did but truly taſte of this heauenly Manna, and ſpirituall food of our ſoules, the Word of God, wee would not reſt ſo contented, but when opportunity is offered, we would often feed vpon it, vntill our ſoules were fully ſatisfied, and nouriſhed vnto perfect ſtrength. And for as much as ſo long as wee continue heere, our knowledge is but in part and our faith weake, and Gods graces but in ſmall meaſure, therefore we would continually feed on this heauenly nouriſhment, to the end of our liues, that thereby our knowledge may bee increaſed, our faith ſtrengthened, and all other graces confirmed and multiplied in vs. But if on the other ſide we loathe this heauenly Manna, it is a manifeſt ſigne, wee neuer taſted thereof in truth, or that our ſoules are exceeding ſicke in ſinne, which maketh them that they cannot relliſh this daintie and delicious food, and that wee haue not knowledge, faith, or any grace begotten in vs, neither that our ſelues are begotten vnto God. For as the childe being begotten and conceiued, doth preſently draw nouriſhment from the mother; and the bigger it waxeth, the more it deſireth, till it come vnto perfect age and ſtrength: ſo as ſoone as the graces of Gods Spirit are begotten in vs by the preaching of the Word, they draw nouriſhment from their ſpirituall mother, the Church; and the ſtronger they waxe in grace, the more earneſtly they deſire a greater pittance till they become perfect men in Chriſt. And therefore where there is no deſire of this food, there is no Regeneration nor new birth.

§.Sect. Gods W the food o our ſoules, ten to bee ceiued.

Moreouer, the Word of God is the food of our ſoules, whereby wee are nouriſhed, and the graces of Gods Spirit confirmed and increaſed in vs; and therefore it is not ſufficient to eate of this food once or twice, but continually, euen as often as the Lord calleth vs to this ſpirituall Banquet. For as the body will waxe faint, and quickly periſh, vnleſſe that which waſteth away bee continually ſupplyed by nouriſhment: ſo will the ſoule languiſh and waxe faint in ſpirituall graces, vnleſſe it bee often nouriſhed with this heauenly Manna. Let not therefore Satan perſwade vs, that ſeldome hearing of Gods Word is ſufficient, where this Banquet is often prouided, for though in the time of ſcarcitie by the extraordinarie bleſſing of God, we may go with Elias forty daies in the ſtrength of one meale, yet if we feed no oftner when the Lord granteth vnto vs plentifull prouiſion of this ſpirituall food, our ſoules will be hunger-ſtarued. Neither let our often receiuing of this heauenly nouriſhment, cauſe vs with the vnthankfull Iſraelites to loathe it, or like wayward children, or impatient ſicke patients, ſpit it out of our mouthes againe; for if our appetites be thus cloyed through a ſurfet of ſatietie, ſurely we are to feare, leſt the Lord who is a cunning Phyſition, will preſcribe vs a long faſt, till wee haue recouered our ſtomackes, as hee threatneth, Amos 8.11. I will ſend a famine in the Land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirſt of water, but of hearing the Word of the Lord. And then wee ſhall wander from Sea to Sea, and from the North, euen to the Eaſt ſhall we run to and fro to ſeeke the Word of the Lord and ſhall not find it.

Laſtly, though it ſhould bee granted that wee had attained vnto ſuch a meaſure of knowledge, that wee ſhould need no more, yet are there many reaſons why wee ſhould need no more; yet are there many reaſons why wee ſhould continually heare Gods Word with as great diligence as euer we did. For the end of our hearing is not onely to know, but alſo to practice; not only to informe our judgements, but alſo to reforme our affections; not only to beget the graces of Gods Spirit in vs, but alſo to nouriſh and increaſe them; not only to teach vs what we ſhould doe, but alſo to ſtir vs vp to the doing thereof; and the Word of God is not onely a light for our feet to ſhew vs the way, but alſo a pricke in our ſides to make vs goe in the way, and a bridle in our mouthes to keepe vs from wandring; it is not only profitable to teach, but to improue, to correct and inſtruct in righteouſneſſe, That the man of God may be abſolute, being made perfect vnto all good workes, as it is, 2.Tim.3.16. it is not only profitable for doctrine, but for edification, exhortation and conſolation, as appeareth, 1.Cor.14.3. And therefore it is not ſufficient to come once or twice to the aſſemblies of Gods Saints, but we muſt aboue all things deſire with the Prophet Dauid, that we may dwell in the houſe of the Lord all the dayes of our life, to behold the beautie of the Lord, and to viſit his Temple, Pſal.27.4. For though our knowledge be neuer ſo great, yet ſo long as we haue any ſin hanging on, or any grace imperfect in vs, we had need to be continuall hearers of Gods Word, for the ſuppreſſing of the one and perfecting of the other.

THe ſecond tentation which Sathan ſuggeſteth into mens minds, to the end hee may mooue them to neglect the hearing of Gods Word, or though they doe heare it, to reject it through vnbeliefe, hee thus frameth. What folly is it to take ſuch paines in hearing the Scripture, and what madneſſe it is ſo ſtedfaſtly to beleeue it, ſeeing thou knoweſt not whether it be Gods Word, or the ſubtill deuice of mans braine, to keepe the people in awe, and to reſtraine them from ſuch ſecret faults, as other humane Lawes ratified and confirmed with temporall and outward puniſhments and rewards cannot keepe them from; becauſe the Lawes of Princes cannot (no more then the Law-giuers themſelues) either fore-ſee, preuent or puniſh any faults and offences, which are not open and manifeſt? Why ſhouldeſt thou thereby be moued to forſake thy delightfull ſinnes, and to imbrace vnpleaſant godlineſſe, to abandon thy pleaſures, and to vndertake an auſtere and ſtrict courſe of life, ſeeing thou knoweſt not whether the Scriptures be true or falſe, the Word of the euerlaſting God or the inuention of mortall man?

The anſwere: that all Religion dependeth vpon the authoritie of the Scriptures.

Againſt which tentation it behoooueth euery man moſt carefully to arme himſelf, as vndermining the very foundation of all true Religion; for take away the authoritie of the Scriptures, and you ſhall open a wide doore to all carnall worldlineſſe, beaſtly Epicuriſme, and Deuilliſh Atheiſme; they being the only true rule of vertue, whereby wee are directed to chuſe the good and refuſe the euill; the Scepter of God whereby he ruleth all the ſubjects of his Kingdome, which being rejected we giue ouer our ſelues to be ruled by the Deuill, and the luſts of our owne fleſh; the light of our eyes, without which we are blind and walke in darkneſſe; the food of our ſoules, which being taken away, they languiſh in all ſpirituall graces, and fall into miſerable death and deſtruction; and the Sword of the Spirit whereby we defend our ſelues, and beate backe our ſpirituall enemies, which being plucked out of our hand, we are eaſily vanquiſhed and led captiue vnto all ſin and wickedneſſe.

§. Sect.2.
Reaſons to proue that the Scripture was indited by Gods Spirit.
1. The antiquitie of the Scriptures.

And that wee may bee the better prouided againſt this tentation, let vs propound ſome reaſons whereby gain-ſayers may bee conuinced, and Gods children perſwaded of the truth and authority of the Scriptures. The firſt argument to prooue the Scriptures to be written by the motion and reuelation of Gods Spirit, is the antiquitie thereof; for whatſoeuer Religion is moſt ancient, that proceedeth from God: but the Religion contained in the Scriptures, is of all other moſt ancient: and therefore God was the authour thereof. The firſt part of this reaſon is cleere and manifeſt; for ſeeing man was created for Gods glory, to the end hee ſhould worſhip and ſerue him, and could not performe acceptable worſhip and ſeruice vnto God, vnleſſe he reuealed his will vnto him; therefore that man might attaine vnto the end of his Creation, it was neceſſary that the Lord ſhould from the beginning reueale vnto him his true Religion, whereby he might know how to worſhip and ſerue him, according to his will. And conſequently, the firſt and moſt ancient Religion is the true Religion, which proceeded from God; and all other are falſe and counterfeit, which are diſagreeing and repugnant hereunto ſeeing Gods will is one and the ſame, conſtant and immutable. The ſecond part of this reaſon, namely, that the Religion deliuered in the Scriptures is of all others moſt ancient, is of vndoubted truth; for it is within a few dayes as ancient as the World it ſelfe, taking it beginning from mans Creation, and ſo continuing in a conſtant and vnchangeable courſe vnto this day. Now all other Religions are but new and vpſtart in compariſon hereof, taking their beginnings diuers thouſands yeeres ſince the Creation; yea, euen the Gods themſelues worſhipped by them (which in truth were men like themſelues) had their beginning for the moſt part, long ſince the time of Abraham, as their owne Hiſtories manifeſtly declare. Neither did any other Religion of the Heathen continue one and the ſame; for that which one receiued another rejected, that which one confirmed another changed, and time hath worne them all out, leauing ſcarce any ſmall remnants or reliques of them. And therefore all other Religions, ſauing that which is deliuered in the Scripture, are falſe and counterfeit; and this only the Truth of God.

§. Sect. 3.
2. Reaſons taken from the puritie & perfection of the Scriptures.

Secondly, the puritie and perfection of the Scriptures doe euidently ſhew that they are the Word of God, indited by his holy Spirit; for they manifeſt vnto vs the only true God, and propound him alone vnto vs, to be worſhipped, expreſſing alſo the manner and meanes of his ſeruice, from which wee muſt not decline on the right hand, or on the left: but all other Religions teach vs either to worſhip many Gods, which is a thing abſurde in reaſon, and contrary to the light of nature, as diuers of the wiſeſt Philoſophers well diſcerned; or to worſhip the true God not according to his reuealed will, but according to their falſe imaginations, and erroneous ſuperſtitions. Now, nature, reaſon and experience it ſelfe teach vs, that there is no wiſe King but will ſet downe Rules and Lawes, according to which he will be ſerued and obeyed, and not leaue it to euery ones fantaſie and vaine imagination; and ſhall wee thinke God leſſe wiſe then man, that hee ſhould not haue a perfect Law for the gouernment of his people, but ſuffer euery man to follow his owne blind conceit and ignorant Superſtition?

§. Sect. 4.
3. Reaſons taken from the ſinceritie of the Writers of the Scriptures.

Thirdly, the ſinceritie and vprightneſſe of the Writers of the holy Scriptures, is a manifeſt argument that they were guided and directed by Gods Spirit; for they deliuer nothing in their owne name, but in the name of the Lord, not arrogating any prayſe vnto themſelues, but aſcribing all glory vnto God; neither did they in their preachings or writings ſeeke themſelues, or aime at any worldly benefit; yea rather they were content to be contemptible, ſubject to ſcoffes and taunts, yea to offer themſelues to death and depriuation of all worldly felicitie, for the truth of God which they had deliuered. And whereas diuers of them might haue liued in all pompe, if they would haue followed the times, winked at the ſinnes of Rulers, and ſuppreſſed the Word of the Lord, which they had receiued of him; they choſe rather to ſuffer perſecution, yea death it ſelfe, then they would keepe backe any of the counſell of God, as appeareth in the example of Eſay, Ieremy, Ezechiel, Micham, Zacharias, Amos, and many others of the Prophets, and Apoſtles. Neither doe they in their writings abſtaine onely from ſeeking their owne glory and prayſe, but alſo ſet downe thoſe things which might tend to their diſcredit, to the end God might be glorified in their infirmities, the truth confeſſed and preſerued, and the Church of God benefited, when by ſeeing the weakneſſe of the moſt ſtrong, they are kept from preſuming on their owne ſtrength and from deſpairing in Gods mercie. And thus Moſes concealeth not the fall of our grand parents, the drunkenneſſe of Noah, the inceſt of Lot, the lie of Iſaak, the whoredome of Iuda; yea, which more neerely concerned him, he plainly reuealeth the horrible and bloudy ſin of his grandfather Leui, and Simeon, in murthering the Sichemites and the curſe of their father Iacob pronounced againſt them for this their outrage. Which could not in humane reaſon but be diſhonourable to his ſtock and progeny, and offenſiue to all who were of that tribe. Furthermore hee diſplayeth the corruptions, imperfections, and often rebellions of that people, whoſe ſaluation he preferred before his owne ſoule; he ſpareth not to ſet downe the Idolatry of his owne brother Aaron, nor the ſinne of his ſiſter Miriam in murmuring againſt him, nor of Aarons ſonnes in offering with ſtrange fire. Nay, hee leaueth the remembrance of his owne ſinne of impatiencie and vnbeliefe, for which hee was debarred from entring into the Land of promiſe, vnto all poſterities, as a perpetuall note of his owne weakneſſe and infirmitie. Neither ſought hee at all his owne glory, and the aduancement of his poſteritie, but the glory of God and the good of the Church, as may hereby appeare in that when the gouernment was eſtabliſhed in his hand, he doth not make his own ſonnes his ſucceſſors, but Ioſua his ſeruant, becauſe God had ſo appointed it. The like may be ſaid of Ieremie, who hath in his prophecie left record of his murmuring and impatiencie. Of Ionas, who hath ſet downe his owne rebellion, puniſhment, and repining againſt God; Of the Apoſtle Paul, who hath not ſpared to call himſelfe a cruell perſecutor and chiefe of all Sinners. Now we know that naturally, we deſire to conceale the faults of our friends & kindred, and we count him an euill bird that defileth his owne neſt; naturally wee ſeeke our owne prayſe and the aduancement of our children, and can brooke nothing leſſe then that our faults ſhould bee diuulged and become table talke; and therefore this detection of their owne and their friends falls and faults could not proceed from nature, or any worldly policie, but from the direction of Gods Spirit which ouer-ruled their affections and tooke away all partialitie.

Fourthly, the wonderfull conſent which is amongſt the diuers Writers of the Scriptures, doth euidently ſhew that they were guided and directed by one and the ſame Spirit of God: for whereas it is truly ſaid of other men, Quot homines tot ſententiæ, Looke how many men there bee, and ſo many minds there be; whereof it commeth to paſſe that euery writer almoſt varieth from another, gain-ſaying & confuting that which another hath deliuered, that ſo out of the aſhes of their credit and reputation they may build a monument of their owne fame: the quite contrary is to be obſerued in the Writers of the Scriptures, who ſucceſſiuely writing one after another the ſpace of diuers thouſand yeeres, doe notwithſtanding conſent together in the ſame truth, the latter ratifying and confirming that which the former had deliuered without any alteration, oppoſition or emulation, as though they were diuers hands ſet on worke by the ſame ſoule; which could not poſſibly come to paſſe vnleſſe they were ouer-ruled by Gods Spirit.

Fiftly, the mightie oppoſitions which haue beene made by the Deuill and his wicked Impes againſt this doctrine of the Scriptures, and yet all in vaine, doe euidently ſhew that they are Gods Word and Truth, the patronage and protection whereof hee hath himſelfe vndertaken, aboue all humane reaſon and power. For hath not the Deuill in former times, and doth hee not ſtill at this day oppoſe himſelfe againſt the Word of God? And doe not his curſed inſtruments, vngodly men, the more they exceed in wickedneſſe, the more bend their whole power maliciouſly to oppugne this truth, perſecuting the children of God, for this onely; becauſe they are profeſſours and practiſers of Gods true Religion? And whence proceedeth this malicious oppoſition but from this, that the Scriptures are the Word of God? and therefore as they hate and oppoſe themſelues againſt God himſelf, ſo alſo againſt his Word, and becauſe they know that by this light their workes of darkneſſe are diſcouered, therefore they labour to put it cleane out, that their wickedneſſe may not bedeſcried; becauſe it is pure and holy they cannot endure it, they themſelues being corrupt and wicked; becauſe it is the rule of juſtice which ſheweth the crookedneſſe of their wayes, they would (if they were able) burne it or cut it in peeces; becauſe it is the word by which they are condemned, therfore they loathe as much to heare it, as the priſoner doth abhorre to heare the ſentence of the juſt Iudge. And hence proceedeth their oppoſition and oppugning of the holy Scriptures with all their force and might; but all in vaine, for the more the Deuill and wicked men rage againſt the Word of God, the more by the Almightie power of God ſupporting it, the glory thereof appeareth and ſpreadeth it ſelfe ouer the face of the earth; the more they labour to keepe it downe, the more it flouriſheth. And as they who goe about to ſtop the current of a mighty Riuer, doe but make it to ſwell the higher and ouerflow all the Country, whereas before it was contained within the compaſſe of his owne bankes: ſo when Sathan and his wicked Impes, do ſeeke to ſtay this heauenly ſtreame which floweth from Gods Sanctuary, and labour might and mayne to hinder the paſſage and propagation of Gods Truth, the more it ſpreadeth it ſelfe, maugre their malice, and ouer-floweth the whole earth. And whence can the defeating and the fruſtrating of this powerfull violence proceed, but from a greater power, euen the power of God? for though all men ſhould combine themſelues together, they are vnable to reſiſt Satans rage, or protect the Word of God from vtter ruine: onely the Lord whoſe power is Omnipotent could thus vphold it, and make it preuaile againſt all the power of Hell. And as the Lord by preſeruing and defending the Scriptures, from the beginning vnto this day, doth euidently ſhew that they are his owne Word and reuealed Will: ſo alſo by puniſhing, euen in this life, with vtter ruine and deſtruction, all thoſe who haue moſt violently and malitiouſly oppoſed themſelues againſt it, and perſecuted the Saints of God for the profeſſion hereof; as may appeare notably in the examples of Antiochus Epiphanes, Herod, Nero, Domitian, Diocleſian, Iulian the Apoſtata, and many others; who by their ſhamefull and horrible deaths teſtified and prooued the Scriptures to bee the truth of God, which they had oppugned and perſecuted in the whole courſe of their wicked liues.

§. Sect. 7.
The ſixt reaſon taken from miracles,

Sixtly, the Lord hath approued the Scriptures to be his truth by wonderfull miracles, which Satan himſelfe cannot ſo much as imitate; as by giuing the blind their ſight, raiſing the dead to life, turning backe the courſe of the Sunne in the firmament, diuiding the Sea in two parts, and ſuch like; which miracles were wrought by the Almightie power of God, to this end that the faithfull might bee confirmed in the aſſurance of Gods Truth, and the wicked conuinced. But againſt this, Satan will be ready to ſuggeſt, that there were neuer any ſuch miracles as are recorded in the Scriptures. To which I anſwere, that theſe miracles were not done in a corner, or in hugger mugger, but in the preſence of great multitudes; otherwiſe the Prophets & Apoſtles who were but meane and ſimple, ſhould haue laboured in vaine to haue perſwaded men, to haue imbraced their doctrine and religion (eſpecially being ſo contrary to humane wiſdome, and our naturall diſpoſition and affections) if they had onely themſelues reported, or brought ſome few witneſſes of their miracles wrought, and not publikely ſhewed them to all the people. Moreouer, ſeeing this doctrine hath had ſo many enemies from the beginning, it is not probable but that they would haue exclaimed, and written againſt the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles, as ſoone as they were publiſhed, for writing ſuch things as were neuer done: but amongſt all thoſe who haue oppoſed themſelues againſt the Scriptures, there is no man ſo impudent as to deny that ſuch miracles were done, of which ſo many were eye-witneſſes. Yea contrariwiſe the Heathen themſelues, who neither knew God nor his true Religion, haue made mention of them in their writings; and the Turkes and Iewes who to this day withſtand the worke of Redemption wrought by Chriſt, doe notwithſtanding confeſſe that ſuch miracles were wrought by Chriſt and his Apoſtles; neither in truth are they able to gainſay them, ſeeing they haue receiued this truth by tradition from their fathers, and therefore they are driuen to confeſſe, that Chriſt was a great Prophet though not the promiſed Meſſias.

§. Sect. 8. The ſeuenth reaſon, taken from the teſtimony of Martyrs.

Seuenthly, the conſtant teſtimony of innumerable Martyrs, who haue ſealed this truth with their deareſt bloud, is a notable argument to aſſure vs that it is indeed the Word of God: for it is not likely that ſo many would ſo conſtantly and cheerefully haue ſuffered for their profeſſion, the moſt exquiſite torments that wit and malice could inuent, if the Spirit of God had not certainly aſſured them that it was the Truth of God, and if it had not ſupported them in ſuffering theſe torments aboue all humane power and ſtrength. And whereas it may be obiected, that wicked men haue ſuffered alſo for their Sects, Opinions and Hereſies, wee are to know that there is great difference betweene them; firſt, becauſe the number hath beene few who haue ſuffered for their ſeuerall Sects and Hereſies, but the Martyrs almoſt innumerable who haue ſuffered for the ſame truth. Secondly, the ſame cheerefulneſſe, conſtancie and reioycing in their ſufferings hath not beene in them who haue ſuffered for their errours, which hath alwayes beene obſerued in Gods Saints. And laſtly, theſe Hereticks haue beene confuted and conuinced of their errours and hereſies before their ſufferings, whereas Gods Saints directed by his holy Spirit, haue ſtopped the mouthes of their aduerſaries with the wiſdome of Gods Word, which Satan himſelfe cannot reſiſt, and through violent rage being vnconuicted haue beene ledde to the ſlaughter.

CHAP. XXII.

Other reaſons to prooue that the Scriptures were indited by Gods Spirit, taken from the Scriptures themſelues.

§. Sect. 1. The eight re- ſon taken fro the argume which they handle.

THE eight reaſon to prooue that the Scriptures are the Word of God is the argument which they handle, and the end whereunto they tend. For the ſubiect whereof they intreate are the great workes of the euer-liuing God, how hee exerciſeth his mercie towardes his children in ſuſtaining, defending, and ſauing them from all their enemies: and his iuſtice towardes the wicked in turning their counſailes to fooliſhneſſe, in ouerthrowing their deſignes and purpoſes, curbing in their rage and violence, and in puniſhing & deſtroying them. Now if you conſider and peruſe all other writings in the World beſides, you ſhall find no ſuch matter contained in them. For ſome labour in poliſhing humane Arts; ſome ſet out large Hiſtories of the actions, counſailes, ſucceſſe, policies, enterpriſes and perturbations of men like themſelues: ſo that at the firſt ſight we may know that they are indited by the ſpirit of man, ſeeing they are wholly ſpent in humane affaires, neuer intermedling with any ſpirituall matter appertaining vnto God. Moreouer, the Scriptures attribute the gouerning and wiſe diſpoſing of all things to Gods all-ruling prouidence, that hee may haue the whole prayſe of his owne workes; as when they ſpeake of ſome famous victory, they doe aſcribe it neither to the wiſdome of the Captaine, nor to the valour of the common Souldier, but vnto the Lord of hoſts alone; neither doe they make Poems in the prayſe of Moſes, Ioſua, Dauid, Ezechias, or any other of the Kings and Leaders, but in the prayſe of the Lord, who by his owne ſtrong arme hath giuen his children victory ouer their enemies. Now whence can this proceed but from the Spirit of God inditing them, who contrary to the nature of man which deſireth rather all prayſe himſelfe, doth moue him to refuſe all glory attributed to himſelfe, that all the prayſe may be aſcribed vnto God? So when they ſpeake of any be-benefit receiued by the Church, they doe not attribute it to wordly friends, their good fortune, or their owne induſtry and labour, but to the bleſſing of God proceeding of his meere mercie and goodneſſe towards them. And contrariwiſe, when they ſet downe the deſtruction of the wicked, they doe not aſcribe it to any want of their owne care and prouidence, nor to the malice or power of their enemies, nor to blind chance, or other outward accident, but to the hand of God exerciſing his judgements vpon them, and puniſhing them for their ſinnes. Now if you peruſe all other writings, you ſhall find that they ayme at nothing leſſe then Gods glory; for ſome write to ſhew their eloquence, others to extoll their wits and deepe learning, others to aduance the prayſe of mortall men aboue the cloudes, ſome for one end, and ſome for another, all ayming at their owne prayſe, pleaſure or profit, neuer ſo much as once reſpecting Gods glory in their leaſt thought. And hence it is that ſetting downe any victory they aſcribe it to the weaknes or want of wit, prouidence, or courage of the aduerſe part, or to the fortitude of the Captaines, the reſoluteneſſe of the ſouldiers, the aduantages of the place, Sunne, Wind, and ſuch like circumſtances, in the meane time excluding the God of battailes, as though he had no ſtroke in this buſineſſe. So likewiſe when they ſpeake of any other affaires or accidents which fall out in the gouernment of the world, they aſcribe all to outward circumſtances, inferiour meanes and ſubordinate cauſes, as though God had giuen ouer the gouernment of the earth, and had committed the ruling of the ſterne to blinde Fortune. Now whence can this exceeding difference proceed, that they ſhould altogether ayme at the glory of God, and theſe wholly at the prayſe, pleaſure, and profit of man? that they ſhould alwayes aſcribe the gouernment and diſpoſing of all things to the wiſe prouidence of God, and theſe to outward accidents, naturall cauſes and inferiour meanes? Surely becauſe they were indited by the Spirit of God, and therefore themſelues are diuine, ſauouring wholly of the authour of them: and theſe by the ſpirit of man, and therefore all contained in them is meerly humane, carnall and naturall.

. Sect. 2.
e ninth ſon, taken m the ſtile the Scrip-es.

The ninth reaſon may bee taken from the ſtile and manner of penning the Scriptures, in which they much differ from all other writings whatſoeuer: for whereas men in their writings affect the prayſe of flowing eloquence and loftineſſe of phraſe, the holy Ghoſt in penning the Scriptures hath vſed great ſimplicitie and wonderfull plaineſſe, applying himſelfe to the capacitie of the moſt vnlearned. In which low and humble manner of ſpeech, hee doth notwithſtanding ſet forth the deepe wiſdome of God, and the profound myſteries of Religion, the bottome whereof the moſt wiſe and learned in the world cannot ſearch into: and vnder the vaile of ſimple and plaine ſpeech, there ſhineth ſuch diuine wiſdome and glorious majeſtie, that all the humane writings in the world, though neuer ſo adorned with the flowers of eloquence, and ſharpe conceits of wit and learning, cannot ſo deeply pierce the heart of man, nor ſo forcibly worke vpon his affections, nor ſo powerfully incline his will either to the imbracing of that which is good, or auoyding of that which is euill, as the Word of God: and whence can this proceed but from the vertue, power and wiſdome of the Spirit of God who is the author of them? Moreouer, we may obſerue in the ſtile of the Scriptures, a majeſticall authority aboue all other writings, which only beſeemeth the glorious King & Soueraigne Commander of Heauen & Earth: for they ſpeake in the ſame manner, and injoyne the like obedience, to Prince and people, rich and poore, learned and vnlearned, without any difference or reſpect of perſon; not vſing any arguments, reaſons, or perſwaſions, but abſolutely commanding that dutie which is to be done, and forbidding that ſinne which ſhould bee left vndone, and that vnder the promiſe of euerlaſting life and bleſſedneſſe, and the paine not of the Gallowes, Racke, or Wheele, but of eternall death and damnation. And whom beſeemeth it to promiſe euerlaſting life, or to threaten euerlaſting death, but him onely who is himſelfe eternall and euerlaſting? and who hath this abſolute authoritie of commanding all without any difference, but hee who is Lord, Creatour and Gouernour of the Prince as well as the people? Laſtly, this Word of God doth not only extend it ſelfe to the outward actions & conuerſation, requiring alone the externall obedience in fact and outward behauiour, which is the vttermoſt that humane Lawes reſpect, becauſe the Law-giuers can ſee no further; but the Law of God requireth eſpecially the obedience of the heart, and forbiddeth not only conſent to any euill, but euen concupiſcence and luſt? now who can make Lawes for the heart and conſcience, or though hee ſhould be ſo fond to make them, who could either reward the obedient, or puniſh the diſobedient, but God alone who ſearcheth the heart and reines? The ſtile therefore of the Scriptures being peculiar vnto themſelues, ſhewing majeſty in lowlineſſe and meanneſſe, an ouer-ruling power in perſwading, without rendring reaſon or bringing any argument beſides abſolute authority, and an vniuerſall juriſdiction ouer all without difference or reſpect, and that as well in regard of the ſecret thoughts as the outward actions, doth manifeſtly ſhew that they are not the inuention of man, but the Word of God indited by his holy Spirit.

Why the Scriptures were penned in a ſimple, lowly & plaine ſtile.

But it may bee objected, that if the Lord who is infinite in wiſdome were the authour of the Scriptures, they would haue excelled all humane writings in conceit of wit, and excellencie of phraſe and ſtile, as far as God excelleth man, whereas wee ſee that they are penned after a moſt ſimple, plaine and vnpoliſhed manner. To which I anſwere, that it doth not become a Prince to play the Oratour when he ſetteth out an Edict, nor to vſe Rhetoricall figures and alluring perſwaſions when he hath to deale with his ſubjects, but rather peremptory Commandements, and plaine phraſes, full of grauitie and authoritie without all affectation; and how much leſſe ſhould the chiefe Commander of King and Subject, vſe ſuch a ſtile as ſauoured any whit of humane eloquence, ſeeing it better beſeemeth his Majeſtie plainly to command, then to perſwade or allure with inticing ſpeeches? Secondly, the Scriptures were penned by the Holy Ghoſt, not only for the wiſe and learned, but alſo for the ſimple and ignorant; and therefore howſoeuer the Lord in the profunditie of his wiſdome, could haue written in ſuch a lofty ſtile as would haue filled euen the moſt learned with admiration, yet hee vſeth a ſimple eaſie ſtile fit for the capacitie of all, becauſe it was for the vſe of all, and neceſſary to ſaluation to be vnderſtood of all ſorts and conditions. As therefore hee frameth himſelfe to our ſhallow capacitie in the penning of the Scriptures, and ſpeaketh not according to his vnſearchable wiſdome, but after the manner of men, or elſe no man, no not the moſt wiſe and learned could vnderſtand him: ſo he thought it fit to ſpeake aſwell to the capacitie of the ſimple as the wiſe, becauſe the knowledge of his word was no leſſe neceſſary for ſaluation to theſe than to the other; and in his mercy & goodneſſe hee vouchſafed as well milke to the babe, as ſtrong meate to thoſe who were come to more ripe yeeres in knowledge and ſpirituall wiſdome. At which the wiſe and learned haue no reaſon to be offended, ſeeing the ſaluation of one is as deare to God as of another, and they may with greater facility vnderſtand the Sriptures being plaine and eaſie, which could not be vnderſtood of the ſimple, if they were penned in a loftie eloquent phraſe. And yet if they examine the Scriptures in the balance of a true judgement, they may find food therein contained fit for their owne pallat and taſte; for vnder this humilitie they ſhall diſcerne more majeſtie, vnder this ſimplicitie more deepe wiſdome, vnder this vnpoliſhed plainneſſe more powerfull perſwaſions to worke vpon and incline the affections, then in all humane writings whatſoeuer. Thirdly, humane eloquence and witty ſharpe conceits, are not only vnfitting the graue majeſtie of our heauenly King, but alſo needleſſe in reſpect of the Scriptures themſelues; for what are they but Gods Truth, and what is more agreeable and beſeeming truth, then plainneſſe and ſimplicitie? For what needs beautie the helpe of painting, or a precious Diamond much art to poliſh it, ſeeing they are glorious in their owne nature? And what needes the truth of God, which in it ſelfe ſhineth cleerly like the Sunne in his chiefeſt brightneſſe, the goodly ornaments of humane eloquence which would but darken the beames thereof? Or what needs that which is heauenly and diuine, any helpe from that which is earthly and carnall to commend it to mans judgement? No, no, the flowers of Rhetorick and helpe of wittie Sophiſtry, is more fit for Tullies Orations, whereby oft times a good cauſe is made bad, and a bad one good, right wrong, and wrong right, then for Gods diuine Truth, which like the Sun ſhineth moſt gloriouſly when it is bare and naked. Laſtly, it is to bee obſerued that the Lord in his wiſdom doth manifeſt his power in weakneſſe, his majeſtie in baſeneſſe, and his wiſdome in fooliſhneſſe, to the end that weakneſſe, baſeneſſe, and folly, may ſerue as foiles to make his power, majeſty, & wiſdome appeare to vs more glorious, though in truth in themſelues they are infinite, and nothing can be added to their excellency. But becauſe we lie groueling on the earth, and are ready to aſcribe all to the inferiour meanes, and nothing vnto God: therefore the Lord chuſeth weake and ſimple meanes, that his owne power and wiſdome may bee in them more manifeſt. For example, if the Lord had penned the Scriptures in ſuch an eloquent ſtile as would haue rauiſhed the Readers with delight, wee would like fooles haue ſtood admiring at the curious worke of the Cabinet, & neuer opened it to looke vpon the precious jewell therein contained; and haue beene ſo much affected with the words, that in the meane time wee would haue neglected the matter; but when this treaſure is brought vnto vs but in an earthen veſſell, when this beautifull feature is clothed in meane attire, and the diuine wiſdome of God ſet forth in an humble and ſimple ſtile, wee leaue ſhadowes and behold the ſubſtance, neither doe we reſt in the outward letter, but ſearch after the inward truth. So alſo if the Lord had in the penning of the Scriptures vſed inticing eloquence, or affected humane learning, men would haue beene ready to haue ſaid, that by the force thereof ſo many were drawne or inticed to imbrace Religion & to ſpend their liues in Gods ſeruice; but when as in outward ſhew there is nothing but vnpoliſhed plainneſſe and ſimple rudeneſſe, by which neuertheleſſe the hearers vnderſtanding is more inlightned, his will more powerfully inclined, his affections more ſtrongly ruled, then by all the eloquent perſwaſions which wit and learning can inuent, they are driuen to confeſſe that the wiſdome of God is hidden vnder this ſimplicitie, his power vnder this outward weakneſſe, and that the Scriptures haue their vertue and force not from the inticing ſpeech of mans wiſdome and excellencie of words, but from the power and plaine euidence of Gods Spirit, who was the authour and inditer of them.

The tenth reaſon, to proue that the Scriptures are not the inuention of man, but the Word of God indited by his Spirit, is, that many things contained therein are aboue the reach of humane vnderſtanding, and ſo deep that mans wiſdome and reaſon cannot conceiue them, nor ſearch them to the bottome. For example, though all men know by the light of nature that there is a God, ſeeing this truth is written in large Characters in the faire volume of the creatures, ſo as none can behold them but hee muſt needs know and acknowledge it; yet that this God being one in nature ſhould bee diſtinguiſhed into three perſons, the Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghoſt, without any diuiſion of ſubſtance or confuſion of perſons, mans reaſon cannot conceiue, though the Lord hath reuealed it, and much leſſe could inuent it ſeeing now it cannot comprehend it. So that the World and the creatures therein contained were created, the light of nature ſufficiently teacheth vs, ſeeing they haue an end and therefore had a beginning, a time of corruption and therefore a time of generation alſo, and as is the nature of euery ſeuerall part, ſo is the nature of the whole Vniuerſe; ſeeing alſo euery effect brings vs to his cauſe, and that to another, vntill wee come to the higheſt and ſupreame cauſe which is God, who hauing his being of himſelfe giueth being to all things: but that all this goodly order ſhould be brought out of confuſion, this light out of darkneſſe, that all theſe excellent creatures ſhould be created of nothing, by the alone Word of their Omnipotent Creatour, it paſſeth the conceit of humane reaſon and therefore his inuention alſo. So that we are wretched and full of miſery, not onely our reaſon but euen our ſenſes can teach vs; but how we ſhould be freed out of this miſery and attaine vnto euerlaſting happineſſe, is a thing aboue the reach of mans wiſdome. And that wee are vnable to performe thoſe duties wee ought, and leaue thoſe ſinnes vndone which we ſhould omit, and by both offend God, the Law of Nature written in our hearts, and the checkes and feares which euery one feele in their owne conſciences doe ſufficiently teach vs, but the meanes whereby we ſhould be reconciled vnto God whom wee haue offended, as they are ſet downe in his Word, namely, that the ſecond perſon in Trinitie ſhould take vpon him mans nature and bee borne of a pure Virgin, that in this nature he ſhould for vs performe perfect obedience to Gods Law, and ſuffer affliction, miſery, yea death it ſelfe to reconcile vs to his Father and procure his loue, to free vs from euerlaſting death and damnation, and to purchaſe for vs euerlaſting life and happineſſe, and that his obedience and merits ſhould become ours by reaſon of that vnion whereby he becommeth our head and wee his members, which vnion is made principally by his Spirit, and inſtrumentally by faith, doe all ſeeme ſtrange, yea abſurd to humane reaſon; and therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, that the naturall man perceiueth not the things which are of the Spirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſſe vnto him, neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned; as it is 1.*Cor.*2.14. And if he cannot know and conceiue them when in the preaching of the Goſpell they are reuealed vnto him; how much leſſe could hee inuent them hauing neuer heard of them? or who can imagine that in policy he would haue deuiſed ſuch a Religion to keepe the World in awe and obedience, as to euery worldly man ſeemeth fooliſh and abſurd, yea contrary to his nature? For what can bee more againſt the haire, thē to deny our ſelues and to take vp our croſſe and follow Chriſt? than to reject our owne workes and worthineſſe, and to ſeeke for juſtification in Chriſts death and obedience alone? then to imagine that manifold afflictions and great miſery, is the high way that leadeth to glory and endleſſe felicitie? and that pleaſures, honours, and riches, make vs vnfit to enter into Gods Kingdom? And therefore ſeeing the doctrine of the Scriptures are not only aboue the reach of humane reaſon, but alſo flat contrary to natural wiſdome, it plainly proueth that they are not the inuention of mortall man (for then the effect would be like the cauſe) but the Word of the euer-liuing God, which ſauoureth of his hidden and ſpiritual wiſdome.

The eleuenth reaſon, taken from the prophecies of holy Scriptures.

The eleuenth argument, to proue that the Scriptures were indited not by man but by Gods Spirit, are the prophecies therein contained, which were fulfilled in their due time; as that there ſhould bee enmitie betweene the ſeed of the Woman and the ſeed of the Serpent, and that the promiſed ſeed Chriſt Ieſus ſhould vanquiſh the Deuill; that the poſteritie of Cham ſhould bee accurſed; that Abraham ſhould haue a ſonne by his wife Sarah, when they were both old, and ſhee paſt the time of child-bearing; that his poſteritie ſhould bee bond-men in Egypt foure hundred yeeres, foretold before he had Iſaac of whom they came; that Iudaes poſteritie who was but the fourth ſonne, ſhould haue ſoueraignty & dominion ouer the reſt; that the ſcepter ſhould not bee taken from him till the Meſſias ſhould come; that the Tribe of Ephraim ſhould excell the Tribe of Manaſſes; that hee who ſhould re-edifie Iericho after it was deſtroyed, ſhould be puniſhed with the death of his ſonnes, which was fiue hundred yeere after fulfilled in Heil the Bethelite; that Ioſias by name ſhould deſtroy Idolatrie and Idolaters, and reſtore the true Religion, foretold almoſt three hundred yeeres before hee was borne; that the people of Iſrael ſhould bee led captiue into Babylon, and be ſet free by Cyrus by name, propheciéd of aboue a hundred yeeres before Cyrus was borne. And to theſe we may adde the prophecies of our Sauiour Chriſt, deſcribing in moſt liuely manner his perſon and natures, his Conception, Birth, Life and Death, with all the circumſtances of them; ſo as none but ſuch as are malitiouſly blinded can chuſe but ſee and acknowledge that hee is the promiſed Meſſias and Sauiour of the World. Alſo the prophecies of Ieremy, concerning the taking of Ieruſalem & their captiuity into Babylon, and the time of ſeuenty yeares limited for their abiding there; the prophecies of Daniel concerning the foure Monarchies, which are ſo cleere and perſpicuous as if hee had ſeene them in his time; the prophecie of Chriſt concerning the deſtruction of Ieruſalem; the prophecies contained in the Reuelation of Saint Iohn many of which wee ſee fulfilled in our time, eſpecially that concerning the Antichriſt of Rome, his manner of comming, his increaſing, his workes, ſeate and place of reſidence, all which are ſo manifeſtly and plainly deſcribed, as if the Apoſtle had written an Hiſtory and not a prophecie. Which plainly proueth that the Scriptures were not deuiſed by man, but penned by the inſpiration of Gods Spirit, who by his prouident wiſdome foreſeeth all things, and by his wiſe prouidence ruleth all things.

§. Sect. 6. That the Scriptures were penned by the holy men of God which are in them mentioned, & not forged in their names by ſome Politician.

But here Sathan will be ready to object, that we are not able to proue that theſe prophecies were written by any ſuch Prophets and holy men as are mentioned in the Scriptures, ſo long before the things contained in them were done, and that for ought we know they might be forged and foiſted in by ſome cunning fellow after the things were come to paſſe. The like objections alſo he maketh againſt the reſt of the Scriptures, as that either there was not any ſuch Moſes, or if there were, then hee was but ſome cunning fellow who writ of miracles and wonders neuer done to gaine credit to his Law which he had publiſhed; or if hee wrote nothing but truth in his time, yet we know not whether theſe bookes which goe vnder his name are perfect as he left them, or depraued and corrupted, hauing many things altred, added, and detracted, according to the pleaſure of thoſe who haue had the keeping of them. And ſo alſo hee objecteth againſt the other parts of holy Scriptures. To this I anſwere, that as it were great abſurditie to call in queſtion the writings of Cicero, Seneca, Plutarch and other heathen men whether they were penned by any ſuch men or no, becauſe the next age receiued them from the authors themſelues, and deliuered them to the next inſuing, and ſo by tradition from hand to hand they are come vnto vs; ſo it is no leſſe abſurditie to call into queſtion whether the Scriptures were written by the Prophets and Apoſtles who liued in their ſeuerall times, ſeeing the Church hath receiued them from time to time, and deliuered them to their ſucceſſors to this day. Moreouer the Law publiſhed by Moſes was not in ſecret or in a corner before ſome few witneſſes, but in the preſence of ſix hundred thouſand men, beſides women and children, and the ſtrange miracles and workes of God full of wonder, which he wrought for the better confirmation of his Law giuen; were done and performed in the preſence of many thouſands, who made relation of them to their poſteritie, and they to theirs to this day. Neither was it eaſie to be corrupted, altred or changed, ſeeing the Law-giuer did ſtraightly charge all men that they ſhould not adde, detract, or alter any thing vpon paine of preſent death in this World, and euerlaſting death in the life to come; And who would incurre the danger of ſuch fearefull puniſhment for the ſatiſfying of his fruitleſſe phantaſie? Moreouer, this booke of the Law was ſafely kept in the Tabernacle, and after in the Temple in the Arke which was placed in the holy of holieſt, and diuers authenticall Copies written out of it for euery one of the twelue Tribes, which were euery Sabbath day read and expounded in their Synagogues; yea ſo familiar were theſe writings with the Iewes, that they were written in their houſes, and vpon their garments, ſo as it was not poſſible for any man to falſifie them, but it would preſently bee eſpied. Yea (will the tempter ſay) but though they could not bee depraued or corrupted, yet they might at firſt bee inuented by ſome more ſubtill then the reſt, and ſo thruſt vpon men vnder the authority of God himſelfe, as being the writings of his Prophets and Apoſtles. To which I anſwere, that there is no probabilitie of truth in this objection; for I would faine know in what age this man ſhould write. In the time of Moſes? how then could hee write the Hiſtory of the Iudges who ſucceeded him? In the time of the Iudges? How then could he write the Hiſtory of the Kings? What then? could he write theſe things in the time of the Kings, and ſo faine a relation of ſuch things as went before? Why then it is neceſſary that hee ſhould haue liued in the time of the laſt Kings, for elſe hee could not haue penned their Hiſtory alſo: but before this time, there were many Copies abroad of the Scriptures in diuers Nations, by reaſon that the Iewes were ſcattered abroad through their captiuitie, where they as conſtantly profeſſed their Religion as in their owne Country. Beſides, if theſe writings had beene fained, in what age could they come to light but men diligently inquiring into them, as being matters importing no leſſe then their eternall ſaluation or condemnation, would haue found them counterfeit? For if they had beene penned in the ſame age wherein the things were done, who would haue beleeued them, if they did not aſſuredly know that they contained nothing but certaine truth? If in an after age, who would haue ſtraight ſubſcribed vnto them, vnleſſe they had by tradition from their Anceſtors been aſſured that ſuch things were done in former times? Furthermore, it is not probable but that the Iewes would haue made mention of ſuch an authour if they had knowne him; or if they had by ſome accident found them written in this forme, it is not likely that they would haue beene ſo ſimple as to haue built their faith ſo firmely vpon them, that they would rather chuſe to ſuffer all torments then bee brought to deny any one part of them.

Laſtly, it is obiected that in the time of Antiochus, the bookes of the Scriptures were by his tyranny and extreme crueltie wholly aboliſhed, and theſe which we haue, afterwardes inuented by the Iewes to grace their Religion. To which I anſwere, that this objection is ſo ſottiſhly fooliſh, that it ſauoureth not of common ſenſe, much leſſe of of any force of reaſon; for ſeeing now there were extant almoſt innumerable copies of the Scriptures, what meanes could be inuented by wit and rage vtterly to ſuppreſſe them, eſpecially ſeeing the Iewes made farre more precious account of them then of their liues, ſo that for the profeſſion of this truth they were content to ſuffer euen in this Tyrants time cruell deaths? Beſides, if they had beene all deſtroyed and aboliſhed in his time, how came it to paſſe that preſently after his death they were againe (as it were) pulled out of the aſhes and reuiued? Or how could others be put in their place, ſeeing innumerable men liued before and after his perſecution, who had the ſight and peruſing of the ſame books before they were ſuppreſſed, and afterwards againe when they came to light? Laſtly, though it ſhould bee granted that all the bookes of holy Scriptures had beene vtterly defaced in all the Dominions of Antiochus, yet this were nothing for the tempters purpoſe: for the Iewes were now ſcattered farre and wide, and had their Synagogues and Schooles in ſundry Nations where he had no authoritie; and therefore though he had deſtroyed all the Copies of the Scriptures in all places of his Kingdome, yet there were many in other places where hee bare no ſway. Neither were they now in the Hebrew tongue alone, but alſo tranſlated into the Greeke by the ſeuenty Interpreters, at the requeſt of Ptolomey Philadelphus, and the tranſlation carefully kept in his Library long before the time of this Antiochus. By all which it is more then manifeſt, that the Scriptures are the ſame which were penned by the Prophets and holy men of God, inſpired with his diuine Spirit, confirmed with ſo many and wonderfull miracles, and ſealed with the bloud of innumerable Martyrs. To this which hath beene ſaid, I might adde the teſtimony of Heathen Writers, who in their ſeuerall times haue in their writings made mention of the moſt principall things which are contained in the ſtory of the Bible: but as wee need not the helpe of a Candle to ſee the Sunne, which more ſufficiently ſheweth it ſelfe by his owne light: ſo this glorious light of Gods Truth is in it ſelfe ſo cleere and manifeſt, that it needeth not the teſtimonie of Infidels to confirme it, vnleſſe it bee to thoſe who farre exceed them in infidelitie. And that Noble, Learned and Religious Gentleman, Philip Mornay in his bookes of the Trueneſſe of Chriſtian Religion, hath eaſed mee of this labour, from whoſe neuer waſting Candle I haue borrowed the chiefeſt part of my light in the handling of this queſtion.

Chap. XXIII.

That the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, doth onely perſwade vs, that the Scriptures are the Word of God.

§ Sect. 1. That Gods Spirit only perſwades vs of the former truth; and that all other arguments without this are inſufficient.

ANd theſe are the arguments whereby all gain-ſayers may be conuinced, who deny the Scriptures to be the Word of God, and his infallible Truth: but though they are ſufficient for the conuiction of all oppoſers, and for ſtopping the mouthes of all Atheiſts, Epicures and meere Naturals; yet notwithſtanding, not any of theſe, nor all theſe are in themſelues ſufficient to beget faith in the heart of any, or to perſwade him with full aſſurance, to beleeue that the Scriptures are the Word of God, vnleſſe there be adjoyned vnto them the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, which doth not only conuince, but alſo throughly perſwade vs of this truth. And this alone in it ſelfe is al-ſufficient, though we neuer heard any other of the former reaſons, for the working of faith in vs, and a full perſwaſion of this truth. That all other arguments are inſufficient without the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, hereby it is manifeſt, in that not many wiſe, nor many learned in the World doe beleeue the Scriptures, which is the cauſe why they do not ſubmit themſelues

*Matth.*11.25.

1.*Cor.*2.14.

to the obedience thereof; whereas if faith might bee wrought in men by force of arguments or naturall reaſon, they who beſt conceiue them would moſt eaſily bee perſwaded by them: but contrariwiſe, wee ſee that theſe thinges are hid from the wiſe and prudent, and are reuealed vnto babes, not by meanes of naturall reaſon, but by the teſtimony of Gods Spirit. For naturally wee are all blinde in ſpirituall things, neither can the naturall man diſcerne the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned, as it is 1.*Cor.*2.14. And therefore, though the Scriptures be the glorious Light of Gods Truth, ſhining as bright as the Sun in the firmament, to thoſe, whoſe eyes are inlightened with Gods Spirit; yet to thoſe who continue in their naturall blindneſſe, and were neuer anointed with the precious eye-ſalue of Gods Spirit, this glorious light appeareth not, no more then the Sun-ſhine to thoſe who want their ſight, and hence it is that they grope at noone dayes. And as the poore woman, of whom Seneca ſpeaketh, being ſuddenly in the night ſtricken with blindneſſe, deſired the next day to vndraw the curtaines and open the windowes that ſhe might ſee, whereas the cauſe of her not ſeeing was not want of light, but want of ſight: ſo theſe men who are ſtricken with naturall blindneſſe, complaine that they cannot ſee the glorious Light of Gods Truth ſhining in his Word, and therefore deſire to haue it cleered by taking away the clouds of objections which ſeeme to ſhadow it, and by adding vnto it the light of humane reaſon; but the truth is, the fault is not in his glorious light, which alwayes ſhineth, but in their blindneſſe who cannot diſcerne it. And yet ſuch is the pride, ſelfe-loue, and vaine opinion which euery one hath of his own gifts, that they will ſooner imagine that the Sunne wanteth light, then they eyes to looke vpon it.

§. Sect. 2.
Other arguments conuince but not perſwade.

True it is, that by the former reaſons they may bee conuinced, ſo that they haue nothing to object; and perhappes they may bee brought to haue a good opinion of the Scriptures, and to a doubtfull conceit that they are the Word of God indeed: they may with the two Diſciples which trauelled to Emaus, when they heare the Scriptures interpreted, haue their hearts burne and throb within them, imagining that which they heare, to be more then the word of mortall man; and as the blind man in the Goſpell, when his eyes were a little illuminated by our Sauiour, diſcerned men, not as men, but as mouing trees; ſo they may in ſome confuſed manner know & acknowledge the Scriptures to be the Word of God; but before Chriſt hath fully opened their eyes, and by the precious eye-ſalue of his Spirit hath diſpelled their naturall blindneſſe, they will neuer certainly bee perſwaded, nor aſſuredly beleeue, that the Scriptures are, not the word of man, but the infallible truth of God. For it is not in mans power to beget faith in any, neither is it grounded vpon any naturall reaſons or perſwaſions; but it is the ſupernaturall gift of Gods Spirit, who illuminates our vnderſtanding, and inclines our will, ſo that we ſee, and ſtedfaſtly beleeue that truth which it deliuereth, as appeareth, *Epheſ.*2.8. 2.*Theſſ.*1.11.

Gods Spi

truth.

And when wee haue this teſtimony of Gods Spirit in our hearts, it will certainly perſwade vs of this truth, though we had no other reaſon: as appeareth by teſtimonies of Scripture, and by our owne experience. For the firſt it is ſaid, 1.*Cor.*2.15. That the ſpirituall man, that is, he who is endued with Gods Spirit, iudgeth all things, and yet himſelfe is iudged of no man. So 1.Iohn 2.27. But the anointing which yee receiued of him, dwelleth in you, and yee need not that any man teach you, but as the anointing teacheth you all things. And Verſe 20. But yee haue an ointment from him that is holy, and yee haue knowne all things. Wherby he vnderſtandeth the Spirit of God, which ſearcheth all things, euen the deepe things of God, which Spirit is giuen vnto vs that wee might know the things which are giuen vnto vs of God: as it is 1.Cor. 2.10,12. So our Sauiour promiſeth to ſend a Comforter vnto vs, euen the Spirit of truth, who ſhall lead vs in all truth, as it is Iohn 16. 7,13. And indeed who is more fit then the Spirit of God to confirme vs in the aſſurance of that truth, which hee himſelfe hath indited and inſpired? or who can better judge of the things of God then the Spirit of God? Who can better informe vs in this truth then he who is the Spirit of Truth? And therefore if wee haue the teſtimony of Gods Spirit in vs, we ſhall need no other witneſſe, nor any reaſons inuented by mans wit, to confirme vs in this truth, that the Scriptures are the word of the euer-liuing God.

Gods Spirit
perſwadeth of this truth by our owne feeling and experience.

For whoſoeuer are indued with Gods Spirit, doe alſo in their owne experience ſenſibly feele by the effects & operation of the Scriptures in themſelues, that they are not the word or inuention of mortall man, but the Word of the Almighty and moſt wiſe God. For when they perceiue that the eyes of their vnderſtanding are illuminated, which before were blind and full of darkneſſe; that their will is inclined to the obedience of Gods Commandements, which before was ſtubborne and rebellious; that their heart is become ſoft and tender, ſo as like the heart of Ioſias it melteth at the preaching of the Law, which before was obdurate and more hard then the Adamant; that their conſcience which was dead and ſeared, is now readie to checke and controll them when they commit any ſinne, and to allow and approue all good actions, that their affections are caſt in a new mould, ſo that whereas heretofore they loued nothing but the world & worldly things, now their loue is fixed on the Lord and thoſe things that are aboue; and whereas nothing was more odious in former times then vertue and godlineſſe, nothing more pleaſing then ſin and the delights thereof, now contrariwiſe, nothing is more loathſome then ſinne, nothing more ſweet and delightfull, then obedience to Gods Commandements; and when they further conſider, that this great alteration is made in them onely by the hearing of Gods Word preached; they need no further perſwaſions, nor other inſtructour to teach them, that the Scriptures were penned by the diuine operation of Gods Spirit, ſeeing the word of mortal man could neuer make ſuch a change in them, nor any thing elſe but the Word of the euer-liuing God; which at the firſt was alone ſufficient for their creation and generation, and now only is of power ſufficient for their regeneration, and new birth. As therefore the blind man reaſoned with the Phariſies, not with any far-fetcht reaſon, but from his own experience, to proue that our Sauiour was not a notorious ſinner, as the Phariſies accuſed him, but ſome great Prophet ſent from God; ſaying, Doubtleſſe this is a maruellous thing that yee know not whence hee is, and yet hee hath opened mine eyes; and, if this man were not of God hee could haue done nothing: ſo may wee reaſon with thoſe who affirme that it cannot bee knowne whence the Scriptures came, from God or man; vſing this argument taken from our owne experience, ſaying, Doubtleſſe this is a maruellous thing that yee doe not know whence the Scriptures are, ſeeing they haue opened mine eyes which were blind from my birth; inclined my will to obedience, which before was rebellious; ſoftned my heart and ſanctified and quite changed mine affections, ſo that I now loue that good which before I hated, and hate that euill which before I loued; and am delighted with thoſe holy exerciſes which heretofore did moſt diſpleaſe mee; and am diſpleaſed with thoſe vaine pleaſures and filthy ſins, which in times paſt did moſt delight me; and therefore if it were not of God it could haue done no ſuch thing, if it were not inſpired and indited by his holy Spirit, and made effectuall by the vertue and power thereof, it could neuer haue wrought in me ſuch ſtrange alterations.

CHAP. XXIV.

Satans tentations ſuggeſted againſt the tranſlations of holy Scriptures anſwered.

§. Sect. 1. That the Scriptures are truly tranſlated.

AND ſo much for anſwering Satans ſecond tentation, whereby he laboureth to make men neglect the hearing of Gods Word, that ſo they may neuer be effectually called. Now thirdly, if he cannot perſwade men that the Scriptures are not the Word of God, that ſo he may take away all the authoritie thereof, then hee will take exceptions againſt the tranſlation; ſuggeſting into their minds, that though the Scriptures be the Word of God, as they were penned in their owne proper languages, by men inſpired by his Spirit, yet for ought they know, being vnlearned, the Scriptures may be corruptly tranſlated, altered from their firſt originall, and things added and detracted at the Tranſlators pleaſure. To this I anſwere, that not onely profeſſors of Religion, but alſo Pagans, Infidels, Epicures and Atheiſts, who are euen the very limbs of the Deuill, haue beene skilfull and learned in theſe languages; and therefore if the tranſlations were not neere the originall, who could ſtop their mouthes from inueighing againſt ſuch falſhood? Who could reſtraine them from declaming againſt ſuch corruption, ſeeing they ſo hate and abhorre this truth, as that they wiſh the vtter extirpation thereof, and with extreme malice oppoſe themſelues againſt it, perſecuting and murdering to their vttermoſt power, whoſoeuer imbrace and profeſſe it? Moreouer, we know that the Iewes who more maliciouſly maligne Chriſtians and Chriſtianitie then the Turkes and Pagans, do notwithſtanding agree with vs in the tranſlation of the Olde Teſtament, & can take no exception againſt the New. Thirdly, there hath beene euer ſince Chriſts comming many Sectaries and Heretickes, who for the maintenance of their opinions haue but ſought to corrupt ſome few places of the Scriptures, but ſtill God hath raiſed vp ſome godly learned in the originall tongues, who haue confuted them and cleered the text; how therefore in ſuch diuiſion and vehement diſcord ſhould ſuch a thing be concealed? How ſhould any corrupt the whole Scriptures, or any principall places; ſeeing there is ſuch Controuerſies from time to time about euery letter and ſyllable? Laſtly, this truth of the Scriptures hath beene ſealed and confirmed with the bloud of many Martyrs, who haue beene excellently learned in the originall tongues: and who can imagine that they would haue beene ſo fooliſh, as to haue giuen their liues for the maintaining that truth which is contained in the Scriptures as wee haue them tranſlated, if they thought them corrupted and falſified in the tranſlation?

§. Sect. 2. Of the difference of tranſlations.

But the tempter will object that the tranſlations exceedingly differ one from another, and therefore ſome of them muſt needes bee falſe, and who would ground his faith vpon any, vntill hee know which is the beſt and trueſt? I anſwere, that though there bee diuers tranſlations, and one better then another; yet euen that which is moſt corrupt & imperfect, is ſufficient to inſtruct vs in the knowledge of God, and in the principles of Chriſtian Religion; neither is there amongſt them all, many errours which concerne the Articles of our faith, or come neere the ſubſtance of the doctrine which wee are bound to beleeue; for all the Tranſlatours haue laboured to conforme their tranſlations according to the analogie of faith; and though they haue not in all places deliuered the proper ſenſe, yet they haue endeauoured to come as neere it as they can; and where they haue failed, it is rather in circumſtances then in ſubſtance, in the proper and ſpeciall truth, then in the common and generall; and though in one place they doe not ſo cleere the truth as they ſhould, yet they doe it in many other. And therefore let not Satan perſwade vs to neglect the Scriptures, becauſe there are wants and imperfections in the tranſlations; for if we ſtudie and meditate euen in the meaneſt, and conforme and frame our liues according to that truth which we learne out of them, we ſhall attaine vnto euerlaſting life and happineſſe. Men do not vſe to neglect their buſineſſe, becauſe by reaſon of ſome Cloud the Sun doth not ſhine vpon them in his full brightneſſe; for that light which they enjoy is ſufficient, though not ſo gloriouſly bright as when it ſhineth in his full cleereneſſe, ſo wee muſt not neglect the conforming of our ſelues to the Scriptures, becauſe wee cannot ſee them ſhine in their owne glorious brightneſſe, as they were penned by the inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt in the originall language, (for as well may a Painter expreſſe in his Table with artificiall colours the glory of the Sun, as any man liuing can expreſſe that perfect beauty and diuine glory which ſhineth in the naturall phraſe of holy Scriptures in a tranſlation) but rather wee are to enjoy the benefit of this glorious ſhining Sun of Gods Word, though the brightneſſe bee as it were vailed and ſomewhat ſhadowed with the cloud of another language; for notwithſtanding, through it they ſhine and affoord vs ſuch light, as may be ſufficient to guide and direct vs in the wayes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, which will bring vs in the end to eternall glory and endleſſe felicitie.

Chap. XXV.

Satans tentations taken from the euill liues of the Miniſters anſwered.

§. Sect. That Sat diſgracing Miniſters, keth to di grace the Miniſtery

And ſo much concerning the objections which Sathan maketh againſt the Scriptures themſelues, to the end he may make men neglect to heare and read them. But if this will not preuaile, then hee leaueth to diſgrace the Word it ſelfe, and ſeeketh by diſcrediting the Miniſters thereof, to make them to contemne their Miniſtery; and to this end he vſeth all his skill to draw them into ſome groſſe and ſcandalous ſinne, and to neglect that doctrine themſelues which they teach vnto others, ſhewing in their liues and conuerſations, neither zeale of Gods glory, nor deſire of their neighbours good; and when hee hath attained vnto his purpoſe in ſome, hee thinketh it a ſufficient ground for the ſlander of all, and a notable foundation whereupon he may build a moſt pernitious tentation. Art thou ſo fooliſh (will hee ſay) as to thinke all Goſpell which the Miniſters teach, that all truth commeth from their mouthes, and that there is not a more eaſie way of attaining to euerlaſting life, then that which they ſhew vnto thee? Why, doe but looke vpon themſelues, and thou ſhalt find their liues far diſſonant from their words, that whileſt they exhort thee to ſtrictneſſe, they take their libertie, whileſt they diſſwade thee from taking thy pleaſure, affecting honours, ſetting thy heart vpon riches, themſelues in the mean time are as voluptuous, ambitious, and couetous as any other; and whileſt they endeauour to make ſinne to appeare vnto thee as blacke as Hell, themſelues embrace it with pleaſure and delight, as though it were the joy of Heauen. Who therefore can imagine that they thinke as they ſpeake, or that they are perſwaded that Heauen gate is ſo ſtraite, and the way ſo troubleſome and hard to find, as they goe about to perſwade thee, ſeeing themſelues take the leaſt paines in walking in this way which they preſcribe vnto others? Or if it be the truth which they teach, then ſurely they are not worth the hearing, who in their liues deny this truth which in their words they profeſſe; for what hope canſt thou haue that it will be powerfull to worke grace in thee, ſeeing it hath no power to worke it in themſelues? or that they can perſwade thee to that holineſſe, to which themſelues are not perſwaded?

§. Sect. The anſwe the former tentation.

And thus doth Sathan ſeeke to keepe men from hearing of Gods Word, that ſo being weakned and hunger-ſtarued, for want of this heauenly Manna, hee may vanquiſh them at the firſt on-ſet, and lead them captiue vnto all ſin; and being ſtill hood-winkt with the thicke vaile of ignorance, hee may lead them the direct way to Hell and vtter deſtruction; and therefore it behoueth euery one to arme themſelues, that ſo they may beate backe the violence of this tentation. Firſt therefore, whereas he ſaith that the Miniſters ſpeake not as they thinke, becauſe they doe not as they ſpeake; wee are to know for the anſwering of this tentation, that Miniſters are ſubiect to the ſame corruptions & infirmities which are incident vnto other men, & though they are called in the Scriptures Angels, in reſpect that they are Gods Meſſengers to bring and publiſh the glad tidings of the Goſpell, yet are they not Angels in reſpect of their puritie and perfection: but as they are fleſh and bloud, ſubiect to all humane frailty; as they are borne in ſin and defiled with originall corruption, ſo are they as prone as others to fall into all actuall tranſgreſſions, if the Lord reſtraine them not. Neither muſt we imagine that learning and knowledge doe indue men with ſanctification and the ſauing graces of Gods Spirit, for then wee might attaine vnto them by our ſtudy, labour and induſtry; whereas the Scriptures teach vs that they are Gods free gifts which hee beſtoweth on whom he will; then it would follow that hee who is indued with moſt knowledge and learning, ſhould alſo haue moſt grace and ſanctification, whereas our owne experience teacheth vs, that many of the greateſt Doctours of the World ſpend their liues in all voluptuous pleaſures and licentiouſneſſe. What then? do theſe men teach one thing and beleeue another? Surely it may be the caſe of many, for faith commeth not by variety of knowledge, neither is it tied to learning; but it is the free gift of God beſtowed as well, yea and as often alſo, vpon the ſimple fiſherman as vpon the learned Phariſie; and therefore though they haue ſuch great learning and knowledge, that they are able to inſtruct others & defend the truth againſt all oppoſers, yet may they be as hard-hearted and full of infidelity, as the moſt ignorant and ſottiſh in the World. Shall then their hardneſſe of heart and infidelitie moue vs to call the truth of God which they deliuer into queſtion, as though it were a matter doubtfull whether it is the Word of God or no? God forbid. 3.4. Yea, let God be true and euery man a liar. For their owne conſciences are conuinced of this truth though not perſwaded, and the Lord hath giuen them eyes to ſee it, though not hearts to beleeue it; to the end that the praiſe of our ſaluation may wholly bee aſcribed to his owne free grace, who calleth and iuſtifieth, ſanctifieth and ſaueth whom he will; and not vnto humane learning or knowledge, which may be attained vnto by mans induſtry and labour.

That not learning, but Gods Spirit freeth vs from our naturall corruptions.

Sect. 3. It may bee alſo that theſe who teach one thing and practiſe the cleane contrary, doe notwithſtanding beleeue, that is, know and giue their aſſent to that which they deliuer; but this generall faith is incident as well to the Deuils themſelues as vnto men, and therefore thoſe who haue it may neuertheleſſe bee as worldly, carnall, and prophane as euer they were. For before we attaine vnto a true iuſtifying faith, and be ſanctified by Gods Spirit, our knowledge and learning will not free vs from our corruption of nature, wherein we are conceiued, borne and bred; ſo that though we ſee the truth, yea know & acknowledge it to bee the Word of God, which ſhall one day either iuſtifie or condemne vs, yet if the Lord doe not ioyne with this knowledge the inward operation of his Spirit, making it effectuall for our ſanctification, and for the purging of vs from our corruptions, we are as readie to fall into all ſin, being inticed and carried away with the riches, honours and pleaſures of the World, as if we were ſtill moſt ſottiſhly ignorant. A notable example hereof wee haue in Salomon, who though hee had receiued ſuch a meaſure of wiſdome and diuine knowledge, as neuer meere man attained vnto the like, yea though hee were a pen-man of an excellent portion of holy Scriptures, yet (the Lord leauing him to the corruption of his owne heart) hee fell moſt grieuouſly into all abominable wickedneſſe: and yet who will dare to ſay, that Salomon did not write as he thought, and not rather that he was carried away through the violence of his corruptions, to commit that ſin which his conſcience condemned, and to neglect obedience to Gods vndoubted truth? So Dauid who was indued with notable knowledge, and no leſſe grace, fell notwithſtanding moſt fearefully into adultery and murther; but ſhall wee therefore thinke that hee was not perſwaded that theſe were horrible ſins, or that when he commended mercy, innocency and chaſtitie, he ſpake not as he thought? And Peter likewiſe denied and forſwore his Maſter, whom before hee had acknowledged to be the Sonne of God; but ſhall wee hence conclude that Peter diſſembled when hee made that notable confeſſion, becauſe when hee came to the triall hee vtterly diſclaimed it? Nay, rather wee may certainly bee perſwaded, that Dauid was carried away with his luſt and concupiſcence, and Peter ouercome with feare and frailtie, and both drawne, through their corruption, to commit thoſe ſins which their conſciences condemned. But leauing ſuch farre fetcht inſtances, let euerie man, yea euen hee who hath attained vnto the greateſt meaſure of faith and ſanctification, enter into a ſtrict and due conſideration with himſelfe, and examine his owne conſcience before Gods tribunall ſeate; and then let him tell me whether hee performe obe-obedience to all that truth which hee knoweth and beleeueth, or whether hee may not iuſtly complaine, that our corruption takes occaſion by the knowledge of Gods commandement, to worke in vs all manner of concupiſcence; that hee doth thoſe things which he alloweth not, yea which hee hateth and abhorreth; that though hee doe not onely know the law of God, but alſo is delighted therewith in the inner man, yet that there is another law in his members which warreth againſt the law of his minde, and leadeth him captiue vnto the law of ſinne, as it is *Rom.*7.8.15.23. And if this bee the caſe of Salomon, Dauid, Peter, and of all Gods children, who haue attained to the greateſt meaſure of knowledge and ſanctification; let not Satan perſwade vs that wee may ſafely neglect the miniſterie of the word, becauſe the Miniſters thereof ſeeme not perſwaded that the doctrine which they deliuer is true, in that they doe not practiſe it in their owne liues: for many knowing and beleeuing that truth which they deliuer, are notwithſtanding deſtitute of the ſanctifying graces of Gods ſpirit, and therefore wholly carried away into all licentious wickedneſſe; and many alſo who are ſanctified, being not wholly purged from their naturall corruptions, are readie to ſhew their frailtie and infirmities to all the world, though they know, acknowledge, beleeue, and from their hearts embrace that truth which they teach and profeſſe.

*Rom.*7.8,15,23.

§. Sect. 4.
The ſecond tentation taken from the euill liues of Miniſters, anſwered.

But if Satan cannot thus preuaile, nor cauſe vs to doubt of Gods truth, becauſe the Miniſters liue not according to that doctrine which they teach; then hee will perſwade them at leaſt to refuſe to heare ſuch whoſe liues are ſcandalous, as being vnworthie to take the word into their mouthes, and vnable to conuert or amend others, ſeeing the word is not powerfull which they deliuer for the conuerting and reforming of there owne liues. Which tentation of Satan is moſt dangerous and pernicious vnto many; for what greater diſcouragement can their bee to a ſicke patient, then to take phyſicke of ſuch a Phyſition who cannot cure himſelfe of the ſame diſeaſe? Or who willingly eate of that food, which hee who giueth it vnto him ſo loatheth and abhorreth, that hee will not ſo much as taſte of it? Or who taketh delight in hearing him diſcourſe of mercie, chaſtitie, and liberalitie whom hee knoweth wholly poſſeſſed of crueltie, luſt, and coueteouſneſſe? And therefore it were to bee wiſhed that Gods Miniſters ſhould be Phyſitions to themſelues, before they take vpon them the cure of others; that they ſhould not ſtand like Images by the high way ſides, directing others in their iournies, themſelues neuer mouing foote, but that they ſhould like guides goe before them, and inſtruct them not onely by their word, but alſo moue them to receiue their inſtruction by their example. But yet let vs take heed, that Satan doe not take occaſion vpon the neglect of their dutie to make vs neglect ours; and that hee doe not rob vs of the ineſtimable treaſure of Gods word, and depriue vs of this heauenly Manna and food of our ſoules, wherby all the graces of Gods ſpirit are begotten; nouriſhed and increaſed in vs, becauſe the Miniſter who offereth it vnto vs doth not feed vpon it himſelfe. And to this end we are to know that the miniſterie of the word is Gods ordinance, which dependeth not vpon the worthineſſe, of him who deliuereth it neither is it made voide and vneffectual by his vnworthines, but it hath its vertue, force and power from the bleſſing of God, and from the inward operation of his ſpirit, who appplieth it to the hearts and conſciences of men, and thereby illuminates their vnderſtandings, and begetteth faith in them and all ſanctifying and ſauing graces. And hence it is, that the Miniſter himſelfe, findeth not the word which hee deliuereth, effectuall for the begetting of faith or any grace in him, which notwithſtanding is powerful in many of the hearers for theſe purpoſes, becauſe the Lord vouchſafeth not the aſſiſtance and inward co-operation of his holy Spirit with the outward Miniſterie of the Word vnto him, which notwithſtanding hee mercifully granteth vnto others. Seeing then the Miniſterie of the Word is Gods owne Ordinance, which he maketh effectuall to whom he will by the inward operation of his holy Spirit, by whomſoeuer it is deliuered; and ſeeing thoſe Miniſters which are moſt holy and vertuous cannot at their pleaſure infuſe grace into their hearers; for Paul may plant, and Apollos may water, but God giueth the increaſe; ſo that neither the one nor the other are any thing in themſelues without Gods bleſſing; ſeeing alſo thoſe who are looſe and vicious, if they truely preach the truth it ſelfe, cannot by their badneſſe hinder Gods Ordinance, but that comming from their mouthes it will bee effectuall for the conuerſion of men vnto God, and the eternall ſaluation of thoſe that beleeue; for though vnto himſelfe it bee but a dead letter, yet the Spirit of God may giue life vnto it in thoſe who receiue it; and though he preacheth for glory or gaine, or for enuie and ſtrife, yet wee muſt with the Apoſtle reioyce that Chriſt is preached any manner of way, and reape the fruit thereof to our eternall comfort; Laſtly, ſeeing the wiſdome of God thinketh it good to ſend Ambaſſadours of both ſorts, ſanctified and vnſanctified, and oftentimes maketh the word in the mouth of a faithfull and godly Miniſter the ſauour of death vnto death, and the ſame word in the mouth of one who is void of of grace and ſanctification the ſauour of life vnto life, to the end that wee ſhould not depend vpon man, but wholly reſt and rely our ſelues vpon Gods owne Ordinance, giuing and aſcribing vnto him the whole glory and prayſe of our conuerſion and ſaluation; let not Satan perſwade vs to thinke worſe of the pure Word of God, becauſe of his corruption who deliuereth it. For what were this but to refuſe a comfortable ambaſſage from a gracious Prince, becauſe we diſlike the qualities of the Ambaſſadors? what were this but to ſcorn to receiue a kind letter from a louing Father, becauſe the carrier doth diſpleaſe vs? What is this but to refuſe a rich treaſure, becauſe it is brought vnto vs in an earthen veſſell which is fraile and brittle? What is it but like proud beggers to refuſe the bountifull almes of a mercifull Prince, becauſe it is deliuered vnto vs by an Almner who is couetous and hard-hearted? Yea, what is it but to croſſe our Sauiour Chriſts expreſſe Commandement, who commanded all to heare euen the Scribes and Phariſies who ſate in Moſes Chaire, and to doe after their words, though not after their workes? In a word, what is it elſe then to pinne Gods Ordinance vpon mans ſleeue, & to make the preaching of the Goſpell, which is the power of God to ſaluation vnto euery one who beleeueth, to depend vpon the weake ſtrength of fraile fleſh, either to bee made effectuall by his worthineſſe, or to be made vaine and vnprofitable by his vnworthineſſe?

ANd thus Satan may be anſwered, when he taketh occaſion of diſcrediting the Goſpell and hindering the courſe thereof by obiecting the wickedneſſe and worldly prophaneſſe, or the infirmities and fraile weakneſſe of the Miniſters thereof. But if he cannot thus preuaile, hee leaueth their liues and commeth to their doctrine. Doſt thou not ſee (will hee ſay) that there are innumerable Sects and contrary Factions amongſt thoſe who profeſſe Chriſtianitie? Some Papiſts, ſome Proteſtants, ſome Arrians, ſome Anabaptiſts, ſome Pelagians, ſome Libertines, ſome Familiſts, ſome Donatiſts, and many other who all cite and alleage Scriptures for the defending of their contrary opinions, and confidently affirme, that they only haue the truth amongſt them? How therefore canſt thou know which is truth and which is falſhood; who interpret the Scriptures aright, & who wreſt and miſconſtrue them? or if thou wert diſpoſed to be religious, what Religion wilt thou profeſſe in this great confuſion? to what Church wilt thou adioyne thy ſelfe, ſeeing one is contrary to another, and thou knoweſt not which is in the truth? If thou beeſt wiſe therefore keep thy ſelfe quiet & let all alone, hearken not to any of them, or if thou doſt, beleeue them not ouer haſtily, be of that Religion which wil beſt ſtand with thine aduantage; or if thou wilt needs ſerue God, follow thine owne conſcience, haue a good intention in that thou doeſt, & it is enough; but profeſſe not one Religion more then another, til thou ſeeſt thoſe who are learned agree amongſt themſelues, for vntill then thou canſt haue no aſſurance that thou profeſſeſt the truth.

Sect. 2.
The anſwere to the former tentation.

1.Cor.11.19.
1.Tim.4.1.
2.Pet.2.1.

For the anſwering of which tentation we are to know, that the Scriptures haue foretold vnto vs that there ſhould be ſects, diuiſions, hereſies, and falſe teachers, euen vnto the end of the world; as appeareth 1.Cor.11.19. 1.Tim.4.1. 2.Pet.2.1. And the experience of all times both vnder the Law, and vnder the Goſpell, may ſufficiently teach vs, that whereſoeuer the truth of God is publiſhed and preached, there it is oppoſed by innumerable Sectaries and Hereticks, which by the malice and ſubtiltie of Satan, are ſtirred vp to impugne and diſcredit the true Religion: and therefore if Satan can ſtill keepe vs blind-folded in ignorance, and reſtraine vs from the confeſſion and profeſſion of our faith, till there be a generall vnitie and agreement in the true Religion, without all oppoſition or gain-ſaying, then hee hath attained his deſire; for ſo ſhall wee neuer ioyne our ſelues in the communion of Saints, nor be true members of the Church, profeſſing and practiſing the Religion of Ieſus Chriſt, ſeeing the Deuill will not ceaſe to ſtirre vp his wicked inſtruments, falſe Prophets, Sectaries and Heretickes, to the end they may oppugne and contradict the truth when it is ſincerely preached, and make it fruitleſſe in the hearts of vnbeleeuers; ſeeing alſo our Sauiour hath taught vs that his Church is but a little flocke, which is aſſaulted and grieuouſly vexed, not only with Lions, Tigres and open enemies, but alſo with Foxes, and Wolues in ſheeps clothing, and ſecret enemies, who vnder the ſhew and profeſſion of Religion, ſeeke to vndermine and bring it to ruine. And the Apoſtle alſo hath forewarned vs, that there muſt be hereſies among vs, that they who are approoued might bee knowne. Though therefore there bee many Sects and Hereſies, many falſe Religions, & but one Truth, this muſt not make vs to neglect all, till there be an vniuerſall agreement, for as well may we reconcile light and darkneſſe, the children of God with the children of the Deuill, grace and naturall corruption, truth and errour, as the true Religion with thoſe which are falſe, or the profeſſors of the one with the profeſſors of the other. Thoſe who haue important buſineſſes abroad, doe not ſtay at home and refuſe to trauell becauſe ſome goe out of the way; but therefore they are more carefull to informe themſelues of euery turning in their journey, becauſe they would not erre with others: thoſe that haue a deſire to liue, doe not refuſe all meate, becauſe ſome ſurfet and die, by eating that which is vnwholeſome; but rather hereby they are made more warie in making good choice of ſuch diet as is fit for the preſeruation of their health: thoſe alſo who are ſicke, doe not neglect all phyſicke, becauſe there are many coozening Impoſtors and vnlearned Empiricks who kill in ſtead of curing; but this maketh them with more circumſpection to find out a ſkilfull and learned Phyſition. Let vs therefore follow the like practice in theſe ſpirituall things: and ſeeing there is but one direct way which leadeth vnto Heauen, and many by-wayes which leade to deſtruction, let not this keepe vs from trauelling this heauenly journey, but rather mooue vs with more diligence to inquire the right and perfect way: ſeeing alſo there are many which offer vs poyſon in ſtead of the wholeſome food and phyſicke of our ſoules, let vs learne with more care to make choice, & to put a difference betweene the one and the other.

1.Cor.11.19.

§. Sect. 3.
How the vnlearned may diſcerne the true Religion from that which is falſe.

But here it will bee demanded how thoſe who are ſimple & ignorant can judge which is the true Religion, and which is the falſe, who teacheth the truth, and who falſhood? To which I anſwere, that euery one muſt labour to informe himſelfe of the truth, by ſtudying and meditating in Gods Word: this muſt be his light to guide him, his counſellor to informe him, his touchſtone whereby he may diſcerne the Copper and Braſſe of mens inuentions, from the pure Gold of Gods true Religion. Neither are wee to receiue all doctrines hand ouer head, but as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, we muſt trie the ſpirits whether they be of God or no: and with the men of Berea, wee muſt ſearch the Scriptures, to ſee if thoſe things be ſo as they are deliuered, and accordingly either receiue them if they are conſonant with Gods word, or reject them if they be diſſonant thereunto. Yea (will ſome ſay) this were a direct courſe if thoſe only who haue the truth on their ſide had Scripture to alleage, but ſeeing euery Hereticke is as ready to quote Scripture, for the vpholding and defending of his Hereſie, as the profeſſors of Gods Truth for the maintenance thereof; all the queſtion is, whoſe interpretation is to bee receiued as good, and whoſe to bee rejected as falſe and erroneous? To this I anſwere, that though there bee ſome places in the Scripture hard and ſomewhat doubtfull, and therefore the more eaſie to be wreſted vnto a wrong ſenſe, yet are there others cleer and euident, for the confuting of all Sects, Hereſies and errours whatſoeuer: and therefore we muſt expound thoſe places which are darke and ambiguous by thoſe which are perſpicuous and manifeſt. For example, if wee would know whether Popery be the true Religion or no, wee muſt examine the doctrines thereof by Gods Word, not making choice of thoſe places which ſeeme any way hard and doubtfull, but of thoſe which are cleere and manifeſt; and ſo wee ſhall find that their doctrines are as contrary to Gods truth, as light to darkneſſe. For whereas they teach that wee are able to fulfill the Law, and to merit Heauen, the Scriptures affirme the cleane contrary, namely, that in many things wee ſinne all, Iames 3.2. and whoſoeuer ſhall keepe the whole Law, and yet faileth in one point, is guiltie of all, Iam. 2.10. that there is no man who ſinneth not, 1. Kings 8.46. that in Gods ſight none that liueth can be iuſtified, Pſal. 143.2. that when wee haue done all thoſe things that are commanded vs, we are vnprofitable ſeruants, and haue done but our dutie, and therefore merit nothing, Luke 17.10. So whereas they teach that wee muſt pray to Saints and Angels, becauſe they make interceſſion for vs, the Apoſtle flatly excludeth all other from this office, but Chriſt alone. 1. Tim. 2.5. there is one Mediatour betweene God and man. Whereas they teach that marriage is vnlawful for ſome men at all times, and ſome meats vnlawfull for all men at ſometimes, the Holy Ghoſt telleth vs plainly that this is erroneous and a doctrine of Deuils; and that euery creature of God is good, and nothing ought to be refuſed, if it be receiued with thankeſgiuing, 1. Tim. 4.1,3,4. And that marriage is honourable for all men, and the bed vndefiled Heb. 13.4. That to auoid fornication, euery man muſt haue his wife, and euery woman her owne husband, 1. Cor. 7,2. And that better it is to marry then to burne, Verſ. 9. Whereas they teach that our Sauiour Chriſt is carnally and corporally preſent in the Sacrament, the Scriptures teach vs the contrary, namely, that hee is aſcended into Heauen, and therefore not vpon the earth. Matth. 28.6. That when he was taken into Heauen he was taken from vs Acts 1.11. That the Heauens muſt containe him vntill the time that all things be reſtored, Acts 3.21. Whereas they teach that they muſt make and worſhip Images, both are expreſly forbidden in the ſecond Commandement, and in many other places of Scripture. Whereas they teach that the Scriptures ſhould be kept from the common people, in an vnknowne language; the Apoſtle plainly affirmeth that, he had rather in the Church ſpeake fiue words with his vnderſtanding, that hee might alſo inſtruct others, then ten thouſand words in a ſtrange tongue; and flatly enjoyneth that the Prophets phets ſhould keepe ſilence in the Church, rather then ſpeake ſtrange languages, where there is no interpreter, 1.Cor.14.19,27,28. Whereas they hold that the cup in the adminiſtration of the Lords Supper, is to be withheld from the common people, and giuen only to the Prieſts, the quite contrary is to be obſerued in the inſtitution, whereas our Sauiour ſaith, Drinke yee all of it, becauſe it is his bloud of the New Teſtament that is ſhed for many, for the remiſſion of ſins: plainly thereby inferring, that this Signe and Sacrament of his bloud belongeth to as many as were redeemed by it, Matth.26.28. And wheras they ſay, that here the Diſciples were onely, and that to them alone this ſpeech was directed, the Apoſtle plainly taketh away this cauill: for ſetting downe the words of inſtitution for the vſe of the whole Church of Corinth, he willeth euery one indefinitely to examine himſelfe, and ſo to eate of this bread, and drinke of this cup, 1.Cor.11.28. And thus if we ſtudie and meditate in Gods Word, wee ſhall find moſt cleere and manifeſt places for the confirmation of the truth, and confutation of all Sects, Errours and Hereſies. But what if this meanes be taken away from vs, of reading and ſtudying the Scriptures, either becauſe they are only to be had in an vnknowne language, as in the time of Popery, or becauſe we cannot read, and haue no body to teach vs? What if both reading and ſtudying them, wee finde many doubts and difficulties, and diuers places which ſeeme to fauour and maintaine diuers oppoſite opinions and Religions? How then muſt we quit our ſelues out of this labyrinth of ambiguitie and doubtfulneſſe, ſeeing it is prejudiciall to appeale to the judgement of either faction? I anſwere, that in theſe dayes the meanes of knowledge are not ſo ſcant, but that they may enjoy them that labour for them; for either they may obtaine the vſe of the Scriptures in their owne language where they dwell, or elſe in ſome other place by remoouing their habitation; and though they cannot reade, yet it is no hard matter to learne, to thoſe who will vſe paines and diligence, or at leaſt to get the helpe of others to ſupply their want and defect in this behalfe. But let it be granted that wee were abandoned of all theſe meanes, or that vſing them, there were ſome doubt remayning of which we cannot be reſolued; are we therefore deſtitute of helpe, and forſaken of all meanes, whereby we might attaine vnto the knowledge of the truth? No ſurely. For, if when all other meanes faile vs, we haue our recourſe vnto God by earneſt and effectuall prayer, inſtantly crauing his holy Spirit to guide and direct vs, we haue a mercifull promiſe that he wil heare our requeſt and grant vnto vs his holy Spirit; and that thereby he will illuminate the blind eyes of our vnderſtanding, inlighten our mindes with the knowledge of the truth, and take away from vs all prejudice of opinion and fore-ſtalled judgement, ſo as we ſhall diſcerne truth from falſhood, and Gods true Religion, from errors and lies, Sects and Hereſies. For this ſpirit of truth will leade vs into all truth, as it is Iohn 16.13. Hee ſearcheth all things, euen the deepe things of God; and to this end wee receiue him, that wee may know the things which are giuen vnto vs of God, as it is 1.Cor. 2.10,12. Hee is that precious eye-ſalue, wherewith being anointed wee ſee, who before were blind, Reuel.3.18. And if once we haue receiued this anointing, we need not that any man ſhould teach vs, for this anointing teacheth vs all things, as it is 1.Iohn 2.27. Though therefore wee were abandoned of all other meanes, yet let not Sathan perſwade vs to neglect all Religion, becauſe wee cannot diſcerne the true Religion from that which is falſe: for if wee earneſtly and ſincerely labour after the knowledge of the truth, and with good Cornelius continually implore the aſſiſtance and direction of Gods Spirit, wee ſhall be ſure to obtaine our deſire, for the Lord hath promiſed it, and he will vndoubtedly be as good as his word.

CHAP. XXVII.

Satans tentations taken from our vnworthineſſe and vnfitneſſe to heare, anſwered.

§. Sect. 1. That our ſins and vnworthineſſe ſhould not hinder vs from hearing Gods Word.

ANd ſo much concerning the tentations of Sathan, which hee draweth from the Miniſters, to diſcredit the Goſpell, and to diſſwade men from the hearing thereof; but if he cannot thus preuaile, he will leaue the Miniſters, and come to the parties themſelues, ſuggeſting into their minds that they are vnworthy, in reſpect of the innumerable number of their ſins, to be hearers of the Goſpell, which is pure and excellent; and that their corruptions are ſo great, their vnderſtandings ſo blind, their memories ſo ſlippery, their wils ſo peruerſe, their heart and affections ſo wicked and prophane, that it is to be feared in regard of this their vnfitneſſe to heare, that the Word of God, which in it ſelfe is the ſauour of life vnto life, will become vnto them the ſauour of death to their more deepe condemnation. For the anſwering of which tentation, wee are to know, firſt, that our ſins and vnworthineſſe ſhould be ſo farre from hindering vs from the hearing of Gods Word, that they ſhould rather ſerue as forcible arguments to moue vs more attentiuely and diligently to heare it: becauſe it is the meanes ordained of God to pull vs out of our ſins, to purge vs from our cor-corruptions, to worke in vs true ſanctification, and to make vs of the ſonnes of wrath the children of God. Moreouer, though we want faith, and all other ſanctifying graces, yet wee are to heare the Word of God: for therefore the Lord hath ordained the Miniſterie of the Word, not onely to increaſe grace where it is begun, but alſo to beget and begin it where it is wanting; ſo that wee muſt not only heare becauſe wee are fit, but alſo that wee may bee made fit, who before were vnfit. Neither are wee to imagine that faith and other graces goe before hearing, but follow after as fruits and effects thereof; Rom.10.14,17. as the Apoſtle plainly ſheweth, *Rom.*10.14. But how ſhall they call on him in whom they haue not beleeued? And how ſhall they beleeue in him of whom they haue not heard? And how ſhall they heare without a Preacher? And Verſe 17. Faith commeth by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. If then there be no faith without hearing, and no grace without faith, it muſt needs follow, that before we heare, we are deſtitute of faith and all ſauing grace, and that by hearing they are wrought in vs, God preuenting vs with his grace, and calling vs vnto himſelfe, not only when wee had no deſerts to merit his mercy, but alſo not ſo much as any grace to deſire it. And hence it is that the Apoſtle ſaith, 2.Tim.1.9. That God hath called vs with an holy calling, not according to our workes, but according to his own purpoſe and grace, which was giuen vnto vs through Chriſt Ieſus before the world was. The truth hereof may appeare in all the examples of Gods Saints, who before their calling were ſo farre from deſeruing any grace at Gods hand, that rather they deſerued confuſion and vtter deſtruction. For example, what worthines was in Abraham before his conuerſion who liued in groſſe Idolatrie? what worthineſſe in Rahab the Harlot? in Manaſſes a cruell Tyrant, a wicked Sorcerer, an horrible Idolater? what worthineſſe in Mary Magdalene poſſeſſed by ſeuen Deuils? or in Matthew and Zaccheus the Publicans? or in Paul who perſecuted the Church of God? In a word, what worthineſſe is in any of Gods Saints, before the Lord by the preaching of his Word, made effectuall by the inward operation of his Spirit, hath called and conuerted, and pulled them out of their ſinnes and corruptions in which they wallowed, and indued them with ſome meaſure of his ſanctifying and ſauing graces?

§. Sect.2.
That our vnfitneſſe to heare, ſhould not make vs neglect hearing.

Secondly, whereas he obiecteth our vnfitneſſe to heare, becauſe our eares are dull, our eyes blind, our hearts hard, and our wils, affections, and all the powers and faculties of our bodies and ſoules wholly corrupted and diſordered; this muſt not mooue vs to neglect the hearing of Gods Word, but to become hearers thereof with more care and diligence. For it is the two-edged ſword of the Spirit, which will pierce and make way for it ſelfe to enter, and will build a lodging for it ſelfe to dwell in. It is not onely a light to guide thoſe that ſee, but a precious eye-ſalue to giue ſight vnto thoſe who were born blinde. It is not onely the heauenly dew which maketh Gods graces to ſpring in vs, but alſo that diuine ſeed which giueth them being and rooting in our hearts. It is not onely the food of our ſoules to preſerue and increaſe that ſtrength which we alreadie haue, but alſo that immortall ſeed by which wee are firſt begotten vnto God & borne againe, who before were dead in our ſinnes, and that excellent phyſicke of our ſoules by which they are purged from their corruptions and reſtored vnto health, which before were deadly ſicke in ſin; it maketh vs firſt to will that which is good, and then further to deſire it; it giueth vs life who before were dead in our ſins, and then preſerues this life; it begets and begins faith and ſanctification and all other graces in vs, and being begotten and begun it ſtrengtheneth and increaſeth them. And therefore let not Satan diſſwade vs from the hearing of Gods Word, becauſe of our ſins, vnworthineſſe and vnfitneſſe; for as it is a notable meanes ordained of God for the increaſing of grace where it already is, ſo is it no leſſe effectual for the begetting of grace where it neuer was. There is no wiſeman that will neglect his trade and liue idly becauſe he is poor, but rather this wil moue him to bee more painfull therein, as being the meanes whereby hee may become rich; neither doe men refuſe all nouriſhment, becauſe they haue empty and hungry ſtomackes, but doe more earneſtly deſire meat that they may be filled and ſatisfied; yea euen thoſe whoſe ſtomackes are weake doe not altogether refuſe their food, but eat ſomething to ſharpen their appetite, and ſo by little and little in vſing their ſtomackes they get ſtomackes. Let vs follow the like practice, and when we perceiue our beggerlineſſe in Gods graces, let vs more earneſtly labour after this heauenly treaſure and precious pearle, that wee may be made rich; when wee feele our emptineſſe of all vertue and goodneſſe, let vs more eagerly hunger after this ſpirituall Manna that wee may bee filled and ſatisfied; when wee finde our appetite weake and our ſtomackes indiſpoſed to eate of this heauenly food, let vs a little force our ſelues againſt the appetite, or vſe all good meanes to quicken and ſharpen it, and ſo we ſhall find that the oftner we eate, the oftner we ſhall deſire, the more wee ſhall deſire to heare, and the greater benefit wee ſhall receiue by it. Whereas neglect of hearing will make vs euery day more vnfit to heare, euen as long abſtinence doth quite ſpoile the ſtomake.

object, that they find ſo many corruptions in their hearing of Gods Word, and performe theſe duties of Gods ſeruice with ſo manifold and groſſe imperfections hauing their minds wholly diſtracted with wandring and wicked thoughts, yea ſometimes with impious imaginations, and rebellious blaſphemies; and when they are at the beſt, receiuing theſe glad tidings with ſuch drowſie dulneſſe and ſpirituall deadneſſe, ſuch hardneſſe of heart, and loathing wearines; that they are ſo farre from profiting by theſe holy exerciſes, as that they are fully perſwaded all they do is turned into ſin. And therefore it were much better for them vtterly to neglect and omit theſe religious duties, then by performing them to increaſe the number of their ſinnes, and the fearefull meaſure of their juſt condemnation. To which I anſwer, that the ſight of our imperfections, corruptions, and grieuous ſins in the performance of theſe holy duties, muſt by no meanes cauſe vs to neglect them, but to practiſe them with greater diligence, labouring againſt our corruptions, and endeauouring and ſtriuing to performe them with more perfection. And if yet notwithſtanding wee cannot bee freed from our wonted ſins and imperfections, we muſt bewaile them with bitter ſorrow, and by feruent and daily prayer, begge the aſſiſtance of Gods holy Spirit, for the mortifying and ſubduing of theſe corruptions. But in any caſe let vs not entertaine a quarrell vpon any tearmes againſt the meanes of our ſaluation, nor bee diſcouraged in the performance of theſe religious duties of Gods ſeruice, not doing them at all, becauſe wee cannot doe them in that perfection which we would.

To which purpoſe let vs know, that to heare the Word of God is not a thing arbitrary and indifferent, but a part of that ſeruice which God neceſſarily requireth to bee performed of vs. And therefore though we grieuouſly ſinne in the doing of it, yet muſt we doe it ſtill, ſeeing we cannot ſo hainouſly ſin in the hearing of the word, if we endeuour to heare it as reuerently and profitably as we can, as we ſhal if we neglect it altogether. For it is a leſſe ſin to faile in ſin in the manner of doing, then to omit the maine dutie it ſelfe; to ſin of infirmitie becauſe we can doe no better, then of wilfulneſſe and negligence by not doing that wee can. For what Father would not take it much better at his childes hand, if he performe the dutie which he hath enjoyned, though it bee neuer ſo ill and imperfectly done, if he know that he hath vſed his beſt endeauour, then that he ſhould vtterly neglect it, and excuſe his negligence by his inabilitie to doe it in ſuch perfection as his father required? Againe, let vs know that if we ſhould entertaine Satans tentations, perſwading vs to neglect all Religious duties wherein we ſhew ſin, corruption and imperfection, then ſurely we ſhould doe none at all; for euen the beſt of Gods ſeruants vpon the earth haue their moſt commendable duties ſtained and blemiſhed with their imperfections and corruptions; but yet becauſe they doe the euill they would not, and haue an heartie deſire, and earneſt endeauour to performe ſeruice vnto God in that perfection which he requireth, the Lord in mercy reſpecting them according to that which they haue, and not according to that which they haue not, doth graciouſly accept the will for the deed, couering their imperfections with the rich Robe of Chriſts perfect righteouſneſſe, and waſhing away their ſins and corruptions with his precious bloud. Furthermore if this were a ſufficient reaſon to diſcourage a man from hearing the word, becauſe he ſinneth in the hearing of it, then ſhould none vnconuerted and vnregenerate preſume to heare it, becauſe being deſtitute of a liuely faith, all they doe is ſin. Whereas contrariwiſe wee know that God hath appointed the Miniſtery of the Word as his owne Ordinance, to giue light vnto them that ſit in darkneſſe, to conuert and regenerate thoſe who are dead in ſinne, and to endue them with faith who are yet in the ſtate of infidelitie, that ſo thereby they may be inabled for the time to come to performe ſuch acceptable ſeruice as hee commandeth.

§. Sect. 5.
The former point illuſtrated by ſimilitudes.

We know that the cunning Scribe requireth that his Schollar ſhould exerciſe his hand, though for the preſent he doe but blot paper and ſpoile pens; becauſe this ſmall loſſe is recompenced with a greater gaine, and by practice he is brought from bungling to perfect skill: and ſo the Lord will haue his young Nouices to exerciſe themſelues in the art of hearing, though at the firſt, their loſſe ſeemes to exceed their gaines, becauſe in time it will turne to their greater aduantage, as being the meanes to bring them to more perfection, and is content that they ſhould by ſhewing their infirmities and corruptions diſpleaſe him for a while, that they may learne the way to pleaſe him for euer. The ſicke man who hath loſt his appetite, and loatheth the ſight of meate, if he eat thereof is made more ſicke and weake in his preſent ſenſe and feeling, but yet afterwards he findeth by experience, that it was the meanes whereby he recouered his health & ſtrength: And ſo being ſicke in ſin, wee haue no deſire to feed on this ſpirituall food, but through the hardneſſe of our hearts loath this heauenly Manna, and if we taſt therof (judging according to our preſent ſenſe and feeling) we are ready to crie out that our ſickneſſe of ſinne and groſſe corruptions are rather increaſed then abated; and yet this is the food whereby preſently we liue, and for the time to come, waxe healthie and ſtrong in vertue and godlineſſe. For it is the Ordinance of God whereby hee beginneth his graces where they are wanting, and whereby hee nouriſheth and increaſeth them where they are begun.

§. Sect.6. That our imperfection in performing argueth greater perfection in deſiring.

Laſtly, let vs conſider that when in the performing of Religious duties, as hearing the Word and Prayer, there is greateſt imperfection of obedience in reſpect of abilitie and power, there is ſhewed greateſt perfection in reſpect of the will and deſire, if notwithſtanding theſe great infirmities wee doe not ſlacken our pace, but conſtantly perſiſt in theſe holy duties. For it is no great matter, if thoſe willingly performe ſeruice vnto God, who can performe it in that manner and meaſure which themſelues deſire, ſeeing their obedience is accompanied with much peace, cōfort & ſpiritual joy, which ſufficiently rewarding their paines in the very doing, are incouragement enough to make them dutifull and diligent: but if thoſe whoſe ſeruice is mixed with many corruptions, and who are continually diſheartened by their ſinnes and imperfections, doe conſtantly perſiſt in theſe holy duties, notwithſtanding they are depriued of all comfort and incouragement, as thinking that hereby they bring vpon themſelues more euill then good, and a curſe rather then a bleſſing, onely in obedience to Gods Commandement; and hauing no other inducement, but a ſimple deſire of conforming themſelues to his will; they ſhew a kind of perfection in their imperfection, and the leſſe abilities they haue in performance, the more willingnes they ſhew to performe, and in not obeying in the act and deed, they approoue their obedience more abſolute in reſpect of their deſire; the which is acceptable to God though power be wanting, as before I haue ſhewed. If a ſouldier being ſtrong and valiant doe in all encounters goe away with victory and triumph, it is no great wonder, if at his captaines command he hazard the combat, becauſe his ſucceſſe whetteth his courage, and harteneth him to any attempt; but if another who being weake and feeble, hath continually in euery fight receiued wounds and foiles, doth willingly, as often as his Commander doth appoint him, enter the field, and ſtand to it in all encounters, hauing no confidence in his owne ſtrength, nor hope of good ſucceſſe, onely in obedience to his Captaines command; ſurely ſuch an one is no leſſe to be admired for his loue and dutie in attempting, then to bee pittied for his weakneſſe and inabilitie in performing; and exceeding the other as much in ſubmiſſiue obedience, as hee is exceeded by him in ſtrength and power, his weake endeuours muſt needs pleaſe his Commander: And ſo it is no great wonder if thoſe who are ſtrong in Gods graces doe willingly performe vnto him that ſeruice which he requireth, and reſiſt Sathan after they haue often put him to flight; but if one who is by reaſon of his weakneſſe continually foiled and ouercome of ſin in all ſeruices wherein he is imployed, be notwithſtanding ſtill ready at Gods command to attempt the performance of any dutie, and (as it were) wounded and maymed, doth endure the conflict, onely in loue and obedience to the Lord of Hoſts; ſurely this ſeruice muſt needes bee acceptable to God, and in the end he will ſo reſcue him with the power of his Spirit that he ſhall obtaine the victory, and make him as commendable in the time to come for his ſtrength and abilities, as he was before for his obedience and dutie. And therefore let vs not be diſcouraged from the performance of the duties of Gods Seruice by our many foyles & falls; neither let Satan perſwade vs to caſt away this Sword of the Spirit, becauſe through our ignorance or weaknes in vſing it aright, it doth (as it were) a little hurt our hand, ſeeing if we be thus diſarmed, Satan will eaſily wound vs with his tentations at the very heart, and giue vnto vs an vtter ouerthrow; whereas if wee keepe this ſpirituall weapon ſtill in our hand, deſiring our great Commander that hee will giue vs ſtrength, and teach our hands to warre and our fingers to fight, he will ſurely inable vs with his might, and ſo inſtruct vs in this ſpirituall warfare, that we ſhall be ſure in the end to obtaine the victory.

Lib.1.Chap.23.

See Chap

Chap. XXVIII.

How we muſt arme our ſelues againſt Satans tentations, whereby hee laboureth to make the Word of God fruitleſſe.

§. Sect.1. That Satan tempteth carelesse neg- ligence in hearing.

WE haue ſhewed what are the tentations which Sathan vſeth to diſſwade vs from hearing the word; but if we breake theſe ſnares and cannot be with-held from frequenting Gods holy Aſſemblies; then he will endeuour by all meanes to make the Word of God which we heare, fruitleſſe and vneffectuall for our conuerſion and ſaluation. And to this end he will labour to worke in vs a negligent careleſneſſe in harkening to thoſe things which are deliuered, and this is vſually accompanied with dulneſſe of ſpirit, drowſineſſe and ſleepineſſe; or if wee ſet our ſelues to heare the Word, with any care and conſcience to profit thereby, then he will ſeeke to diſtract our mindes with wandring thoughts, either by offering and ſuggeſting to our conſideration and memory the world, and the vanities thereof, as our affaires and buſineſſe, and thoſe pleaſures wherewith wee are moſt delighted; or if this will not preuaile, by caſting into our minds things in their owne nature good and religious, if they were thought vpon in time conuenient, to the end that wee may bee diſtracted, and bee made vnfit to heare the Word with profit. Which tentations we are to withſtand as being moſt dangerous and pernicious: and to this purpoſe there is ſomething required at our hands to be performed before our comming to Gods Aſſemblies, and ſomething afterwards. Before wee come to the hearing of the Word, there is required due preparation, whereby our minds are made fit veſſels to receiue the ſpirituall treaſure and food of our ſoules. For if wee come into the Congregation of the faithfull, without any premeditation, reuerence, or regard of the action which we are to take in hand; if we preſent our ſelues raſhly and vnaduiſedly, as if we went to a play, or to diſpatch ſome worldly buſineſſe; wee ſhall hardly keepe our minds from negligent wandring and worldly diſtractions, which will make the Word of God fruitleſſe and vnprofitable.

Now this preparation doth principally conſiſt, firſt, in the purging of our corrupt affections, to which duty the Wiſe man exhorteth vs; *Eccleſ.*5.1. Take heed to thy feet when thou entreſt into the houſe of God, that is, bee carefull to purge thine affections which are the feet of thy ſoule. And this was typically ſignified by the outward waſhing of the Iſraelites before the promulgation of the Law, *Exod.*19.10. where by the waſhing of their clothes and bodies, the purging of the ſecret corruptions of the heart was ſignified and repreſented. Which duty is neceſſarily to bee performed of all thoſe who will heare the Word with profit: for as the moſt pure liquor is defiled and made vnprofitable for vſe, if it be put into a polluted and ſtinking veſſell; ſo the pure liquor of Gods Word is defiled and made fruitleſſe, vnto all thoſe who receiue it into a heart polluted with vncleane affections. As therefore Moſes was enjoyned by God to put off his ſhoes from his feet, before he might tread on that ground made holy by Gods preſence, or receiue the Lords ambaſſage to his people; ſo he requireth of vs that we put off the ſhooes, that is, the corruption of our affections, before wee tread vpon the holy ground of his Church, there to heare the glad tidings of the Goſpell, concerning our euerlaſting deliuery out of the bondage of our ſpirituall enemies. What theſe affections are the Apoſtle Iames partly ſheweth, *Iam.*1.19; namely wrath, filthineſſe, malitiouſneſſe, to which Peter addeth diſſimulation and hypocriſie, enuie and euill ſpeaking, 1.*Pet.*2.1. And to theſe alſo we may adde all other like vnto them.

Secondly, wee muſt baniſh out of our minds all prejudice, fore-ſtalled opinions, and ſiniſter conceits of the Miniſter of Gods Word whom wee are to heare; whereby men are either carried away with a vaine admiration of his gifts, and in the meane time make no conſcience of feeding vpon that food which is offered; like vnto them, who in ſtead of drinking of the Wine, ſtand wondring at the curious workmanſhip of the Cup; or elſe with a prejudicate opinion of his inſufficiencie in gifts, or imperfections of life, whereby they are ſo foreſtalled, that they thinke nothing which hee can deliuer will be worth the hearing.

ſtalled opinions of the Miniſter.

§.Sect.4. We muſt expel all worldly cogitations.

Thirdly, we muſt expell out of our cogitations the remembrance of all worldly buſineſſes, pleaſures and delights, leſt they diſtract our minds in the hearing of the word, and ſo choaking this heauenly ſeed make it fruitleſſe; for as the veſſell which is already full, will receiue no more, and whatſoeuer is powred into it, ſpilleth vpon the ground: ſo the minde that is full of worldly meditations, is not fit to receiue the Word of God, but as ſoone as it offereth to enter, it is kept backe and ſo periſheth; for God and Mammon, the holy Word of God and the cares and vanities of the world, can neuer dwell at the ſame time together, but as ſoone as one entreth it expelleth the other. As therefore men purpoſing to write a Sermon, doe make cleane their writing tables, by blotting out that which was written in them before, for otherwiſe there would be ſuch a mixture and confuſion, that nothing would bee legible; ſo when we purpoſe to carry away a Sermon faire written in the tables of our memories, wee muſt firſt blot out all worldly affaires and buſineſſes, otherwiſe there will bee nothing but confuſion, and wee ſhall not be able to recall any thing to our remembrance.

§.Sect.5. Wee muſt examine our ſins and wants.

Fourthly, before the hearing of the word, we muſt ſearch and examine our hearts both concerning our ſins and corruptions, as alſo concerning our wants and imperfections. For the firſt, wee muſt conſider to what ſins we are moſt addicted, and with what tentations we are moſt eaſily ſubdued, to the end we may bring our ſins to be ſlaughtered and mortified with the Sword of Gods Spirit, being otherwiſe vnable to ouercome them our ſelues; and that we may alſo thereby ſo ſtrongly arme all parts, both of our bodies and ſoules, as that they ſhall not in time to come, bring vs againe vnder their dominion. And as Citizens being beſieged with their enemies doe learne by their aſſaulting, which part of the Citie is moſt weake, and ſo with more care and labour fortifie it, with men and munition, trenches and bulwarkes; ſo when wee who are continually beſieged by our ſpirituall enemies, doe learne by their aſſaulting of vs where we are weakeſt, and the enemy moſt like to enter, then wee muſt goe into Gods armory, and prouide ſufficient weapons and munition, whereby wee may be enabled to hold out and make reſiſtance. So alſo we are to conſider of our wants and imperfections, that ſo we may be ſtirred vp with an earneſt deſire, to haue them ſupplied, and hereby may be moued with more care to apply vnto our ſelues ſuch food as ſhall bee moſt fit to ſupply theſe our wants, & amend our imperfections. For as men who hunger earneſtly deſire to bee ſatisfied with wholeſome food, neither will they willingly without any difference eate of all meates, eſpecially if they haue weake ſtomackes, but of that which is moſt fit and beſt agreeth with them: ſo thoſe who find their ſpirituall wants earneſtly deſire to bee ſatisfied, and to haue their defects ſupplied: and for as much as all food contained in Gods Word, is not fit for this purpoſe, nor agreeable to their ſtomackes, to the end that Gods graces may be nouriſhed in them, therefore they will wiſely make choice of that which beſt agreeth to their preſent ſtate, and apply it vnto themſelues accordingly. For example, hee who findeth his heart hard and ſecure, muſt feed vpon the threatnings of the Law, to the end he may be humbled, and his heart mollified, and diſſolued into teares of vnfained repentance; he that is of a broken heart and contrite ſpirit, muſt feed vpon the ſweet and gracious promiſes of the Goſpell; hee that is ignorant, muſt hunger after milke, and deſire to be inſtructed in the principles of Religion; hee that hath a good meaſure of knowledge may deſire ſtronger meate, [that is, attend vnto the more deepe points of Diuinity. In a word, euery man is to examine his particular ſtate, and to ſearch out his greateſt wants, that ſo comming to heare the word, he may more diligently apply ſuch doctrines inſtructions, and exhortations as ſhall bee moſt fit for his vſe & benefit; for that which is food to one, is poyſon to another, and that ſalue which is fit to heale one ſore, doth make another to feſter and ranckle. And one part of the Word of God being applied to men of diuers eſtates, doth worke diuers effects; one it feedeth, another it poyſoneth; one it healeth, another it woundeth; to one it is the ſauour of life vnto life, and to another it is the ſauour of death vnto death: and therefore, before wee come to the hearing thereof, wee are to examine our ſtates that we may apply and make profitable vſe to our ſelues of that which is moſt fit to nouriſh and ſtrengthen vs in Gods graces.

§. Sect. 6. Weeare to vſe earneſt praier. *Pſal.*119.18.

Laſtly, and moſt eſpecially, wee are to vſe earneſt and hearty prayer vnto the Lord, that he will open our blind eyes, ſo as we may ſee the wonderfull things of his Law; that he will take away our ſtony hearts, and giue vs fleſhy hearts, in which his word may more eaſily be imprinted; that hee will with the oyle of his grace bow our ſtubborne wils, and make them flexible and inclinable to performe obedience to his will, reuealed in his word; that he will ſanctifie our affections, and purge them from their naturall corruptions; that hee will diſtill the heauenly dew of his holy Spirit into our mindes and barren hearts, that ſo the ſeed of his word being watered thereby, may yeeld a plentifull harueſt in grace and godlineſſe.

§. Sect. Of the d which we performe hearing, to ſet our ſelues in G preſence.

And theſe are the duties which wee muſt performe in the time of our preparation. Now after wee are thus prepared, and haue preſented our ſelues into Gods holy aſſemblies, there are alſo other duties to bee performed, to the end that Sathan may not diſtract our mindes, and ſo make the word which wee heare fruitleſſe. Firſt, wee are to ſet our ſelues in the preſence of God who looketh vpon vs, and beholdeth all our behauiour in this action, according to the example of good Cornelius: Acts 10.33. Here (ſaith hee) wee are all preſent before God to heare all things that are commanded thee of God. And if we thus doe, we ſhall not careleſly and negligently heare the word of the Lord, but with feare and trembling as in his preſence, before whom the earth trembleth, and the foundations of the mountaines moue and ſhake, as it is *Pſal.*18.7.

Acts 10.3

*Pſal.*18.

§. Sect 2. Wee m heare it a Word of G

*2.Theſ.*2

Secondly, we are to heare the word preached, not as the word of a mortall man, but as it is in truth the Word of the Euer-liuing God, according to the example of the Theſſalonians: 1.*Theſ.*2.13. When (ſaith the Apoſtle) yee receiued the Word of God which yee heard of vs, yee receiued it not as the word of men, but as it is indeed the Word of God. For the Miniſter is not his owne ſpokeſman, but the Ambaſſadour of the Lord, it is not his owne meſſage which he bringeth, but the Lords embaſſage. And hence it is that the Prophets & Apoſtles prefixe before their writings, theſe and ſuch like ſpeeches, The Word of the Lord, The burthen of the Lord, Thus ſaith the Lord. So alſo the Apoſtle profeſſeth in his owne Name, and in the behalfe of all Gods true Miniſters, that they are the Lords Ambaſſadours, who in Chriſts ſtead beſeech their hearers that they will be reconciled vnto God, 2.*Cor.*5.20. Wee muſt not therefore looke vpon the man, but on God who ſendeth him; nor on the earthen veſſell, but on the heauenly treaſure which it bringeth; nor on the ſimpleneſſe of the Cabinet, but on the precious pearle which is contained in it; nor vpon the meanneſſe of the Ambaſſadour, but vpon the glorious royaltie of the Prince who ſent him; and on his ambaſſage, which is the glad tidings of the Goſpell, the word of ſaluation and life; which is able to ſaue our ſoules; and then his feet will ſeeme beautifull, and none ſhall be better welcome; then ſhall we not contemne or neglect his Miniſterie, but receiue joyfully, reuerently, and attentiuely the word preached by him, remembring what our Sauiour Chriſt hath ſaid, Luke 10.16. He that heareth you, heareth mee, and hee that deſpiſeth you deſpiſeth me, and he that deſpiſeth me, deſpiſeth him that ſent mee.

*2.Cor.*5.20

Thirdly, let vs ſtirre vp our ſelues to reuerent attention by the conſideration of thoſe ineſtimable benefits which are deriued vnto vs by the hearing of the word; as that it is the liuely ſeed whereby we are begotten vnto God; the food of our ſoules whereby wee are nouriſhed vnto euerlaſting life; that ſpirituall phyſick whereby we are purged from our corruptions; that light which guideth vs in the wayes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; in a word, that it is the chiefe meanes to worke in vs all Gods graces in this life, and to aſſure vs of euerlaſting happineſſe in the life to come. And if theſe and ſuch like meditations come to our remembrance, they will ſerue to ſtirre vs vp from our drowſie dulneſſe, and mooue vs to heare Gods word with alacritie and cheerefulneſſe, faſtening our eyes on Gods Miniſters, according to the example of Chriſts hearers, Luke 4.20. and euen hanging vpon them (like the child on the mothers breaſt) to ſuck from their lips our ſoules nouriſhment, as the people hanged on our Sauiour, Luke 19.48.

Fourthly, wee muſt heare the word, as if we were neuer more to heare it: for who can tell whether hee ſhall liue till the next Sabbath? or though hee doe, yet how knoweth he whether hee ſhall haue his ſenſes, vnderſtanding, and memory, ſeeing hee will not vſe them to Gods glory, and his owne good? or though he haue, yet may the word of God be taken from him, and ſuch a famine be of this heauenly food, that hee may wander from Sea to Sea, and from North to Eaſt ſeeking it and ſhall not find it. And therefore whileſt the Lord ſpeaketh vnto vs to day, let vs harken and not harden our hearts, for hee hath not promiſed vs to morrow that we ſhall heare it; whileſt we enjoy this heauenly light let vs looke vpon it, and be directed by it to doe the workes of holineſſe: for it may be it will ſhortly ſet and neuer riſe againe vnto vs, and then what will follow but eternall darkneſſe?

Laſtly, let vs be ſtirred vp to attention by the conſideration of Gods judgments which hee inflicteth on the contemners and neglectors of his word, which he may juſtly euery minute powre vpon vs whileſt our minds are a wandring, not regarding that which hee ſaith vnto vs; he may ſuddenly ſtrike vs with frenzie and madneſſe, or with death it ſelfe, and then how fearefull and lamentable were our ſtate if ſuch a judgement ſhould ſeize vpon vs. Let vs remember what happened to drowſie Eutychus, and conſider with our ſelues, that that which befalleth vnto one may happen vnto another.

§. Sect. 12. How we are to behaue our ſelues after we haue heard the Word.

And thus are wee to ſtirre vp our ſelues to the diligent and attentiue hearing of Gods word, that ſo it may be fruitfull in our hearts, and effectuall for our conuerſion and calling vnto God. But when wee haue gone thus farre we muſt not heere reſt, for if our enemy Sathan cannot hinder the ſeed of Gods word from falling into our hearts, then hee will labour to ſteale it away as ſoone as it is ſowed, that it may neuer take root nor bring forth any fruit, as appeareth by lamentable experience. For how many are there who receiue the Word of God with their approbation, and are ſomewhat affected with that which is ſpoken, and yet ſoone after it vaniſheth away, and nothing remayneth but their old corruptions? and whence doth this proceed but from the malice of Satan, who he findeth the ſeed of the word not receiued into the ground of the heart, and therein couered, like a rauenous bird deuoureth it; or if it haue a little rooting, yet he choaketh it with the thornie cares of the world, ſo as it neuer ſpringeth vp, no not ſo much as into a blade of profeſſion; or if it be ſo far growne vp, yet he indeuoureth to keepe it from euer thriuing further, by cauſing the hot Sun of perſecution to ariſe, and with the heat thereof to make it wither and periſh, though for a time it haue made a flouriſhing ſhew; as our Sauiour Chriſt hath taught vs in the Parable of the Sower, *Matth.*13. And therefore, it behoooueth euery one of vs to take no leſſe paines after the hearing of the word to keepe it from deuouring and to preſerue & nouriſh it, that it may take deepe roote and bring forth much fruit; then we did in the time of preparation, and in the time when we receiued it. For the carefull husbandman taketh great pains in ſtirring vp his fallow ground, and preparing it for the ſeed, as alſo in the ſeed time in ſowing it in the ground thus prepared, and yet all this were to no purpoſe if hee did not afterward harrow it and couer it in the ground: ſo though we take great pains in breaking vp and preparing the fallow grounds of our hearts, and alſo in receiuing the ſeed of Gods Word, yet if wee be not as carefull after all this to couer and hide this ſeed in the furrowes of our hearts that it may take deepe rooting, it will neuer bring forth any fruit of true godlineſſe. Now the meanes to preſerue and nouriſh this heauenly ſeed of Gods word is firſt ſerious meditation; whereby wee call to minde that which wee haue heard, in which it is very requiſite that wee examine the doctrines which were deliuered according to the touchſtone of Gods Word, and turne ouer the Bible to thoſe proofes which we remember alleaged as moſt principall for the confirmation of the doctrines which were deliuered. A notable example whereof we haue in the men of Berea, Acts 17.10,11. Who though with great readineſſe they receiued that doctrine which Paul had deliuered, yet when they came home they ſearched the Scriptures, to ſee if thoſe things which they heard were conſonant & agreeable with them or no. Secondly, wee muſt vſe holy and Chriſtian conference one with another, about thoſe matters which we haue heard, for hereby it will come to paſſe that what one did not obſerue or hath forgotten, the other remembreth and repeateth; and ſo likewiſe the other helpeth out in another point where his neighbour faileth, till at laſt they recall all the materiall points to their remembrance. Euen as many meeting together at a Feaſt, doe euery one caſt in his ſhot till the reckoning be made; ſo many joyning their heads together for the recalling of a Sermon to minde, one repeateth a little, and another as much more, till at laſt all bee repeated. And ſecondly, this benefit redoundeth hereof, that all which euery one remembreth by this repetition is more ſurely imprinted in his memory, and is not afterwards eaſily forgotten. Laſtly, the beſt and ſureſt way to imprint things in our memorie neuer after to bee blotted out, is vpon all occaſions to practiſe it in our liues and conuerſation: for as we only truly know that in Chriſtianitie which we practiſe, ſo likewiſe that is onely well remembred which is well practiſed.

*Matth.*13.

Acts 17.10,11.

Chap. XXIX.

Satans tentations whereby hee perſwadeth men to delay their repentance anſwered.

§. Sect. 1. The tentation alluring to deferre repentance.

And ſo much concerning the ſubtill tentations of Satan, whereby hee laboureth to make the Word of God fruitleſſe and vneffectuall for our conuerſion; wherewith if hee cannot preuaile being repelled by the meanes before ſpoken of, and if men by their hearing of the word haue learned thus much knowledge, that their conuerſion and turning to God is neceſſary to ſaluation; then hee will in the next place labour to perſwade them to deferre their repentance for a time, till they haue better opportunitie and are more fit for this purpoſe. Let it bee granted (will he ſay) that it is neceſſary that thou ſhouldeſt repent and turne vnto God; yet thou mayeſt deferre thy repentance vntill thine old age, or at leaſt till the time of ſickneſſe, for then thou wilt be more fit to performe this dutie, then in the flouriſhing prime of thy youth, when as the exerciſes of Religion are ſo tedious and vnpleaſant, and the pleaſures of the world ſo ſweete and delightfull; neither needeſt thou to feare any inconuenience which will come hereby, for God is ſo gracious, that whenſoeuer thou returneſt vnto him he will receiue thee to mercy, for he hath promiſed in his Word, that whenſoeuer a ſinner repenteth him of his ſins, hee will blot all his wickedneſſe out of his remembrance: And therefore thou mayeſt enjoy both the pleaſures of this life, and the life to come, thou mayeſt repent time enough hereafter and liue a ſtrict and Religious life, when the heate of youth is paſt and old age drawes on, which is far more fit for theſe exerciſes: for what folly is it ſo to dote vpon the heauenly joyes to come, as that thou ſhouldeſt depriue thy ſelfe of thoſe worldly pleaſures which are preſent, ſeeing thou mayſt enjoy both? Againſt which tentation it behoooueth euery man moſt carefully to arme himſelfe as being in it ſelfe moſt dangerous and pernicious to great multitudes, as may appeare by too too lamentable experience. For when as Sathan can no longer hood-winke their eyes with the vaile of ignorance but that they plainly ſee, that it concerneth their eternall ſaluation to hearken vnto the Lord calling them to repentance, then notwithſtanding thus far hee preuaileth with them that they are content to delay their conuerſion and turning vnto God, either vntill the time of ſickneſſe, or till their old age. And therefore it ſhall not be amiſſe to ſet downe briefly ſome waightie arguments, whereby euery Chriſtian may bee moued to ſpeedie repentance, and not to defer their conuerſion from day to day, but to turne vnto the Lord when hee firſt calleth them.

This tenta on moſt da gerous.

§. Sect. 2. Motiues to perſwade v haſten ou pentance.

The firſt motiue to perſwade vs to the haſtening of our conuerſion is Gods Commandement, whereby hee enjoyneth vs ſpeedily to turne vnto him, that we may doe him ſeruice all the dayes of our life, to which end he hath created and redeemed vs and doth continually preſerue vs, Pſal. 95.7,8. To day if you ſhall heare his voice harden not your hearts: ſo as he chargeth vs not to reſiſt his calling, no not till to morrow, for if to day we will not hearken vnto him, hee hath not promiſed to call vs againe vnleſſe it bee to judgement. So Eccleſ. 22.1. Remember now thy Creatour in the dayes of thy youth, whileſt the euill dayes come not, nor the yeeres approach, wherein thou ſhalt ſay, I haue no pleaſure in them: that is, old age, as afterwards he expoundeth it. And Eſay 55.6. Seeke yee the Lord whileſt hee may be found, call yee vpon him whileſt he is neere. Matth. 3.2. Repent; for the Kingdome of Heauen is at hand. Acts 3.19. And our Sauiour Chriſt doth enjoyne vs, firſt to ſeeke the Kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe, Matth. 6.33. If therefore we will not wittingly and wilfully breake Gods Commandement, let vs offer vnto him the ſeruice of our youth, as well as the ſeruice of our old age, for hee requireth this as wel as the other, yea before the other. And this was ſignified vnder the types of the old Law, where the Lord requireth that they ſhould offer vnto him the principall of the flocke, and ſuch beaſts as were whole and ſound, young and without blemiſh. So Leuit. 3.1. the Lord requireth that the Sacrifice which they offered, ſhould bee without blemiſh, and Verſe 22.20. Yee ſhall not offer any thing that hath a blemiſh, for that ſhall not be acceptable for you. And Deut. 15.21. If there bee any blemiſh therein, as if it bee lame or blind, or haue any euill fault, thou ſhalt not offer it vnto the Lord thy God. And for tranſgreſſing this law the Lord reprehendeth the people by his Prophet, Mal. 1.8. And if yee offer the blind for Sacrifice, is it not euill? and if yee offer the lame and ſicke, is it not euill? offer it now to thy Prince; will hee be content with thee or accept thy perſon, ſaith the Lord of hoſts? And Verſe 14. Curſed be the deceiuer which hath in his flocke a male, and voweth and ſacrificeth to the Lord a corrupt thing. Now did the Lord regard the beaſts, and hath he made ſo many Lawes that he might haue the beſt of them? Surely this is not Gods mayne end, but hee would thereby teach vs to offer and dedicate vnto his Seruice euen our beſt things as the prime of our youth and our flouriſhing age. For was the Lord greatly offended when as men reſerued the beſt of the flocke to themſelues and offered the old, blinde and lame vnto him; and will hee bee well pleaſed that wee dedicate our youth and the ſtrength of body and ſoule vnto Satan, and our owne luſts, and reſerue for him onely our olde, decrepit, lame and withered age, when as our bodies are full of diſeaſes and our minds of infirmities? Will any Prince accept of vs if wee ſpend the whole time of our youth and ſtrength in the ſeruice of his enemies; and when we are ſicke, old, lame and blind, offer him our ſeruice? and will the Prince of Princes thinke yee be well pleaſed if hee be thus vſed? If Sathan and the World haue all the pure wine, will he be contented with the lees and dregs? if they haue the ripe fruit, will God haue that which is rotten and putrified? if they haue our health, will hee haue our ſickneſſe? ſurely it is not likely; for the Lord who hath created vs, redeemed vs and preſerueth vs, doth looke to bee ſerued with our youth, health and ſtrength which hee hath beſtowed on vs.

The ſecond argument to moue vs to haſten our repentance, & turning vnto God is taken from the momentany ſhortneſſe and the mutable vncertaintie of our liues. In reſpect of the ſhortneſſe, our liues are compared to a pilgrimage, to the flower and graſſe of the field, to the wind, a cloud, ſmoke, vapour, to a dreame, a tale told, a ſpan, a ſhadow, and the paſſage of the weauers ſhuttle, yea vanitie it ſelfe. And therefore ſeeing our liues are ſo ſhort, ſurely they are all too little though they were wholly ſpent in Gods Seruice. But ſeeing we haue ſpent a great part of this ſhort time, euen our whole life before our conuerſion, after the luſts of the Gentiles, let vs thinke that enough, yea far too much to bee ſo ill beſtowed, and from hence forward let vs liue (as much time as remaineth in the fleſh) not after the luſts of men but after the will of God, as the Apoſtle admoniſheth vs, 1. Pet. 4.2,3. But though our life were ſhort, yet if this ſhort time were certaine, there were ſome more ſhew of reaſon why wee ſhould defer our conuerſion; but as it is ſhort ſo is it moſt vncertaine, for wee haue not aſſurance that wee ſhall liue one houre; we are tenants at will in theſe earthly tabernacles, neither doe we know how ſoone our great Land-lord will turne vs out of them; wee are the Lords Stewards heere on earth, and wee know not how ſoone our Lord and Maſter will call vs to a reckoning, and therefore it behoueth vs to haue our accounts alwayes perfect, and the bookes of our conſciences made vp in readineſſe. Wee are vncertaine when death will arreſt vs and carrie vs to judgement, and therefore we ſhould be prepared for it at all times; when we goe to bed we are ſo to lay vs downe as though we were neuer to riſe till wee riſe to receiue our laſt ſentence; when wee riſe vp in the morning we are ſo to ſpend that day as though it were the laſt of our liues, for how many haue gone well to bed who haue beene dead before morning? how many haue riſen (as they thought in perfect health) and yet haue beene attached by death before the euening? and therefore it behoueth euery one who hath any regard of the eternall ſaluation of his ſoule to turne ſpeedily vnto God, and while to day they heare his voice not to harden their hearts. Men vſually delay matters of leaſt waight, and in the firſt place diſpatch buſineſſe of greateſt importance, and therefore vnleſſe we thinke the preſeruing of our bodies and ſoules from the eternall torments of Hell fire, and the aſſurance of euerlaſting happineſſe and bleſſedneſſe in Gods Kingdome to be matters of leſſe importance, then the obtaining of ſome vaine pleaſures, vnconſtant honours or baſe commodities, let vs turne vnto the Lord betimes by vnfained repentance, and according to our Sauiours aduice, Matth. 6.33. Let vs firſt ſeeke the kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe, and then worldly neceſſaries ſhall bee caſt vnto vs as a vantage in this mayne bargaine. If our houſes were on fire wee ſhould ſeeke firſt to preſerue thoſe things which are moſt deare and precious vnto vs, good houſhold ſtuffe before lumber, Iewels before ſtuffe, and children before Iewels; but our liues are daily in a conſumption, & dum creſcimus, vita decreſcit, whileſt we grow and increaſe, our liues decreaſe, and therefore in the firſt place let vs ſeeke to preſerue our ſoule, which is our chiefe Iewell, and not ſuffer it to periſh through impenitencie, whileſt we gaine ſome earthly vanities. But very lamentable is the practice of moſt men, who liue as though they were neuer to die, or as though they had taken of God a long leaſe of their liues which is to expire at a certaine appointed time; and this makes them defer their repentance and to put the euill day far from them, till at laſt death attacheth them and carrieth them to iudgement. And this appeareth by the Scriptures and continuall experience; Iob ſpeaking of carnall ſecure men ſaith, that they take the Tabret and Harpe and reioyce in the ſound of the Organs, they ſpend their dayes in wealth and ſuddenly they goe downe to the graue. Iob 12.21. So *Eccleſ.*9.12. Man doth not know his time, but as the fiſhes which are taken in an euill net, and as the birds that are caught in the ſnare, ſo are the children of men ſnared in the euill time when it falleth vpon them ſuddenly. When the euill ſeruant ſhall ſay in his heart, my Maſter doth deferre his comming, and ſhall begin to ſmite his fellowes, and to eate and drinke and to be drunken; that Seruants Maſter will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an houre that hee is not aware of, and will cut him off and giue him his portion with the vnbeleeuers, as our Sauiour hath taught vs, Luke 12.45, 46. *And we know what happened to the rich man who ſaid vnto his ſoule, Soule thou haſt much goods laid vp for many yeares, liue at eaſe, eate, drinke, and take thy paſtime, euen the ſame night God ſaid vnto him, O foole this night will they fetch thy ſoule from thee, and then whoſe ſhall thoſe things be which thou haſt prouided? §. Sect. 4.

That many purpoſing to repent in olde age, are cut off in the meane time by Gods iudgement.

Moreouer how many may wee obſerue in our owne experience, who haue deferred their repentance from day to day thinking to repent either in their olde age, or in the time of their ſickneſſe, and haue beene preuented and cut off by Gods iudgement: Doe we not ſee that many haue beene taken away with ſudden and violent deaths, many depriued of the vſe of their ſenſes, memory, and vnderſtanding, in the time of their ſickneſſe, and ſo haue died mad, franticke, and ſenſeleſſe; many, who come to their olde age, and yet are further from repentance then in the time of their youth? And this commeth to paſſe by the iuſt iudgement of God: for what can bee more righteous, then that the Lord ſhould contemne them at the houre of death, who haue contemned him their whole life? that they ſhould loſe their memory and vnderſtanding in the time of ſickneſſe, who haue continually abuſed them to the diſhonour of God in the time of their health; that they ſhould die impenitent, who haue liued in impenitencie, that they ſhould forget God when they are ready to goe out of the world, who would neuer remember him whileſt they were in the world; that God ſhould withdraw his grace when they are ſicke, which being often offered they deſpiſed when they were in health? And this the Lord threatneth, Prou.1.24. Becauſe I haue called and yee haue refuſed, I haue ſtretched out mine hand, and none would regard. Verſe 25. But yee haue deſpiſed all my counſell, and would none of my correction. Verſe 26. I will alſo laugh at your deſtruction, and mocke when your feare commeth. Verſe 27. When your feare commeth like ſudden deſolation, and your deſtruction ſhall come like a whirlewind &c. and Verſe 28. Then ſhall they call vpon me, but I will not anſwere, they ſhall ſeeke me early, but they ſhall not find me. Verſe 29. Becauſe they hated knowledge, and did not chuſe the feare of the Lord. So *Zach.*7.11, 12,13. the Prophet ſaith, that becauſe the people refuſed to hearken, pulled backe their ſhoulder, and ſtopped their eares, that they ſhould not heare, but made their hearts as an Adamant ſtone, leſt they ſhould heare the words of the Lord ſent in his ſpirit by the Miniſtery of the former Prophets, therefore came a great wrath from the Lord of hoſts, whereas it came to paſſe that as he cried and they would not heare, ſo they cried and the Lord would not heare their crie. And therefore when the Lord calleth, let vs anſwere, Lord I come; let vs not delay our conuerſion from day to day, but ſeeke the Lord whileſt hee may be found, and call vpon him whileſt he is neere; let the wicked (now) forſake his wayes, and the vnrighteous his owne imaginations and returne vnto the Lord, and hee will haue mercie vpon him, and to our God, for he is very ready to forgiue, as it is, Eſay 55.6,7. But if we contemne the Miniſterie of his Word, and when God calleth refuſe to anſwere, if wee harden our hearts againſt the meanes of our conuerſion, and quench the good motions of his Spirit when he putteth them into our minds, ſurely it will come to paſſe, that as we neglect the Lord, ſo hee will neglect vs, and though he call vs to day, yet he will not call againe to morrow, but will let vs die in our ſins without repentance. Let vs remember the fearefull example of Eſau, who contemning his bleſſing and birthright, afterwards when he would haue inherited the bleſſing was reiected, for he found no place to repentance though he ſought it with teares, as it is, *Heb.*12.16,17. and of the fiue fooliſh Virgins, who neglecting the opportune time of prouiding oyle for their Lamps, afterwards went to buy when it was too late; for the Bridegroome paſſed by, and they they were ſhut out of doores. Call to minde the fearefull example of Pharaoh, who ſtill hardening his heart againſt Gods Word ſent vnto him, and confirmed by many miracles and wonders, at laſt was deſtroyed with his whole army. So Herod hauing heard Iohn Baptiſt willingly, and performed obedience to ſome things which he had learned, becauſe he did not turne to the Lord with his whole heart, nor repented of his inceſt, was neuer after called againe but left of God to his own hardneſſe of heart. The like may be ſaid of Pilate, Agrippa, Fœlix, Iudas, Demas, Iulian the Apoſtata, who hauing not harkened to the Lords call, but quenched the good motions of his Spirit, afterwards were giuen ouer of God to a reprobate ſenſe to their euerlaſting ruine and deſtruction. So likewiſe when as the Lord gaue the falſe Propheteſſe Ieſabel a time to repent, and ſhee repented not, hee threatneth his heauie iudgements againſt her. In a word, this is manifeſt in the examples of carnall ſecure men in theſe dayes, who hauing abuſed Gods mercy and long ſuffering, and deferred their conuerſion from day to day, at laſt are taken away in Gods heauy diſpleaſure, and as they liued like beaſts, ſo commonly they die like beaſts. And therefore as we long the ſaluation of our ſoules let vs hearken when the Lord calleth, and not harden our hearts againſt the good motions of his ſpirit; for if we be like theſe men in our wicked practice, there is no hope we ſhould bee vnlike them in fearefull puniſhments.

he third motiue, becauſe epentance is Gods gift.
am.1.17.

Thirdly, we are to conſider that our conuerſion and turning vnto God, by vnfained, and true repentance, is the gift of God from whom euery good and perfect gift deſcendeth, as ſaith Iames 1.17. And therefore wee are to accept of this gift when hee offereth it vnto vs. For God doth not promiſe his gifts and graces, with condition that wee may receiue them when we liſt, but when hee offereth them, Pſal. 95.7. To day if yee will heare his voice harden not your hearts; hee doth not giue vs reſpit till to morrow: now God calleth and inuiteth vs to come vnto him, now hee knocketh at the doore of our hearts, deſiring to enter that hee may dwell in vs by his holy Spirit; and if wee refuſe to let him in, how know we whether hee will euer knocke againe? if hee doe not, what gaineſt thou, but the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon, and in the end eternall death? and what loſeſt thou? no leſſe a thing then euerlaſting life and an eternall weight of glory in Gods Kingdome. Well, yet Chriſt knocketh at the doore of our hearts; and if wee will open hee will bee our gueſt and ſup with vs, bringing his cheare with him, euen an heauenly banquet of all his ſpirituall graces; but if we rudely ſhut the doores againſt him, what hope can wee haue that hee will come againe when hee findeth ſuch rude and vnciuill entertainment? And then what will follow, but that either wee ſhall neuer ſeeke after him, and then our caſe will bee moſt miſerable, or with his Spouſe in the Canticles we ſhall long ſeeke him but not find him without great difficultie, yea, perhaps wee may ſeeke him as Eſau ſought his bleſſing with teares and neuer find him?

CHAP. XXX.

Of the fourth motiue, taken from difficultie of repenting, cauſed by delayes.

§. Sect. 1.
That the longer we defer repentance, the more hardly we ſhall repent.
1. Becauſe ſin will grow cuſtomable.

THe fourth motiue to perſwade vs to ſpeedy repentance and turning vnto God, is, that the longer wee defer it, the harder wee ſhall find it, for the difficultie thereof will bee much encreaſed by delay, and our ſelues alſo who are vnfit to day will be more vnfit to morrow. The reaſons hereof are many; firſt, becauſe by continuall ſinning wee get a cuſtome and habit of ſinning, and if a cuſtome which is but affected bee hardly left, what ſhall we ſay of a cuſtome which is confirmed by nature, or what is nature ſtrengthened by cuſtome? who knoweth not that the Drunkard is more eaſily reclaimed from his drunkenneſſe when hee firſt falleth to this vice then when he hath long liued in it? that the ſwearer the longer hee vſeth and inureth his tongue to ſwearing, the more hardly can he forbeare it? and the couetous man as hee increaſeth in yeares, increaſeth alſo in couetouſneſſe, and the like may be ſaid of all other vices. Neither need this ſeeme ſtrange vnto vs, ſeeing it is a thing apparant in reaſon and in experience; for the longer the diſeaſe hath poſſeſſed the body the more hardly it is cured, & therefore that counſell is good, Venienti occurrite morbo, preuent the diſeaſe before it hath ſeized on thee, or preſently after it hath taken place remoue it? The longer the ſore is neglected the more it feſtereth and the greater difficultie there is to heale it; the longer the tree groweth the deeper root it taketh, and the more hard it is to pull it vp; the enemy is more eaſily kept from ſcaling the walles, then beaten backe when hee is entred into the middeſt of the Citie; and ſo it is with ſinnes and vices, facilius repelluntur, quam expelluntur, they are more eaſily kept from enterance, then beaten out. As therefore you would condemne him of extreame folly who would not regard his ſickneſſe, till it had ouerthrowne nature, and then thinke to cure it; or who would neglect to apply any ſalue to a grieſly wound till it were feſtred, and then thinke the better to heale it; or that ſhould aſſay to pull vp young plant, and being vnable ſhould defer it till it were growne to a greene tree, thinking then more eaſily to plucke it vp by the roots; or that would let the enemy quietly enter into the Citie with a purpoſe then to expell him with more facility and leſſe loſſe: ſo alike, nay much more fooliſh is he, who finding it now a hard matter to turne vnto God and to forſake his ſins, deferreth it for many yeares together, till the corruption of nature haue receiued double ſtrength by long cuſtome, imagining that then hee can very eaſily attaine vnto his purpoſe. Let vs therefore breake off our ſins by vnfained repentance, and take heed of confirming our naturall corruptions by long cuſtome: for as one ſaith, Dum conſuetudini non reſiſtitur fit neceſſitas, whileſt cuſtome is not broken it becommeth neceſſitie. And as another, Sicut non poteſt aliquis dediſcere maternam linguam, ſic vix longam peccati conſuetudinem, as a man cannot eaſily forget his mother tongue, ſo neither can he leaue cuſtomable ſin. So it is ſaid, Iob 20.11. That the wicked mans bones are full of the ſins of his youth, and that they ſhall lie downe with him in the duſt; whereby it is implied, that as diſeaſes after they are entred into the marrow and bones are incurable, in ſo much as they goe with men to their graues; ſo ſinnes and vices, which are the ſickneſſes of the ſoule hauing ſeized and taken faſt hold of a man by long and continuall cuſtome from his youth; will moſt hardly leaue him in his age, but will hang faſt on till the day of his death. And hence it is that the Lord by his Prophet doth note it to bee a thing impoſſible in reſpect of humane power to leaue thoſe ſins which are cuſtomably committed, Ier. 13.23. Can the Black-moore change his skin, or the Leopard his ſpots? then may yee alſo doe good that are accuſtomed to doe euill. And therefore if euer we meane to leaue our ſins and to turne vnto God, it is beſt to begin before the corruptions of nature be confirmed by cuſtome.

§. Sect. 3.
2. Becauſe Satan will more hardly be caſt out of his poſſeſſion when he hath long held it.

Secondly, while we liue in our ſinnes we continue in Satans thraldome, and hee hath full poſſeſſion of vs; which poſſeſſion the longer he holdeth the more hardly will hee be caſt out; for as thoſe who haue a long time quietly enjoyed their houſes and lands, though their title be but weake, yet are more hardly diſpoſſeſſed, then if at their firſt entrance their right had beene called into queſtion, both becauſe long cuſtome hath in it the nature of a law, and the parties themſelues will be more earneſt in vſing all means to retaine their poſſeſſions which they haue long held, time hauing worne out all doubting of their right: ſo Satan is more hardly thruſt out of his poſſeſſion when hee hath long kept it, becauſe his long holding of vs in his thraldome maketh him imagine that he hath right to hold vs ſtill; and hee is moſt earneſt in vſing all his ſtrength and policie, to hold that which hee hath already gotten and long kept in his poſſeſſion. Wee know that when a Souldier in fight hath taken another captiue, at firſt hee vſeth all meanes to breake from him, as hauing better opportunitie when they are ſtill in the field, then he can hope for after when he is carried away and clapt vp in priſon: and as hee hath leſſe meanes, ſo alſo hee hath leſſe deſire to eſcape; after that by continuance of time, his captiuity is made more familiar vnto him; and wee commonly ſee that a bird as ſoone as ſhe is taken, fluttereth and ſtriueth to get away; but after ſhe hath beene a while in the cage, ſhe is content to ſtay there ſtill, though the doore be open: and ſo it is in our ſpirituall thraldome, at the firſt we haue beſt meanes to eſcape and moſt deſire alſo, for after we are inured to Satans captiuitie we are content to remaine his bond-ſlaues ſtill. And if we deſire to eſcape, he will more diſdaine that wee ſhould ſtriue and oppoſe our ſelues againſt him, after hee hath long time had vs at command, and ruled vs at his becke, then when at the firſt wee fell into this cruell ſlauery.

§. Sect. 4.
3. By continuance the ſtrength of ſin increaſeth.

Thirdly, the longer that ſinne hath dominion ouer vs, the more it increaſeth in ſtrength, and the more hardly it is ſubdued: for it is the nature of ſinne, as ſoone as it is entertained to make way and roome for more, and thoſe worſe then it ſelfe; as wee may ſee in the example of Dauid, for when he was ouercome of idleneſſe, it made way for adultery, and adultery for murder. So Herod entertained inceſt, and that opened a doore in his heart to let in murder, and both theſe made open way for all Helliſh impiety. So Iudas retayning ſtill his couetouſnes was moued thereby to betray his Maſter; and this ſin brought him firſt to deſperation, and then to hang himſelfe. Yea the Apoſtle Peter after that hee joyned himſelfe in company with the wicked ſeruants of the more wicked high Prieſt, at firſt was moued hereby to deny his Maſter, and when hee had gone thus far, then hee denieth him againe with an oath, and when he had thus far proceeded in the courſe of ſinne, hee maketh no conſcience of redoubling his oathes, curſing himſelfe if he knew the man. So that the longer we let ſin haue dominion in vs, the more it will increaſe it ſelfe in ſtrength and number, till our hearts be full of ſinne and wickedneſſe. As therefore thoſe Citizens were to bee accounted moſt fooliſh, who when they ſaw an hundred enemies entred into the City, ſhould deferre the beating of them out or killing of them, till they had opened the gate to let in ten thouſand more better armed and more ſtrongly prouided, thinking then to haue better opportunitie, and more abilitie to giue them the repulſe; ſo alike fooliſh are thoſe who finding it hard and difficult to ſubdue ſome few ſinnes, to which they are now giuen, doe defer it till the time to come, when as they are increaſed in huge multitudes, imagining then to doe it with more eaſe. Sin, it is the poyſon of the ſoule, as therefore poyſons being drunke are preſently to bee caſt vp againe, otherwiſe they diſperſe themſelues in the veines, and ſo going to the heart cauſe death; ſo this poyſon of ſin, if it be long kept in vs, will diſperſe it ſelfe ouer the whole body and ſoule, and ſeizing vpon the heart, will plunge vs into euerlaſting death and deſtruction. Sinne is an heauy burthen, and vpon whomſoeuer it lieth, it will preſſe them downe vnto Hell; as therefore the way to eaſe a man of his burthen is not to adde more vnto it, but to caſt it off; ſo the way to eaſe vs of the heauy burthen of ſin, is not to increaſe the waight by adding ſtill more and more vnto it, but by caſting it off ſpeedily, for when by this continuall addition our ſinnes are growne to an vnſupportable waight they will ſooner preſſe vs downe then we ſhall caſt them off.

Fourthly, the longer we liue in ſinne, the more vnpleaſant will vertue and godlineſſe be vnto vs; and the more we are delighted in fulfilling the luſts of the fleſh, the more bitter it will be to mortifie them, and to imbrace any ſtrict courſe of ſanctification, ſeeing theſe are contrary the one to the other. Hee that hath long continued in darkneſſe cannot endure the ſight of the Sun; hee that neuer taſted any thing but ſweet and pleaſant meats, cannot abide to feed vpon thoſe which are ſowre and bitter; he that was borne and bred in hot Countries, is not able to brooke thoſe which are cold: and ſo thoſe who haue accuſtomed themſelues to ſin will hardly be euer brought to imbrace vertue and godlineſſe, theſe being as contrary one to another, as light and darkneſſe, ſweet and ſowre, hot and cold, eſpecially conſidering that ſin is as delightfull to the taſte of a naturall man, as drinke when hee is extreamely thirſty, or meate when he is ready to pine for hunger.

Fiftly, the longer wee liue in our ſins and defer our conuerſion vnto God, the more are our vnderſtandings darkned, our wils peruerted, our affections corrupted, our hearts hardned, and our conſciences ſeared, and all the powers and faculties of our bodies and ſoules are more and more diſabled. For as the longer that ſickneſſe hath continued, the more it weakeneth the body and maketh it vnfit for any worke or action: ſo the longer ſin, which is the ſickneſſe of the ſoule, hath ſeized on vs, the more vnable we are to ſhake it off, and the weaker it maketh vs to performe any good actions. When men at firſt fall into vnuſuall ſinnes, their conſciences checke them, and they feare leſt the Lord wil powre vpon them his heauy judgements; but when they haue committed the ſame ſins againe and againe, and yet are not puniſhed, then like as theeues, who hauing eſcaped after one robbery committed, are ready to commit another: ſo they hauing not taſted of Gods judgements threatned, thinke that they ſhall neuer bee inflicted on them; and therefore are ready to ſinne againe; vntill by long cuſtome in ſinning their harts are hardned, and their conſciences ſeared, as it were, with a hot Iron, ſo as now without any checke or remorſe, yea, with all pleaſure and delight they can commit thoſe ſins, which in former times they would haue trembled to haue entertained into their ſecret thoughts. A notable place to this purpoſe wee haue, Eccleſ. 8.11. Becauſe ſentence againſt an euill worke is not executed ſpeedily, therefore the heart of the ſonnes of men is fully ſet in them to doe euill; So the Lord telleth the Iſraelites, that becauſe he in his patience and long ſuffering forbare to viſit them for their ſins, therefore their hearts were deſtitute of his feare, Eſay 57.11. Is it not becauſe I held my peace, and that of long time, therefore thou feareſt not me?

§. Sect. 7.
6. Becauſe the meanes grow vneffectuall by delayes.

Sixtly, the longer wee deferre our repentance, the more vneffectuall will the meanes be of our conuerſion; for the Word of God will either ſoften our hearts like waxe, or harden them like clay, either it will bee the ſauour of life vnto life, or the ſauour of death to our deeper condemnation, as it is, 2. Cor. 2.16. If it once goe out of Gods mouth, it ſhall not returne vnto him void, but it ſhall accompliſh that which hee will, and it ſhall proſper in the thing whereto hee ſendeth it, (whether it be for the conuerſion or hardening of thoſe who heare it) as it is Eſay 55.11. Wee know if a ſalue be applied vnto a wound, either it healeth it, or elſe the ſore ouer-comming the vertue thereof, doth more feſter and ranckle: and ſo this ſpirituall ſalue being applied vnto our ſoules wounded with ſin, doth either cure them, or elſe becomming vneffectuall, they waxe worſe and worſe. When men ſleepe, and are ſuddenly wakened with ſome ſtrange and vnuſuall ſound, they preſently ſtart vp and are amaſed, but after they haue beene a long time acquainted with the noiſe, they can ſleepe ſecurely and not be much diſquieted; ſo when men ſleeping in carnall ſecuritie are awaked with the threatnings of the Law preached vnto them, which (like Canon ſhot) thunder in their eares, they are at firſt ſomewhat rouzed vp and begin to looke about them, but giuing themſelues to ſleepe againe in their ſinnes, after they haue beene many times awakened, at laſt this fearfull ſound nothing moues nor diſquiets them, neither will any thing waken them out of this ſpirituall Lethargie, but the voice of the Archangell com-commanding them to ariſe and to come vnto iudgement.

§. Sect. 8.
7. Becauſe old age is more vnfit for repentance, then youth.

Seuenthly, if we defer our conuerſion vntill our old age, it will then be more hard and difficult then in the time of youth, becauſe olde men are more indocible and vnfit to learne, then they were in their youthfull dayes, and therefore whoſoeuer meane to attaine vnto learning of any Science, Trade or Occupation, they doe not defer it to their old dayes, but giue themſelues vnto it in the time of their youth, when as their wits are moſt freſh, and their capacitie moſt quicke to receiue inſtruction. Seeing then there is much knowledge neceſſarily required to the making of a true Chriſtian (for without knowledge we can haue no faith, and without faith there is no ſaluation) therefore for the attaining hereunto it is very needful that we begin betimes, and ſet our ſelues to learne Gods true Religion in the time of our youth, when as we are moſt fit for this purpoſe. And this counſell the Wiſeman giues vs, Prou. 22. 6. Teach a childe in the trade of his way, and when he is old he ſhall not depart from it. Secondly, as old men are more vnfit to learn, ſo they are more forgetfull to remember that which is taught them, and therefore if they doe not ſet their whole minds vpon Gods Word, and continually call to mind that which hath beene deliuered vnto them in the preaching thereof, meditating therein with the Prophet Dauid day and night, all they haue learned will eaſily ſlip out of their weake and decayed memories. Which thing is moſt hard for them to performe by reaſon of manifold diſtractions, which that age is ſubiect vnto, as the infirmities of the bodie, ſicknes, aches, and innumerable griefes, and alſo the manifold troubles & cares of minde, not only in reſpect of their owne ſtate, but alſo in the behalfe of their children, young Nephewes and neere friends, whoſe welfare is as deare vnto them as their owne. Now if a ſingle man hath cares enow to diſtract him from Gods Seruice, how many are their diſtractions, whoſe cares are doubled and redoubled? and therefore if we would make choice of the fitteſt time for our conuerſion, we muſt not deferre it till our old age, but turne vnto God in our youth, when as our wits are moſt fit to receiue, and our memories to retaine inſtruction.

Prou. 22.6.

§. Sect. 9.
8. Becauſe the houre of death is the moſt vnfit time for repentance.

Laſtly, if wee defer our conuerſion vnto God till our old age, or till wee lie on our death bed, we ſhall find it more difficult, in that our enemy Sathan, who alwayes goeth about like a roring Lion, ſeeking to deuoure vs, doth then redouble his malicious diligence in working our deſtruction, when as hee ſeeth the time draw neere wherein hee muſt attaine his purpoſe, or elſe for euer faile of his deſire; what therefore will now our malicious, powerfull and moſt ſubtill enemy leaue vnattempted? What violence will hee not now offer? What policie will hee not aſſay to draw vs from God to his Kingdome of darkneſſe? We know that when enemies beſieging a Citie doe heare that their ſiege is ſhortly to be raiſed by the approching of mighty ſuccours; or within a while will become vaine and bootleſſe, by reaſon that the Citie will be more ſtrongly manned and better victualled, how they will bend all their Ordinance againſt the wall to make a breach, how furiouſly they will giue the aſſault, and how deſperately they will fight, that they may not bee diſappointed of their hope and loſe all their former labour; and ſhall wee thinke that Satan who hath long beſieged vs, deſiring nothing more then to ſack our ſoules, and to ſpoile them of all Gods graces, and to leade them captiue to Hell and deſtruction, will vſe leſſe politique fury in aſſaulting vs with all his engines of battery, when hee ſeeth the time approach when as now or neuer he is to accompliſh his deſire? But let vs conſider moreouer how able wee are to endure his aſſaults if wee doe not prepare our ſelues before the time of ſickneſſe, arming our ſelues with the whole armour of God; ſurely we are naked and lie open to all his violence, being deſtitute of the girdle of Verity, the knowledge of Gods Truth, neither armed with the breaſt-plate of Righteouſneſſe, nor hauing our feet ſhod with the preparation of the Goſpell of Peace, whereby wee might bee enabled chearefully to march in the afflicted way which is full of the thornes and briars of tribulation and afflictions, wherein wee muſt trauell if wee will goe to Gods kingdome; neither yet hauing the ſhield of faith whereby we might quench the fierie darts of the wicked one, nor the helmet of ſaluation, nor yet any skill to vſe the ſword of the Spirit, the word of God; either for the defending of our ſelues, or the offending of our enemie. And whereas we may hope that God will at that time ſupplie all our wants, and giue vnto vs all his ſpirituall armour, whereby we may bee defended and Satan repulſed, wee are to know that God vſeth not to giue his heauenly and ſpirituall graces at the houre of death to thoſe, who haue contemned them all their life; or if he doe beſtow them vpon any, it is ordinarily by the meanes which he hath ordained for this purpoſe, as the hearing of the word, heartie prayer, holy conferences, and ſuch like ſpirituall exerciſes: now let it bee granted that wee may haue at ſuch times of our mortall ſickneſſes, Gods Miniſters, and all other outward helpes to further vs, in performing of theſe duties (which yet notwithſtanding no man can promiſe to himſelf) yet how vnfit is any man in this caſe for the effectuall doing of theſe holy exerciſes, when as his body is full of paine, & his mind full of anguiſh, partly fearing Gods judgements & eternall damnation, partly being grieued with the loſſe of all his delights, and becauſe he is to part with his friends; partly being troubled and diſtracted with diſpoſing of his worldly eſtate, and ſetting all things in order; and when to all theſe incumbrances there is added Satans dangerous tentations, who then moſt violently aſſaulteth, and moſt ſubtilly vndermineth vs that hee may worke our finall deſtruction. And therefore ſeeing our conuerſion in the time of our ſickneſſe is ſo hard and difficult, (I had almoſt ſaid deſperate) let vs whileſt the Lord giueth vs the outward meanes of our conuerſion, and withall the vſe of our ſenſes, vnderſtandings, and memories, (all which when we are grieuouſly ſicke, are alwayes exceedingly weakned, and ſometime quite ouerthrowne) let vs (I ſay) vnfainedly turne vnto the Lord by vnfained repentance in the time of our health and ſtrength, and not by our delayes, hazard and deſperately indanger the eternall ſaluation of our ſoules for the enjoying of the tranſitory trifles and vaine delights of this miſerable World.

CHAP. XXXI.

Of diuers other motiues which may haſten our repentance.

Sect. I. e ſorrow oweth ſin ioy ac- panieth

THe fift argument to perſwade vs to ſpeedy repentance and turning vnto God, is, that by our delay either wee prepare more matter for our owne ſorrow and griefe, or elſe treaſure vp for our ſelues a more fearefull meaſure of wrath againſt the day of wrath. For if the beſt happen that wee can hope for, or imagine, it is that we truly repent vs of our ſins, without which there is no forgiueneſſe: and what is this repentance, but an heartie ſorrow, and bitter griefe, for our ſins paſt, and an earneſt deſire and endeauour of forſaking them in time to come. And therefore ſeeing whatſoeuer pleaſure we haue taken in ſinning, we muſt after loſe it in ſorrowing for ſin, ſeeing our laughing muſt end in weeping, and our hony be turned into gall and Wormewood; let vs breake off our ſins betimes, by vnfained repentance, and not heape vp matter of more griefe. Let not our minds ſo much dote to taſte of the hony which ſinne bringeth in the mouth, as that wee forget the poyſon which it carrieth in the taile; let vs not be ſo eager in drinking of this poyſon of ſinne, though it be ſweet and pleaſant to the taſte, remembring that it is deadly in operation; if it be not (as it were) caſt vp againe by vnfained repentance. Let not our gluttonous appetites cauſe vs to ſurfet on the pleaſures of ſin, ſeeing the preſent delight will not countervaile the future paine, when as being ſick in ſin, and tormented in conſcience, we ſhall vomit that with griefe, which we haue eaten with pleaſure, finding more bitterneſſe in the caſting vp, then ſweetneſſe when wee ſwallowed it downe. But this is the beſt which can befall vs, for if wee doe not thus heartily ſorrow for our ſinnes, but ſtill liue in them with pleaſure and delight, then doe wee nothing elſe but heape vp judgement, and puniſhments, which ſhall one day be powred vpon vs in full meaſure, and fill vp the vials of Gods wrath, till being filled vp to the brim, hee will powre them out vpon our owne heads. And this the Apoſtle plainly ſheweth, *Rom.*2. Verſe 5. But thou (ſaith he) after thine hardneſſe and heart that cannot repent, heapeſt vnto thy ſelfe wrath againſt the day of wrath, and of the declaration of the iuſt judgement of God. 6. Who will reward euery man according to his workes, &c. And this is all the treaſure which Sinners, by deferring their repentance, heape vp vnto themſelues for the laſt dayes; as Iames ſpeaketh, Iames 5.3. The longer therefore we deferre our repentance the more we increaſe the bils of accounts, of which we ſhall neuer be able to giue a reckoning at the great and generall Audit; the more we heape vp our ſinnes, the more we heape vp Gods wrath, and increaſe the meaſure of our condemnation, and helliſh torments, euery day as it were piling vp wood, in which wee ſhall eternally bee burned.

§. Sect. 2. The ſixt motiue, our dangerous eſtate before conuerſion.

The ſixt motiue to perſwade vs to haſten our conuerſion vnto God with all ſpeed, is the conſideration of the dangerouſnes of our eſtate before our conuerſion; for we are dead in our ſins, the children of wrath, and enemies vnto God, who euery minute lie open to his judgements and puniſhments. And this the Lord implieth in his ſpeech to Cain, *Gen.*4.7. If thou doeſt not well (ſaith he) ſin lieth at the doore, that is, the puniſhment due to thy ſinne, like a cruell wilde beaſt ſtill watcheth and waiteth for thee, ſo as thou canſt not ſtir any way but it is ready to ſeize vpon and deſtroy thee. Now in what a fearefull ſtate are thoſe who euery minute liue in this danger, of which if they bee ſurprized what can remayne vnto them but euerlaſting death and deſtruction? For as the tree falleth, ſo ſhall it lie, as it is *Eccleſ.*11.3. that is, as the day of death leaueth vs, ſo ſhall the day of judgement find vs. And therefore if wee bee taken away in our impenitencie whileſt wee are dead in our ſins, children of wrath, and enemies vnto God, ſuch ſhall we bee preſented before the tribunall ſeate of judgement in the preſence of the great Iudge of Heauen and Earth.

*Gen.*4.7.

*Eccleſ.*11.3.

§. Sect. 3. The ſeuenth motiue taken

The ſeuenth motiue may be drawne from the manifold benefits which will accompany our ſpeedy conuerſion. For firſt vertue and good-from the benefits which accompany our conuerſion.

goodneſſe being ſowne in vs in the time of youth, will take more deepe root in vs, ſo as it cannot eaſily bee left or loſt. For as the veſſell doth longeſt retaine the ſmell and taſt of that liquor which was put into it whileſt it was new and vnſeaſoned, ſo they will longeſt retaine vertue and goodneſſe who haue it planted in them in their youth, according to that Prou.22.6. Teach a child in the trade of his way, and when hee is old he will not depart from it. Secondly, if we turne to God betimes, the exerciſes of Religion and works of ſanctification, will be far more pleaſant and eaſie then if we deferre them till our old age; for often vſe will bring vs to a cuſtome, and long cuſtome will worke in vs an habit of vertue, which will be eaſie and familiar. If children from their youth bee brought vp in Trades and Occupations which are very hard and difficult, they doe attaine to the skill and practice of them with exceeding dexterity and quickneſſe; but if the learning of them be deferred till old age, they can neuer attaine vnto them, or at leaſt performe them ſlowly and with great difficulty; and ſo if from our childhood wee accuſtome our ſelues to the learning and practiſe of the workes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, they will grow exceeding eaſie and pleaſant, whereas being deferred they will be difficult and tedious. If the Oxe whileſt he is young be accuſtomed to the yoke, he draweth in it quietly and with no great paine; but if hee run long in the paſture vnbroken and vntamed, when hee is brought to the yoke hee ſtrugleth and ſtriueth, and therewith galling his necke draweth with exceeding paine and irkſomneſſe; and ſo if in our youth wee accuſtome our ſelues to beare the yoke of obedience, it will be eaſie and pleaſant, but if we vſe delayes wee ſhall grow ſtubborne and ſtiffe-necked like vntamed Oxen, and the bearing of Chriſts yoke through our impatiencie, and the rebellion of our nature will gall and vexe vs. Thirdly, the ſooner wee turne vnto God, the more joy, peace and comfort ſhall wee haue in the whole courſe of our liues; for what joy may be compared with the joy in the Holy Ghoſt, what peace is like peace with God and the peace of conſcience, when as wee are ſure that wee are now friends, who before were enemies; and the children of God, and heires of his euerlaſting Kingdome of glory, who in time paſt were children of wrath, and fire-brands of Hell? What comfort in the World can bee imagined like vnto the conſolation of Gods Spirit, which is able to make all afflictions light, and euen death it ſelfe ſweet and pleaſant vnto vs? but this joy, peace, and comfort doe accompany our true conuerſion vnto God, and therefore who would deferre it for one day, ſeeing it bringeth ſuch ineſtimable benefits & ſuch ſurpaſſing pleaſures, as none ſufficiently vnderſtand them, but they who feele and enjoy them? Whereas on the other ſide, if we delay our conuerſion, in the meane while we are continually ſubject to the checkes and terrours of an euill conſcience, in feare of Gods judgements, and eternall damnation: and though in outward ſhew we may be exceeding merry and pleaſant, yet our mirth is full of ſorrow, and our joy of bitterneſſe, and of ſuch laughter wee may ſay, thou art mad, and of this joy, what is that which thou doeſt? as the Wiſe man ſpeaketh, Eccleſ.2.2. for it is but Sardonicus riſus, laughter from the teeth outward, which is ſtraight controlled with ſome inward pang or checke of conſcience. Fourthly, the ſooner we turne vnto the Lord, the longer time we ſhall ſpend in his ſeruice, which in truth is perfect libertie: now what can be more delightfull vnto any Chriſtian heart, then to ſerue our Creatour from the dayes of our youth, and to ſhew our thankfulneſſe to God our Redeemer for all the ineſtimable benefits which hee hath beſtowed vpon vs, by cauſing our lights to ſhine before men; and by glorifying his Name in our godly and Chriſtian liues? What can bee more pleaſing to a thankfull minde, then to take all occaſions of expreſſing thankfulneſſe to him, vnto whom we are ſo much bounden? Laſtly, as by our ſpeedy conuerſion vnto God wee liue in ſweete comfort and joyfull peace, ſo alſo we ſecurely expect death, and giue it entertainment when it commeth with chearefull countenance. For being conuerted vnto God, wee are at peace with him and in his loue and fauour, we are aſſured that the curſe of the Law is nailed to Chriſts Croſſe, that hee was condemned, that wee might be juſtified, and put to death, that wee might liue eternally; that he is gone before vs into Heauen to prepare vs a place there, and now ſitteth at the right hand of his Father to giue vs joyfull entertainment when we come vnto him; that he hath taken away the ſting of death, which is ſinne, and hath made a soueraigne medicine againſt this poyſon with his precious bloud; and therefore being conuerted vnto God wee need not feare death, yea, rather wee may wiſh with the Apoſtle to be ſpeedily diſſolued that we may be with Chriſt, ſeeing that is beſt of all. As it is *Phil.*1.23. neither need wee to feare the deſtruction of this earthly tabernacle, ſeeing we are aſſured that we haue a building giuen vs of God, a houſe not made with hands, but eternall in the Heauens, as it is 2.*Cor.*5.1. Moreouer, wee ſhall not need to feare either ſudden death, or an euill death, for it cannot be ſudden to them who are alwayes prepared, Nec poteſt male mori qui bene vixit, neither can he die ill who hath liued well. On the other ſide, thoſe who deferre their repentance and turning vnto God, when death approacheth are filled with horrour and feare, when as they ſee that they are ſtill ſubject to the curſe of the Law, and euery minute in danger of Gods fearefull judgements; when as the waight of ſin preſſeth them, Satan and their owne conſcience accuſeth them, and death waiteth on them, to bring them to euerlaſting death, hell and deſtruction. And therefore ſeeing ſo many benefits accompany our ſpeedy conuerſion both in life and death, and ſo many euils follow our delayes: let vs not be moued by Satans tentations, the ſweetnes of ſin, nor with the alluring vanities of this deceitfull world, to deferre our repentance from day to day, but let vs now hearken whileſt God yet calleth vs, and take the good and acceptable time when hee offereth it vnto vs.

are

becauſe

The eighth motiue to perſwade vs to ſpeedie conuerſion, is, that our turning vnto God being deferred to our old age, or till the time wee lie ſicke on our death-beds, is not ſo excellent in it owne nature, nor ſo acceptable vnto God, as if it were performed in the time of our youth. For what great matter is it if we leaue our ſinnes, when they are readie to leaue vs, to renounce the world with the riches, honours, and pleaſures thereof, when they are readie to abandon vs; to imbrace mortification, when as our bodies are mortified with ſickneſſe, and brought to the gates of death; to giue to the poore, when wee can keepe our goods no longer; to forgiue our enemies, when as we cannot offer them any further wrong or violence; to commend our wiues and children into the hands of God, when as wee our ſelues can no longer defend and prouide for them; to ceaſe to ſweare and blaſpheme Gods name, when as ſoon after we ſhal ceaſe to ſpeake? Moreouer, how can wee thinke that this will be acceptable vnto God, when as wee doe not come vnto him before all the world forſakes vs? nor craue his helpe, till we are abandoned of all other ſuccour, nor offer to come into his ſeruice, before we are ready to goe out of the world, and that rather for feare of puniſhment, and hope of reward, then for any loue wee beare to our Lord and Maſter? But let it be granted (as in truth it cannot be denied) that whenſoeuer we truly repent vs of our ſins, and turne vnto God, he will receiue vs to mercy; ſhould we take occaſion hereof to deferre our conuerſion, and to continue in our ſins? ſhould his loue and mercy towards vs, mooue vs to rebellion, and impietie towards him, and becauſe he is gracious and long ſuffering, ſhall we therefore the more offend him, and (as it were) whet the edge of his wrath againſt vs? be it farre from vs. Yea rather if God be gracious and mercifull, let vs be aſhamed to offend ſo gracious and mercifull a God; and though we ſhould be ſo hard hearted, as not to feare his juſtice, and fearefull judgements, yet euen in common humanitie let vs bluſh for ſhame to offend him in conſideration of his infinite loue and mercy. If we haue a friend, who by reaſon of the loue hee beareth vs, would hardly be diſpleaſed, or mooued to anger againſt vs, would wee make this vſe of his loue and patience, ſtill to prouoke him with new injuries? Nay, if there bee any good nature and ciuilitie in vs, would not his loue towards vs, mooue vs to loue him againe, and would not this loue worke in vs a care and feare not to diſpleaſe him? Yes aſſuredly. O let not then the Lords loue, patience, and long-ſuffering, who is our friend of friends, make vs to take occaſion of offending and diſpleaſing him; but rather let the conſideration therof be a forcible and ſtrong motiue to mooue vs to repentance.

Rom.2.4.

§. Sect.5.
The laſt motiue, becauſe repentance in time of ſicknes is often vnſound, Laſtly, though the Lord bee ſo gracious and mercifull, that he is ready to receiue vs into his loue and fauour, whenſoeuer we vnfainedly repent, and truly turne vnto him; yet foraſmuch as hee extendeth his mercy to thoſe onely who are truly penitent, and ſeeing the repentance of the moſt is fained and hypocriticall, which then only beginneth when death or ſome extreame danger approacheth, this ſhould be a ſtrong motiue to perſwade vs to repent and turne vnto the Lord when wee are in our perfect health, ſtrength and proſperitie, that ſo we may haue aſſurance that our conuerſion is ſincere and vnfained, and not forced or diſſembled. Wee know that Pharaoh himſelfe when hee was vexed with Gods fearefull plagues, could ſay, I haue ſinned, and promiſe amendment. And Saul, when God threatned to cut him off, and to take the Kingdome from him, could acknowledge his wickednes, and pretend a deſire to worſhip the Lord. And Ieroboam could ſhew more contrition for the loſſe of his hand, then hee euer ſhewed for the loſſe of his ſoule. And wicked Achab when hee heard heauy judgements denounced againſt him, could outwardly humble himſelfe, put on ſack-cloth, faſt, and goe demurely. And who may not obſerue in his owne experience, how many there are, who in the time of their ſickneſſe make goodly ſhewes of repentance, promiſing golden mountaines, and vowing, if they recouer, that they will lead a new life, forſaking their ſins, and endeauouring to ſerue the Lord in the duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and yet the ſame men being reſtored to their health, with the Dogge returne to their vomit, and with the Sow to wallow againe in the filthy puddle of ſin, becomming as prophane, wicked, irreligious, and negligent in all duties of Chriſtianitie, as euer they were? which is a moſt vndoubted ſigne that their repentance was but fained and diſſembled, and that they were mooued thereunto, not for any loue of God, or hatred of ſin, but for feare of Gods judgements, and eternall condemnation, and therefore aſſoone as the cauſe of their feare is a little remoued, their repentance alſo ceaſeth. Moreouer, we know that true repentance is the gift of God, and that wee haue it not at our owne becke and call, but when hee offereth and vouchſafeth it vnto vs, and therefore it is no maruell if they who haue ſcorned this gracious gift all the whole courſe of their liues, ſhould bee denied it at the time of death, and left ſo to the hardneſſe of their hearts, that though they ſeeke repentance, yet they ſhall neuer find it; And though with the fiue fooliſh Virgins they deſire to buy Oile for their Lampes, yet the time of grace being paſt they ſhall be ſhut out of doores and excluded from the marriage. Neither doth the Lord ordinarily beget faith, repentance, and other ſanctifying graces in any man, but by the vſe of the meanes which hee hath ordained for this purpoſe: now the meanes ordained of God are not ſickneſſe, or the infirmities of old age, but the Miniſtery of his Word, made effectuall by the inward operation of his Spirit for our conuerſion and ſanctification; and therefore if the Lord hath oftentimes granted vs this meanes, and they haue not beene effectuall for our conuerſion; if hee haue often called vs in the preaching of the Word and wee haue refuſed to come, what hope can we haue, that we ſhould turne vnto God, without this meanes in the time of ſickneſſe, who by the continuall hearing of the Word, haue not beene conuerted in the time of our health, ſeeing not any come vnto Chriſt, but whom the Father draweth, and the meanes whereby hee draweth vs vnto him, is not ſickneſſe or the approaching of death ordinarily, but the Miniſtery of his Word? For when the ſheepe heare Chriſts voice, and thereby know him to be the true Shepheard; then (and not before) they follow him, as it is Iohn 10.27. So that though wee were ſicke, and certainly aſſured wee ſhould die to morrow, yet for all this, wee are neuer the neerer our conuerſion, faith and repentance then wee were before; as appeareth in the example of the Epicures, 1. Cor. 15.32. Let vs eate and drinke (ſay they) for to morrow we ſhall die. A man would thinke they ſhould rather haue ſaid, let vs faſt and pray, for to morrow wee ſhall die; but this plainly ſheweth that we are neuer the neerer our conuerſion vnto God, and true repentance though we are certaine that death approacheth; it is onely the worke of Gods Spirit, which ordinarily worketh not by the meanes of ſickneſſe or feare of death, but by the Miniſtery of the Word, which is Gods owne Ordinance inſtituted of God for the gathering together of the Saints, and for the edification of the body of Chriſt. And therefore whileſt the Lord calleth vs in the preaching of the Word, let vs hearken vnto his voice, and turne vnto him by vnfained repentance: for if Gods owne Ordinance is not effectuall for our conuerſion, aſſuredly there is no hope that euer we will be conuerted by ſickneſſe or any other extraordinary meanes whatſoeuer. It is an admirable miracle wrought by the infinite wiſdome and almighty power of God, that a poore Sinner ſhould bee conuerted vnto him by the preaching of the Word, for hereby we who were dead in ſin, are raiſed vp to newneſſe of life, we who were borne blinde, are indued with ſight; our hearts more hard then the Adamant, are made flexible, and ſoft as waxe to receiue any. impreſſion, which the Lord will imprint in them, and we are mooued to deny our ſelues, and to caſt away our owne righteouſneſſe, and to reſt and relie vpon Chriſt Ieſus alone for our juſtification and ſaluation, which is quite contrary to our naturall diſpoſition: but it were a miracle of miracles, that all theſe things ſhould bee wrought in vs by ſickneſſe, which the Lord hath not ordained for this purpoſe, when as the meanes appointed by God himſelfe the Miniſtery of his Word, which is Gods owne Ordinance could neuer worke them in vs. It may be indeed that Gods hand lying heauy vpon vs in the time of ſickneſſe, and fearing worſe judgements in the life to come, we may be mooued hereby to make a goodly ſhew, and to vow great reformation if wee might be reſtored to our health: It may be that with Pharaoh, wee may make a fained confeſſion of our ſins, and promiſe to amend, if this judgement may bee remooued, or that wee may with Achab outwardly humble our ſelues before God, to the end we may eſcape thoſe fearfull puniſhments which are threatned in his Word; but it is a thouſand to one if we then truly repent, who haue liued our whole time in impenitency; or then turne vnto God if we were not before that time effectually called and conuerted. For as we liue, ſo we commonly die; neither is it likely that hauing led our liues like wicked Balaam, we ſhould die the death of the righteous; that hauing alwayes hitherto beene thornes and thiſtles, wee ſhould now bring forth ſweete figs and pleaſant grapes, when we are ready to be cut downe and to be caſt into the fire; that hauing all our life ſowed the ſeedes of wickedneſſe wee ſhould at our death reape the fruit of godlineſſe; And therefore (as the Apoſtle exhorteth) let vs not bee deceiued, God is not mocked; for whatſoeuer a man ſoweth that ſhall hee alſo reape; for hee that ſoweth to his fleſh, ſhall of the fleſh reape corruption, but hee that ſoweth to the ſpirit, ſhall of the ſpirit reape life euerlaſting, as it is *Gal.*6.7,8. Let vs now turne vnto God, while hee calleth vs and granteth vs the meanes meanes of our conuerſion the Miniſtery of his Word; now is the acceptable time, now is the day of our ſaluation; and if wee will now turne vnto God and truly repent whilſt wee might continue in our ſins, wee may be aſſured our repentance is true and vnfained, and not preſſed out of vs with ſenſe of preſent paine, nor forced with feare of future puniſhment; and that turning to God, wee ſhall be receiued to grace and mercie, ſeeing we then offer to ſerue him, when wee might haue ſerued Satan, the world and our owne corrupt fleſh.

AND ſo much concerning theſe Motiues, whereby we may be perſwaded to ſpeedy repentance; all which the worldly ſecure man wardeth and beareth off with a double fence, ſo as they can neuer beate him downe with true humilitie nor pierce his heart with vnfained ſorrow for ſinne; the one is by alleaging Gods mercy manifeſtly declared vnto vs in the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell; the other by objecting the example of the conuerted thiefe, who though hee had ſpent his whole life in ſin and wickedneſſe, yet at the laſt houre was receiued to mercy. For the firſt, hath not the Lord (will they ſay) proteſted in his Word, that hee deſireth not the death of a Sinner, but that he turne from his way and liue? Hath not our Sauiour told vs, that he came not to call the righteous, but Sinners to repentance; and doth he not inuite ſuch vnto him as labour vnder the heauy burthen of ſinne, promiſing that he will eaſe them? And hath not the Apoſtle Paul taught vs, that Gods will is, that all men ſhould be ſaued, and come to the knowledge of his truth? Seeing therefore God is ſo mercifull, why ſhould we doubt of our ſaluation? Why ſhould wee feare to deferre our repentance, and follow our pleaſures and delights for a time, ſeeing the Lord will receiue vs to mercie whenſoeuer we turne vnto him?

I anſwer firſt, that though all this were certaine true, and not to be doubted of; yet it is a moſt vnthankfull part and horrible ingratitude againſt our gracious God and louing Father to take occaſion of his mercy, the more to offend him, as before I haue ſhewed. Secondly I anſwer, that as God hath ſhewed his mercy in the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell, ſo alſo he hath as plainly declared his juſtice in the ſeuere threatnings of the Law, and hee is as true in the one, as in the other. And therefore all the queſtion is, who ſhall taſte of his mercy and who of his juſtice, ſeeing that is promiſed to ſome, and this threatned againſt others; or rather in truth it is without all queſtion, for the Lord hath plainly ſhewed in his Word that hee will extend his mercy to all repentant Sinners and to them onely, and that he will declare his juſtice in powring out his juſt iudgements vpon the wicked who liue in their ſinnes, and eſpecially vpon thoſe who take occaſion of Gods mercy to continue in in their vnrepentancie, deſpiſing the riches of his bountifulneſſe, his patience and long-ſuffering; for hereby they heape vnto themſelues wrath againſt the day of wrath, and the declaration of the iuſt iudgement of God; as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom. 2.4,5. Though then there be neuer ſo many ſweete promiſes in the Goſpell, yet they who continue in their ſinnes without repentance can reape no true comfort by them, becauſe they are not made to them but to repentant Sinners; and on the other ſide, though there be neuer ſo many terrible threatnings denounced in the Law, yet the penitent Sinner needs not to feare them, ſeeing they are threatned onely againſt thoſe who continue in their impenitencie. Though God be of infinite mercy, let not the wicked man who liueth in his ſins preſume, ſeeing it is ſufficiently declared in pardoning the ſins of repentant Sinners: neither let him who is truly penitent deſpaire becauſe God is of infinite juſtice, ſeeing it is ſufficiently manifeſted in puniſhing the ſins of thoſe who continue in their vnrepentancy. Let not him who is turned vnto God from his wicked wayes feare Gods juſtice, for it is fully ſatisfied in Chriſt, and therefore it ſhall neuer attach him; neither let him who continueth in his ſinnes without repentance, hope in Gods mercy, for it doth not belong vnto him; nor yet in the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell, which though they bee neuer ſo generall, yet are they alwayes to be reſtrained to the condition of the couenant of grace, faith, and repentance. And this is manifeſt in the places before alleaged, which worldly men ſo much abuſe to nouriſh in them carnall ſecuritie, for whereas the Lord ſaith, Ezech. 33.11. That hee will not the death of a Sinner, hee addeth in the next words, but that hee turne from his way and liue: ſo that the Lord ſpeaketh not of all Sinners but of thoſe who turne vnto him from their wicked wayes. So our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, that he came not to call the righteous, that is, thoſe who are juſt & righteous in their owne conceits, but Sinners to repentance: ſo that whoſoeuer are called vnto Chriſt that in him they may haue ſaluation are called alſo to repentance. Neither doth our Sauiour call all Sinners vnto him without difference, but thoſe onely who are weary and heauy laden, that is, who find their ſinnes irkſome and grieuous vnto them, and deſire nothing more then to be freed of this vnſupportable burthen. And the Apoſtle Paul likewiſe doth not ſay ſimply that God would haue all men to be ſaued, but that hee would alſo haue them come to the knowledge of the truth, that is to the knowing, acknowledging, and beleeuing of the principles of Chriſtian Religion concerning God, themſelues, and the worke of redemption wrought by Chriſt. Let therefore no carnall ſecure man take occaſion to preſume vpon Gods mercy in regard of the ſweet and gracious promiſes of the Goſpell; for vnleſſe they turne vnto God from their euill wayes and truly repent them of their ſinnes, vnleſſe they are weary and heauy laden, deſiring nothing more then to be eaſed of their heauy burthen, vnleſſe they come out of their blinde ignorance and attaine to the knowledge of the truth, the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell doe not appertaine vnto them.

¶. Sect. 3. The ſecond let is preſumption vpon the example of the conuerted Thiefe.

Secondly, whereas they alleage the example of the Thiefe conuerted at the houre of death we are to know that this is but one particular act of Gods mercy, and therefore we can make thereof no generall rule, eſpecially ſeeing to this one we may oppoſe many thouſands of thoſe who hauing deferred their repentance to the laſt houre, haue beene taken away in their ſins and impenitency. It is true indeed, that if with this Thiefe wee truly turne vnto the Lord by vnfained repentance, and ſhew our faith by the like liuely fruits, he will pardon our ſins, and receiue vs to mercy, according to his gracious promiſes: but this faith and repentance are not in our owne power, but the free gifts of God, which hee very ſeldome beſtoweth on thoſe at the houre of death, who haue neglected and contemned them their whole liues. Sometimes indeed hee calleth and conuerteth ſome at the laſt houre, to ſhew the infinite riches of his mercy; but moſt commonly he leaueth thoſe who haue deferred their repentance to die in their impenitency, that they may be examples of his juſtice. And to this purpoſe, [a] Auguſtine ſpeaketh well, There is (ſaith he) mention made in the Scriptures of one whom the Lord receiued to mercie, that none might deſpaire, and but of one, that none might preſume. It is the manner of Princes to ſend their gracious pardon ſometimes to thoſe who are led out to execution; but if any will wilfully offend in hope hereof, or hauing offended will deferre to ſue for his pardon to the laſt houre, ſurely he is well worthy to be hanged, both for his offence, and alſo for his preſumption: ſo the Lord mercifully pardoneth ſome few, when death is ready to ſeize vpon them, and to tranſport them into the eternall torments of hell fire, to ſhew the riches of his grace; but if any ſhall take occaſion hereby the more to offend againſt his Majeſty; or hauing offended, deferreth to ſue for pardon by powring out the teares of vnfained repentance vntill his laſt houre, hee is vndoubtedly vnworthy of any grace and mercy, and in all likelihood he ſhall be deliuered vp to ſuffer eternall torments. Moreouer, as this act of mercy in receiuing this Thiefe to grace, was very extraordinary, ſo was it reſerued as being moſt fit for the time of Chriſts Paſſion; for as great Princes at the time of their Coronation pardon ſuch notorious offences, the like whereof they will hardly euer after remit, to the end, that their clemencie and mercy may appeare to all: ſo our Sauiour Chriſt, the glorious King of Heauen and Earth, being ready to lay downe the forme of a ſeruant, and to take vpon him the Crowne of endles glory and majeſty, gaue his gracious pardon to this grieuous offender, to manifeſt his infinite mercy and goodnes vnto all men, that ſo they might breake off their ſins by vnfained repentance, and by a liuely faith come vnto him, looking and expecting for life and ſaluation only in this their Sauiour and Redeemer. And as cunning Surgeons hauing made a ſoueraigne ſalue, doe vpon the next occaſion make experiment thereof by curing ſome grieſly and deſperate wound, that ſo they may commend it to all who ſhall haue need to vſe it; ſo the Lord hauing made a precious plaiſter and ſoueraigne ſalue to cure all ſoules, who being wounded with ſinne, will apply it vnto them by a liuely faith, preſently tooke occaſion of curing therewith this poore Thiefe grieuouſly wounded with ſin, that all others in his ſtate, ſeeing the vertue thereof might more earneſtly deſire it, and more carefully ſeeke after, and apply it to their wounded ſoules. And therefore ſeeing the occaſion of this cure was altogether extraordinary, the action is not like to be ordinary, the occaſion being remooued, and the mercy of God, and vertue of Chriſts death and bloudſhed being ſufficiently manifeſted to all the World. Thirdly, wee are to know that the eſtate of theſe men, is farre vnlike, and much more deſperate, then the ſtate of the conuerted Thiefe: for he was in all likelihood neuer before this time called, and preſently he hearkneth vnto the voice of Chriſt, and willingly entertaineth the good motions of his Spirit; but theſe men being often called, haue refuſed to come, and haue quenched the good motions of Gods Spirit. Hee perſiſted in his ſin ignorantly, hauing not heard the doctrine of the Goſpell, whereby he might be inuited to come vnto Chriſt by a liuely faith, and might turne vnto God by vnfained repentance; theſe haue often heard theſe glad tidings and haue neglected and contemned them. Hee continued in his ſins through ignorance, neither did he vngratefully reſolue to ſerue the Deuill his whole life, reſeruing the time of his olde age and ſickneſſe for the ſeruice of God, only for his owne aduantage; but theſe men hauing been often inſtructed in the Law of God & wayes of godlines, notwithſtanding wittingly and wilfully perſiſt in their ſins, preſuming vpon repentance and hope of mercy at the laſt houre, intending then to turne vnto God, not for any loue they beare him, but for feare of Hell torments, and eternall damnation: Laſtly, his repentance was moſt vnfained, and exceeding earneſt, and his faith brightly ſhined preſently after his conuerſion in ſingular fruits thereof. For he made a notable confeſſion of his Sauiour and Redeemer, euen when all his Diſciples for feare forſooke him. Hee iuſtifieth Chriſt, when all men condemned him, & euen his Apoſtles doubted of him. He prayeth feruently vnto him, when the multitude mocked and reuiled him. Hee humbly confeſſeth his owne ſins, and louingly admoniſheth his fellow of his wickedneſſe, deſiring earneſtly that as they had beene fellowes and copartners in ſin, ſo they might be partakers in pardon, and in the benefit of redemption wrought by Chriſt; Whereas moſt commonly their repentance is forced and diſſembled for feare of puniſhment, rather then for hatred of ſin, or loue of God: as they vſually make it manifeſt if they recouer of their ſickneſſe. And therefore ſeeing there is ſuch great diſſimilitude and difference in their purpoſes, liues and courſes, it is not probable that they will euer be like in their conuerſion, death and ſaluation.

And ſo much for the anſwering of thoſe tentations, whereby Satan laboureth to make vs delay and deferre our repentance from day to day: with which, if he cannot preuaile, both becauſe wee ſee the neceſſity of repentance vnto ſaluation, and alſo plainly perceiue by the former reaſons that delayes are moſt dangerous, then hee will labour in the next place to perſwade vs to content our ſelues with a ſmall meaſure of repentance, or rather in truth with a counterfeit mock-repentance, which is onely in outward ſhew and neuer pierceth the heart; making vs beleeue, that if when we ſee our ſins, hauing our conſciences conuinced out of Gods Word, we doe in ſome generall termes confeſſe that we are all Sinners, and deſire God after a formall manner to haue mercy vpon vs, if wee can ſometime ſtraine from vs a broken ſigh, and bee content to leaue ſome of our leaſt pleaſing ſins, our repentance will be very acceptable to God, and ſufficient for our ſaluation.

And with this tentation Satan deludeth and deſtroyeth innumerable men in theſe our dayes, and therefore it behoueth euery man to prepare himſelfe for this encounter. And to this end we are to know, that the mercy of God, and merits of Chriſt, doe not belong vnto thoſe who thus ſlubber ouer their repentance; neither doth Chriſt Ieſus call vnto him ſuch as ſlightly ſorrow for their ſins, and thinke the burthen of them light and eaſie to be borne, but ſuch as labour and are heauy loden, as appeareth, Matth. 11. 28. Come vnto me all yee who are weary and heauy loaden, and I will eaſe you. In which words our Sauiour Chriſt plainly ſheweth, whom he calleth to the participation of the worke of redemption wrought by him, and what meaſure of repentance he requireth of them: for the firſt word κοπιῶντες, ſignifieth ſuch as labour vntill they be weary, and the other word πεφορτισμένοι, ſignifieth ſuch as are heauy laden with a burthen vnſupportable, and therefore being grieuouſly preſſed therewith, they deſire nothing more then to bee eaſed of it: for φόρτος, from which this word is deriued, properly ſignifieth the burthen of a ſhip, and is taken metaphorically for any thing which is very troubleſome and grieuous. So that by ioyning theſe two together, our Sauiour euidently declareth whom hee calleth and inuiteth vnto him: namely, thoſe only who know, acknowledge, and feele, that their ſins are an intolerable heauy burthen, and being exceedingly vexed with them, moſt earneſtly deſire to be eaſed and releaſed of them, and to this purpoſe flee vnto Chriſt by a true and liuely faith, finding themſelues deſtitute of all meanes whereby they may otherwiſe be eaſed and relieued.

What things are required in thoſe who truly repent.

If then we would haue any aſſurance that we are in the number of thoſe whom Chriſt calleth and inuiteth vnto him, we muſt haue firſt a ſight and ſenſe of our ſins, and a true and feeling knowledge of our miſerable and wretched eſtate, in which wee are, by reaſon of them, and the puniſhment due vnto them. Secondly, we muſt be weary in bearing this heauy burthen, as being moſt irkſome and grieuous vnto vs. Thirdly, we muſt haue an earneſt deſire to bee eaſed and freed from it. Laſtly, we muſt come vnto Chriſt by a true and liuely faith, to the end that hee may eaſe and releaſe vs.

1. Knowledge and ſight of their ſins.

For the firſt we muſt come to the knowledge of our ſinnes, before wee can truly repent of them: for wee cannot ſorrow for them, vntill wee ſee them, neither is it ſufficient that we ſee and know that wee are grieuous and hainous Sinners, vnleſſe we alſo feele the waight of this intolerable burthen, preſſing vs downe, vexing, and grieuing vs, euen to the very heart; for wicked and prophane men may ſee their ſinnes, for what can hide them from their eyes being ſo innumerable in multitude, and ſo grieuous and hainous in reſpect of their quantitie and qualitie? but yet they feele not their waight, neither are troubled with them; yea, it is a paſtime to a foole to doe wickedly, as it is *Prou.*10.23. and the abhominable filthy Sinner drinketh iniquitie like water, as it is Iob 15.16. and there are ſome ſo delighted with vngodlineſſe, and all lewde prophaneneſſe, that they euen draw vnto them iniquitie with the cords of vanitie, and ſinne as with cart-ropes, as the Prophet ſpeaketh, Eſay 5.18. and though they be laden with their ſinnes, as it were with an intolerable burthen, yet they feele them not, neither are they any thing vexed with their waight; and though the iniquitie of Sinners be ſo heauy that the earth cannot beare it, but reeleth too and fro like a drunken man, and is remoued like a tent, as it is Eſay 24.20. though it make all the creatures groane and trauaile in paine together, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, *Rom.*8.22. yea, though it euen wearieth God himſelfe in ſuffering, and bearing with it, as it is Eſay 43.24. yet doe they walke bolt vp right, and with ſtretched out neckes, neuer ſo much as ſtooping vnder this vnſupportable burthen, till at laſt it grow ſo heauy, that it ouerwhelmeth them, and preſſeth them downe to the bottome of Hell. The reaſon hereof is, becauſe they are wholy plunged, yea drowned and dead in their ſins: and therefore as thoſe who being diued to the bottome of ſome deep water, doe not feele the waight of that which is aboue them, whereas if they were pulled out of the waters, they would bee ouerwhelmed with the burthen of one tunne; ſo thoſe who are deeply plunged into the gulph of ſinne and wickedneſſe, doe not feele the waight of this intolerable burthen, but if once they come out of their ſins by vnfained repentance, the waight of ſome few of them would preſſe them downe vnto the gates of Hell, if they be not ſupported and freed from this burthen by our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt. But ſuch as theſe are not called by our Sauiour, neither will he eaſe them, though their burthen be neuer ſo intolerable; but he inuiteth thoſe onely who are heauy laden, and finding their burthen irkeſome, are weary of it and deſire to be eaſed; hee hearkneth only vnto thoſe who from their hearts cry out with Dauid, *Pſal.*38.4. Mine iniquities are gone ouer my head, and as a waightie burthen they are too heauie for mee: 6. I am bowed and crooked very ſore, I goe mourning all the day. Hee reſpecteth only thoſe who are of a broken heart and contrite ſpirit, for theſe only performe the condition of the couenant, and conſequently, to them alone the promiſes contained in the Couenant doe appertaine.

That he w

ther faith
repentanc

The condition of the couenant of grace is faith and repentance; neither of which doth he performe who doth not ſee nor feele the burthen of his Sins. For wee will neuer reſt vpon Chriſt for our ſaluation, vnleſſe we ſee that wee haue no meanes of our owne to eſcape condemnation: wee will neuer ſeeke vnto Chriſt to be our Redeemer, vnleſſe wee perceiue that wee are the bond-ſlaues of Sin and Satan: wee will neuer labour to obtaine the riches of his righteouſneſſe, vnleſſe wee diſcerne our owne nakedneſſe and beggerie: wee will neuer come vnto Chriſt to bee waſhed and purged from the pollution of our ſins and corruptions with his bloud, vnleſſe we ſee our naturall filthineſſe: we will neuer deſire to be eaſed of the heauy burthen of our Sinnes, vnleſſe wee feele the waight of them: we will neuer intreat Chriſt to be our Phyſician, vnleſſe we find that our ſoules are ſicke in Sinne: wee will neuer goe vnto him who is the author of life, vnleſſe we ſee that we are dead in our Sins: in a word, we will neuer intreat Gods mercy, vntill we feele our owne miſery. If therefore without this ſenſe of Sin we will neuer come vnto Chriſt, then conſequently without it wee ſhall neuer be eaſed; for hee freeth thoſe onely from condemnation who rely themſelues wholy vpon him for their ſaluation. He came to be their Redeemer alone, who feele their miſerable captiuity, and earneſtly deſire to bee releaſed; hee will not inrich any but thoſe who perceiue their owne beggery, and craue releefe; he will not waſh any with his precious bloud, but thoſe who ſee their pollution and filthines, and come vnto him intreating him to purge & cleanſe them; he will not eaſe any but thoſe who finding their Sins to be a heauy burthen, are weary, and come vnto him to be freed from them. He came into the world to be a Phyſician, not to thoſe who feele no infirmitie, but to thoſe who are ſicke and diſeaſed; hee came to giue life to thoſe alone who are dead in their Sins and treſpaſſes; neither will the Lord ſhew mercy vnto any, but vnto thoſe alone who perceiue their eſtate to bee moſt wretched and miſerable. For who can imagine that the Lord who is moſt infinite in wiſdome, ſhould vnaduiſedly beſtow his benefits vpon ſuch, as finding no want of them, doe not deſire them, when they are without them; nor eſteeme them though they had them, and conſequently will neuer be truly thankfull for that which they neither want, deſire, nor eſteeme? who can in reaſon conceiue that he wil offer himſelfe to be a Sauiour to ſuch as doe not thinke themſelues loſt and condemned? or to bee their Redeemer who will not acknowledge that they are in captiuitie? or that hee will beſtow the riches of his righteouſneſſe vpon ſuch proud beggers, as find no need thereof, being righteous enough themſelues in their owne conceits? that he will vainly ſpend his precious bloud in waſhing of thoſe who thinke themſelues cleane already, and need no ſuch purging? that he will in compaſſion eaſe thoſe of the burthen of their Sins who were neuer troubled with bearing of them? that hee will offer them any Phyſicke who will not acknowledge themſelues ſicke? or to giue life to thoſe who will not confeſſe that they are dead in Sin? and who can imagine that the Lord wil euer ſhew to thoſe his mercy, who will neuer ſhew the Lord their wretched miſery? Whoſoeuer therefore haue not a true ſenſe and feeling of the heauy burthen of their Sins; they will, neuer come vnto Chriſt; neither can they euer haue any aſſurance that hee will eaſe them, and conſequently they are deſtitute of a true faith which is the chiefe condition of the Couenant of grace. But as they want faith, ſo alſo they can neuer attaine vnto true repentance: For ſo long as they haue not the ſenſe of their Sins, they are not grieued with them, neither doe they deſire to leaue and forſake them. And as thoſe who bearing a burthen and are not vexed with the waight, they are not weary of bearing it, nor deſirous to leaue it; ſo thoſe who being loaded with the vnſupportable burthen of their Sinnes, and haue no ſenſe of the waight, they are not grieued with wearineſſe nor deſirous to bee freed from it, and conſequently they are deſtitute of true repentance, which is nothing elſe but an hearty griefe and a true ſorrow for our Sins paſt, and an earneſt deſire and endeauour to leaue and forſake them in the time to come.

So that whoſoeuer haue not a true ſenſe and feeling of the vnſupportable waight of Sin, they are deſtitute of true faith and repentance; and therefore the promiſes of the Goſpell being made onely to the faithfull and repentant Sinners, doe not appertaine vnto them. Which may more euidently appeare if we conſider ſome of the particulars; Eſay 61.1. It is ſaid that our Sauiour Chriſt was ſent to preach glad tidings vnto the poore, to binde vp the broken hearted, to preach libertie to the captiues, and to them that are bound, the opening of the priſon. 2. To comfort all that mourne, and to giue vnto them beauty for aſhes, the oile of ioy for mourning, and the garment of gladneſſe for the ſpirit of heauineſſe. Matth. 9.13. our Sauiour ſaith that, hee came not to call the righteous, but Sinners to repentance: and the Apoſtle witneſſeth of him, that hee came into the world to ſaue Sinners, 1.*Tim.*1.15. If therefore we be not poore in ſpirit and broken-hearted, if wee be not miſerable captiues, heauy mourners, and wretched Sinners, our Sauiour Chriſt was not ſent to preach the glad tidings of the Goſpell vnto vs, he will not giue vs libertie nor affoord vs any comfort, hee came not to call vs, neither will hee ſaue vs. So our Sauiour profeſſeth, Matth. 18.11. that he came to ſaue that which was loſt, and to fetch home the wandring ſheepe. If therefore we be not loſt in our ſelues we ſhall neuer be found of Chriſt; if wee doe not confeſſe with the Prophet Eſay, that wee haue gone aſtray like wandring ſheepe, he will neuer ſeek vs nor carry vs on his bleſſed ſhoulders to the ſheepfold of eternall happineſſe. In a word, as without the ſenſe of ſinne, we can neuer attaine vnto faith and repentance, ſo without faith and repentance, we can neuer haue any aſſurance of any of the promiſes of the Goſpell.

The meanes whereby we may attaine to a true ſight of our ſins.

And therefore it behoueth vs as wee tender our ſaluation, that wee labour after the ſight and ſenſe of our Sins, that with good Ioſias our hearts melt within vs, and euen reſolue themſelues into the teares of vnfained repentance; that we rent our hearts with true compunction, as the Prophet exhorteth, Ioel 2.13. and that with the Iewes we haue our hearts prickt within vs, when we come to the ſight of our Sins; and all this not ſo much in regard of the puniſhment wee haue deſerued, as that by our Sins wee haue diſpleaſed our good God and gracious Father, and haue cauſed our Sauiour Chriſt who is the Lord of life, to be put to a ſhamefull and painfull death. And that we may attaine vnto this ſenſe and feeling of our Sins, there are diuers meanes to bee vſed effectuall for this purpoſe; as firſt wee are to haue our recourſe vnto God by earneſt & feruent Prayer, deſiring and intreating that hee will anoint the blinde eyes of our vnderſtandings, with the precious eye-ſalue of his holy Spirit, that we may ſee our owne wretchedneſſe, miſery, pouerty, blindnes and nakednes, and that he will ſoften our hard hearts, with the oile of his grace, and ſo beate theſe ſtony Rocks, that out of them may flow plentifull ſtreames of vnfained repentance. Secondly, we are oftentimes to ſet the Law as a glaſſe before vs, that ſo we may ſee our deformities; and to examine our liues thereby, as it were by a rule or ſquare, that ſo wee may know both how often we haue erred and tranſgreſſed it in the time paſt, and how vnable wee are to performe it for the time to come in that exact manner which God requireth. For as the deformities and ſpots in the face though they be great and many, cannot be diſcerned of thoſe who haue them, vnleſſe they looke themſelues in a glaſſe, & though euery one elſe doth plainly ſee them, yet the party himſelf doth leaſt of all perceiue them: ſo though our ſpirituall deformities and filthy ſpots of Sin, appeare moſt vgly and odious in the eyes of God and men, ſo that euery one ſeemeth to point at them, yet we our ſelues will neuer diſcerne them, vnleſſe wee ſet the looking glaſſe of the Law before vs. Thirdly, wee are often and earneſtly to meditate ditate vpon the juſtice and truth of God, in whoſe preſence the Heauens are not cleane, and the Angels themſelues are vnable to abide the rigour of his iuſtice; and how much more is man abominable and filthy, who drinketh iniquitie like water? In whoſe ſight our beſt righteouſneſſe is like a polluted cloth; and how much more filthy then are our Sins and wickedneſſe? Moreouer, as he is moſt iuſt, ſo as he cannot let Sin goe vnpuniſhed, ſo alſo he is moſt true, yea truth it ſelfe: neither can any of thoſe threatnings fall to the ground vnexecuted, which he hath denounced againſt thoſe who liue in their Sins; and therefore there is no meanes to eſcape his fearefull judgements, vnleſſe we turne from our Sins, and meet the Lord by vnfained repentance. Fourthly, let vs continually remember that wee muſt once appeare before Gods Tribunall Seat of judgement, there to render an account not onely of our words and works, but euen of our ſecret thoughts, when as the Lord himſelf who ſearcheth the hearts and reines ſhall be our Iudge, who will not acquit the guilty, nor reſpect the perſon of man, neither will hee be ſatisfied with faire pretences and ſmooth excuſes, nor corrupted with bribes and gifts. And therefore let vs judge our ſelues that we may not be judged of the Lord; and in bitterneſſe of ſoule and remorſe of conſcience let vs condemne our ſelues to bee miſerable Sinners, that the Lord may acquite vs and make vs taſte of his mercy. Laſtly, let vs ſeriouſly meditate on thoſe fearefull puniſhments, which are prepared for thoſe who liue and die in their Sins; for they ſhall for euer be ſeparated from the preſence of God, the joyes of Heauen, and the ſweet company of the Saints and Angels; and be caſt into eternall darkneſſe, where they ſhall for euer and euer be tormented in flames vnquenchable. All which horrible puniſhmens are due vnto all, who continue not in all which is written in the booke of the Law to doe them; and therefore how ſhall we eſcape, who in ſtead of continuing in obedience to all Gods Commandements, haue continually broken them all, and done the cleane contrary, if we doe not in the ſenſe of the heauy burthen of our Sins, humble our ſelues before God by vnfained repentance, and come vnto Chriſt by a true and liuely faith, that we may be eaſed of this intolerable waight, & adorned with his righteouſneſſe and obedience.

And ſo much concerning the firſt ſigne, whereby thoſe may bee diſcerned whom Chriſt calleth, namely, the ſight and ſenſe of their Sinnes. But it is not ſufficient that wee feele our Sins like a heauy burthen, preſſing vs downe, if wee be content to beare it ſtill, but it muſt ſeeme irkſome and grieuous vnto vs, and make vs exceeding weary of bearing it; wee muſt with the Apoſtle Peter, thinke it ſufficient that wee haue ſpent the time paſt of our liues, after the luſt of the Gentiles in abominable ſins: and for the time come, wee are to liue after the will of God, dedicating our ſelues wholy to his worſhip and ſeruice. Otherwiſe, though wee haue neuer ſo exquiſite a ſight and ſenſe of our Sins, yet if they ſeeme vnto vs a ſweet burthen which we are content ſtil to beare without any great wearineſſe, yea with pleaſure and delight; if we be like the rich Miſer, who though his backe ſhould bee almoſt broken with the waight of his owne gold, yet would not think it any trouble, nay, would eſteeme it for his chiefe felicity, becauſe his burthen pleaſeth him: ſo if wee feeling that our Sins are an huge & maſſie burden, are neuertheles not troubled, nor weary of bearing them, but rather take our chiefe delight in being ſo loded, becauſe the burthen is exceeding ſweet and delightfull to vs; wee may aſſure our ſelues that we are not in the number of thoſe whom Chriſt calleth; for hee inuiteth them only vnto him, who being heauy laden with the waight of their Sins, are weary of their burthen, and ſorrow and grieue that they cannot ſhake it off, nor bee freed from it: crying out with the Apoſtle Paul, Rom. 7. 24. O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from the body of this death!

The third Signe, whereby we may know thoſe whom Chriſt calleth, is, that being vexed with the heauy burthen of Sin, they earneſtly deſire to be eaſed and releaſed of it; for as thoſe who are ouer-preſſed with a heauy burthen, deſire aboue all things to bee freed from it; ſo thoſe who feele the waight of Sin preſſing them downe, and are weary and tired in bearing of it, they moſt earneſtly deſire to be eaſed of this intolerable burthen, and will neuer be at reſt till their deſire be accompliſhed. This deſire in the Scriptures is reſembled to hunger and thirſt; in which theſe two things concurre; firſt a ſenſe of our want, and ſecondly an appetite or earneſt deſire to bee ſatisfied, and to haue our want ſupplied; and ſo in theſe ſpirituall things, firſt we feele the want of Gods graces and Chriſts righteouſneſſe; and then wee earneſtly deſire that we may be filled and ſatisfied with them. So that to hunger & thirſt after the grace of God, and the righteouſnes of Chriſt, and to be weary and heauy laden, are much alike, and both are bleſſed of the Lord. For as thoſe who hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe, are bleſſed becauſe they ſhall be ſatisfied, as it is, Matth. 5.6. So they are bleſſed who are weary and heauy laden with the burthen of their Sinnes; for ſuch Chriſt calleth vnto him, & hath promiſed to eaſe them, that is, to giue vnto them the remiſſion of their ſins, & to releaſe them of this burthen, by taking it vpon his owne ſhoulders. teth vnto him ſuch as are weary and heauy laden, *Matth.*11.28. So in diuers other places, he inuiteth and calleth thoſe who hunger and thirſt after his righteouſneſſe. So Eſay 55.1. Hoe, euery one that thirſteth come yee to the waters, and yee that haue no ſiluer come buy, and eat, come I ſay, buy wine, and milke, without money. And Iohn 7.37. *Ieſus cryed ſaying; If any man thirſt, let him come vnto me & drink. Whoſoeuer therefore hungreth and thirſteth after the grace of God, and righteouſneſſe of Chriſt; whoſoeuer is weary and heauy laden, that is, who ſo hath a true ſenſe and feeling of his Sins, and is vexed and grieued with the burthen thereof, and with all his heart deſireth to be eaſed of his loade, though he thinke himſelfe in a moſt miſerable eſtate, yet if he come vnto Chriſt, and with blinde Bartimeus cry out, O ſonne of Dauid haue mercy on mee, I may fitly ſay vnto him, as it was ſaid vnto this blind man: Bee of good comfort, for Chriſt calleth thee.

The laſt thing required in thoſe whom Chriſt calleth, is, that they come vnto him. For to whom ſhould we come for eaſe, but vnto Chriſt himſelfe? ſeeing there is neither Saint nor Angell, that can eaſe vs, for the waight of one Sinne would preſſe them downe into Hell; whereas our Sauiour Chriſt is able to beare the burthen of our Sins, yea he hath already borne them, that wee might be deliuered from them; as it is, 1.*Pet.*2.24. neither is it likely, that either Saint or Angel would ſo willingly helpe vs as our Sauiour Chriſt, who ſo tenderly loued vs that he came into the World, to lay downe his own moſt precious life as a price for our redemption; and though they were willing, yet they haue not the like ability vnto him, who hath all power in Heauen and Earth committed vnto him, for working the worke of our redemption. And therefore, ſeeing he wanteth neither loue, nor power, let vs goe vnto him, and him only. Otherwiſe we ſhall commit a double folly, that is, we ſhall leaue Chriſt, who is the fountaine of liuing water, and dig vnto our ſelues broken Ciſternes, which will hold no water. For there is not ſaluation in any other, neither is there among men any other name giuen vnder Heauen, whereby we muſt be ſaued, as it is Acts 4.12. Hee is the way which leadeth vnto euerlaſting happineſſe; he is the truth, to inſtruct vs in all the counſels of God; he is the life to reuiue vs, who were dead in our Sins, yea the life of euerlaſting life, and the perfection of our heauenly happineſſe, Iohn 14.6. He hath taken vpon him our infirmities, and borne our paines, he was wounded for our offences, and ſmitten for our iniquities, the paine of our puniſhment was laid vpon him, and with his ſtripes wee are healed, Eſay 53.4,5,6. To whom therefore ſhould we goe in our ſickneſſe, but to this our heauenly Phyſician? whoſe helpe ſhould wee ſeeke for the curing of our wounds, but the helpe of this our bleſſed Surgeon, who will eaſily cure them all, with the precious balme of his bloud? whither ſhould wee returne after our long wandring, but vnto the ſhepheard of our ſoules? To whom ſhould we ſeeke to be preſerued from death and damnation, but to him, who is the Lord of life and ſaluation? And therefore leauing all other means of our owne deuiſing, let vs repaire vnto him, and him alone, for he calleth and inuiteth vs, promiſing that he will eaſe vs.

Q. Sect. 9.
This comming to Chriſt two fold.

But how ſhould we come vnto Chriſt, and what is meant hereby? Surely we are not to vnderſtand a corporall or locall comming vnto him, for he is in Heauen, & we are vpon the Earth; but our comming is ſpirituall, not of the body, but of the ſoule. And this is twofold, the comming of repentance, and the comming of faith: the comming of repentance, is properly to God the Father: the comming of faith, is to Chriſt Ieſus; both which are mentioned, Acts 20.21. Witneſſing repentance towards God, and faith towards Ieſus Chriſt. For repentance is nothing, but a turning from our Sins, and a returning to God: and faith cauſeth vs to goe out of our ſelues vnto Chriſt, ſeeking ſaluation in him alone. So that our comming to Chriſt, is to beleeue in him; for thus Chriſt himſelfe expoundeth it, Iohn 6.35. Hee that commeth vnto mee ſhall not hunger, and hee that beleeueth in mee, ſhall neuer thirſt. So Chap.7.37,38. If any man thirſt, let him come vnto me and drinke. He that beleeueth in mee (as ſaith the Scripture) out of his belly ſhall flow Riuers of the water of life. This then doth Chriſt onely require of all penitent Sinners, who are weary and heauy laden with the burthen of their Sins, that they beleeue in him, that is, that by a liuely faith, they doe apply vnto themſelues Chriſt Ieſus, and all his benefits; and aſſure themſelues, that whatſoeuer hee hath done in the worke of mediation and redemption, hee did it for their ſakes; namely, that he left the boſome of

of his Father, and taking vpon him our fleſh, became the ſonne of man, that hee might make vs the ſonnes of God, and heires of his euerlaſting Kingdome; that he was conceiued by the Holy Ghoſt, to ſanctifie our conception; that he here ſuffered hunger, cold, wearines, and other miſeries of this life, that he might make vs partakers of all happineſſe in the life to come; that hee performed perfect obedience to the Law, that hee might decke and adorne vs with the rich robe of his righteouſneſſe: that notwithſtanding, hee was moſt juſt and innocent, yet he was condemned to death, before an earthly Iudge, that we who were wicked and vnjuſt, might be acquitted and abſolued, before the judgement ſeate of God: that hee died vpon the Croſſe, to preſerue vs from euerlaſting death of Hell; that he indured his Fathers anger, that wee might be reconciled vnto him; that he bore the curſe of the Law, that he might cancell the hand-writing of Ordinances which made againſt vs; that he roſe againe, and aſcended into Heauen, that he might be the firſt fruits of them that ſlept, and by his entrance into Heauen, might make way for vs alſo; that hee ſitteth at the right hand of God, to make interceſſion for vs, and to protect and defend vs againſt all our enemies; that he ſhall come to judge both the quicke and the dead, to the end hee may giue vnto vs, perfect redemption, and crowne vs with euerlaſting glory. And if we thus beleeue in Chriſt, and apply him with all his benefits vnto vs, wee may aſſure our ſelues, that hee will eaſe vs of the heauy burthen of our Sins; clothe vs with the glorious aray of his righteouſneſſe; and giue vnto vs the eternall poſſeſſion of thoſe euerlaſting joyes, which by his death and bloud-ſhed hee hath dearely purchaſed for vs.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Of Satans tentations which he vſeth againſt thoſe which are called, to bring them to deſpaire.

§ Sect. 1.
How Satan tempteth thoſe which are called, to deſpaire.

And ſo much concerning thoſe tentations of Satan, wherewith hee aſſaulteth them who are not yet effectually called, to the end that he may keepe them from turning vnto God by vnfained repentance, and comming vnto Chriſt by a true and liuely faith. Now wee are to ſpeake of thoſe tentations which hee vſeth againſt them who are called. And firſt, when as he perceiueth that he can no longer blind them with ignorance, nor keepe them ſtill in carnall worldlineſſe, and preſumptuous ſecuritie; when as he ſeeth that they are reſolued no longer to defer their repentance, and comming vnto Chriſt by a true faith, neither can hee perſwaded to content themſelues with ſuch faith and repentance, as are falſe and counterfeit; then and not before he appeareth in his owne likeneſſe, and ſheweth himſelfe a Deuill indeed; for then he accuſeth them of their manifold and outragious Sins, wherein they haue long continued; then hee telleth them of their Sinnes paſt and preſent corruptions, whereby they are ready to fall into the like againe; then hee reuealeth vnto them their Sins of ignorance, and calleth to their remembrance, thoſe Sins which they haue committed againſt their knowledge & conſcience; then will he aggrauate their Sins, which in themſelues are but too too hainous, and ſet before them the juſtice of God, the fearefull threatnings and terrible curſe of the Law, the wrath of God, and the intolerable and eternall torments of Hell fire, which by their Sins they haue juſtly deſerued. All which terrible ſights being in one view repreſented to their already timorous thoughts, hee taketh occaſion of them all, to mooue them to diſtruſt of Gods mercies, and Chriſts merits, & ſo to plunge them into vtter deſperation. Wouldeſt thou now vile wretch (will he ſay) turne vnto God, hoping to be receiued to grace and mercy? Why aſſure thy ſelfe it is too late, for are not thy Sins in number numberles, and in their qualitie and nature moſt hainous and outragious? And haſt thou not continued in this thy rebellion againſt God a long time, refuſing to come vnto him, though he hath often called; & careleſly neglecting all the meanes of thy ſaluation, when thy God hath graciouſly offered them vnto thee? Now therefore the acceptable time and day of ſaluation is paſt neuer againe to be recalled; and though with Eſau thou ſeekeſt repentance with teares yet ſhalt thou neuer find it. Moreouer to the conſideration of thy horrible rebellion, adde the remembrance of Gods juſtice, which can in no wiſe ſuffer Sinne to goe vnpuniſhed; the terrible curſe of the Law denounced by God who is truth itſelfe, againſt thoſe who continue not in all that is written in the booke of the Law to doe it; the fearefull torments of Hell prepared for Sinners, amongſt which number thou art one of the chiefe. And therefore doe not flatter thy ſelfe with hope of mercy, but rather expect thoſe fearefull judgements, and endleſſe torments which are due vnto thee for thy rebellious wickedneſſe. And thus doth Satan labour to bring the poore Chriſtian to deepe deſperation, and to fill his conſcience with horrour and feare; which if he can accompliſh, hee reſteth not there, but like a cruell Coward who can neuer bee at quiet till hee ſee the death of his enemy; ſo our malicious enemy is neuer ſatisfied till hee ſee our death and vtter deſtruction. And therefore when he hath grieuouſly vexed the Chriſtian conſcience with fearefull horrour and tormented him euen with the flaſhings of hell fire, in the next place, he wil perſwade him to ſeek ſome eaſe of his preſent torments by imbruing his hands in his owne bloud, and putting himſelfe to ſome violent death: which is nothing elſe but (as the Prouerbe is) to leap out of the frying pan into the fire, and in ſeeking to eaſe his terours of conſcience, to plunge himſelfe into the torments of Hell.

Sect. 2.
if wee ur owne

teouſnes.

Againſt which tentations, whoſoeuer would be ſtrengthened and enabled to withſtand their force and violence, they muſt not reſt in themſelues, deſiring in whole, or in part to be juſtified by their legall righteouſneſſe; neither muſt they meaſure out vnto themſelues Gods mercies according to their owne merits and worthineſſe. They muſt not looke only vpon Gods juſtice, and vpon that exact obedience which the Law requireth of them, nor yet vpon thoſe fearefull puniſhments which by their ſins they haue juſtly deſerued, for then Satan will eaſily attaine vnto his purpoſe, and ſpeedily bring them to deſperation, and vtter deſtruction: But they muſt goe out of themſelues, and rejecting their owne righteouſneſſe, as altogether imperfect and inſufficient, they are to reſt and rely themſelues vpon the alone righteouſneſſe and obedience of Chriſt Ieſus, as being in it ſelfe al-ſufficient both for our juſtification and ſaluation. And as they haue one eye on Gods juſtice to keep thẽ from ſecure preſumption, ſo they muſt haue the other firmely fixt on his infinite mercy to preſerue them from falling into deſperation: as they haue one eie on the law to humble them & to bring them out of thẽſelues to Chriſt, ſo they muſt haue the other eye on the ſweet and comfortable promiſes of the Goſpell to comfort and raiſe them vp. Finally, as on the one ſide they behold the curſe of the Law, & the eternall torments prepared for the wicked: ſo on the other ſide, they muſt ſtedfaſtly looke vpon the righteouſneſſe, death, and obedience of Chriſt; and alſo vpon thoſe euerlaſting joyes which by his precious bloud-ſhed he hath purchaſed for them. And if thus being truely humbled, and brought to vnfained repentance, they goe out of themſelues, and reject their owne righteouſneſſe, reſting and relying vpon the alone righteouſneſſe of Chriſt for their juſtification and ſaluation, they may moſt certainly aſſure themſelues that they haue in Chriſt ſatisfied Gods juſtice, and are by his death reconciled vnto him, that they are freed from the curſe of the Law, and from the wrath of God; that their ſcarlet Sins are made as white as wooll; and all their imperfections perfected by Chriſts righteouſneſſe and obedience; that they are acquitted from the ſentence of condemnation, and deliuered from the feareful torments of Hell.

Sect. 3.

But foraſmuch as thoſe who labour vnder the burden of their Sins, and are continually vexed and mooued to deſperation, by Satans moſt ſubtill and violent tentations, are not ſo eaſily perſwaded that their Sins are forgiuen them, and they reconciled vnto God in Chriſt; therefore I will ſet downe ſome arguments, whereby all thoſe who truly repent, (that is, ſorrow for their Sins paſt, and deſire, and indeauour to forſake them in the time to come) and withall, going out of themſelues, do earneſtly hunger after Chriſt and his righteouſnes, and reſt and rely vpon him for their ſaluation, may haue full aſſurance, that their Sins are forgiuen them, and that they are in Chriſt reconciled vnto God, and receiued into his loue and fauour.

Reaſons to perſwade the weake Chriſtian of the forgiueneſſe of his ſins.

The firſt argument drawne from Gods mercy.

The firſt argument, to aſſure all of the pardon and forgiueneſſe of their Sins, who will come vnto God by repentance, and apply Chriſt and his merits vnto them by a liuely faith, may be drawne from his mercy, which is one of his properties and attributes, ſo often attributed vnto him in the Scriptures. Exod. 34. 6, 7. God thus deſcribeth himſelfe: The Lord, the Lord, ſtrong, mercifull and gracious, ſlow to anger; and abundant in goodneſſe and truth. 7. Reſeruing mercy for thouſands; forgiuing iniquitie, tranſgreſſion and ſinne. Out of which place that famous and godly learned man H. Zanchius hath obſerued matter fit for our purpoſe, and therefore it ſhall not bee amiſſe to ſet downe his owne words: For beſides (ſaith he) that the eſſence of God is only one, and that eternall, moſt ſimple, moſt perfect, liuing, immortall, inuiſible, incorruptible, infinite, omnipotent, moſt wiſe; he is alſo wholy moſt good, in whom nothing is wanting; a louer of men; moſt meeke, moſt gentle, ſlow to anger; moſt ready to forgiue iniuries; moſt patient, moſt true, moſt righteous, moſt iuſt, & faithful in performing his promiſes; finally, he is nothing elſe then the ſoueraigne goodnes, and the chiefe clementie, as he hath deſcribed, and liuely deciphered himſelfe, Exod. 34. and elſe-where. And therefore we muſt note; although anger bee attributed vnto God, yet notwithſtanding, it is in God nothing elſe but the chiefe goodneſſe and iuſtice; whereby hee abhorreth euill, & according to his iuſt iudgment doth at length puniſh it, if it be not amended by his long-ſuffering and patience. This here-hence manifeſtly appeareth, becauſe ſpeaking of reuenge, or taking puniſhment, which is an effect of anger, hee doth not ſay that he doth preſently inflict puniſhment; or that he is ſo ready to inflict it, as to ſhew mercy, but he ſaith, that he is ſlow to anger: Signifying by this manner of ſpeech, that he is of his owne nature alwayes moſt ready to ſhew mercy, to grant pardõ, to be beneficial; but not ſo ready to take puniſhment, but is forced thereunto (as of himſelfe vnwilling) through our impenitencie. Herevnto alſo appertaineth that ancient forme of prayer; O Lord, whoſe propertie is alwayes to haue mercy and forgiue. Here-hence alſo we reade in Eſay 28.21. The Lord ſhall ſtand as in Mount Perazim, hee ſhall be angry, as in the valley Gibeon. That he may doe his worke, his ſtrange worke, that he may effect his act, his ſtrange act, that is, he ſhall inflict the like puniſhments in his iuſt anger vpon his rebellious people, which he exerciſed vpon his wicked enemies the Philiſtines in Mount Perazim, when as hee ouerthrew them, by his ſeruant Dauid, and vpon the Amorites in the valley of Gibeon, when as he ſmote them with ſtones from Heauen. Where the Prophet maketh a twofold kind of Gods workes, his proper and ſtrange workes. The proper worke of God is to ſhew mercy, and to ſpare or forgiue; his ſtrange worke is to be angry, and to puniſh. And therefore whereas hee calleth that the proper worke of God, and this his ſtrange worke; hee plainly teacheth that mercy, goodneſſe and long-ſuffering, are according to the nature of the deitie, but that to be angry is diuers from Gods nature. Yea which is more, he maketh it not his worke; that is to ſay, he is angry, that afterwards he may bring his worke to paſſe, that is, that he may haue mercy and preſerue; for whileſt (ſaith the Apoſtle) we are iudged of the Lord, we are chaſtened, that we ſhould not be condemned with the World, 1.Cor.11.32. And what doe theſe things teach vs, but that the nature of God is nothing elſe then goodneſſe, mercy, loue (eſpecially of men) patience, benignitie, and moſt farre and remote from all vniuſt ſeueritie, crueltie, tyrannie and pride? The which may miniſter vnto euery penitent Sinner moſt ſweet conſolation; for when they ſee that God is angry, by reaſon of their ſins, and that hee doth grieuouſly afflict them, and euen bring them (as it were) to the gates of Hell, this muſt not make them to caſt off all hope, and to fall into vtter deſperation; but they muſt remember, that theſe are not the Lords proper works, but ſtrange vnto him, which he doth to this end, that he may bring to paſſe his owne proper workes which are agreeable to his nature, that is, that he may againe ſhew vnto vs the glorious beames of his louing countenance in more full brightneſſe, and bring vs from death to life, from affliction to joy, from the gates of Hell, to the Kingdome of Heauen. According to that, 1.Sam.2.6. The Lord killeth and maketh aliue, hee bringeth downe vnto Hell, and bringeth vp againe. As therefore when we ſee Carpenters pulling downe a ruinous building, our minds doe not reſt there, becauſe wee know that this they doe, is not their proper worke, but we goe further in our cogitation, thinking of a new houſe which they will build in the place of the old, for as much as wee know that it is not their proper worke to race downe, but to build, or to race downe, that they may build: ſo when we ſee the Lord angry, and inflicting corrections, let vs not reſt here, but with the like fore-ſight of mind, let vs conſider that hee doth theſe his ſtrange and improper works, that afterwards hee may doe thoſe which are proper and naturall, that is, that he afflicteth that he may bring the more true comfort; that he bringeth vs to the gates of Hell, to the end hee may raiſe vs vp to be partakers of the joyes of Heauen. But let vs conſider of ſome more teſtimonies of Gods infinite mercies. The Prophet Dauid likewiſe ſaith Pſal.103.8. That the Lord is full of compaſſion and mercie, ſlow to anger, and of great kindneſſe. And Pſalme 86.5. Thou Lord art good and mercifull, and of great kindneſſe vnto all them that call vpon thee. So the Prophet Ioel 2.13. teſtifieth of the Lord, that he is gracious and mercifull, ſlow to anger, and of great kindneſſe. And the Apoſtle ſaith, that he is rich in mercie, Epheſ. 2.4. and 2.Cor.1.3. he calleth him, the Father of mercies, and God of all comfort.

§. Sect.
That Go delighted exercisin
mercie.

Seeing then, mercie is one of Gods Attributes, therefore it is alſo of his eſſence and being: for there are not in Gods moſt perfect nature, any qualities or accidents, but whatſoeuer is in God, is God, ſo that God is mercie it ſelfe; and conſequently, to ſhew and exerciſe his mercie, is to ſhew and exerciſe his owne nature. Now wee know that naturall actions are not troubleſome, nor irkeſome, neither is the Sunne troubled with giuing light, nor the fire with giuing heate, nor the tree with yeelding fruit, nor the beaſt with nouriſhing his young, nor man with receiuing nouriſhment and ſleepe, becauſe it is their nature to be exerciſed in theſe actions. And therefore ſeeing mercy is of Gods eſſence, it is not painful & troubleſome to exerciſe it towards al repentant ſinners, be their ſins neuer ſo many & hainous, no more then it is troubleſome to exerciſe his juſtice, in puniſhing of thoſe who are obſtinate & rebellious. Yea, it is not only not troubleſome and painfull, but alſo pleaſant and delightfull for God to ſhew mercy vnto all thoſe who truly turne vnto him; and contrariwiſe it ſhould be troubleſome and irkeſome, (if I may ſo ſpeake,) for God not to ſhew and exerciſe his nature, and mercy, towards repentant Sinners; for as the eye is delighted with ſeeing, and to be reſtrained therefrom is grieuous vnto it; as the eare is delighted with hearing, and is much moleſted, if it be ſtopped; and as euery part and faculty of the bodie and ſoule are delighted in exerciſing their ſeuerall actions and functions, and are much vexed and cumbred, if by any meanes they ſhould bee hindred; ſo is the Lord delighted, and well pleaſed, in ſhewing and exerciſing his owne nature, and attributes; as his power and prouidence, in gouerning the World; his juſtice, in puniſhing wicked, obſtinate, and rebellious Sinners; and his mercie, in pardoning, and remitting the Sins of thoſe, who are of a humble ſpirit, and broken heart, and are weary of this intolerable burthen, deſiring nothing more, then to be eaſed and freed from it. And not thus to exerciſe his nature and attributes, would rather (that I may ſpeake after the manner of men) be vnto the Lord tedious and troubleſome. Of this pleaſure and delight, which the Lord taketh in pardoning repentant Sinners, the Prophet Micha ſpeaketh, Chap.7. 10,18. Who (ſaith hee) is a God like vnto thee, that taketh away iniquitie, and paſſeth by trangreſſion of the remnant of his heritage? hee retaineth not his wrath for euer, becauſe mercy pleaſeth him. So the Prophet David, *Pſal.*147.11. ſaith, that the Lord is delighted in them that feare him and attend vpon his mercy; euen as though he rejoyced much, to haue an occaſion offered, of exerciſing his mercy and goodnes towards thoſe, who earneſtly deſiring it, waite vpon him, that they may be made partakers of it. For the object of Gods mercy, about which it is exerciſed, is mans miſery, and the action thereof, is to pitie, and helpe him out of his wretched and miſerable eſtate; and therefore, if there were no miſery and wretchedneſſe, and no Sin to be forgiuen, there would be wanting that externall object, about which Gods mercy ſhould be exerciſed and manifeſted to all the World. And hence it is, that the Lord willingly permitted the fall of our firſt parents, to the end that he might make a way for the manifeſtation of his mercy, in pardoning repentant Sinners, and his juſtice in puniſhing the contemners of his grace. And as the Apoſtle ſaith, *Rom.*11.32. God hath ſhut vp all in vnbeliefe, that he might haue mercy on all, that is to ſay, on all the Elect, both Iewes and Gentiles. Seeing therefore God delighteth himſelfe in exerciſing and manifeſting his mercy, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace, by pardoning and forgiuing repentant Sinners; let not any who are grieuouſly laden, and groane for wearineſſe vnder the heauy burthen of their Sins, feare to come vnto the Lord, and to implore his mercy for the forgiueneſſe of their Sins, though neuer ſo grieuous and manifold, neither let them doubt, leſt God will reject their ſuite, and refuſe to receiue them into his grace & fauour, becauſe of their great rebellions and vnworthineſſe. For although there were not (as in truth there is not) any thing to be reſpected in vs, ſauing that wee are creatures of God, and the work of his hands, yet the Lord will haue compaſſion vpon vs, euen for his owne ſake, becauſe he is exceedingly delighted in ſhewing mercy to all thoſe who turne vnto him. And this the Lord himſelfe profeſſeth, Eſay 43.25. I, euen I am he that putteth away thine iniquities for mine owne ſake, and will not remember thy ſins. And therefore the Prophet Daniel calling vpon the Lord for mercy, in the behalfe of himſelfe and the people, diſclaimeth their owne righteouſneſſe, and all reſpect of their owne merits and worthineſſe; ſaying, We doe not preſent our ſupplications before thee for our own righteouſneſſe, but for thy great tender mercies: O Lord heare, O Lord forgiue, O Lord conſider and doe it; deferre not for thine owne ſake, Dan. 9.18,19.

§. *Sect.*5.
That the grieuouſneſſe of ſinne cannot debarre the repentant ſinner of Gods mercy.

But here Satan will be ready to object vnto the afflicted conſcience, labouring vnder the burthen of Sin, that God indeed is mercifull, but yet he will neuer extend his mercy towards ſuch hainous offenders, whoſe Sins are in number numberleſſe, and in qualitie and nature moſt grieuous and outragious. For anſwering of which tentation, wee are to know, that though our Sins be neuer ſo innumerable and hainous, yet this ſhould not diſcourage vs from comming to God by vnfained repentance, with aſſured hope of forgiueneſſe; for though our Sins be great, his mercies are infinite, & conſequently though it were imagined that all the Sinnes which were euer committed in the world were joyned together, yet in compariſon of Gods mercy they are without all compariſon leſſe then a mote in the Sun to all the World. To which purpoſe Auguſtine ſaith, Ille ſolus diffidat qui tantum peccare poteſt, quantum Deus bonus eſt. Let him alone, diſtruſt and deſpaire who can match and exceed Gods mercy and goodneſſe with his Sins. Neither is God like vnto man, whoſe bounty and mercy are limited in ſome ſtraight bounds which they will not paſſe, and therefore they are ſoone weary both in giuing to thoſe who want, and forgiuing thoſe that offend; but his bounty is endleſſe, and his mercies infinite, and therefore he can and will as eaſily forgiue vs the debt of ten thouſand millions of pounds, as one penny, and aſſoone pardon the Sins of a wicked Manaſſes, as of a righteous Abraham, if we come vnto him by vnfained repentance, and earneſtly deſire and implore his grace and mercy. And this our Sauiour Chriſt ſheweth in the Parable of the poore Publican, whoſe hainous Sins the Lord preſently forgaue vpon his true conuerſion. And in the Parable of the two debters, where the lender our bountifull God, as eaſily forgaue the 500. pence as the fiftie, that is, innumerable great Sins, aſwell as few and leſſe. And the Apoſtle Paul teacheth vs, that *where ſinne hath abounded, there grace hath much more abounded. Rom.*5.20. Seeing therefore Gods mercy is infinite and without all limits, let not vs reſtraine it, neither let vs ſo aggrauate our Sinnes as that in the meane time we derogate from Gods mercy. If a Prince ſhould ſend his generall pardon vnto a number of offenders, without any exception or limitation, and one amongſt the reſt ſhould ſay: This pardon doth not appertaine vnto mee, becauſe I am ſo great an offender, and therefore I will ſtand in doubt of my Princes mercy, and ſuſpect his word; who would not accuſe ſuch an one both of folly in refuſing his pardon, and of vngratefulneſſe and diffidence in diſtruſting his gracious Prince, calling his great mercy and truth in his promiſe into queſtion? Who would not thinke this offence greater then all the reſt? But the Lord who is infinite in mercy, hath ſent his generall pardon to all repentant and beleeuing Sinners without all exception; why therefore ſhould wee make queſtion of his mercy, becauſe of our hainous Sins? Why ſhould wee vnto our other Sins adde this which is more hainous then all the reſt, in doubting and diſtruſting his word and promiſe, and in extenuating his infinite and endleſſe mercies? For if wee thinke our debt ſo great that God will neuer forgiue it, what we do elſe but detract from Gods rich bounty and liberality? if we ſuppoſe our Sins may not be forgiuen becauſe of their greatneſſe, what doe wee elſe but imagine that they ſurpaſſe Gods infinite mercy, which is a moſt horrible blaſphemy once to conceiue?

§. Sect. 6.
That Gods mercy is ouer all his workes.

The mercy of the Lord extendeth it ſelfe to the beaſts of the field, and hee graciouſly feedeth the Rauens and young Lions, which in their brutiſh manner implore his helpe; and ſhall he not extend his mercies to reaſonable creatures that ſeeke after them? Yea the Lord is good to all, and his mercies are ouer all his workes, as it is Pſal. 145.9. and will not the Lord be gracious to man, who is his moſt excellent workmanſhip, created according to his owne Image, if hee ſue vnto him for grace, and deſire to bee partaker of his mercy? His goodneſſe ſtretcheth it ſelfe vnto his obſtinate enemies, for hee cauſeth his raine to fall, and his Sunne to ſhine both vpon the euill and the good, on the iuſt and vniuſt, Matth. 5.45. And ſhall it bee reſtrained from his repentant ſeruants? hee multiplieth his mercies in temporall benefits vpon the wicked and reprobate, and ſhall it be ſcanted towards his elect? Hee is very gracious to malicious rebels, and will hee deny grace to humble ſuters for mercy and repentant Sinners? Hee ſhewed his goodneſſe and long-ſuffering vnto wicked Achab vpon his fained and hypocriticall humiliation, and will hee not extend it towards thoſe who being truly penitent vnfainedly turne vnto him? Yes aſſuredly, for though he be good to all, euen ſenſeleſſe creatures, brute beaſts, and rebellious Sinners, yet hee is in eſpeciall manner good to thoſe who are of the houſhold of faith.

Matth. 5.45.

§. Sect. 7.
That eue man is me full towards the peniten and theref much more God who is infinite in mercie.

But if we cannot behold Gods mercies in their owne glorious brightneſſe, let vs looke vpon them in ſome ſmall reſemblance and little counterfeit: if we cannot comprehend them in their owne infinite nature, yet let vs view them in a ſmall modell. Euen man himſelfe who hath but a ſparke of this mightie flame, and a ſmall drop of this bottomleſſe Ocean ſpareth his ſonne when he offendeth, pardoneth his ſeruant when hee deſireth forgiueneſſe, yea, is oftentimes reconciled to his enemy, who hath many wayes wronged him, when he ſueth for reconciliation, and confeſſeth his faults; ſhall therefore man who hath receiued a little ſparke from this euer burning flame of Gods goodnes, a ſmall drop of this endleſſe and bottomleſſe Ocean, and but a little modell of this infinite greatneſſe, whoſe greateſt mercie compared with Gods, is but ſauage and barbarous crueltie; ſhall he (I ſay) bee readie to ſpare his ſonne, forgiue his ſeruant, and be reconciled vnto his enemy, and ſhall not God ſpare, forgiue, and be reconciled vnto thoſe who turne from their ſins by vnfained repentance, and earneſtly ſue for grace? Shall wee ſee, and acknowledge, the mercies of man, and ſhall we doubt of the mercies of God, which is the plentifull fountaine, from which like a pearling ſtreame they flow? Shall wee confeſſe, that a drop of water is moiſt, and affirme that the Ocean is dry? Shall wee be ſharp-ſighted in ſeeing the light of a ſmall ſparke, and be ſtarke blind, in beholding the glorious beames of the Sunne? Nay, let vs know, acknowledge, and aſſure our ſelues, that as much as the whole globe of the earth, exceedeth in quantitie the leaſt mote in the Sunne, as much as the whole Ocean exceedeth the ſmalleſt drop of water, yea, as much as the infinite Creatour exceedeth the finite creature, betweene which, there can be imagined no degrees of compariſon, ſo much doth the mercy and bountie of God, exceed the bountie and mercy of mortall man. And therefore if vpon repentance of our fault, and earneſt deſire of reconciliation, we hope of mercy and wonted kindneſſe from our friend or neighbour, let vs not make any queſtion, nor once doubt of the Lords loue and fauour towards vs, though our ſinnes be neuer ſo grieuous, ſo we truly repent, and vnfainedly turn vnto him by hearty ſorrow for our tranſgreſſions.

§. Sect. 8.
That doub of Gods mercies in reſpe of our vnwo thineſſe, argueth pride.

But heere the afflicted conſcience will bee ready to ſay, that though there bee no doubt of Gods mercie, but that it is in it ſelfe moſt infinite, yet I doubt, leſt I ſhall neuer bee partaker thereof, becauſe of my manifold imperfections, and great vnworthineſſe. To which I anſwere, that this diſtruſting of Gods mercies, in reſpect of our vnworthineſſe, proceedeth not from true humilitie, but from our naturall pride: for if wee had denied our ſelues, and were nothing in our owne eyes; if we had wholly remoued our owne righteouſneſſe, and did wholly and onely reſt on our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt for our ſaluation, we would neuer hope the more in regard of our owne worthineſſe, nor yet doubt in reſpect of our vnworthineſſe. But it is our ſecret and inbred pride of heart, which makes vs to doubt of Gods mercy, vnleſſe wee bring him a bribe, and deſerue it at his hands; and to deſire to make the Lord beholding to vs, rather then we would be any whit beholding vnto him. Which is nothing elſe but to diſgrace Gods mercies, that wee may grace our owne merits; and by labouring that we may be ſomething in our ſelues, we will not allow that God ſhould be all in all, and haue the whole prayſe of our ſaluation. But wee are to root out of our hearts this ſpirituall pride, and to plant therein true humilitie, and then we may aſſure our ſelues; though our ſins be great, yet the mercies of God are farre greater, though wee bee moſt beggerly in merits, yet we ſhall be made rich by Chriſt Ieſus righteouſneſſe; for the poorer we are in deſert, the richer Gods mercie will appeare in accepting vs to his grace and fauour; and where ſin hath abounded, there grace will abound much more. Seeing therefore Gods mercies are infinite, and are not any whit reſtrained by our vnworthineſſe, let vs ſeeke vnto the Lord by vnfained repentance, and aſſure our ſelues of his loue and fauour in Ieſus Chriſt; Let the wicked forſake his wayes, and the vnrighteous his owne imaginations, and returne vnto the Lord; and he will haue mercy vpon him, and to our God, for he is very ready to forgiue; as the Prophet exhorteth vs: Eſay 55.7.

CHAP. XXXV.

Of the ſecond Argument, grounded vpon Gods iuſtice.

ect. 1.
Gods iu-ill not thoſe
s in vs are ſu-puni-Chriſt.

THe ſecond argument to aſſure thoſe of the forgiueneſſe of their ſins, who vnfainedly repent and relie wholly vpon Ieſus Chriſt for their ſaluation by a liuely faith, may bee drawne from Gods iuſtice; for their ſins are fully and ſufficiently puniſhed in Chriſt Ieſus, and therefore it will not ſtand with the iuſtice of God, to puniſh them againe in any of thoſe who haue applied vnto them the merits and ſufferings of Chriſt by a liuely faith. And as the Lord cannot in iuſtice let ſin goe vnpuniſhed, and therefore hath puniſhed the ſins of all men either in Chriſt Ieſus, or will throughly puniſh them in the parties themſelues; ſo the ſame iuſtice will not admit that the ſame ſins ſhould be twice puniſhed, once in our Sauiour, and againe in the faithfull. Now that our Sauiour Chriſt hath ſufficiently ſuffered for all the ſins of the faithfull, it is euident by many places of the Scriptures, Eſay 53.4. Surely he hath borne our infirmities, and carried our ſorrowes. 5. But he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was broken for our iniquities, the chaſtiſement of our peace was vpon him, & with his ſtripes we are healed. 2.Cor.5.21. He hath made him to be ſin for vs which knew no ſin, that we ſhould be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. So the Apoſtle, Hebr.9.26. ſaith, that our Sauiour Chriſt hath appeared once to put away ſin by the ſacrifice of himſelfe. And Peter 1. Epiſt. 2.24. ſaith, that his owne ſelfe bare our ſins in his body on the tree, that we being deliuered from ſin, ſhould liue in righteouſneſſe. Seeing then our ſins were laid vpon Chriſt, and ſeuerely puniſhed in him, God in his iuſtice will not inflict any more puniſhments vpon the faithfull, but will pardon and forgiue them; which pardon and forgiueneſſe is a worke of his iuſtice as well as of his mercie; and therefore it is ſaid, Rom.3.25. that God hath ſet forth our Sauiour Chriſt to be a reconciliation through faith in his bloud, to declare his righteouſneſſe by the forgiueneſſe of ſins that are paſſed through the patience of God. 26. To ſhew at this time his righteouſneſſe that hee might be iuſt, and a iuſtifier of him who is of the faith of Ieſus. So it is ſaid, 1.Iohn 1.9. that if we acknowledge our ſins, he is faithfull and iuſt to forgiue vs our ſins, and to cleanſe vs from all vnrighteouſneſſe. So that Gods righteouſnes is declared in the forgiueneſſe of ſins, and he ſheweth his iuſtice in iuſtifying thoſe who are of the faith of Ieſus, and in pardoning all their offences. And therefore if we will beleeue in our Sauiour Chriſt and bring forth the fruits of our faith in vnfained repentance, wee need not ſeruilely to feare Gods iuſtice, nay wee may be aſſured, that becauſe he is iuſt, he will in Chriſt pardon and forgiue our ſins, and neuer inflict any puniſhment, which by them in our ſelues we haue iuſtly deſerued.

That our ſins are debts, and therefore not to be twice paid.

But that the equitie hereof may be more manifeſt, we are to conſider that our Sins in the Scriptures are called debts, for the Lord in our Creation lent vnto vs the rich talents of his graces, to be employed for the ſetting forth of his glory, all which wee waſtefully miſpent and brought our ſelues into ſuch extreame beggerie, that wee were altogether vnable to pay to God the leaſt part of that which we owed, nor to render account vnto our Lord and Maſter, how in any good ſort we had beſtowed his rich treaſures; & therefore in his iuſtice hee ſent his Sergeant death to arreſt vs, and to caſt vs in the priſon of vtter darkneſſe, there to remayne in the cuſtodie of Satan our moſt malicious jaylour, till wee had fully diſcharged our debt and made full ſatisfaction to his iuſtice; which when wee were altogether vnable to performe, it pleaſed our Sauiour Chriſt in his infinite loue towards vs, to become our ſurety, and to take vpon him the anſwering of our debt, which he fully diſcharged in as exact a manner and meaſure as the juſtice of God required. For whereas wee are bound to performe perfect obedience to the Law, hee performed it for vs; whereas wee for our diſobedience were ſubject to the ſentence of condemnation, the curſe of the Law, and death of body and ſoule, he was condemned for vs and bore the curſe of the Law, and died in our ſtead an ignominious death; whereas wee deſerued the anger of God, and to bee kept priſoners in the graue vnder the dominion of death, he endured his Fathers wrathfull diſpleaſure, and himſelfe was for a time held captiue of death in the graue, that ſo hee might reconcile vs to his Father, and ſet vs at liberty. In a word, whatſoeuer wee owed, Chriſt diſcharged; whatſoeuer wee deſerued he ſuffered, if not in the ſelfe-ſame puniſhments, (for he could not ſuffer the eternall torments of Hell) yet in proportion, the dignitie of his perſon giuing value vnto his temporary puniſhments, and making them of more value and worth, then if all the world ſhould haue ſuffered the eternall torments of Hell. Seeing therefore our Sauiour Chriſt hath fully diſcharged our debt, and made full ſatisfaction to his Fathers juſtice, God cannot in equity exact of vs a ſecond payment, no more then the Creditor may juſtly require that his debt ſhould be twice paid, once of the Suertie and againe of the Principall. Neither now hath Gods juſtice any thing to ſhew againſt vs, for the Law which was the hand-writing of Ordinances which made againſt vs, and as it were a bond, whereby wee were obliged and bound to God the Father, either to performe obedience or to vndergoe the penaltie, euen euerlaſting death and condemnation, is now cancelled, taken away, and faſtened to the Croſſe of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle affirmeth, Coloſſ. 2.14. So that now the Lord cannot in his juſtice put vs in ſuite, nor recouer any debt of vs, ſeeing our Sauiour Chriſt, our good and al-ſufficient Suerty hath vndertaken the matter in our behalfe, diſcharged our debt to the vtmoſt farthing, cancelled the hand-writing or bond, in which wee were obliged, and by the Law acquitted vs of all payments, which Gods juſtice by vertue of the Law might require of vs. And therefore if wee turne vnto God by vnfained repentance, and lay hold vpon our Sauiour Chriſt and his merits by a liuely faith, we haue our quietus eſt, and generall acquittance, which God himſelfe hath pronounced from Heauen in the preſence of many witneſſes, ſaying, This is my welbeloued Sonne, in whom I am well pleaſed, that is, in whom I am delighted, and reſt fully ſatisfied, and well contented, Matth. 3.17.

Of the third Argument grounded vpon Gods Truth.

§. Sect

Of Gods truth in hi promiſes,

THe third Argument, whereby all thoſe who repent and beleeue may bee aſſured of the pardon and remiſſion of their ſins, is grounded vpon Gods Truth. For the Lord is moſt true, yea Truth it ſelfe, and all his promiſes in Chriſt are yea, and Amen. He is a faithfull and true witnes, and whatſoeuer hee hath ſpoken ſhall be accompliſhed; ſo that though the heauens decay and wax old like a garment, though the Sun loſe his light, and the Moone be turned into bloud, though the earth tremble and quake, and the foundations of the mountaines bee mooued and ſhake; yea, though Heauen and Earth and all things therein contained periſh and paſſe away, yet ſhall not one iot or title of his word fall to the ground vnaccompliſhed. And therefore whatſoeuer the Lord hath promiſed in his Word, that he will moſt vndoubtedly performe, for he is Iehoua, who hauing his eſſence and being in & from himſelfe alone, giueth being vnto all things elſe, eſpecially to his word and promiſes. But he hath promiſed to all beleeuers and repentant Sinners, that he will in Chriſt Ieſus pardon all their ſins, and will receiue them into his grace and fauour; and therefore if we beleeue and reſt vpon our Sauiour Chriſt alone for our ſaluation, truly repenting vs of all our ſins, we may aſſure our ſelues, that though our ſins be neuer ſo many and grieuous, yet the Lord will receiue vs to mercy, and pardon and forgiue them.

Moreouer, this is one mayne part of the couenant of grace, which the Lord profeſſeth that he will make with his Church and people, namely, that hee will forgiue their iniquitie and remember their ſinnes no more. Ier.31.34. the counterpaine of which couenant we haue, *Heb.*10.16,17. And therefore if wee on our part performe the condition of this couenant betweene God and vs, that is, if wee truly and vnfainedly repent vs of our ſins, and reſt and rely on Ieſus Chriſt for our ſaluation by a liuely faith, wee may be aſſured that God on his part will not go one iot from his word, nor breake the couenant which he hath made with vs. For hee hath not onely made this his couenant with vs by word of mouth, but he hath alſo committed it to writing; and not contenting himſelfe herewith, that there might bee no place left to doubting, he hath confirmed and ratified his hand-writing by adding thereunto his ſeales, which are the Sacraments; as firſt the ſeale of Baptiſme, whereby hee aſſureth vs, that being outwardly receiued into the body of the Church, and inwardly ingrafted into the body of Chriſt, we haue all our ſins and filthy corruptions waſhed away with his precious bloud, as the outward filth of the body is waſhed and purged by the waſhing of water. The vertue of which ſpirituall waſhing is not limited and reſtrained to the time paſt or preſent, as though it waſhed away onely our originall corruption, as ſome haue fooliſhly imagined, but extendeth it ſelfe to the whole courſe of our liues: ſo that if falling into many and grieuous ſins wee vnfainedly repent vs of them, and apply Chriſt Ieſus and his merits vnto vs by a true and liuely faith, wee may be aſſured of the pardon and forgiueneſſe of them all, for this was promiſed, ſealed and confirmed vnto vs in our Baptiſme. Secondly, the Lord hath further confirmed this his couenant by the Sacrament of his Supper, for he hath therefore inſtituted and ordained it, that thereby wee ſhould bee put in mind of our Sauiour Chriſts death and ſufferings, to the end that wee may gather more and more aſſurance, that our Sauiour gaue his bleſſed body to be crucified, and ſhed his moſt precious bloud, that hee might take away the curſe of the Law, and naile it vnto his Croſſe, free vs from his Fathers anger by bearing it himſelfe, and by his death deliuer vs from euerlaſting death, and by his bloudſhed waſh away all our ſins and corruptions. And hence it is that the Apoſtle calleth the Wine in the Lords Supper, the New Teſtament in Chriſts bloud, because thereby the New Teſtament is ſealed and confirmed vnto vs. And therefore whenſoeuer wee receiue the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, the Lord doth thereby certainly aſſure vs that our ſins in Chriſt are pardoned and forgiuen, and that he hath receiued vs into his loue and fauour. Yea, the Lord hath not only ratified and confirmed his couenant with vs, concerning the remiſſion of our ſins with his owne hand-writing and ſeales annexed, but alſo by his oath; For God willing more abundantly to ſhew vnto the heires of promiſe, the ſtableneſſe of his counſell, bound himſelfe by an oath: that by two immutable things, wherin it is impoſſible that God ſhould lie, we might haue ſtrong conſolation; as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, *Heb.*6.17,18. And therefore vnleſſe wee would conceiue of God that he is vntrue of his word, a couenant breaker, yea a periured perſon (which were moſt horrible blaſphemy once to imagine) we may vndoubtedly aſſure our ſelues that hee will pardon and forgiue vs all our ſins, be they in number neuer ſo innumerable, nor ſo hainous in their nature and qualitie, if wee will turne vnto him by vnfained repentance, and lay hold vpon Chriſt Ieſus our Sauiour by a true and liuely faith.

Of particular promiſes whereby we may be aſſured of the remiſſion of our ſins,

But let vs more particularly conſider of ſome of the ſpeciall promiſes of God, contained in the couenant of grace, that ſo wee may gather vnto our ſelues more full conſolation and firme aſſurance of the pardon and forgiueneſſe of our ſins. The Prophet Dauid, who had in himſelfe often experience of Gods mercy telleth vs, *Pſal.*32. 10. that whoſoeuer truſteth in the Lord, mercy ſhall compaſſe him. The Prophet Eſay exhorteth the wicked to forſake his wayes, and the vnrighteous his own imaginations, & to returne vnto the Lord, aſſuring them that he will haue mercy vpon them, for hee is very ready to forgiue, Eſay 55.7. The Lord himſelfe alſo doth make this gracious promiſe, *Ezech.*18. 21. But (ſaith he) if the wicked will returne from all his ſinnes which hee hath committed, and keepe all my ſtatutes, and doe that which is lawfull and right, hee ſhall ſurely liue and not die. 22. All his tranſgreſſions that hee hath committed, ſhall not be mentioned vnto him, but in his righteouſneſſe that hee hath done, he ſhall liue. 2 . Haue I any deſire that the wicked ſhould die, ſaith the Lord God? or ſhall he not liue, if he returne from his wayes? Verſe 32. For I deſire not the death of him that dieth, ſaith the Lord God; cauſe therefore one another to returne and liue: yea, and Chap. 33. Verſe 11. As I liue, ſaith the Lord, I deſire not the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turne from his way and liue. So Mal.3.17. the Lord profeſſeth that he wil ſpare his people and children, as a man ſpareth his owne ſonne that ſerueth him. Now wee know that a louing father is ready to forgiue, and to receiue into his grace and fauour his repentant ſonne, though he hath very often offended him: and ſo ſurely the Lord, who is infinitely rich in mercy, will much more forgiue his children when they turne vnto him. Yea, he is not onely ready to receiue them into his grace and fauour, but it filleth him (as I may ſay) with exceeding ioy and delight, when his penitent children forſake their ſinnes and euill wayes, and turne vnto him by vnfained repentance, as it appeareth moſt euidently in the Parable of the prodigall ſonne, of the ſtrayed ſheepe, and the loſt groat. Moreouer, our Sauiour Chriſt had his Name Ieſus giuen him of God by the miniſtery of an Angell, becauſe hee ſaueth his people from their ſins: as appeareth, Matth.1.21. and he therefore came into the world, not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance, as it is, Matth.9.13. And hee inuiteth and calleth vnto him all thoſe who are weary and heauy laden with the burthen of their ſins, promiſing that he will eaſe them, Matth.11.28. yea, ſo certaine it is that they ſhall haue remiſſion of their ſins and euerlaſting happines who truly repent and beleeue, that our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, they haue it already, as though they were in preſent poſſeſſion, Iohn 5.24. Verily, verily, I ſay vnto you, he that heareth my word, and beleeueth in him that ſent me, hath euerlaſting life, and ſhall not come into condemnation, but hath paſſed from death to life. So Chap.6.47. and Chap.11.26. Whoſoeuer liueth and beleeueth in me ſhall neuer die. The Apoſtle Peter alſo plainly affirmeth, that God would haue no man to periſh, but would haue all men to come to repentance. Seeing therefore the Lord hath made ſo many gracious promiſes in the Goſpell to all repentant and beleeuing Sinners, let vs vnfainedly turne vnto the Lord, and apply Chriſt and his merits vnto vs by a true and liuely faith, and then we may aſſure our ſelues that he will pardon and forgiue vs all our ſins, and receiue vs graciouſly into his loue and fauour.

But againſt this which hath beene alleaged, Satan will be ready to obiect to the afflicted conſcience, that theſe promiſes were made to the Prophets, Apoſtles and holy men of God, but not to ſuch hainous and rebellious Sinners who haue moſt iuſtly deſerued that God ſhould powre out vpon them the Vialls of his wrath, and thoſe fearefull puniſhments threatned in the law, becauſe of the innumerable number of their ſins, and the outragiouſneſſe of their wickedneſſe; and therefore ſuch haue nothing to doe with the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell, but are to apply vnto themſelues the terrible threatnings denounced in the law againſt ſuch grieuous Sinners. For the anſwering of which tentation, we are to know that the Lords promiſes made in the Goſpell, are generall, indefinite, and vniuerſall, excluding none who turne from their ſinnes by vnfained repentance, and beleeue in Chriſt Ieſus, reſting on him alone for their ſaluation. Neither is there any limitation or exception of this or that ſin; for be they neuer ſo grieuous and manifold, yet if wee performe the condition of faith and repentance, the Lord will make good his promiſes vnto vs. For the firſt, namely, that the promiſes of the Goſpell are indefinite, and generally made to all who repent and beleeue, it ſhall manifeſtly appeare if we conſider the particulars. Eſay 55.1. the Lord calleth all vnto him indefinitely, ſaying, Hoe, euery one who thirſteth come to the waters, and yee that haue no ſiluer, come, buy and eate; Come I ſay, buy wine and milke without ſiluer, and without money. So that though we haue no worthineſſe and righteouſneſſe of our owne, yet if wee thirſt after the mercy of God and righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, and come vnto God by vnfained repentance, and vnto our Sauiour by a liuely faith, our thirſt ſhall be ſatisfied, and all our wants ſupplied. So Ezech.33.11. the Lord ſolemnely ſweareth, that he will not the death of a Sinner, but that they turne from their wicked wayes and liue; where hee ſpeaketh not of this or that Sinner, but of all without exception who turne vnto him. Our Sauiour Chriſt likewiſe maketh this indefinite promiſe, Marke 16.16. that whoſoeuer ſhall beleeue and bee baptized ſhall bee ſaued. And Iohn 3.14. hee ſaith, that as Moſes lift vp the Serpent in the wilderneſſe, ſo muſt the ſonne of man be lift vp. 15. That whoſoeuer beleeueth in him, ſhould not periſh but haue eternall life. So that as all who were ſtung of the fiery Serpent were healed, if they looked vpon the brazen Serpent, neither was there any exception or diſtinction betweene thoſe, who were deeply, or but a little pierced with the ſting, for if they were ſtung they died, if they vſed not the remedy ordained of God, though their wound were but ſmal and ſhallow; but if they looked vp to the brazen Serpent according to Gods Ordinance, they were cured though their wound were neuer ſo deadly and deſperate: ſo thoſe who looke not vpon Chriſt Ieſus hanging on the Croſſe with the eye of faith, are ſure to fall into euerlaſting death and damnation, be their ſins neuer ſo few; and on the other ſide, they who lay hold vpon Chriſt and beleeue in him, are ſure to bee ſaued, though their ſins be neuer ſo many and grieuous. So in the 16. Verſe it is ſaid, that God ſo loued the world, that he hath giuen his only begotten Son, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh but haue euerlaſting life. And Verſe 36. He that beleeueth in the ſonne hath euerlaſting life, &c. So that here is no exception of Sins; for the promiſes are made indefinitely to all that beleeue. In like manner our Sauiour hath promiſed, Iohn 6.37. that whoſoeuer come vnto him, hee will not caſt them away. And Verſe 40. hee aſſureth vs, that it is the will of his Father who ſent him, that euery man who beleeuth in him ſhould haue euerlaſting life. And the Apoſtle Peter, Acts 10. 43. ſaith that vnto our Sauiour Chriſt giue all the Prophets witneſſe, that through his Name, all that beleeue in him ſhall haue remiſſion of ſins. And the Apoſtle Iohn likewiſe ſaith, 1. Iohn 2.1. That if any man ſinne wee haue an Aduocate with the Father Ieſus Chriſt the righteous, and he is the propitiation for our ſins, and not for ours only, but alſo for the ſins of the whole world, that is, for whoſoeuer repent and beleeue, of euery Kingdome, Country, and Nation. So that by all theſe places it is cleere and euident that none are excluded from being partakers of Gods mercifull promiſes, but thoſe who exclude themſelues through their infidelitie and vnrepentancie.

Neither is there any Sins ſo innumerable in multitude, and ſo hainous and grieuous, which wil debarre vs from receiuing the benefit of Gods mercy and Chriſts merits, ſo we repent and beleeue, as may appeare alſo by plaine teſtimonies. Eſay 1. 18. The Lord thus ſpeaketh to the Iewes, whom hee had deſcribed to be rebellious, and moſt outragiouſly wicked. Come now (ſaith the Lord) and let vs reaſon together: though your ſins were as crimſon, they ſhall be made white as ſnow: though they were red as ſcarlet, they ſhall be as wooll. The Apoſtle Paul likewiſe witneſſeth, that our Sauiour Chriſt gaue himſelfe for vs, that hee might redeeme vs from all iniquity: And the Apoſtle Iohn ſaith, that the blood of Chriſt cleanſeth vs from all ſinne, and if wee acknowledge our ſins, hee is faithfull and iuſt to forgiue vs our ſins, and to cleanſe vs from all vnrighteouſneſſe. So that here is no mention made of any ſinnes which are excepted, or which exclude vs from Gods mercy and Chriſts merits, ſo that wee repent and beleeue. Neither are the promiſes of the Goſpell limited or reſtrained in reſpect of the number or grieuouſneſſe of our ſins, ſo wee performe the condition of faith and repentance, for whoſoeuer is heartily ſorry for his ſins paſt, and purpoſeth for the time to come to leaue & forſake them, whoſoeuer doth beleeue Gods promiſes, and reſteth vpon Chriſt Ieſus alone, for his ſaluation, by a true and liuely faith, he may be certainly aſſured, that the Lord hath pardoned and forgiuen all his ſinnes, and receiued him into his grace and fauour, though his ſinnes be neuer ſo many and hainous. And on the other ſide, whoſoeuer continueth in his vnrepentancie and infidelity, ſhall be condemned though his other ſins be neuer ſo few and ſmall; neither will all our other ſins debar vs of Gods mercy, vnleſſe they be ioyned with vnrepentancy and vnbeleefe, for obſerue the condition of the promiſes, faith and repentance, and all the promiſes of the Goſpell belong vnto thee, though thou were the greateſt Sinner that euer liued. For whereas it may be obiected that the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt is vnpardonable, wee are to know it is not ſo much in regard of the hainouſnes of the ſin, as that becauſe it is alwayes ſeuered and diſioyned from faith & repentance, God denying theſe his graces to thoſe who vpon deſperate malice haue made a generall Apoſtaſie, and haue perſecuted the knowne truth. So that if it were poſſible for them to repent and beleeue, it were poſſible alſo that they ſhould be ſaued. Seeing therefore the promiſes of the Goſpell are generall excluding none, let not any man who is laden with the burthen of his ſinnes, exclude himſelfe through his want of repentance and infidelity, for though their other ſins are grieuous, yet this is more hainous and damnable then all the reſt. For whereas the Lord ſaith, that he will extend his mercy vnto all who come vnto him; if we reply, No he will not extend it vnto mee, becauſe I am a grieuous Sinner, what doe we elſe but contradict the Lord, and giue truth it ſelfe the lie; not giuing credit to his word and promiſes? And therfore let vs take heed that we do not ſo aggrauate our ſins as that in the meane time we extenuate and derogate from Gods infallible truth.

§. Sect. 7.
A dangerous exception againſt the former comfort anſwered.

But againſt this the tempter will obiect that howſoeuer the promiſes of the Goſpell are in themſelues generall and indefinite, yet they are alwayes limited and reſtrained to the condition of them; which is a liuely faith, alwayes accompanied with vnfained repentance and new obedience; & that howſoeuer we are freed by Chriſt from that exact obedience which the Law requireth, yet all thoſe who haue their part in him doe performe Euangelicall obedience, that is, in vprightneſſe and ſincerity of heart doe labour and ſtriue after perfection, and when they come ſhort doe bitterly bewayle their wants and imperfections. But thou (will hee ſay) art quite deſtitute of faith, and in ſtead thereof haſt all this while flattered thy ſelfe with vaine preſumption, as hereby it appeareth in that it is quite deſtitute of the fruits of obedience. Nor canſt thou by reaſon of thy hardneſſe of heart repent of thy ſins, but ſtill liueſt in them, neither bewailing thoſe which are paſt, nor groning vnder the burthen of preſent corruptions, nor haſt yet throughly reſolued to leaue, and forſake them for the time to come. Beſides thou art vtterly deſti-

tute of all other ſauing graces as of the loue and feare of God, zeale, affiance, hope and the reſt. And whatſoeuer ſhew thou haſt made of theſe graces in the fruits of them, yet all this while thou haſt but plaid the Hypocrite, and haſt done nothing that is good in ſinceritie and truth. And therefore none of the promiſes belong vnto thee; nor haſt thou any part in Gods mercies and Chriſts merits, which belong only to the faithfull, penitent, and vpright; but thou art a Reprobate child of wrath ordained to deſtruction, and conſequently doſt but delude thy ſelfe with falſe hopes, which makes thee ſpend much labour in vaine. Whereas it were a much better and eaſier courſe to neglect all theſe laborious meanes in ſeeking bootleſly hopeleſſe ſaluation, and vtterly deſpairing of future happineſſe to enjoy thoſe preſent delights which the world and thine owne luſts can yeeld vnto thee. For the anſwering of which temptation we muſt (granting the præmiſes) inſiſt only on the application and concluſion. And becauſe wee can indeed haue no part in the promiſes of the Goſpell, Gods mercies and Chriſts merits vnleſſe we beleeue, repent and bring forth the fruits of new obedience in ſincerity and truth; therefore wee muſt (not entertayning theſe accuſations vpon Sathans word) trie and examine our ſelues whether we are indued with theſe graces or no by obſeruing what markes and ſignes, effects and fruits of them we can find in vs, of which I haue already formerly ſpoken. And if thorough the violence of temptation wee can take notice of none for the preſent, let vs call to minde the time paſt, wherein we haue diſcerned the fruits and ſignes of theſe graces in vs, comfortably concluding that if euer we had them wee ſtill haue them, ſeeing the gifts and calling of God are without repentance. Rom. 11. 29. But what if vpon this examination we can haue no comfort, ſeeing we can haue no aſſurance vpon any ſigne paſt or preſent, that euer we had any ſparke of grace in vs? what if our owne conſciences approuing as true Sathans accuſations, doe tell vs that we are and alwayes haue beene vtterly deſtitute of faith, repentance, loue, and all fruits of new obedience, and that we haue done all hitherto in meere Hypocriſie and therefore remayne in infidelity and in the ſtate of condemnation, how muſt wee then behaue our ſelues that wee may haue any hope and comfort? Surely we may well ſuſpect this teſtimony as falſe, proceeding from the Deuils malice and the ſtrength of melancholy inraged with the violence of temptations, which ſo blindeth our vnderſtanding and conſciences with the cloud of our corruptions, which they ſet before them, that they haue for the preſent no ſpirituall diſcerning, and therefore can giue no true judgement of our eſtates: Seeing Sathan ſeldome or neuer accuſeth meere worldlings that they are quite deſtitute of grace, becauſe hee knoweth that the ſenſe of our wants worketh in vs ſome deſires to haue them ſupplyed, whereby our hearts are prepared to receiue grace, and to this end moued to endeuour in the vſe of the meanes whereby we may attaine vnto them; but rather worketh in them carnall ſecuritie, and perſwadeth them vnto an opinion of their owne excellency, and that they are alreadie ſo rich in grace that they need not labour after more. But though all the præmiſes ſhould be granted, that wee neuer had grace, and haue beene hitherto but groſſe Hypocrites, yet is there no reaſon that wee ſhould yeeld vnto Sathans concluſion, namely, that wee ſhould caſt off all hope, and ſuffer our ſelues to be plunged into deepe deſperation, ſeeing as long as wee liue and enjoy the meanes of grace and our conuerſion, the acceptable time and day of ſaluation is not yet paſt, but ſtill the Lord offereth vnto vs mercy if wee will turne vnto him, and is ready to worke his graces in vs, which are yet wanting, if we will but carefully and conſcionably vſe the means which he hath ſanctified for this purpoſe, as hearing the Word, reading, praying, and ſuch like: And therefore as thoſe who are ſtript of all their worldly wealth, or neuer had any, doe not ſit idlely ſtill and periſh in their wants, but begin the world a new, and the more they are pinched with their wants, the more diligently and painefully they labour in the vſe of all good means whereby they may miniſter vnto their neceſſities: So let vs doe in this caſe, and finding our wants in Gods graces, let vs not like ſluggards ſlothfully ſit ſtill and ſpend our time in bootleſſe ſorrow and fruitleſſe complaining. But let vs hauing loſt much time now labour to redeeme it with our future diligence; and the longer wee haue deferred to ſet out in the way of righteouſnes and holineſſe which leadeth to our heauenly home, let vs (like wiſe trauailers) make ſo much the more ſpeed in diſpatching of our journey. But the Deuils malice is ſuch hauing gotten poore ſoules vpon ſo great an aduantage, and the humour of melancholy naturally ſo ſluggiſh and blockiſh; that it hardneth the heart, dulleth and deadeth the ſpirits, and ſo beſotteth and ſtupifieth all the ſenſes and powers of the ſoule, that poore creatures in this caſe are much more apt to complaine of their miſeries, then to vſe any meanes to be eaſed of them, and euen to die and periſh in their ſpirituall wants then to take any paines to haue them ſupplied. And therefore none more then theſe need the help of good, faithfull and ſkilfull Miniſters and other their Godly and able friends by whoſe counſailes and incouragements, admonitions and exhortations, comforts and rebukes, as it were goades in their ſides, they may be quickned and incited to vſe with all care and diligence, the meanes of their ſaluation.

God the er,

AND theſe are the Arguments which are drawne from the nature of God, whereby we may be aſſured of the remiſſion of our ſins. There may alſo other arguments be drawne from euery perſon of the Trinitie. Firſt, God the Father hath created vs of nothing, euen according to his owne image, and when wee had defaced this his image in vs, and made our ſelues ſlaues to Sathan, he ſo tenderly loued vs his poore miſerable creatures, that he ſpared not his dearely beloued and onely begotten Sonne, but ſent him into the world to take our nature vpon him, that therein hee might ſuffer all miſery and affliction, and laſtly the curſed & bitter death of the croſſe, that ſo hee might ſatisfie his iuſtice for our ſins, and perfect the worke of our Redemption. And this the Euangeliſt witneſſeth, Iohn 3.16. All which loue the Lord ſhewed vnto vs, euen for his owne Names ſake, when we neither deſerued it nor yet deſired it. For wee were bondſlaues vnto Sathan and well contented to liue in his bondage; wee were children of wrath & dead in our ſins, yea we were enemies vnto God and all goodneſſe. And therefore if our mercifull God ſo loued vs, whileſt we were in loue with our ſins, at league with his enemy Sathan, and at enmity with him, that hee ſent his dearely beloued and onely begotten Sonne to die for vs, that by his death and bloudſhed hee might redeeme and ſaue vs out of this miſerable eſtate, how much more will hee now receiue vs to mercy, and pardon, and forgiue our ſins, if we ſeeke and ſue for grace? If he loued vs ſo dearely when wee hated him, and ſought all meanes of reconciliation when we were profeſſed enemies againſt him, how much more will hee receiue vs into his fauour, when as we earneſtly deſire to be reconciled? If he ſo loued vs, that he ſent his Sonne to die for our ſins, how much more will hee remit thoſe ſins for which hee hath ſatisfied, when as with heartie ſorrow wee doe bewayle them, and earneſtly deſire to be freed from them? If he hath giuen his Son to mankind to this end, that he ſhould ſaue and redeeme repentant Sinners, why ſhould any doubt of their redemption and ſaluation, if they turne vnto him by vnfained repentance, and lay hold on Chriſt by a liuely faith? And if hee haue giuen vs his chiefe Iewell, his onely begotten and beſt beloued Son, and that when we were his enemies, what will hee deny vs, when in Chriſt wee are reconciled vnto him and become his friends? And thus the Apoſtle reaſoneth, Rom. 5.8. God (ſaith he) ſetteth out his loue towards vs, ſeeing that whilſt wee were yet Sinners Chriſt died for vs. 9. Much more then being now iuſtified by his bloud, wee ſhall be ſaued from wrath through him. 10. For if when wee were enemies, wee were reconciled to God by the death of his Sonne, much more being reconciled we ſhall be ſaued by his life.

Rom. 5.8,9.

§. Sect. 2.
Reaſons drawne from the ſecond perſon God the Sonne.
1 Becauſe he came into the world to ſaue Sinners.

Secondly, we may draw moſt firme arguments to ſtrengthen our aſſurance of the remiſſion of our ſins, from the ſecond perſon in Trinitie, our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt; for firſt he is our Sauiour and Redeemer, who therefore came into the world that he might ſaue and redeeme vs out of the captiuity of our ſpirituall enemies, Sin, Death, and the Deuill, and that hee might ſatisfie his Fathers iuſtice, obtaine the remiſſion of our ſins, and reconcile vs vnto him. Though then our ſins be many and grieuous, this ſhould not hinder vs from comming to Chriſt by a true faith, and firme aſſurance, that in him wee ſhall haue the remiſſion of our ſins, and be receiued into Gods loue & fauour. Yea rather this ſhould be a forcible argument to moue vs to ſeeke his helpe, when we find our ſelues in a deſperate caſe, deſtitute of all meanes whereby we may attaine vnto ſaluation, ſeeing our Sauiour Chriſt came into the world to ſaue ſuch as were loſt in themſelues, and inthralled in the miſerable bondage of Sinne and Satan. And this is euident by the Scriptures: Matth. 9.13. our Sauiour profeſſeth that he came not to call the righteous but ſinners to repentance: and Luke 19.10. The Sonne of man is come to ſeeke and to ſaue that which was loſt. 1.Tim 1.15. This is a true ſaying, and by all meanes worthy to be receiued, that Ieſus Chriſt came into the world to ſaue Sinners. The Apoſtle alſo affirmeth, that our Sauiour Chriſt hath quickned vs who were dead in our ſins and treſpaſſes, Epheſ. 2.1.5. And our Sauiour Chriſt, doth not onely call vnto him ſmall Sinners, but thoſe who are heauie laden with an intolerable waight of ſin, promiſing that hee will eaſe them. Seeing therefore hee came into the World to ſaue and redeeme grieuous and hainous Sinners, and to giue life vnto thoſe who were euen ſtarke dead in their Sinnes; ſeeing alſo he calleth and inuiteth ſuch vnto him as are heauy laden with an intolerable waight of wickedneſſe, and promiſeth to eaſe them; let vs not excuſe our ſelues from comming becauſe our Sins are hainous and grieuous, but therefore let vs the rather goe vnto Chriſt, becauſe wee had need of his helpe. If a man being loded with a waighty burthen, ſhould refuſe the helpe of a friend, both able and willing to eaſe him, becauſe his burthen is very heauy, who would not laugh at ſuch ridiculous folly? For therefore hee ſhould more earneſtly deſire, and more thankfully accept of his friends offered courteſie, becauſe himſelfe is tired, preſſed down, and altogether vnable to beare this intolerable waight: but ſuch and greater folly doe they commit, who being pinched and oppreſſed with the heauy burthen of their ſins, doe through their infidelitie refuſe the helpe of Chriſt, offering himſelfe to releaſe and eaſe them, vnder this pretence, becauſe their burthen is ouer heauy; for ſeeing to them it is intolerable, therefore they ſhould rather goe vnto Chriſt and earneſtly deſire to be eaſed and releaſed, ſeeing hee is not only able, for his power is omnipotent, but alſo moſt willing, for he hath moſt graciouſly promiſed, and freely offered his helpe.

§. *Sect.*3.
That the price which Chriſt hath paid for our redemption far exceedeth all our ſinnes.

Moreouer, wee need not to doubt of the ſufficiencie of the price which our Sauiour hath paid for our Redemption, for it is of infinite value, and of more vertue and power to juſtifie and ſaue, then all the ſins of the World to condemne and deſtroy. So that though we were the greateſt ſinners that euer liued, yea, though the waight of all ſinne which euer in the World hath beene committed did lie vpon vs, yet the merits of Chriſt and the price which hee paid for our Redemption doe farre exceed them, and if we come vnto him by a liuely faith reſting vpon him alone for our ſaluation, hee will ſurely eaſe vs of this intolerable burthen. And therefore though the grieuouſnes of our ſins ſhould increaſe our repentance, yet they ſhould not diminiſh our faith and aſſurance of pardon and forgiueneſſe; for though our debt were neuer ſo great, our ſurety Chriſt Ieſus hath paid it to the vttermoſt farthing; though our ſins are neuer ſo many and grieuous, our Sauiour hath borne them all vpon the croſſe in his owne body, and fully ſatisfying Gods juſtice for them, hath freed and deliuered vs from this heauy burthen. Though we were neuer ſo deeply inthralled in the bondage of our ſpirituall enemies, yet our Almighty Redeemer hath freed vs out of captiuity, and hath paid a ſufficient price for our ranſome; and though we had no right or intereſt in the Kingdome of Heauen, yet our Sauiour hath dearely purchaſed it for vs by his precious death and bloud-ſhed. And therefore ſeeing in Chriſt wee haue fully ſatisfied Gods juſtice, and fully merited the pardon of our ſins; ſeeing in him wee haue not onely paid our debt, but alſo giuen a ſufficient price for the purchaſing of eternall happineſſe, we need not to make any doubt of the pardon of our ſins, and of poſſeſſing our heauenly inheritance, for the Lord cannot in juſtice hold that from vs which of right appertaineth vnto vs. Yea we may aſſure our ſelues that though he could, yet hee would not; for who can imagine that the Lord who of his bounteous liberalitie giueth vnto vs more then wee can deſerue or deſire, will keepe from vs that which of right appertaineth to vs? that he who for his owne Name ſake without any reſpect of our works or worthines freely multiplieth his benefits vpon vs, ſhould with-hold our rightfull inheritance in his heauenly kingdome from vs, which our Sauiour Chriſt hath purchaſed for vs by his precious death and bloud-ſhed? And therefore ſeeing we haue vndoubted right to the pardon of our ſins, becauſe Chriſt Ieſus hath ſatisfied for them, and juſt title to our heauenly inheritance which our Sauiour hath purchaſed for vs with ſo deare and al-ſufficient a price, let vs in the Name of Chriſt goe boldly vnto the throne of grace, deſiring a generall acquittance of that debt which is already paid, yea let vs not feare to approach the throne of Gods ſeuere juſtice, and to claime our heauenly inheritance which Chriſt by his death and al-ſufficient merits hath ſo dearely purchaſed.

Furthermore, we are to conſider that our Sauiour and Redeemer is ſo gracious and bountifull, ſo rich in mercy, and ſo full of all power, vertue and perfection, that our Sins ſhould not diſcourage vs from comming vnto him; for the more miſerable, wretched and ſinfull wee be, the more fit ſubjects wee are, whereupon hee may exerciſe and ſhew the infinite riches of his bountie, mercy, vertue and all ſufficiencie. If we were but a little ſoiled with Sin, it were not ſo great a matter to make vs cleane; but when wee are moſt filthily defiled, and our pollution is ingrained in vs (as it were) with a ſcarlet die; when our vncleane corruption ſtickes as faſt to our ſoules as the Ethiopian blackneſſe to their skins, then is the vertue of the excellent lauer of Chriſts bloud ſufficiently manifeſted, when as he purgeth vs and maketh vs cleane, waſhing away all our filthy corruptions, and making our ſcarlet Sinnes as white as ſnow. Our Sauiour Chriſt is our ſpirituall Phyſician, who can as eaſily cure deſperate diſeaſes, euen the remedileſſe conſumption, the dead apoplexie, and the filthy leproſie of the ſoule, as ſome ſmall maladie, or little faintneſſe? Neither is he onely able, but alſo as willing to vndertake ſuch deſperate cures as the leaſt infirmities, becauſe his skill will bee the more manifeſt, and his prayſe the more extolled, for the more deſperate the diſeaſe is, the more it argueth his cunning who helpeth it, and the more commendations hee ſhall receiue who effecteth ſuch a cure. And therefore though our diſeaſes are moſt dangerous and deſperate, yet let vs reſort to this our heauenly Phyſician, for the more deſperate the cure is, the more fit occaſion ſhall he haue of ſhewing his neuer failing skill, and of aduancing his immortall praiſe. Hee is our heauenly Chirurgion, euen the good Samaritane which powreth the ſoueraigne oyle of his grace, and the precious balme of his bloud into our wounded ſoules; and therefore the more griſly our wounds are, the more praiſe and glory hee getteth in curing them, the more is the vertue of the ſoueraigne ſalue of his bloud manifeſted to all the world by healing of them. Though therefore our ſoules are moſt filthy and polluted, yet if wee come to Chriſt, hee will ſurely waſh and purge vs, for to this purpoſe he ſuffered that precious water and bloud to iſſue out of his ſide, that thereby as with a liuing and cleare ſtreame, iſſuing from a moſt pure fountaine, he might cleanſe vs from all our ſins, and waſh away all our filthy corruptions; though we are moſt deſperately ſicke, let vs come vnto our ſpirituall Phyſician, for he can cure the moſt remedileſſe diſeaſes as perfectly and as ſpeedily, as the moſt ſmall infirmity and faint weaknes: though our ſoules are wounded euen to the death, with the deepe piercing and deadly impoyſoning ſting of Sinne, yet let vs ſeeke helpe of this our heauenly Chirurgion, who with the precious balme of his bloud, can as eaſily heale the moſt dangerous wounds, as ſmall ſcratches or little cuts. Neither is hee more able then willing, for hereby his vertue and power, his loue and bounty, is the more manifeſted to his endleſſe and immortall praiſe.

But if wee thinke our ſoules ſo filthy that hee cannot purge them, what doe wee elſe but derogate from the vertue of his bloud? If we will not goe to this heauenly Phyſician to craue his helpe, becauſe our ſickneſſe is grieuous and dangerous, what do we elſe but call his skill into queſtion? If we will not ſhew our wounds, becauſe they are griſly, what doe we elſe but notably detract from the cunning of this our ſpirituall Chirurgion, and doubt of the vertue and efficacy of the precious balme of his bloud? wheras on the other ſide, if wee ſee our polluted filthineſſe, and yet goe vnto Chriſt, that we may be waſhed and cleanſed, wee acknowledge the vertue and excellency of the ſpirituall lauer of his bloud. If wee plainly diſcerne that our ſickneſſe is deſperate, and yet goe to our ſoules Phyſician, not doubting of recouery, we thereby extoll our Phyſicians skill: if our wounds be in themſelues griſly and incurable, and yet we reſort to our heauenly Chirurgion to be healed of them, wee cannot more commend his al-ſufficient cunning. And therefore ſeeing it is in theſe our extremities to our Sauiour Chriſt moſt honourable and acceptable, and to our ſelues moſt profitable and full of comfort, if wee come vnto Chriſt, not doubting of his helpe, let vs not pretend excuſes, either becauſe we are vnfit, vnworthy, or in a deſperate ſtate; for by thus aggrauating our owne remedileſſe miſery, we extenuate and call into queſtion Gods mercy, and Chriſts al-ſufficiency, wee ſpoile him of his honour and glory, and our owne ſoules of all joy and conſolation.

§. Sect. 5.
That the offices of Chriſt, giue vs aſſurance of the remiſſion of our ſinnes. And firſt in that hee is our Prophet.

Secondly, we may gather firme aſſurance of the pardon of our ſins, from the offices of Chriſt. For firſt he is our Prophet who hath reuealed vnto vs all the will and counſell of his Father, he hath declared vnto vs the myſtery of our Redemption, and the meanes of our ſaluation, how we may attaine vnto the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and how wee may come out of that miſerable and wretched eſtate, in which we are by nature, and attaine vnto eternall happineſſe. Hee it is, who by the bright beames of his Word doth illuminate our vnderſtandings, and by the operation of his holy Spirit, doth cauſe the ſcales of ignorance to fall from our eyes, Giuing knowledge of ſaluation to his people, by remiſſion of ſinnes. Hee is that glorious and bright ſhining day-ſtarre, which from an high hath viſited vs, to giue light vnto them who ſit in darkneſſe and in the ſhadow of death, and to guide our feet into the way of peace. If therefore wee will walke in the way which he ſheweth vs, and vſe thoſe meanes which he reuealeth vnto vs in his Goſpell, namely, turne vnto God by vnfained repentance, and beleeue in him by a liuely faith, wee ſhall not need to feare our ſinnes though neuer ſo grieuous and manifold, for this our heauenly Prophet hath truly reuealed vnto vs a plaine way how wee may come out of our ſins, and be reconciled vnto God; how wee may be adorned with the glorious Robe of his righteouſneſſe, and bee made partakers of all his merits; how wee may become of the children of wrath and fire-brands of Hell, the children of God, and heires of Heauen. And therefore let vs walke in this way and aſſure our ſelues that wee ſhall come to the journey end of our deſires, for truth it ſelfe is our guide, ſo that we need not to doubt of the way.

Secondly, our Sauiour Chriſt is our High Prieſt, who hath offered vp vnto his Father an al-ſufficient Sacrifice and full ſatisfaction for our ſinnes, whereby Gods juſtice is fully ſatisfied, and his wrath appeaſed, who alſo ſitting at the right hand of his Father, continually maketh interceſſion for vs. The ſacrifice which this our High Prieſt offered was himſelfe, as the Apoſtle teſtifieth, Heb. 9.26. euen his body to be crucified, and his bloud to be ſhed for the putting away of our ſins; the which oblation was offered on the Altar of his Deity which ſanctified the Sacrifice, and gaue vnto it ſuch ſufficiency and value, that it was a perfect price and full ſatisfaction for the ſins of all the faithfull, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth, 1.Iohn 2.2. He is the propitiation for our ſins, and not for ours onely, but for the ſinnes of the whole world. Seeing therefore this our High Prieſt hath giuen himſelfe for vs, euen his body to be crucified, and his bloud to be ſhed to this end, that it might be a propitiatory Sacrifice and full ſatisfaction for our ſins, and ſeeing he was once offered to take away the ſinnes of many, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, *Heb.*9.28. wee need not doubt of the remiſſion of our ſins if we come vnto him by a liuely faith, for to this end he hath ſhed his bloud, that hee thereby might offer vnto God a full ſatisfaction for our ſins, and purge away all our wickedneſſe, and therefore if hee ſhould not attaine vnto his end, that is, if hee ſhould not ſatisfie Gods juſtice and appeaſe his wrath, by purging & taking away all our ſins, his precious bloud ſhould be ſhed in vaine.

Moreouer, he is our Mediatour and Interceſſour, who continually ſitteth at the right hand of his Father making interceſſion for vs, by ſhewing and pleading his owne merits, righteouſneſſe and obedience whereby he pacifieth his Fathers diſpleaſure, and worketh vs into his loue and fauour. And this the Apoſtle witneſſeth, *Rom.*8.34. It is Chriſt which is dead, yea, or rather which is riſen againe, who is alſo at the right hand of God, and maketh requeſt for vs. So alſo *Heb.*9.24. it is ſaid that our High Prieſt Ieſus Chriſt is entred into heauen, to appeare in the ſight of God for vs. And the Apoſtle Iohn ſaith, 1.Iohn 2.1. If any man ſinne, we haue an Aduocate with the Father Ieſus Chriſt the iuſt, and he is the propitiation for our ſins. Neither need wee to doubt of his effectuall dealing for vs; for if he loued vs ſo dearely that hee ſpared not to giue his precious life for vs, there is no queſtion but he will be exceeding earneſt in making requeſt for vs, neither will hee be ſparing in words who hath not ſpared his deareſt bloud. And therefore ſeeing our High Prieſt doth continually make interceſſion for vs, wee need not to doubt but that he will obtaine his ſuite, and procure the pardon of our ſins, and his Fathers loue and fauour. Eſpecially conſidering that hee entreateth nothing which hee hath not deſerued, and by his death purchaſed for vs; and conſequently when like an Aduocate he pleadeth his full payment of our debt, and alleageth his al-ſufficient merits and ſufferings, God cannot in his juſtice but grant his moſt lawfull requeſt; conſidering alſo that he maketh his ſuite not to a ſtranger or ſome common friend, who will either preuent his ſuits with a ſtrange and ſterne countenance, or deny it with ſome vaine excuſe; but vnto his moſt gracious and dearly louing Father, who willingly hearkeneth vnto, and readily granteth all his requeſts. And this our Sauiour himſelfe teſtifieth, Iohn 11.41. Father (ſaith hee) I thanke thee, becauſe thou haſt heard me. 42. But I know thou heareſt mee alwayes, &c. And therefore conſidering Chriſts merit in deſeruing, and Gods mercy in granting, Chriſts importunitie in asking, and his Fathers facilitie in yeelding; ſeeing he that intreateth for vs, loued vs ſo entirely that he died for vs, and will vndoubtedly be moſt earneſt in ſoliciting our ſuite, and hee who is entreated, ſo heartily affecteth vs, that hee ſpared not to giue vnto vs his only begotten and dearely beloued Sonne, that by his death, hee might purchaſe for vs euerlaſting life; let vs ſhake off all doubting, and goe boldly vnto the throne of grace, that wee may receiue mercy, and finde grace to helpe in time of need, as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, *Heb.*4.16. For our good High Prieſt is able perfectly to ſaue them, who come vnto God by him, ſeeing he euer liueth to make interceſſion for them, as it is *Heb.*7.25.

Thirdly, as our Sauior Chriſt is our Prophet and Prieſt, ſo likewiſe he is our King, & this alſo may aſſure vs of the pardon & remiſſion of our ſins if we will come vnto him. For he who is our Aduocate, is alſo our Soueraigne, he that is our Mediatour is our Iudge, hee that intreateth for vs, hath power in his hands, both to obtaine and grant his owne ſuite; he that gaue his life a ranſome for our ſinnes, hath all power in Heauen and Earth committed vnto him, ſo as he is able to remit all our ſinnes, and to blot out all our iniquities, For (now) the Father iudgeth no man, but hath committed all iudgement vnto the Sonne: as himſelfe teſtifieth, Iohn 5.22. and euen when he was vpon the earth, he exerciſed this authority, as appeareth, Matth. 9.2. whereas he ſaith to the ſicke of the palſie: Sonne be of good comfort, thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee. For which being challenged, he defendeth his Regall priuiledges, affirming, Verſe 6. that the Sonne of man hath authoritie euen on earth to forgiue ſinnes. Now what can be more comfortable vnto any ſoule wounded with ſinne, then the conſideration of this vndoubted truth? For ſeeing our Sauiour who ſo tenderly loued vs, that he ſpared not to giue his owne moſt precious bloud for the price of our redemption, hath al-ſufficient power in his owne hands to ſaue and deliuer vs out of the hands of all our enemies, who can imagine that hee will ſuffer vs to be loſt whom hee hath ſo dearely bought. Seeing hee gaue his life to purchaſe for vs the remiſſion of our ſinnes, who can doubt that hauing thus dearely purchaſed it, he will not beſtow it, and ſo ſuffer his bloud to be ſpilt in vaine, ſeeing he was content for our ſakes to endure all miſery, mockings, reuilings, whipping, crucifying, death it ſelfe, and the anger of his Father more bitter then death; to this end that by all theſe his ſufferings, he might procure the remiſſion on of our ſinnes and euerlaſting life, and that when we were rebellious traytors did fleeing away from him; who can make any queſtion, but that now hee will beſtow theſe ineſtimable benefits which hee hath of purpoſe bought for vs, they being in his owne power and cuſtody, if like humble ſeruants and penitent children we turne vnto him and implore his grace? If a Malefactour had a deare friend who loued him ſo entirely, that hee would not ſpare to giue his whole ſubſtance to procure his pardon, would this miſerable offender feare death or condemnation, if hee were aſſured that now his pardon were in his friends hand, and that the matter were by his Prince referred to him, as vnto a ſupreame Iudge abſolutely to determine what he will? But our Sauiour hath not giuen goods or gold, or any corruptible thing, but euen his owne moſt precious bodie to be crucified, and his bloud to be ſhed, that by this ineſtimable price, he might purchaſe our pardon of God our ſoueraigne King, and now he hath the law in his owne hands, and is appointed of God for our ſupreame Iudge to acquit vs at his owne pleaſure: who therefore can make any doubt of grace and pardon, ſeeing his Iudge is his Sauiour who hath loued him ſo dearely, that to this end he hath ſhed his precious bloud, that he might procure for him the remiſſion of his ſinnes and euerlaſting happineſſe? And therefore if hee would not ſticke to buy it at ſo high a rate, how much more hauing bought it only for this purpoſe, will hee now beſtow it if wee ſeeke vnto him, and earneſtly deſire to be partakers of his grace and mercy?

Sect.9. easons rawne from hriſtspro- iſes confir- ed by expe- ence. *atth.*11.28. n 3.36. 6.37.

Moreouer, as this our moſt gracious King and louing Sauiour hath ſufficient power to pardon all our ſinnes, and in reſpect of his ineſtimable loue, is moſt certainly willing to blot out all our wickedneſſe, if we repent & come vnto him, ſo alſo hee hath bound himſelfe hereunto by moſt free and faithfull promiſes, *Matth.*11.28. Come vnto mee all yee that labour and are heauy laden, and I will eaſe you. Iohn 3.36. He that beleeueth in the Sonne hath euerlaſting life. And Iohn 6.37. He hath aſſuredly promiſed, that whoſoeuer commeth vnto him hee will not caſt away. Theſe and many ſuch like gracious promiſes hee hath made, of the performance whereof we need not to doubt, eſpecially conſidering that he gaue continual experience in his practice here on earth, of his loue, goodneſſe, mercy and truth. For who euer came vnto him with any lawfull ſuite and receiued a repulſe? who euer intreated his helpe, and was abandoned? who euer asked any thing of him which was profitable for him to receiue, and did not obtaine his ſuite? whatſoeuer ſicke came vnto him receiued their health; whatſoeuer lame deſired his helpe receiued their limbs; whatſoeuer blind reſorted vnto him receiued their ſight; whatſoeuer Sinner implored the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes receiued full remiſſion and pardon. Yea ſo gracious, mercifull and louing was this our King and Redeemer, that he preuented his poore miſerable ſubiects with his grace, and ſought all occaſions of extending his loue and mercy towards them, giuing vnto them more then they deſired; the ſicke of the palſie comming vnto him not onely was cured of his diſeaſe, but alſo receiued the remiſſion of his ſinnes, *Matth.*9. Zacheus deſired but to ſee his face, and he offereth vnto him his company, and therewith eternall ſaluation, Luke 19. The woman of Samaria requeſted but elementall and common water, and he offereth vnto her the water of life, Iohn 4. The people followed him to be fed by miracle with corporall food, and Chriſt offereth vnto them the bread of life, Iohn 6. The poore blind man deſired that he might be by Chriſt reſtored to his bodily ſight, and Chriſt alſo illuminates the eyes of his ſoule, ſo that as with his bodily eyes hee diſcerned him to be a man, ſo by the eye of faith hee knew him to be his Redeemer and Sauiour. By all which it cleerely appeareth that there was neuer any more ready to aske then Chriſt to giue; yea ſuch was his goodneſſe and loue, that hee was alwayes more ready to grant then they to intreat, and to grant more then they euer deſired. Now we muſt not think that our Sauiour is altered in nature, or that (as it is vſuall amongſt men) honours haue changed manners, for hee is God immutable in goodneſſe, and without change or ſhadow of change, as it is Iames 1.17. and therefore wee may aſſure our ſelues if wee turne from our ſinnes by true repentance, and come vnto him by a liuely faith, we ſhall be receiued to grace and mercy, and receiue the pardon of our ſins be they neuer ſo hainous and innumerable.

§. Sect.10. Reaſons drawne from our communion with Chriſt

Laſtly, the vnion and communion which is betweene Chriſt and all the faithfull, may giue vnto them full aſſurance of the pardon and remiſſion of all their ſinnes. For firſt they are coupled vnto him in ſpirituall matrimony, and hee becommeth the Bridegrome, they the Spouſe; hee the Husband, they the Wife; now wee know that in law there will no action of debt lie againſt the Wife, whileſt the Husband liueth, becauſe ſhe is vnder couert barne; and therefore her Husband who hath taken vpon him to maintaine and defend her, muſt anſwere and follow all her ſuites and his goods are liable for the paying of her debts. And thus it is alſo betweene Chriſt the Husband, and the Church his Spouſe; being married vnto her, he hath taken her vnder his charge and protection, and hath vndertaken to anſwere all ſuites, and to ſatisfie all her debts, yea, hee hath diſcharged them already, and therefore wee need not to feare any action which Satan, the Law, or Gods juſtice may lay againſt vs, for our Husband Ieſus Chriſt hath taken vpon him to follow all our ſuites, and to ſatisfie all our debts. So that if either the Law, Gods juſtice, or our enemy Satan doe commence any ſuites againſt vs, we are not now to take vpon vs the anſwering of them in our owne perſons, but we are to ſend them to our Husband Ieſus Chriſt, who hath taken our cauſes in hand and will giue vnto them a ſufficient anſwere. Secondly, the faithfull are vnited vnto Chriſt in a more neere vnion, for he is their head and they his members, as appeareth, Epheſ.5.23,30. hee is the true Vine, and we the branches, as himſelfe ſpeaketh, Iohn 15.1. he is the fruitfull Oliue tree, we the cions which are graffted into him, as it is, Rom.11. he is the foundation, we the building, as the Apoſtle affirmeth, Epheſ.2.20,21. By reaſon of which neere vnion, it commeth to paſſe, that thoſe things which appertaine vnto Chriſt belong vnto vs, and ours vnto him; for as the head deriueth ſenſe and motion vnto the members; and as the Oliue tree and Vine doe communicate their vertue, fatneſſe, and ſap vnto their branches and cions, by which they liue and bring forth fruit; and as the foundation doth ſuſtaine and vphold all the building: ſo doth our Sauiour Chriſt our head, roote and foundation communicate vnto vs his members and branches, the vertue of his merits, and the juice and ſap of his precious bloud, whereby we are quickned and reuiued who were dead in treſpaſſes, our ſinnes waſhed away and purged, and wee made fruitfull in all righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, as in that his imputed righteouſnes wherby we are juſtified before God, and that inherent righteouſneſſe begunne in vs by his holy Spirit, whereby we are juſtified before men. And as he hath beſtowed and communicated vnto vs his righteouſneſſe, death and obedience, ſo hath hee taken vpon him from vs all our ſinnes originall and actuall, of commiſſion and omiſſion, and in his owne perſon hath ſuffered all that puniſhment, which wee by them had deſerued; ſo as now he hauing taken vpon him our ſinnes, and indued vs with his righteouſneſſe, merit and obedience, wee need not to feare the exact rigour of Gods juſtice, for by him and in him we are without ſinne, pure and vndefiled, and perfectly righteous in Gods ſight. Neither ſhall wee need to feare the violence of all our ſpirituall enemies, for our Head Ieſus Chriſt is God almighty, and therefore none ſhall bee able to plucke vs out of his hands againſt his will, and wee are as deare vnto him as the members of his body, and therefore looke how loth any carefull head would be to haue any of the members pulled from it by force and violence, ſo loth and vnwilling will our Sauiour and head bee, to haue any of his members plucked from him. And therefore ſeeing he wanteth neither will nor power to defend vs, wee need not feare the raging malice and cunning violence of any of our ſpirituall enemies, Sinne, the Deuill, the World and the Fleſh, for our Head is al-ſufficient, and alſo moſt willing to ſaue and defend vs from all their force and malice.

Epheſ.2.20.

§. Sect.11
Reaſons drawne from the third perſon, the holy Spirit,

And ſo much concerning the reaſons drawne from the ſecond perſon, whereby euery repenting and beleeuing Sinner may be aſſured of the pardon and remiſſion of all his ſinnes. Now we are to ſpeake of thoſe which may be drawne from the third perſon, the holy Spirit. Firſt, therefore we are to know, that though our ſinnes be manifold, and our corruptions exceeding filthy, yet this holy Spirit will ſanctifie and purge vs from all our pollution; ſo that though in times paſt wee were moſt hainous ſinners, idolaters, adulterers, theeues, drunkards, railers, extortioners, yet now we are waſhed, now we are ſanctified, now we are juſtified in the name of the Lord Ieſus, and by the ſpirit of our God, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1.Cor.6.11. Hee is that heauenly fire which conſumeth and purgeth vs from all the droſſe of our corruptions, he is that diuine water which waſheth away all our filthy pollution, it is he who doth regenerate and beget vs anew who were dead in our ſinnes; and whoſoeuer are thus regenerated ſhall be heires of the Kingdome of Heauen. Secondly, we may hereby be aſſured of the remiſſion of our ſinnes, in that the Spirit of God joyneth with vs in our ſuite, and together with vs, maketh requeſt vnto God in our behalfe; and whereas we are ignorant and know not how to pray as we ought, the Spirit it ſelfe helpeth our infirmities, and maketh requeſt for vs with ſighes which cannot be expreſſed. But God who ſearcheth the hearts, knoweth what is the meaning of the ſpirit: for hee maketh requeſt for the Saints according to the will of God; as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom.8.26,27. Who therefore can doubt of obtaining his ſuite, euen the remiſſion of his ſinnes and reconciliation with God, ſeeing it is framed & indited by Gods Spirit, and conſequently is moſt wiſe, juſt, and as the Apoſtle ſaith, according to the will of God? yea it is ſollicited and followed with great earneſtneſſe by the ſame ſpirit; & therefore our ſuite being wiſe, iuſt, and framed by the ſpirit according to the will of God, and by the ſame ſpirit in moſt earneſt manner ſollicited and furthered, there is no queſtion but we ſhall obtaine it.

AND theſe are the reaſons which may be drawne from euery of the perſons of the Trinitie, to aſſure vs of the remiſſion of our ſinnes; to which we may adde diuers others. Firſt, the beleeuing of the remiſſion of our ſinnes, is an Article of our Creed, which wee doe daily confeſſe and profeſſe, and it is not left vnto our choice to beleeue or not to beleeue, but as wee confeſſe it with the mouth, ſo wee are bound to beleeue it with the heart, if wee would be reckoned in the number of Chriſtians. Why then ſhould wee doubt of that which we are bound to performe; and if wee doe not, we grieuouſly ſinne through infidelitie, which is more dangerous and damnable then all our other ſins whatſoeuer? And therefore though there were no other reaſon to mooue vs, though our hainous and manifold ſinnes ſhould make it ſeeme vnto vs neuer ſo incredible, yet let vs ſet aſide all impediments and breake through the violence of all obiections, and beleeue in obedience to Gods Commandements, and becauſe it is our dutie, the performance whereof is very acceptable vnto God, and the neglect is a ſin moſt dangerous and damnable. Which that we may performe, let vs carefully obſerue the condition of the couenant of grace, that is, let vs reſt and relie vpon Chriſt Ieſus alone for our ſaluation by a liuely faith, and turne vnto God by vnfained repentance, and then there is no place left to doubting of that which in duty we are bound to beleeue.

Secondly, the afflicted ſoule labouring vnder ſinne may receiue no ſmall aſſurance by the teſtimony of Gods faithfull Miniſters. For the keyes of the Kingdome of Heauen are committed vnto them, and they haue power giuen them of God here on earth to binde and looſe; not as though they could by their owne authority, and in their own name giue pardon of ſinnes to whom they liſt (as the Papiſts teach and practiſe) for this is proper and peculiar vnto God alone, as euen the Phariſies well knew; whereof it was, that ſeeing our Sauiour Chriſt take vpon him to forgiue ſinnes, whom they imagined to be a meere man, they affirmed that he blaſphemed. For who (ſay they) can forgiue ſin but God only? but they haue authoritie giuen them of God, vpon due examination and triall of their faith by the fruits thereof, vnfained repentance, certainly to declare and pronounce vnto them that their ſins are forgiuen. Whoſoeuer therefore haue this teſtimony of Gods faithfull Miniſters, who are well acquainted with their eſtates, giuen vnto them, they may aſſure themſelues that it is vndoubtedly true and moſt certaine; for who is it that dare oppoſe himſelfe and contradict the teſtimony of Gods Spirit in the mouth of ſo many his faithfull Ambaſſadours? Who dare be ſo preſumptuous as to take vpon him the diſcerning of his ſtate better then the Miniſters of God, who being appointed by him, to this function are indued with a great meaſure of his Spirit, whereby they are inabled to diſcerne and judge of mens eſtates, better then they themſelues? for hee that is ſpirituall diſcerneth all things, and is made acquainted with the mind of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1.*Cor.*2.15,16. And therefore if diuers of Gods faithfull Miniſters with one conſent pronounce vnto any penitent ſinners the remiſſion of their ſinnes, and aſſure them after the examination of their eſtate that they are in the loue and fauour of God, it ſhould bee vnto them ten thouſand times more forcible an argument to perſwade them, and to confirme their faith in the aſſurance of Gods loue, then the contrary teſtimony of Satan, or their timorous vnbeleeuing fleſh to mooue them to doubting thereof? If our bodies be ſicke, we commit our ſelues to the skill and care of the Phyſician, and good reaſon, becauſe wee know he is better able to diſcerne of our eſtate then we our ſelues; and beleeuing his judgement to be good, wee ſuffer him to apply ſuch remedies as he thinketh moſt fit; why then ſhould we not committ the diſcerning of our eſtate to the Phyſician of the ſoule no leſſe carefull, and in this reſpect much more skilfull? For the others rules in ſome patient may faile him, but the grounds whereupon the ſpirituall Phyſician buildeth, are moſt infallible, being the vndoubted truth of God. Why ſhould we not rather beleeue their often approued judgement then our owne timorous phantaſies, or Satans teſtimony, who is our malicious enemy?

The 3. Reaſon drawne from the contrary teſtimony of Satan.

Thirdly, the afflicted ſoule may gather aſſurance of the remiſſion of ſinnes from the contrary teſtimony of the Deuill. For when there is any ſuggeſtion caſt into our mindes which is repugnant to the Word of God and the teſtimony of Gods Spirit in the hearts of the faithfull, we may aſſure our ſelues that it is the ſpeech of Satan, or of our corrupt fleſh the meſſenger of Satan, both which come to one end; but theſe motions and ſuggeſtions, that God will not receiue vs to mercy, that our ſinnes are vnpardonable, that we are reprobates and caſtawayes; that now it is too late to turne vnto God, proceed not from Gods Spirit, for they are quite contrary to that which the Scriptures teach vs, namely, that the mercies of God are infinite, and hee alwayes ready to receiue vs to grace when we turne vnto him, that if we will earneſtly repent, and in the mediation of Chriſt ſue for mercy, he will make our ſcarlet ſinnes as white as ſnow, that it is neuer too late to turn vnto God; for if wee repent, he hath promiſed to remit our ſinnes, and to receiue vs into his fauour. Neither are we to imagine that the teſtimony of Gods Spirit in our conſciences is contrary to the teſtimony of the ſame Spirit in the holy Scriptures: and therefore ſeeing theſe ſuggeſtions are flatly repugnant to the Word of God and teſtimony of the Spirit, wee are to aſſure our ſelues that they are the tentations of Satan, either immediatly ſuggeſted by himſelfe, or mediatly by his meſſenger, our corrupt fleſh. Seeing then theſe ſuggeſtions come from Sathan who is our malicious enemy, and a liar from the beginning, yea the father of lies, wee are not to beleeue them, yea rather wee may gather certaine aſſurance that the contrary is true; for he ſpeaketh onely lies, or if at any time hee ſpeake the truth it is to this end that hee may deceiue vs. For example, hee telleth the ſecure carnall man that hee is in the ſtate of grace, and highly in Gods fauor; but vnto the humbled Sinner he ſaith, that hee is a reprobate and ſhall moſt certainly be damned; vnto the worldly ſecure man he ſaith, that God is moſt mercifull, then the which nothing can be more true, but doth not ſpeake this in his conſcience, becauſe he would haue him to taſte thereof, but to lull him aſleepe with this ſweet Syren Song to his eternall perdition. On the other ſide, when he hath to deale with the bruiſed heart and contrite ſpirit, he telleth him of nothing but of Gods exact iuſtice, to the end hee may plunge him into vtter deſperation. In a word, whatſoeuer he ſpeaketh in the conſcience of man, it is either falſe in it ſelfe, or if true in theſi, yet falſe in hypotheſi, if true in the generall, yet falſe in the particular application. As what can be more true then that God is iuſt? and what more falſe, then that he will exerciſe his iuſtice in puniſhing repentant and humbled ſinners? What can bee more true then that God is moſt mercifull? and what more falſe, then that he wil ſhew this his mercy in ſauing thoſe who liue & die in their ſins without repentance? and yet it is moſt vſuall with Satan to affirme both the one and the other, lying in both, becauſe he doth miſapply them. And therefore ſeeing Satan doth neuer ſpeake the truth, or elſe doth falſly apply it in reſpect of our eſtate, let vs acquaint our ſelues with his falſe language; and ſo by hearing his lies, wee may bee the better aſſured of the truth. For example, when he tels vs that our ſinnes are vnpardonable, that it is now too late to turne vnto the Lord, that wee are reprobates and damned wretches, we knowing that our malicious enemy by his lies doth continually ſeeke our deſtruction, are contrariwiſe to aſſure our ſelues, that Gods mercy and Chriſts merits farre exceed our ſins; that now is the acceptable time and day of ſaluation, if wee will turne vnto God, and hearing his voice not harden our hearts, that we are in the ſtate of ſaluation, the veſſels of mercy, and beloued children of God.

Iohn 8.44. Satan either lieth or elſe ſpeaketh the truth to deceiue.

Laſtly, thoſe who are heauy laden with the burthen of their ſinnes, may gather vnto themſelues aſſurance of the forgiueneſſe of them, by the conſideration of Gods mercy extended vnto other repentant Sinners; for there was neuer any from the beginning of the world to this day, were their ſinnes neuer ſo hainous or innumerable, who haue not beene receiued to mercy, and pardoned of our gracious God, whenſoeuer they did vnfainedly turne vnto him. And this may appeare whether wee conſider whole Cities or Nations, or elſe particular men. Of the firſt wee haue a notable example in the Iſraelites which liued in the time of the Iudges, who though they did many times negligently forget the great mercies, and ineſtimable benefits of God ſhewed to their fore-fathers, of which alſo themſelues had beene partakers, though they forſooke the Lord not once or twice but very often, euen then when hee moſt bound them vnto him with multiplying vpon them the benefits of peace and plentie, and though they let the raines looſe vnto all wickedneſſe, yea (which was moſt abominable and odious in the ſight of God,) though they worſhipped and ſerued Baal and Aſteroth and other Idols of the curſed Nations, for which horrible Idolatry, God had caſt out the Nations before them; yet whenſoeuer they turned vnto the Lord, he pardoned their ſinnes, receiuing them into his former loue and fauour, and deliuered them out of the hands of all their enemies. So likewiſe in the time of the Prophet Eſay, to what a notorious height of wickedneſſe were the ſame people growne, as the Lord by his Prophet doth decipher and deſcribe them in the firſt Chapter of that Prophecie? In the ſecond Verſe hee calleth Heauen and Earth to witneſſe their horrible rebellion; in the third Verſe he ſheweth that their vnthankfulneſſe for all his mercies, farre exceeded the vngratitude of bruit beaſts; in the fourth Verſe he exclaimeth out againſt them, calling them a ſinfull Nation, a people laden with iniquity, a ſeed of the wicked, corrupt children, who had forſaken the Lord, and prouoked the holy one of Iſrael to anger. In the fift and ſixt Verſes he ſheweth their hardneſſe of heart and obſtinacie in their rebellion, which was ſo great, that though the Lord ſent afflictions and chaſtiſements vpon them, yet they were no whit reformed but waxed worſe and worſe, and that this was not the caſe of ſome few but of all the whole body of the people, for the whole head was ſicke and the whole heart was heauy, and that from the ſole of the foote to the crowne of the head there was nothing ſound therein, but wounds, and ſwellings, and ſores full of corruption, the cure whereof they vtterly neglected. In the tenth Verſe he matcheth the ſins of both Prince and people, with thoſe crying ſinnes and outragious wickedneſſe of Sodome and Gomorrah, which brought downe from heauen fire and brimſtone to conſume them. In the 11, 12, 13. and 14. Verſes, hee complaineth of their filthy hypocriſie in Gods outward worſhip joyned with the vtter neglect of true godlineſſe, and his ſpirituall ſeruice, which cauſed the Lord to deteſt all their Sacrifices, Sabbaths, and new Moones. So that there could not bee imagined greater wickedneſſe in any people, reſpecting thoſe notable meanes which the Lord continually granted vnto them aboue all other Nations for their owne conuerſion. And therefore who would not haue thought their ſtate to be moſt deſperate, who would not haue looked daily that the Lord ſhould haue conſumed them with fire and brimſtone, or haue cauſed the earth to haue ſwallowed them vp aliue, as it did Corah and his aſſociates? but behold the infinite mercies of our gracious God, euen when they wallowed in this filthy ſinke of all impietie, the Lord calleth them to repentance, and when as they had forſaken him, and fled from him, deſiring nothing leſſe then to make or meddle with him, the Lord calleth vnto them, and he in whoſe power it was euery minute vtterly to deſtroy them, firſt of all deſireth a parly; he who might well abhorre to vouchſafe them his preſence, earneſtly deſireth conference with them, ſaying, Verſe 18. Come now and let vs reaſon together, ſaith the Lord; though your ſinnes were as crimſon, they ſhall be made as white as ſnow; though they were red like ſcarlet, they ſhall be as wooll.

Sect. 6.
example
e Iſrae-in the
of our Sa-Chriſt.

In like manner in the time of our Sauiour Chriſt, the ſame Iewes moſt wickedly rebelled againſt the Lord; for when the Lord in his rich mercy ſent the promiſed Meſſias, to deliuer them out of the hands of their enemies, they would not receiue him; nay, they continually afflicted and perſecuted him, they mocked and reuiled him, they haled him before the iudgement ſeate, and cauſed him to be condemned who came to juſtifie and acquit them; they buffeted and whipped him, and preferred a wicked murderer before him, who preferred their ſaluation before his owne life: laſtly, in moſt ignominious ſort they crucified & killed him. After all which outragious wickedneſſe offered againſt the Lord of life, they continued in their hardneſſe of heart and impenitencie, neuer acknowledging their fault nor deſiring pardon, yea, rather as they had perſecuted the Head, our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt, ſo when they could offer no more wrong vnto him in his owne perſon, they were ready to ſatisfie and glut their malicious rage in perſecuting his poore members. Now what more helliſh impietie was euer committed? What more outragious ſinne was euer heard of? Who would euer haue imagined that there was any hope of pardon for ſuch rebellious bloudy wretches? But O the infinite and bottomleſſe depth of Gods mercy! whileſt their wickedneſſe was freſh in memory, and their hands ſtill imbrewed in the guiltleſſe bloud of this innocent Lambe: when as they continued in their courſe, and ran head-long forward in their wickedneſſe without any ſenſe of ſinne or deſire of pardon; the Lord ſent his Apoſtles vnto them to bring them to repentance, and to aſſure them that their ſins were pardoned. Seeing therefore theſe obtained the remiſſion of their ſinnes, who needs to doubt of pardon who earneſtly deſires it? for did the Lord graciouſly offer forgiueneſſe to ſuch rebellious wretches, and will he not grant it to leſſe offenders, if they deſire it? Did he offer them mercy before they ſought it, and will he deny mercy vnto any, who earneſtly ſeeke and ſue for it? Doth he ſeeke to draw men to repentance and to turne vnto him; and will he not receiue them when they doe repent? Was he ſo exceeding mercifull in times paſt, and ſhall wee now thinke his arme ſhortned or his mercy? Nay aſſuredly he is immutable euer like himſelfe one and the ſame, moſt mercifull, and full of all goodneſſe and compaſſion towards all them that come vnto him. And therefore if wee turne from our ſinnes by vnfained repentance, we may aſſure our ſelues, that they ſhall be pardoned, and wee receiued into Gods loue and fauour.

Acts 2.38.

§. Sect. 7.
Particular examples of Gods mercie.

To theſe examples of whole multitudes, wee may adde the examples of particular Sinners, who haue beene receiued to mercie and obtained pardon, though their ſinnes haue beene many and grieuous. As Matthew, Zacheus, Leui, who were ſinfull Publicans that got their liuings by pilling and polling, oppreſſion and extortion, men ſo notoriouſly wicked, that Publicans and Sinners are joyned together, as though they were Sinners by profeſſion, and therefore as Synonyma, or diuers words of one ſignification they interpret one another. And yet ſuch was the riches of Gods mercy, that euen theſe profeſſed Sinners were conuerted, and receiued remiſſion of all their outragious wickedneſſe. The like may be ſaid of Mary Magdalene, who though ſhee had beene a woman of lewd behauiour and looſe life, though ſhe were poſſeſſed of many Deuils, and commonly noted for an infamous and notorious Sinner, yet vpon her true repentance obtained the remiſſion of her ſinnes: and whileſt ſhe waſhed the feet of our Sauiour Chriſt with her teares, hee purged and clenſed her body and ſoule from the filthy leproſie of ſin with his owne moſt precious bloud; whileſt ſhee wiped them with the haires of her head, hee beautified and adorned her with the rich robe of his righteouſneſſe. Yea, ſhee was receiued into an high degree of fauour with our Sauiour Chriſt, ſo as ſhee had in ſome things the preeminence before his chiefe Apoſtles, for after Chriſts riſing againe he firſt vouchſafed her his preſence, and vſed her as his meſſenger to certifie the reſt of his reſurrection. So likewiſe the Apoſtle Paul before his calling was not only no louer, but a bitter and fierce perſecutor of the truth, and of all the Profeſſours thereof, impriſoning, ſtoning, and cruelly murthering the Saints of God; but behold and admire the wonderfull mercy of God, euen whileſt his imbrued hands were yet red with the bloud of Gods faithfull children, and whileſt his heart was ſo full of burning rage, that he breathed out ſtill threatnings & ſlaughter againſt the Diſciples of the Lord, it pleaſed God wonderfully to conuert him, to aſſure him of the remiſſion of all theſe his horrible ſinnes, and to make him of a bloudy perſecutor, a moſt excellent Preacher of his Goſpell, and of a rauenous deuouring Wolfe, a moſt vigilant & painful ſhepheard. To theſe we might adde the example of the thief, who though he had ſpent his whole life wickedly and prophanely, yet was conuerted at the houre of death, and receiuing the pardon of his ſinnes, was preſently aſſured of euerlaſting happineſſe. But I ſhall not need to heape vp many particulars, only I cannot paſſe that notable example of Manaſſes, one of the moſt outragious Sinners, and prophaneſt wretch that euer liued, as the holy Ghoſt hath deſcribed him in the 21. Chapter of the ſecond Booke of the Kings. For there he affirmeth of him that he was a moſt horrible Idolater, a moſt malicious enemy and cruell perſecutor of Gods Truth, a defiler of Gods holy Temple, a ſacrificer of his owne children vnto Idols, that is, Deuils, a notable Witch, and wicked Sorcerer, a bloudy murtherer of exceeding many the deare Saints and true Prophets of the Lord; one who did not runne head-long alone into all helliſh impietie, but alſo led the people vnder his gouernment out of the way to doe more wickedly then did the Heathen people whom the Lord deſtroyed before the children of Iſrael, and in a word, wrought more abominations and outragious wickedneſſe then the curſed Amorites and Cananites, of whom notwithſtanding the land ſurfeited and ſpued them out for their crying ſinnes. And yet this Manaſſes, this wretch, more like a Deuill incarnate then a Saint of God, repenting him of his ſinnes from the bottome of his heart, was receiued (I cannot ſpeake it without rauiſhing wonder of Gods bottomleſſe and neuer ſufficiently admired mercy) was receiued I ſay, to grace, and obtained the pardon of all his horrible ſinnes, and moſt abominable wickedneſſe. Now all theſe examples are written for our learning, and are recorded by the Holy Ghoſt, to the end that wee may continually laud and prayſe the Lord for his endles and infinite mercies, and gather vnto our ſelues aſſurance, that though our ſinnes were as grieuous and hainous as any of theirs before named, yet if with them wee turne from our ſinnes by vnfained repentance, and goe vnto Chriſt by a liuely faith; wee ſhall alſo with them receiue the pardon of our ſinnes, and be entertained into Gods loue and fauour.

2.Kings 21.

§. Sect. 3. That vnrepentant Sinners haue nothing to doe with the former conſolation.

And thus haue I ſet downe moſt infallible reaſons, vpon which as vpon immoueable firme grounds, the afflicted conſcience may lay the foundation of ſound comfort. Now if any abuſe the Goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt, and gather out of this heauenly doctrine this deuilliſh vſe, that becauſe Gods mercies abound, therefore they will abound in their ſinnes without repentance, and ſtill more and more prouoke the wrath of the Lord againſt them: to theſe I anſwere with the Apoſtle, that their damnation is iuſt, in that they abuſe Gods mercy, as an occaſion to ſinne, which ſhould ſerue as a forcible argument to leade them to repentance: neither let ſuch flatter themſelues with vaine hope of Gods mercy, for deſpiſing the riches of his bountifulneſſe, patience, and long ſuffering, and continuing in their hardneſſe of heart and vnrepentancy, they treaſure vp vnto themſelues wrath againſt the day of wrath, and of the declaration of the iuſt iudgement of God, as the Apoſtle plainly ſpeaketh, Rom. 2.4,5. Neither let them fooliſhly bolſter vp themſelues in their ſinnes, by putting vnder their elbowes the ſweet ſoft pillowes of Gods mercifull promiſes: for as there is none ſo ſpeciall which doe exclude the moſt hainous Sinner that repenteth and beleeueth; ſo is there none ſo general which do extend themſelues to thoſe who continue in their vnrepentancie and vnbeleefe. And therfore though there be no ſinne ſo grieuous, which being repented of and forſaken, will condemne vs if we reſt and relie vpon our Sauiour Chriſt for our ſaluation by a liuely faith; ſo there is no ſinne ſo ſmall and venial which will not plunge vs into the bottome of Hell, if we liue therein without repentance, and doe not deſire to leaue and forſake it. And therefore ſo long as we liue in our ſinnes, and doe not ſeriouſly turne vnto the Lord by vnfained repentance, let vs not in vaine arrogate and miſapply vnto our ſelues the mercy of God, the merits of Chriſt, and the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell, for vnto ſuch appertaine the fearefull threatnings of the Law, as being ſtill the children of wrath, dead in their ſins, and ſubiect to Gods heauy wrath and diſpleaſure.

ANd ſo much concerning thoſe reaſons whereby the humbled and repentant Sinner may gather vnto himſelfe certaine aſſurance of the pardon and remiſſion of his ſinees: of all which conſolations Sathan earneſtly indeauoureth to ſpoile the afflicted ſoule, by ſuggeſting into his mind diuers ſubtill and dangerous tentations. As firſt, that all theſe gracious promiſes and ſweet conſolations of the Goſpell, doe onely belong vnto thoſe who are called, neither to all in this number, for, many are called, but few are choſen; but vnto thoſe alone whoſe calling is effectuall, that is to ſay, who are ſeparated from the world, giuen vnto Chriſt, & Chriſt vnto them, and who are ingrafted into him, & become liuely members of his body. But thou, will hee ſay to the humbled Sinner, art not thus effectually called, and therefore doe not flatter thy ſelfe with the hope of Gods promiſes; for though in themſelues they are moſt certaine, yet they belong not vnto thee, but vnto thoſe alone whoſe calling is effectuall. Againſt which tentation if we would ſtrengthen our ſelues, we muſt examine our calling whether it be effectuall or no; and that both by conſidering the meanes whereby all are effectually called, and alſo the parts of effectuall calling, making application of both vnto our owne particular. For the firſt, wee may thus reaſon againſt our ſpirituall enemy: Whoſoeuer can find the meanes of effectuall calling, powerfully working in himſelfe, and conuerting him vnto God, he is effectually called: but I haue, and doe finde theſe meanes thus working in me, and therefore I do not flatter my ſelfe with vain hope, but am certainly aſſured that I am effectually called and conuerted.

… the means
…ur effectu-
…alling.

The meanes whereby wee are effectually called, are firſt the ſauing and fruitfull hearing of Gods Word, by the miniſtery whereof the Lord calleth and inuiteth vs to come vnto him by vnfained repentance, and to our Sauiour Chriſt by a liuely faith, euen when we are dead in our ſinnes, without any deſire to will, or abilitie to performe any thing that is good; whileſt we are the bond-ſlaues of Satan and meere worldlings, not deſiring nor once thinking vpon the meanes of our ſaluation. And this is done firſt by the preaching of the law, by which are reuealed vnto vs our innumerable hainous ſinnes, and the fearefull puniſhments due vnto them: as that we by our continuall tranſgreſſions are ſubject to the curſe of the law, vnable to performe obedience vnto any of the Commandements, or to make ſatisfaction to Gods juſtice for the leaſt of our ſinnes, and ſo conſequently that wee are obnoxious to Gods wrath, ſubject to thoſe horrible torments prouided for the wicked; and therefore in reſpect of our ſelues, our owne righteouſneſſe, ſatisfaction, or any other meanes of our owne whatſoeuer, in a moſt damnable and deſperate eſtate. Secondly, after the Law hath thus ſhewed vnto vs our ſinnes, and the puniſhments due vnto them, the Lord by the miniſtery of the Goſpell doth reueale vnto vs a plaine way by which we may come out of this miſerable eſtate, and attaine vnto euerlaſting ſaluation, namely, by beleeuing and applying vnto our ſelues Chriſt Ieſus and all his benefits. Thirdly, with this outward miniſtery of the Word the Lord joyneth the inward cooperation of his holy Spirit, whereby he openeth our deafe eares, and maketh vs attentiuely to heare, and as with a precious eie-ſalue inlightens the blind eyes of our vnderſtandings, enabling vs to conceiue and vnderſtand thoſe things which are deliuered vnto vs, both out of the Law, and out of the Goſpell.

The ſecond meanes of our effectuall calling
*Ezech.*11.19.

The ſecond meanes of our effectuall calling is the ſoftening of our hard hearts, when as the Lord taketh away our ſtony hearts, and giueth vs hearts of fleſh, as hee promiſeth, *Ezech.*11.19. and breaketh vp theſe fallow grounds fit in themſelues to bring forth no fruit, but weeds and thiſtles, that ſo they may bee prepared to receiue the ſeed of his Word, and bee made fruitfull in all grace. And thus our ſtubborne and rebellious hearts are ſoftned, when as we particularly apply vnto our ſelues the doctrine of the Law, whereby firſt wee come to the knowing and acknowledging of our ſinnes, originall and actuall. Secondly, our hearts are pricked, and our conſciences wounded by apprehending and applying to our guiltie ſoules the curſe of the law, the anger of God, and thoſe fearefull puniſhments prepared for the wicked. Thirdly, ſeeing this our miſery, and finding no meanes of our owne how we may come out of this wretched eſtate, we are brought to deſpaire of our owne ſtrength, righteouſnes, & ſatisfaction, finding them of no vertue for our juſtification. By all which, being throughly humbled and caſt downe in our ſelues, the Lord by the preaching of the Goſpell doth reueale vnto vs a way how we may eſcape out of this miſerable eſtate, namely, by applying vnto our ſelues Chriſt Ieſus, and all his merits and obedience by a true and liuely faith; which the humbled Sinner ſeeing together with his own wants and miſery by the Law, and perceiuing that our Sauiour Chriſt is ſo rich in merits, that hee can eaſily ſupply all his defects, and ſo gracious and powerfull, that hee can and will free him out of his wretchedneſſe, hee doth plainly diſcerne that he ſtandeth exceedingly in need of Chriſt Ieſus and his righteouſneſſe. After which ſenſe of his owne wants, there is begot in him an earneſt & hungring deſire to be made partaker of Ieſus Chriſt his righteouſneſſe, merits, obedience, and of all thoſe ineſtimable benefits which are purchaſed by them. And laſtly he is mooued to appeale from the ſentence of the Law, to the throne of grace, pleading not his owne righteouſneſſe or ſatisfaction, but Chriſts merits and obedience. The third and laſt meanes of our effectuall calling, is a true and liuely faith, whereby we apprehend Chriſt Ieſus and all his benefits, giuen and applied vnto vs by Gods Spirit, reſting vpon him alone for our juſtification and ſaluation.

The third meanes.

§. Sect. 4. That all who find the former meanes powerfull in them are effectually called.

And theſe are the meanes of our effectuall calling, which whoſoeuer haue found powerfully working in themſelues for their conuerſion after the manner before ſpoken of, they may moſt certainly aſſure themſelues that they are effectually called, and are already partakers of Ieſus Chriſt and all his benefits. If therefore the Lord whileſt wee did lie frozen in the dregs of our ſins, without all deſire of grace or meanes to eſcape out of our miſery, hath vouchſafed vnto vs the miniſtery of his holy Word, if by the Law he hath reuealed our ſinnes vnto vs, and the puniſhments due vnto them; and if by the Goſpell he hath ſhewed vs the way how we may come out of this miſery, if by the inward cooperation of his holy Spirit he hath opened our deafe eares, and with this precious eye-ſalue hath anointed the blind eyes of our vnderſtandings, ſo that wee haue attentiuely heard, and in ſome meaſure vnderſtood thoſe principles of our Chriſtian Religion, which haue in the miniſtery of the Word beene deliuered vnto vs; if our hearts haue beene ſoftned and pierced, and our conſciences wounded with the ſight and ſenſe of our ſins; if deſpairing in our owne ſtrength, righteouſneſſe and all other meanes of our owne, we haue gone out of our ſelues, and reſted and relied vpon Chriſt Ieſus alone for our juſtification and ſaluation, then are wee without all doubt effectually called, and are in the number of Gods Church and people, to whom the promiſes of grace doe appertaine.

§. Sect. 5. That we may know that wee are effectually called by conſidering the ſeuerall parts thereof.

Iohn 15.19.

Secondly, wee may come to the knowledge of our effectuall calling, by conſidering the ſeuerall parts thereof. The firſt is our ſelection and ſeparation out of the corrupt maſſe of mankind, whereby it commeth to paſſe, that though wee be in the world, yet we are not of the world, and therefore wee neither loue it, nor the world vs; and this our Sauiour ſheweth, Iohn 15.19. If (ſaith he) yee were of the world, the world would loue his owne, but becauſe yee are not of the world, but I haue choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. And the Apoſtle Iohn affirmeth, that if any man loue the world, the loue of the Father is not in him, 1. Iohn 2.15. and the Apoſtle Iames telleth vs, that the amitie of the world is enmitie with God, and therefore whoſoeuer will be a friend of the world maketh himſelfe the enemy of God. If therefore our loue and affections be weaned in ſome good meaſure from the world, and fixt on ſpirituall and heauenly things; if wee ceaſe to be Citizens of the World, and begin to haue our conuerſation in heauen, from whence wee looke for a Sauiour euen the Lord Ieſus Chriſt; and if the world begin to hate and ſcorne vs, then may wee be aſſured that wee are ſeuered from the world, and entertained into Gods Church and Family.

Phil. 3.29.

§. Sect. 6. Satans tentation anſwered, whereby hee perſwadeth the Chriſtia that he lou the world, the world hi

But here the tempter will object, that by this it plainly appeareth that wee are not yet effectually called nor ſeparated from the World, becauſe we ſtill loue the world, affecting and deſiring the vaine pleaſures, honours, and riches thereof, yea and alſo loue thoſe who are meere worldlings; and on the other ſide the world alſo loueth vs, giuing vs good countenance, and performing other duties vnto vs. For the anſwering of which ſuggeſtion we muſt diſtinguiſh betweene our ſelues and our ſelues; for whileſt we continue in this life wee are partly fleſh, and partly ſpirit, and as there is great enmitie betweene the ſpirit and the world, ſo is there great amitie betweene the world and the fleſh. So farre forth therefore as wee are ſtill carnall and corrupt fleſh the world loueth vs, but as much as is ſpirituall and regenerate, ſo much the world hateth and abhorreth. Moreouer, we may generally be conſidered as men, or more ſpecially as wee are Chriſtian men; in the firſt reſpect, the world, that is, wicked worldlings, may loue vs for ſome naturall parts or meere morall vertues, or elſe in common humanitie as members of the ſame ciuill or politicke bodie: but as we are Chriſtians who haue giuen our names vnto God, and deuoted our ſelues to his worſhip and ſeruice, the world hateth vs and our profeſſion, Religion, and all the fruits and exerciſes of ſanctification and holineſſe, ſo that though in other naturall, worldly, and meere ciuill reſpects it loueth vs, yet in regard of our regeneration and the fruits thereof it cannot indure vs, and our company and conuerſation is exceeding tedious, irkeſome and vnpleaſant. So on the other ſide whereas Satan objecteth that we loue the world, that is, carnall worldly men, we may anſwere, that euen as wee are regenerate, it is lawfull to loue them in the ſame reſpects which they loue vs, namely, as they are men and the excellent creatures of God, as they are indued with excellent naturall gifts or morall vertues, as they are of the ſame ciuill bodie or kinred, or as they haue beene vſed of God as his inſtruments for the beſtowing of any his benefits vpon vs: in which reſpects louing them, we may notwithſtanding with a true zeale hate and abhorre their vices, their carnall worldlineſſe, profane irreligion, and wicked conuerſation. Neither will Religion make vs to lay aſide all humanitie, & transforme vs into ſome brutiſh, or rather deuilliſh Timon who was a hater of men: For euen our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe who was wholly exempted from ſin, notwithſtanding loued the worldly young man for ſome good things he ſaw in him, though he were not religious, yea though he were ſo carnall, that he preferred his vaine and vncertaine riches before the ſaluation of his ſoule, as appeareth, Marke 10.21,22. So alſo hee vſed all humanitie and ciuill conuerſation, euen amongſt the Publicans and Sinners, that hee might haue the better opportunitie of conuerting all thoſe who belonged to Gods election. And therefore wee need not feare to follow Chriſts example, ſo it be with the ſame holy affection. For we alſo muſt indeuour to gaine thoſe vnto Chriſt who are without, and by our holy conuerſation giue them occaſion of glorifying God in the day of their viſitation, as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, 1.Pet.2.12. which we can neuer doe by hatred, rough ſeueritie, and Cynicall inhumanitie, but with louing courteſie, vpright behauiour, gentle admonitions and charitable reprehenſions. But if through our corruption wee giue Sathan occaſion further to obiect, that vnder theſe pretences we ſet our hearts too much vpon the world, louing worldlings more then thoſe who are of the houſhold of faith, and more delighting in their vaine conuerſation for outward reſpects, then in the company of the faithfull, if not alwayes yet oftentimes; we are to anſwer, that though theſe be ſinnes in vs, and notable ſignes of our great corruption, yet are they no ſtrong arguments, that wee are not yet effectually called, or truly ſeuered from the world, for as much as we are not wholly ſeparated from the world, but only ſo much of vs as is ſpirituall and regenerate; ſo that it is no maruell if the fleſh and vnregenerate part ſtill loue the world, becauſe it is ſtill worldly; but if in the inner man wee hate this loue, and ſtriue to bridle, yea to mortifie it, if we are truly ſorry and diſpleaſed with our ſelues for this as for other ſinnes and labour to reforme it, we may be aſſured that the Spirit of God is in vs, which hath ſeuered vs from the world, and ioyned vs to the body of Ieſus Chriſt.

The like alſo may be anſwered concerning the loue of worldly things, honours, riches and pleaſures; we may loue them as they are the bleſſings of God, and deſire them ſo far forth as they are temporall benefits, and furtherances, or at leaſt no hinderances in the workes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, wee may ſo loue them as that in the meane time our loue be ſubordinate to the loue of God, our brethren and ſpirituall things. But if our loue paſſe theſe limits, it is corrupt and carnall, yet no vndoubted argument to prooue that wee are not effectually called, if wee are diſpleaſed with it, and labour againſt it. And though oftentimes wee are ouercome therewith through the violence of our carnall affections and corruptions of the fleſh, yet if wee hate this ſinne in the inner man, if wee entertaine it through violence, and not with affection and delight, if it dwell in vs, but doe not raigne in vs, if but ſometimes it get the vpper hand and do not continually ouerrule vs, it is no more we that doe it but ſinne that dwelleth in vs, that is, the old man and corrupt fleſh, which whileſt wee liue in this life will beare ſome ſway in vs.

That the world loueth them not whom Satan hateth.

Laſtly, when as Sathan aſſaulteth the poore Chriſtian his with tentations, perſwading him that he is not yet called nor ſeparated from the wicked world, becauſe it loueth him, he may well ſuſpect his argument of falſhood, for Sathan doth not hate thoſe whom the world loueth; but by his continuall aſſaulting of the weake Chriſtian, & his daily labouring to bring him through the violence of his tentations to vtter deſtruction, it manifeſtly appeareth that Satan like a mortall enemy deadly hateth him; and therefore it is not likely that he is beloued of the world though it may for a time fawne vpon him, that by pretending loue & friendſhip, it may work him the greater miſchiefe.

§. Sect. 8.
Of the ſecond part of our effectual calling.

The ſecond part of our effectuall calling is the mutuall donation of God the Father, whereby hee hath giuen Chriſt Ieſus vnto vs to be our Sauiour and Redeemer, and vs vnto Chriſt to be ſaued and redeemed, by which alſo we may prooue that wee are effectually called. For this gift is mutuall and reciprocall, and therefore the one doth cleerly proue the other, ſo that if wee can haue any aſſurance that Chriſt is giuen vnto vs, then may wee alſo bee aſſured that wee are giuen vnto Chriſt: & contrariwiſe, if we haue any aſſurance that we are giuē vnto Chriſt, then may wee be alſo aſſured, that Chriſt is giuen vnto vs: and conſequently that we are effectually called, for this mutuall donation is one part thereof. Now we may be aſſured that Chriſt is giuen vnto vs, if wee beleeue in him, reſting vpon him alone for our iuſtification and ſaluation, as appeareth, Iohn 3.16. So God loued the world that hee hath giuen his onely begotten Sonne, that as many as beleeue in him ſhould not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life. And ſo alſo we may be aſſured that we are giuen vnto Chriſt, if wee heare his voice and follow him, as himſelfe ſpeaketh, Iohn 10.27. and ſubmit our ſelues to be led and gouerned uerned by his Spirit, for as many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the ſonnes of God, and whoſoeuer are ſonnes, are heires of God, and heires annexed with Chriſt: As it is *Rom.*8.14,16. But here Satan will obiect, that thoſe who are giuen vnto Chriſt haue kept his word, as himſelfe alſo affirmeth, Iohn 17.6. How therefore, will he ſay, canſt thou bee aſſured that thou art one of thoſe who are giuen vnto him, ſeeing thou keepeſt it not, but continually tranſgreſſeſt his Commandements? To which we muſt anſwere, that the Word of Chriſt is his Goſpell, wherein he promiſeth euerlaſting life to all that beleeue in him, and bring forth the fruits of their faith in vnfained repentance, as it appeareth, Iohn 5.38. where hee thus ſpeaketh to the vnbeleeuing Iewes: And his word (ſaith he) haue yee not abiding in you: for whom hee hath ſent, him yee beleeue not; whereby it is manifeſt, if Chriſts reaſoning be of ſound conſequence, that thoſe haue his word abiding in them who beleeue in him, whom God hath ſent euen our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt. So that wee keepe the word of our Sauiour when wee beleeue in him, reſting and relying vpon him alone for our ſaluation, and truly repent vs of our ſinnes, ſorrowing and grieuing that by them wee haue offended and diſpleaſed our louing God and mercifull Father, hating our ſinnes becauſe they are ſins, purpoſing and labouring to forſake them, and indeuouring according to the meaſure of ſtrength and grace receiued, to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and newneſſe of life. And therefore if wee can find in our ſelues this faith, and this repentance, we may vndoubtedly be aſſured notwithſtanding our manifold falls and great corruptions, that wee haue kept the word of Chriſt, and therefore are giuen vnto him of the Father; and conſequently, that we are effectually called, and ſhall be eternally glorified. For it is the will of the Father, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt ſhould haue euerlaſting life, as our Sauiour teſtifieth, Iohn 6.40. As for our corruptions they ſhall be waſhed away with the bloud of Chriſt, and our imperfections ſhall be couered with the rich robe of his perfect righteouſneſſe, ſo that in him wee ſhall appeare perfect before Gods iudgement ſeate, and there bee accepted as iuſt and righteous.

§. Sect. 9.
Of the third part of our effectuall calling.

The third part of our effectuall calling is our vnion and communion with Chriſt, whereby he becommeth our Head, and wee his members, of which whoſoeuer can be aſſured, they need not to make any queſtion of their effectuall calling; but all thoſe who are indued with faith, are vnited vnto Chriſt, for it is a propertie thereof to apply vnto our ſelues Chriſt and all his benefits, it is the hand of the ſoule whereby we lay hold vpon Chriſt, it is the mouth of the ſoule whereby wee ſpiritually feed vpon him, and hee that eateth his fleſh, and drinketh his bloud dwelleth in Chriſt, and Chriſt in him, as himſelfe ſpeaketh, Iohn 6.56. So alſo whoſoeuer are indued with Gods Spirit, and haue ſubmitted themſelues to be led and gouerned thereby, they are ingrafted in the body of Chriſt, for the Spirit is the band of this vnion, and therefore if we can diſcerne the Spirit of God in vs by any of the fruits thereof, wee may be aſſured that we are the members of Chriſt, and conſequently effectually called. Laſtly, wee may be aſſured that wee are ingrafted in the body of Chriſt by our workes of ſanctification, either appertaining to Gods ſeruice, or Chriſtian righteouſneſſe towards our Neighbour; for it is impoſſible that wee ſhould bring forth any ripe Grapes of godlineſſe, if we were not ingrafted in the true Vine Ieſus Chriſt, as himſelfe affirmeth, Iohn 15.4. Abide in mee and I in you: as the branch cannot beare fruit of it ſelfe, except it abide in the Vine, no more can yee, except ye abide in me. 5. I am the Vine, yee are the branches, hee that abideth in me, and I in him, the ſame bringeth forth much fruits, for without me yee can doe nothing. And therefore if we make conſcience of our wayes, and exerciſe our ſelues in ſome meaſure, in thoſe good workes which the Lord hath commanded, in obedience to his will, and to this end, that his Name may be glorified, we may aſſure our ſelues that we are ingrafted into the true Vine Chriſt Ieſus, for of our ſelues wee are altogether vnfruitfull and could doe nothing.

Iohn 6.56.

*Gal.*5.22.

Iohn 15.4,5.

But here Satan will obiect, that this argument maketh againſt our ſelues, for we thereby make it manifeſt that wee are not ingrafted into Chriſt, becauſe our fruits of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe are commonly exceeding ſmall, and ſometimes none at all, whereas the liuely branches of this Vine are exceeding fruitfull, and abundant in good workes. To which we are to anſwere, that all the branches of the Vine doe not bring forth fruits in like abundance, but ſome more and ſome leſſe; and yet notwithſtanding this doth not prooue that theſe are not true branches as well as the other, although they receiue leſſe ſap and liuely iuice from the roote and ſtocke: and ſo alſo it is in this myſticall Vine; if the branches be not altogether barren and fruitleſſe, though their fruits bee not in ſo great abundance, yet if they be right and of the ſame nature with the other they may aſſure themſelues that they alſo are liuely branches of the true Vine Ieſus Chriſt. Neither is the quantitie and number of our fruits ſo much in this regard to be reſpected; for if according to the quantitie of ſap and good iuice which wee receiue from our root we bring forth fruit, that is, if according to that that meaſure of grace and gifts of Gods holy Spirit, which our Sauiour Chriſt hath beſtowed vpon vs, wee ſpend our liues in Gods ſeruice, which himſelfe hath commanded, to the end that we may glorifie his holy Name, wee may aſſure our ſelues that wee are true branches of this Vine, which our Sauiour wil purge & prune that we may bring forth more fruits, as he hath promiſed, *Ioh.*15.2. Moreouer, whereas Satan obiecteth, that wee are not branches of this Vine, becauſe at ſometimes wee can ſhew no fruits; wee are to anſwere, that as the earthly Vine hath not alwayes Grapes, no not ſo much as leaues vpon it, and yet notwithſtanding it liueth, receiuing nouriſhment from the root, & bringeth forth fruit in due time and ſeaſon: ſo the branches of this myſticall Vine are ſometime without the fruits of good workes, yea, haue not ſo much to be ſeene vpon them as the faire greene leaues of an outward profeſſion, as it is moſt vſuall when as they are throughly nipped with the colde winter of tentations, and haue all their beauty blaſted and blowne away with the boyſterous blaſts of Sathans fierce encounters; and yet at the ſame time they receiue the ſap, juice, and vertue of Gods Spirit from their roote Ieſus Chriſt, by which they ſeeming dead, do liue and receiue nouriſhment; vntill at Gods good pleaſure the comfortable beames of his loue and fauour doe ſhine vpon them, with which their frozen hearts being throughly warmed, doe againe bring forth not only the leaues of profeſſion, but alſo the ripe fruits of godlineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and therefore though preſently in ſuch caſes wee haue no fruits to ſhew, yet let not Satan perſwade vs that we are not true branches of this vine: for if we can cal to mind, that euer in former times wee haue brought forth any right and kindly fruits of ſanctification and true godlineſſe, wee are true branches of the Vine Chriſt, which hee will lop and prune, and againe make fruitfull; for out of him wee could neuer haue brought forth ſuch fruits: and thoſe who are once ingrafted into him can neuer poſſibly be plucked away by Satan, the World, or all the powers of Hell, though (as I ſaid) they may for a time bee nipped and ſhreudly weather-beaten.

CHAP. XL.

Satans tentations obiecting to the weake Christian vnrepentancie, and hardneſſe of heart, anſwered.

ANd ſo much for anſwering that generall tentation of Sathan, whereby he laboureth to rob and depriue the poore humbled Sinner of all the hope and comfort which hee might reape in applying vnto himſelfe the gracious promiſes and ſweet comforts contained in the Goſpell, by perſwading him that he is not effectually called. Wherewith if he cannot preuaile, he deſcendeth from the generall to the particulars, and hauing as it were a farre off diſcharged his ſhot of dangerous tentations, without inflicting deſired hurt and deſtruction, he approcheth neerer and fighteth againſt the poore Chriſtian with handie blowes, that thereby hee may beate him downe into deepe deſperation. Let it be granted, will he ſay, that thou art called, yet it followeth not hereof that thou art elected and ſhalt be ſaued; for Chriſt Ieſus himſelfe hath ſaid, that many are called, but few are choſen, and why mayeſt not thou be in the greater number? neither is the calling thou ſpeakeſt of ſufficient to make a Chriſtian, vnleſſe it be accompanied with vnfained repentance and a liuely faith. And the promiſes of the Goſpell, wherein thou vainly hopeſt, are not made vnto all thoſe who are called, but vnto thoſe who are endued with a true juſtifying faith, which is alwayes ioyned with the fruit thereof, vnfained repentance. But if thou examine thy ſelfe aright, thou ſhalt find that both theſe are wanting in thee: for to beginne firſt with repentance which is moſt ſenſible, and to be diſcerned with greateſt eaſe, if thou ſearch thine heart without any affectionate partialitie or vaine conceit, thou ſhalt find that thou art altogether deſtitute thereof. For is not thy heart ſo obſtinately hard, and ſo ſtubbornly rebellious that thou canſt not bewaile thy ſinnes with any vnfained ſorrow, nor ſcarce with much ſtraining force one teare, whereas for any worldly loſſe, or temporary affliction, which indeed toucheth thee with true griefe, thou canſt without any difficultie weep more bitterly then the Apoſtle Peter, and ſhed as many teares as Marie Magdalene. Beſides, whereas thoſe who repent, turne from their ſinnes with a true and vnreconcileable hatred of them, and ſpend the reſt of their life that remaineth, in the ſeruice of God; whereas they haue their hard ſtonie hearts mollified and turned into hearts of fleſh, which are flexible vnto holy obedience, and full of alacritie and cheerefulneſſe in performing ſeruice to God, thou through thy hardneſſe and heart that cannot repent liueſt ſtil in thy ſins, and ſpendeſt a great part of thy time in vanitie and wordly delights; thy heart as hard as the Adamant is ready ſooner to breake then to bow to Gods will; and when thou forceſt thy ſelfe hereunto, thou canſt not but diſcerne the blindneſſe of thy vnderſtanding in ſpirituall things, which is ſo ſharpe and Eagle-ſighted in matters concerning the World, thy ſpirits ſo dull and blockiſh, and thine affections ſo glutted and tired in performing ſeruice vnto God, which are ſo full of life and alacritie in following worldly vanities. And therfore it is impoſſible that thou ſhouldeſt haue any true repentance for how can repentance & hardnes of hart, a hart of fleſh and an heart of ſtone be at once in thee?

§. Sect. 2. For the anſwering that former tentation, two extreames to be auoided.

Two ſorts of hardneſſe of heart. 1. That which is inſenſible.

The inſenſible hardneſſe of heart is of two ſorts. The firſt ioyned with obſtinacy.

Eſay 28.1

Zach.7.11.

Againſt which tentation of Satan, if wee would arme our ſelues, it behoooueth vs to be very carefull that we doe not runne into two dangerous extreames; the one whereof is ſecurely to flatter our ſelues with an opinion of our good eſtate, when as in truth, it is moſt dangerous and damnable: the other, that we doe not too much ſuffer out ſelues to be dejected and caſt downe, though we haue not as yet attained to ſo great perfection as our heart deſireth. And to this purpoſe, wee are to know, that hardneſſe of heart is of two ſorts; the firſt is of them, who being moſt hard-hearted, notwithſtanding do not feele nor perceiue it: the other, of thoſe who feeling their hardneſſe of heart are grieued therewith, and deſire to haue it mollified, ſoftened, and euen reſolued into teares of vnfained repentance. The firſt ſort is damnable, or at leaſt moſt dangerous; for it lulleth vs aſleepe in carnall ſecuritie, it taketh away all ſenſe of ſinne, and conſequently all ſorrow whereby we ſhould bewaile it; it ſeareth and brawneth the conſcience, couering it as it were on all ſides with a thicke hard skin, which will neuer or moſt hardly bee pierced, either by Gods juſtice and threatnings to cauſe vs to feare leſt wee incurre his wrathfull diſpleaſure, or by his mercies and gracious promiſes to mooue vs to loue him, and to bring forth the fruits of our loue in acceptable obedience; it repelleth all the good motions of Gods Spirit, and filleth the ſoule with ſuch drowſie dulnes and blockiſh deadneſſe, that it is altogether vnfit to performe any ſeruice vnto God, and moſt apt to entertaine any of Satans tentations. And this inſenſible hardneſſe of heart which is the ſpirituall lethargy of the ſoule, is of two kinds; the firſt is joyned with wilfull obſtinacie and affected rebellion, whereby men aduiſedly and contemptuouſly withſtand the outward miniſtery of the Word, and the inward motions of Gods Spirit, with all other meanes which might moue and inuite them to ſerious repentance: an example whereof wee haue in Pharaoh, who hardned his heart againſt the Lord, oppoſing himſelfe againſt his ambaſſage deliuered vnto him by Moſes, and confirmed by ſo many miracles, aud alſo obſtinately and with an high hand of rebellion checked and quenched the good motions of Gods Spirit, whereby hee was ſometimes moued to confeſſe his ſinne, and to acknowledge the Lord righteous. As alſo in Saul, who againſt his conſcience perſecuted Dauid, becauſe the Lord loued and had made choice of him to ſucceed in his place: and howſoeuer ſometimes by occaſion of ſome notable fruit of Dauids innocencie hee was moued to condemne himſelfe and to juſtifie him, yet preſently he hardned his heart again and raged againſt him with wonted malice. And thus likewiſe were thoſe Iſraelites hardened and frozen ſtiffe in the dregs of their ſinnes, of whom the Prophet Eſay ſpeaketh, Eſay 28.15. Yee haue ſaid (ſaith he) we haue made a couenant with death, and with hell we are at agreement: though a ſcourge runne ouer and paſſe thorow, it ſhall not come at vs: for wee haue made falſhood our refuge, and vnder vanitie are we hid. And thoſe alſo of whom the Prophet Zachary complaineth, Zach. 7.11. Who (obſtinately) refuſed to hearken, and pulled away the ſhoulder and ſtopped their eares that they ſhould not heare, yea, and made their hearts as an Adamant ſtone, leſt they ſhould heare the Law and the words which the Lord of hoſts ſent in his Spirit by the miniſtery of the Prophets. And ſo alſo many of the Scribes and Phariſies hardened their hearts againſt our Sauiour Chriſt, obſtinately contemning the gracious and powerfull words, which proceeded out of his mouth, and quenched the good motions of Gods Spirit, occaſioned by his wonderfull miracles & admirable workes, which none could performe, but hee who was the very true and only begotten Sonne of God. Now wee are to know that this hardneſſe of heart is moſt damnable, and whoſoeuer are poſſeſſed therewith, they can neuer eſcape Gods fearefull judgements and euerlaſting condemnation in the life to come.

§. Se
neſſe of which p deth fro carele
leſneſ

The other kind of inſenſible hardneſſe of heart proceedeth from carefeſſe retchleſneſſe and carnall worldlineſſe, when as men hauing their vnderſtandings blinded, doe not perceiue their filthy corruptions, prophane wickedneſſe, and extreame miſery, nor feele the burthen of their ſinnes though they bee growne to an intolerable waight, but flatter themſelues with a vain opinion of their good eſtate in themſelues, without any other help, as though they needed not the meanes appointed of God for their conuerſion, which others vſe. And therefore they neglect the miniſtery of the Word, as knowing and practiſing enough already; or if they heare it, they remoue far from them the threatnings of the Law denounced againſt impenitent Sinners, as not appertaining to them, and check all the good motions of Gods Spirit, which are commonly joyned with the publike miniſtery of the Word, and the priuate admonitions of godly men, or with the example of Gods judgement on others, or with the ſenſe of their owne afflictions; and ſo returne to their old prophaneneſſe, and lie wallowing in the dregs of their ſinnes without any remorſe or hatred of euill, or any true loue of that which is good; vntill at length their hearts are ſo hardned and their conſciences ſo ſeared with cuſtomable ſinning, and by often repelling and beating backe the meanes of their conuerſion, the outward miniſtery of the Word, and the inward motions of Gods Spirit, that they proceed from careleſſe ſenſeleſneſſe, and negligent ſecuritie, to wilfull prophaneneſſe and obſtinate rebellion. And this hardneſſe of heart is moſt commonly incident vnto worldlings, and is nothing elſe but carnall ſecuritie, whereby they reſt contented with their miſerable and wretched eſtate, neither louing that which is good, nor hating that which is euill, nor vſing any meanes to better themſelues, becauſe they either thinke they are good enough, or at leaſt neuer enter into conſideration of their eſtate, nor come to the ſenſe and feeling of their euill corruptions, in which they are wholly plunged and ouer-whelmed. Yea ſometimes and in ſome meaſure, this befalleth the deare children of God through their careleſſe negligence, and want of the due examination of themſelues (as may appeare in the example of Dauid, who many moneths together liued in his ſinne of adultery and murther, without any ſerious and ſound repentance, till it pleaſed the Lord to rouze him out of this ſpirituall lethargie by the miniſtery of the Prophet Nathan) but yet the Lord doth not finally leaue them, but by the preaching of the Word, godly admonitions and reprehenſions, & alſo with the inward motions and ſecret operation of his holy Spirit, he pulleth them out of this wretched eſtate, giuing vnto them a ſight and feeling of their ſinnes, and mollifying their hard hearts, working in them an hatred and deteſtation of their ſinnes, and an earneſt deſire to be vnburthened of them. But howſoeuer this may befall the children of God, yet this can be no encouragement vnto any to continue ſtill in this wretched caſe: for howſoeuer they may be indeed the children of God, yet aſſuredly they can neuer haue any true aſſurance in their conſciences that they are his children and in his fauour, till their hearts bee mollified and reſolued into the teares of vnfained repentance, at leaſt in ſome meaſure. And therefore let euery one beware of carnall ſecurity, and of hardening their hearts through careleſſe negligence, and by committing ſins againſt their knowledge and conſcience, let them beware of reſiſting the Miniſtery of the Word, and of quenching the good motions of Gods Spirit: for though the conſcience at the firſt be moſt tender, and the heart ſo ſoft, that euery ſinne will pricke and pierce it, and euery gentle admonition will make it relent, yet in continuance of time through cuſtomable ſinning, and reſiſting the meanes of our conuerſion and ſaluation, the conſcience is ſo ſeared, that it becommeth ſenſeleſſe, though it be oppreſſed and ſurcharged with a heauy maſſe of outragious wickedneſſe, and the heart groweth to ſuch Adamantine hardneſ, that the thundring Canon threatnings of the Law, and of Gods fearefull and imminent judgements cannot batter or bruiſe it, nor make any breach, whereby true repentance may enter. In which reſpect the conſcience is not vnfitly compared to the eye, which of all other parts of mans body is moſt tender and impatient of the lighteſt touch, ſo that the ſmalleſt mote vexeth it, & the leaſt pricke cauſeth incredible torment: but if once it be affected with a diſeaſe called of Oculiſts, ſcirhoſis oculi, which ouercouereth it with a hard fleſhie skin, it becommeth of all other parts moſt inſenſible: ſo the conſcience of man is moſt tender of all other parts, and at the firſt, ſmall ſinnes vexe and torment it, but if through cuſtome in ſinning it bee ouerſpread with a Callum or thicke skin, it becommeth inſenſible, and nothing will wound it.

CHAP. XLI.

Of that hardnes of heart which is ioyned with ſenſe and feeling thereof.

§. Sect. 1. Of hardneſſe of heart, ioyned with ſenſe and feeling thereof.

THe ſecond ſort of hardnes of heart, is that which is ioyned with ſenſe and feeling, when as wee ſee and with ſorrow feele our dulnes and blockiſhneſſe in Gods ſeruice, our obdurate inflexibleneſſe to holy obedience, our hardneſſe of heart, which at the hearing either of the terrible threatnings of the Law, or ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell, cannot relent nor reſolue it ſelfe into the teares of vnfained repentance. And this hardneſſe of heart is commonly incident vnto Gods deare children, being at the ſame time in the ſtate of grace, and is a part of that inbred corruption and fleſhly old man which before our calling wholly poſſeſſeth and ouer-ruleth vs, and after alſo beareth ſome ſway in vs, euen when we are regenerate, till with all our other corruptions wee lay this aſide alſo by death. And this appeareth in the example of the Prophet Dauid, who deſireth the Lord to create in him a cleane heart, and to renew a right ſpirit within him, Pſalm. 51.10. In which words he implieth that his hardneſſe of heart was ſo great, and the corruption thereof ſo abominable, that it was euen paſt mending, and therefore hee doth not pray the Lord to purge and reforme his old heart, but to create a new one, and to take quite away his ſtony heart, and to beſtow vpon him a heart of fleſh. As though his heart were like a building exceeding ruinous which could no longer bee repaired, vnleſſe it were raced downe euen to the foundation, and all anew built vp againe. So, whereas hee prayeth

*Pſal.*51.10.

*Ezech.*11.19.

the Lord to renew his Spirit in him, hee giueth vs to vnderſtand, that hee hath loſt the feeling of the Spirit of adoption, crying in his heart Abba Father; and that there was in him ſuch an intermiſſion and ſurceaſe of the actions and fruits thereof, that it ſeemed vtterly quenched and departed from him. So elſe-where hee prayeth vnto the Lord to quicken him according to his louing kindneſſe, that hee might keepe the teſtimonies of his mouth: wherein he intimateth his drowſineſſe and deadneſſe in Gods Seruice. The Prophet Eſay likewiſe in the behalfe of himſelfe and the people complaineth thus: Eſay 63.17. O Lord why haſt thou made vs to erre from thy wayes, and hardened our heart from thy feare? By all which it appeareth that euen the deare children of God do oftentimes ſee and feele to their great griefe, their hardneſſe of heart, which is joyned with exceeding dulnes and drowſines in Gods Seruice. Yea in truth this kind of hardneſſe of heart is incident vnto them alone. For whileſt men are worldly and carnall, though their hearts are moſt hard and obdurate, yet they doe not diſcerne it, neither are they any whit diſpleaſed with their eſtate, but fondly flatter themſelues, imagining that they are in exceeding good caſe and very deuout in Gods Seruice; which indeed (as they performe it) is meerly formall, cuſtomable rather then conſcionable, in ſhew and externall, but not in ſpirit and truth; but when the Lord by the miniſtery of his Word made effectuall by the inward operation of his holy Spirit, doth pull off the thicke skin of carnall ſecuritie from off their hearts, and cauſeth the ſcales of ignorance to fall from their eyes, then and not before doe they plainly diſcerne and ſenſibly feele that huge maſſe of inbred corruption, their dulneſſe and drowſineſſe in Gods Seruice, their hardneſſe of heart and impenitency, and now they are much vexed and grieued with them, which in former times neuer troubled them. And therefore let not ſuch be diſmayed, nor debarre their ſoules of that conſolation which of right belongeth to them; for fleſh and bloud hath not reuealed this their corruption, hardneſſe of heart, dulneſſe and deadneſſe in Gods Seruice, but the good Spirit of God, which hath begun already to worke in them ſhewing them their corruptions, and mouing them to an vnfained diſlike of them, and therefore they may aſſure themſelues, that he who hath begun this good worke in them, will alſo bring it in his good time to perfection; Only (as the Pſalmiſt exhorteth) Let them tarrie the Lords leiſure, waite vpon and truſt in him, and he ſhall comfort their hearts.

§. Sect. 2.
Two ſorts of ſenſible hardneſſe of heart. The firſt ioyned with th vſe of the means wh by it may b ſoftned.

Now this ſenſible or diſcerned hardneſſe of heart is alſo of two ſorts: the firſt is of them who carefully vſe all good meanes and endeuour with all diligence to better their eſtate, which they ſee to be moſt miſerable, and to mollifie their hard hearts, and to attaine vnto heartie and vnfained repentance. Which who ſo doth, he may aſſure himſelfe that hee is the childe of God and in his loue and fauor; for earneſtly to deſire repentance, and carefully to vſe the meanes whereby we may attaine thereunto; to be diſpleaſed with our hardneſſe of heart, and to labour that it may be mollified; to be ſorry that wee can be no more ſorry, and to be diſpleaſed with our ſelues, becauſe we can no more be diſpleaſed with our ſinnes, is very acceptable in the ſight of God, though wee ſee but a little progreſſe in godlineſſe, and but a ſmall increaſe of repentance which we deſire in great meaſure: for the Lord eſteemeth the will for the deed, and the affection for the action, and wee may aſſure our ſelues that if on our part wee bee not wanting in the vſe of the meanes, the Lord will not be wanting on his part to ſupply our wants, and to ſatisfie all our godly deſires. Of this hardneſſe of heart, which very often befalleth the deareſt of Gods children, we haue many examples. The Prophet Dauid thus complaineth, Pſal. 77.2. In the day of my trouble I ſought the Lord, my ſore ranne and ceaſed not in the night, my ſoule refuſed comfort. 3. I did thinke vpon God and was troubled, I prayed, and my ſpirit was full of anguiſh. 4. Thou keepeſt mine eyes waking; I was aſtonied and could not ſpeake. So the Church complaineth thus, Cant. 3.1. In my bed I ſought him by night whom my ſoule loued: I ſought him, but I found him not. And Chap. 5. Verſe 6. I opened to my welbeloued, but my welbeloued was gone and paſt: mine heart was gone when he did ſpeake; I ſought him, but I could not find him; I called him, but he anſwered mee not. Whereby it is manifeſt, that euen the deare Saints of God are oftentimes deſtitute of all comfort and void of all feeling of Gods fauour, and of the powerfull working of the graces of his holy Spirit which they haue receiued, though they vſe the meanes appointed of God for the ſtirring vp and increaſing of grace in them; which commeth to paſſe, by reaſon of their hardneſſe of heart, and drowſie dulneſſe of Spirit in theſe ſpirituall exerciſes. And hence it is that many of Gods children doe grieuouſly afflict their ſoules, becauſe they ſee theſe their corruptions and imperfections, & hereby oftentimes are mooued to thinke that they are deſtitute of faith, and of all ſauing graces of Gods ſanctifying Spirit, becauſe though they vſe the meanes ordaind of God for the begetting and increaſing of grace in them, yet they cannot perceiue any fruit that commeth thereby, nor feele in their ſoules any true comfort or joy in theſe ſpirituall exerciſes. For example, ſome complaine that though they continually heare the word, yet they of heart,

feele no increaſe of any grace, no more Knowledge, no more Faith, no more zeale of Gods glory, no more mortification of their old corruptions, nor any reformation at all of their former ſinfull liues, and therefore they thinke that they heare the Word of God without any profit, nay, that the more they heare it, the more wicked and rebellious they are; and that for this cauſe, it were much better not to heare the word at all, for as much as it will but aggrauate their ſinnes and increaſe their condemnation, For hee that knoweth his maſters will and doth it not, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes.

But let not ſuch poore mourning ſoules depriue themſelues of that true comfort which of right belongeth to them: and to this end let them know firſt, that this is an vſual complaint of thoſe children of God which profit moſt in hearing of the Word, though in truth they doe therein deceiue themſelues; for in complaining that they profit not, they ſhew they profit. For whereas men naturally blinded with ſelfe-loue and carnall ſecuritie, neuer diſcerne any ſuch want and corruption in themſelues, and therefore though they profit nothing by hearing the Word of God, yet it neuer troubles them, nay, they imagine that it is ſufficient to preſent their bodies in Gods aſſemblies, and to heare Gods Word with their outward eares, though they vnderſtand it not, nor retaine it in memory, nor bring forth any fruits thereof; theſe humbled ſoules by the hearing of the word are freed from this ſelf-loue and carnall ſecuritie, and haue the blind eyes of their vnderſtandings opened, ſo as they ſee their faults and corruptions, and haue their hard hearts ſoftened, ſo as they are grieued and diſpleaſed with them, and their wils alſo are in ſome good meaſure ſanctified, ſo that they earneſtly deſire to bee freed from their corruptions, and to heare the Word of God with more profit. Whereby it appeareth that though they cannot profit ſo much as they deſire, yet they haue made a good progreſſe, and the Lord in his good time will perfit that good worke which he hath begun in them. And the ſame Spirit of God which hath wrought in them this deſire of profiting by hearing the word, will alſo accompliſh it, and ſo open their dull eares and ſoften their hard hearts that they ſhall profit, and reape manifold fruits of the ſeed of the Word which is ſowed in the furrowes of their hearts. In the meane while the Lord may in his heauenly wiſedome feed them for a time with a ſparing hand, to the end that hee may truly humble them vnder the ſight and ſenſe of their corruptions, and that he may hereby ſo ſharpen their appetites, that they may with more hungring deſire, and earneſt endeuour, feed vpon the heauenly Manna of his Word; but as this ſhould increaſe their diligence, ſo it ſhould not decreaſe their hope and comfort, for moſt aſſuredly when the Lord hath a while whetted their ſtomacke, and by pulling backe his hand moued them more earneſtly to deſire, and more highly to eſteeme this precious food of their ſoules, he will fully ſatisfie their hungring deſire, nouriſh them in all ſpirituall graces, and make them who are but babes, ſtrong men in Chriſt. In the meane time let them not faint, but wait vpon the Lord, be ſtrong and truſt in him and hee will ſurely comfort their hearts, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, *Pſal.*27.16.

¶ *Sect.*4. Conſolations for ſuch as bewaile their want of feeling the fruit of their hearing.

Secondly, whereas they complaine that they doe not after the hearing of the Word, perceiue in themſelues any increaſe of knowledge, faith, or any ſauing grace; they are to know that howſoeuer no man ought to reſt contented in this eſtate, but to labour more and more, not only to haue, but alſo to diſcerne an increaſe of grace in them, and a progreſſe in all vertue and godlineſſe (for otherwiſe, though they may be the children of God, who for a time liue in ſuch a caſe, yet they cannot attaine vnto the aſſurance thereof, nor feele the comfort of it in their owne conſcience) neuertheleſſe, there is no reaſon, why they ſhould deſpaire or bee vtterly diſcouraged; for though they find no fruits of their hearing, yet if in obedience to Gods commandement, they will with care and diligence continue ſtill hearers of the word, they ſhall vndoubtedly in the end attaine vnto their deſire, and diſcerne in themſelues a great increaſe of grace and godlines. Wee know that the ſeed doth not preſently bring foorth fruite when it is caſt into the ground, but firſt it ſeemeth to rot and periſh, and then it ſprouteth vp in a green blade, and then it beareth an eare, and a great increaſe and much fruit; and ſo it fareth oftentimes in hearing the word of God, for at firſt it ſeemeth quite loſt and periſhed being ſowne in ſome grounds, and yet afterwards it bringeth foorth not only a faire greene blade of an outward profeſſion, but alſo a great increaſe of the ripe fruits of true godlineſſe. So alſo the ſicke patient taking ſoueraigne phyſick, is not preſently cured, nay, in ſtead of feeling any eaſe thereby he is made much more ſicke in his owne ſenſe and feeling, and yet after the phyſicke hath a while wrought with him, and purged him of ſome ſuperfluous and hurtfull humours he findeth ſome amendment, and ſo by little and little hee is reſtored to his former health: And ſo it is alſo with the ſpirituall ſicke patient, he doth not alwayes preſently finde eaſe and quiet peace of conſcience, yea, many times hee is tormented and vexed after he hath receiued the ſpirituall phyſike of the ſoule, the Word of God, more then euer in former times, but yet notwithſtanding in proceſſe of time when this phyſick hath effectually wrought with him, it purgeth him from his filthy corruptions, and ſtrengtheneth him in all grace and godlineſſe. And therefore though we feele preſently no profitable fruits of hearing, let not this diſcourage vs from hearing, yea rather let it ſerue as a ſharpe ſpurre to pricke vs forward to more diligence, and let vs ioyne therewith hartie prayer, deſiring the Lord to water the ſeed of his word ſowne in our hearts with the dew of his holy Spirit, and then vndoubtedly the Lord in the end will heare vs, and to our exceeding comfort ſhew vnto vs the plentifull fruites of all our labours.

§. Sect. 5.
Conſolations for ſuch as complain that the more they heare; the more they abound in ſin.

Thirdly, whereas they complaine that the more they heare the greater are their ſinnes and rebellion againſt God, in this they much deceiue themſelues; for the Word of God doth not make them more ſinfull, but whereas heeretofore they liued in carnall ſecuritie and hardneſſe of heart, hauing their vnderſtandings darkened, and their conſciences ſeared ſo as they could neither ſee nor feele their ſinnes, though they were manifold and grieuous, now the Word of God made effectuall by the inward operation of his holy Spirit, like a glorious light hauing diſpelled the dark foggy miſts of ignorance, and illuminated the eyes of their vnderſtandings with the knowledge of Gods Law, they better diſcerne their ſinnes and miſerable eſtate then in former times. And this the Apoſtle Paul ſheweth vnto vs in his owne example, Rom. 7.9. For (ſaith hee) I was once aliue without the Law, but when the commandement came, ſinne reuiued. 10. But I died: and the ſame commandement which was ordained vnto life, was found to be vnto death. And Verſe 13. Was that then which was good made death vnto mee? God forbid: but ſinne that it might appeare ſinne, wrought death in me by that which is goood, that ſinne might be out of meaſure ſinfull by the commandement. So that the preaching of the Law doth not make vs more ſinfull, but reuealeth thoſe ſinnes vnto vs which before we diſcerned not. As therefore the Sun ſhining vpon ſome filthy place doth not make it ſo filthy, but only doth make it manifeſt which was not ſeene in the darke; and as the wholeſome phyſicke is not the cauſe of thoſe corruptions which it purgeth out, but by expelling them out of the body ſheweth them vnto vs: ſo the heauenly light and ſoueraigne phyſicke of Gods Word doth not worke in vs our filthy corruptions and hurtfull humours of ſinne, but it reuealeth them vnto vs. Whereas before times by reaſon of our ignorance and blindneſſe they were ſecret and hidden.

§. Sect. 6.
That wee are not to neglect hearing word,
imperfe

When therefore out of the former premiſes this concluſion is inferred, either by Satan, who continually like a malicious enemy ſeeketh our deſtruction, or by our owne corrupt fleſh (which is impatient of any rough handling, and therefore would rather haue vs ſicke ſtill then indure any paine in being cured) that it were better for vs to ſurceaſe the hearing of Gods Word, as ſeruing to no other end but to increaſe our condemnation; let vs in any caſe reſiſt ſuch motions, as being moſt dangerous tentations, which being entertained, will bring vs to vtter ruine and endleſſe deſtruction. For if we depriue our ſelues of this heauenly light, the Deuill will eaſily leade vs hood-winkt vnto all ſinne and wickedneſſe; if we long abſtaine from this comfortable food of our ſoules, they will be hunger-ſtarued, and all the graces of Gods Spirit will waxe faint and die in vs; if we diſarme our ſelues of this Sword of the Spirit, Satan without any reſiſtance will ouercome and take vs captiues, forcing vs as his miſerable ſlaues to commit all thoſe works of darknes in which he will imploy vs. And therefore as we tender the ſaluation of our owne ſoules, let vs not be diſcouraged from hearing the Word of God by any ſuggeſtions whatſoeuer, no not though wee ſeeme vnto our ſelues euery time wee come into the Church to goe a ſtep towards Hell; for whileſt we vſe Gods Ordinance which is appointed as the meanes for our conuerſion and ſaluation, there is ſome good hope, but when wee vtterly neglect it, our ſtate is moſt deſperate. But of this I haue already ſpoken more at large, and therſore will here paſſe it ouer referring the Reader to that place.

Chap. XLII.

Conſolations for ſuch as bewaile their hardneſſe of heart and wants in Prayer.

§. Sect.
Conſolati for ſuch a complain they canno
pray at al

OThers complaine that they are ſo over-whelmed with hardneſſe of heart, and drowſie dulneſſe of ſpirit, that either they cannot pray at all, or if they doe, it is barrenly without all forme or faſhion; or if they haue the eloquence of the tongue and good ſet formes of Prayer, yet they performe it coldly and drowſily without all earneſtneſſe and feruencie of ſpirit, hauing their minds carried away with wandring thoughts, ſo their prayers are but meere lip-labour; and therefore it were better not to pray at all, because they cannot performe this dutie in any good manner or meaſure as God requireth. And this is a tentation wherewith euen the deareſt children of God are much vexed and troubled, and therefore it ſhall not be amiſſe to anſwere the ſeuerall branches of this complaint. First therefore, whereas they complaine that they cannot pray at all, this is to be vnderſtood generally of all times, or ſpecially at ſomtimes. If they ſay they can neuer pray, it is very likely that either they forget, or much deceiue themſelues, for few or none, who are altogether deſtitute of the ſpirit of ſupplication, haue any vnderſtanding to diſcerne their want, or any grace to bewaile it, but content themſelues with their lip-labour, as though they had performed acceptable ſeruice vnto God. And it is a worke of one and the ſame Spirit to make vs ſee our infirmities with hatred and diſlike of them, and to mooue vs earneſtly to deſire of God that we may be freed from them, which earneſt deſire is heartie prayer. But if they further affirme, that they are moſt ſure they doe neuer pray vnto God; I anſwere, that though this in it ſelfe be a moſt dangerous caſe, for it is a ſigne of a worker of iniquitie, not to call vpon God, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, Pſal. 53.4. yet they haue no cauſe to deſpaire, for the ſame Spirit which hath reuealed vnto them this their ſin and infirmity, and hath wrought in them a diſlike thereof, will alſo remoue it and ſupply their want in Gods good time, if they will labour for this good gift, and not quench the good motions of the Spirit, when God offereth them vnto them.

But if they cannot deny that ſometimes they haue had the grace giuen them of God to call earneſtly vpon his Name; howſoeuer for the preſent time they are altogether diſfurniſhed thereof, then let them know that their caſe in this reſpect is common with all the deare children of God. For hearty praier is not in our owne power, neither doth it attend vpon our owne will, but it is the gift of God, which at ſome times in plentifull meaſure he beſtoweth vpon his children, and at other times he pulleth back his liberall hand; to the end that by the want thereof, wee may learne to aſcribe the glory and prayſe of our heartie prayers vnto God, who worketh in vs the will and the deed, and is in truth the only true Author of them; which prayſe, otherwiſe in pride of heart wee would arrogate vnto our ſelues, as being a naturall facultie and in our owne power: and alſo to the end we may more highly eſteeme it, and with more joy and diligence vſe it when we haue it beſtowed on vs, leſt through our negligence and ſlothfulneſſe wee moue the Lord to take it from vs. Seeing therefore this heartie calling vpon Gods Name is a gift of God, and a worke of his holy Spirit in vs, which at ſometimes heretofore we haue diſcerned in our ſelues, let vs not altogether be diſcouraged, though at ſometimes wee want it; for the gifts of God are without repentance; and though at ſometimes they are withdrawne from our ſenſe and feeling, yet ſhall they neuer be taken from vs; and if at any time we haue had aſſurance that the Spirit of God hath dwelled in vs, by this work thereof, effectuall prayer, wee may aſſure our ſelues that it hath not forſaken vs, but will againe helpe our infirmities: and whereas we cannot tell how to pray as we ought, the ſpirit it ſelfe will make requeſt for vs with ſighes; which cannot be expreſſed.

Rom 8.26.

Conſolations for ſuch as complain that they cannot pray in any good forme.

Secondly, whereas they complaine that they cannot pray in any good forme, but oftentimes fill Gods eares with impatient cries, and vncomfortable roarings in ſtead of prayers, they are to know that this is often incident vnto the children of God, eſpecially when his hand is heauy vpon them, either in ſome outward affliction of body, or ſome inward anguiſh of minde. For example, the Prophet Dauid confeſſeth that when Gods hand was heauy vpon him day and night, his prayers were but roarings, Pſal. 32.3. So Ezechias ſaith, that when hee ſhould haue prayed, he chattered like a Crane or a Swallow, and mourned as a Doue, Eſay 38.14. And the poore Publican oppreſſed with the heauy burthen of his ſinnes, in ſtead of a long and eloquent ſpeech, vttereth theſe few words; O God be mercifull vnto me a Sinner: and yet our Sauiour Chriſt teſtifieth of him, that hee receiued the remiſſion of his ſinnes, and went home juſtified, Luke 18.13. 14. Neither in truth doth the Lord regard the eloquence of the tongue, but the earneſtneſſe of the heart, he reſpecteth not our wel-couched words, and ſmooth vttered ſtile, but the feruencie of the ſpirit, and our humble and hearty deſires, which are acceptably heard of him, though our tongues be ſilent. The ſacrifices of God are not eloquent words, but a contrite ſpirit, a contrite and broken heart will not the Lord deſpiſe: as it is, Pſal. 51.17. The Prayers indited by Gods Spirit, which alſo are according to the will of God, conſiſt not in the words of the mouth, but in the ſighes of the heart which cannot bee expreſſed, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, Rom. 8. 26. And therefore if wee offer vnto God an humble and contrite ſpirit, if wee can ſigh and grone earneſtly, deſiring thoſe things we want according to his holy will, though wee cannot expreſſe our minds in any good order, or in a continued forme of ſpeech; yet if we can from our hearts roare with Dauid, chatter with Ezechias, and vtter this abrupt ſpeech with the poore Publican, O God be mercifull vnto mee a Sinner, the Lord will heare vs, and that as ſpeedily, as though we could pray vnto him with the eloquence of men and Angels. For to what end principally ſerue words, but that we may by them expreſſe our minds to men, who otherwiſe could not vnderſtand them? but the Lord who ſearcheth the hearts vnderſtandeth our ſighes, which cannot bee expreſſed, as it is, Rom. 8.26,27. And hee knowes our thoughts long before wee thinke them, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, *Pſal.*139.2. He is a Spirit, yea an al-ſeeing Spirit, and therefore our Prayers vnto him, are the deſires of the heart, neither doe our words ſerue to perſwade him, but to ſtirre vp our owne dull ſpirits, and to keep vs from diſorderly wandring thoughts. So that if wee can with Moſes lift vp our hearts vnto God with earneſt deſires, this will be a ſtrong crie in the eares of the Lord, and he will ſurely heare it. If we can vnfainedly ſay with the Prophet Dauid, *Pſal.*38.9. Lord I powre my whole deſire before thee, and my ſighing is not hid from thee, we may be aſſured he will heare vs and grant our requeſt, for he heareth the deſire of the poore, he prepareth their heart, and bendeth his eare vnto them: as it is, *Pſal.*10.17. yea he doth not only heare them, and in ſome ſort incline to their requeſt, but hee will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him, hee will heare their cry, and ſaue them; as the ſame Prophet ſpeaketh, *Pſal.*145.19. We know that a kind louing father, if hee ſee his ſonne exceeding ſicke will be very carefull and tender ouer him, to prouide all things neceſſary for him which may doe him good; and though with a faultering tongue and vnperfect ſpeech hee aske any thing which is profitable for him to receiue, yet how readily will he hearken vnto him and grant his deſire? yea if his ſickneſſe ſo increaſe that he becommeth ſpeechleſſe, vttering nothing but deepe grones, euen this language mooues him to no leſſe care in vſing all meanes which may doe him good. Shall then wee daily obſerue ſuch fruits of loue in ſinfull man, and ſhall wee doubt of finding leſſe in the Lord, who is infinite in loue, mercie and goodneſſe? farre be it from vs. Nay, let vs aſſure our ſelues, that though (our ſoules being ſicke in ſinne, and exceedingly dulled and beaten downe with ſome grieuous tentation) wee cannot vtter any thing but vnperfect ſpeeches, yea, though we are through the grieuouſneſſe of our affliction and greatnes of our corruption ſtrucken dumbe, and can vtter nothing but grones and ſighes, yet if we deſire to be freed out of this wretched caſe, and to haue the comfort of Gods Spirit, the Lord, who ſearcheth the heart and vnderſtandeth our ſecret thoughts, will hearken vnto vs, and grant the deſires of our heart, at leaſt ſo far forth as it will ſtand with his owne glory and our euerlaſting good.

§. Sect. 3. Conſolations for ſuch as bewaile their coldneſſe and dulneſſe in prayer.

Thirdly, whereas others complaine that their hearts are ſo hard, and their ſpirits ſo dull, that they cannot vtter vnto God a prayer with any earneſtneſſe or feruencie of ſpirit, but exceeding coldly & very weakly and therefore they feare that God will neuer heare them; they are to remember, that the Lord heareth vs not, nor granteth our requeſts for the worthineſſe and excellencie of our prayers, but for his Sonne Ieſus Chriſts ſake, who is our Mediatour and Interceſſor, in whoſe Name we call vpon God; and therefore though our prayers be full of infirmities and vttered with much weaknes, yet calling vpon the Lord in our Sauiours Name, he will ſurely heare vs, as our Sauiour hath promiſed, Iohn 16.23. Verily, verily I ſay vnto you, whatſoeuer yee ſhall aske the Father in my Name, hee will giue it you. Moreouer, we are to know, that we doe not offer vp our prayers immediatly vnto God the Father, but by the mediation of Ieſus Chriſt, who putting our prayers into the golden Vials which are full of the precious odours of his merits, thereby perfumeth them and maketh them an offering of ſweet ſmelling ſauour vnto God, and by waſhing them in his owne moſt precious bloud hee purgeth them from all their corruptions, and perfecteth all their wants and imperfections, ſo as now, though not in themſelues, yet in him they will bee acceptable vnto God, and hee will mercifully grant our petitions.

Iohn 16.

*Apocal.*5.

§. Sect. 4. Conſola- for ſuch a- waile their diſtractio- wandring thoughts i- prayer.

Fourthly, whereas others complaine that their minds are carried away with worldly diſtractions and wandering imaginations when they are making their prayers vnto God; they are to know, that this befalleth alſo euen the deareſt children of God, partly through their owne corruption, and partly through the malice of Satan, who laboureth moſt to interrupt vs in thoſe holy exerciſes which he knoweſt moſt profitable and effectuall for our ſaluation. Whereof it commeth to paſſe, that though diuers houres together we can talke of worldly affaires, and heare the ſpeech of others without any diſtraction of minde, or thinking of any thing but of the ſubject of our preſent ſpeech, yet when wee heare God ſpeake vnto vs in the preaching of the Word, or when we ſpeake vnto God in prayer and ſupplication, our minds wander hither and thither, though we ſtriue neuer ſo much to containe them, becauſe through our naturall corruption wee are ſoone weary of theſe holy exerciſes, and Satan is ſtil at hand to ſuggeſt into our minds wandring thoughts, in which we take moſt delight: but this ſhould not diſcourage vs from taking in hand theſe holy actions, but rather the conſideration hereof ſhould ſtrongly mooue and prouoke vs to more earneſtneſſe, care and diligence, ſo as Satan may not preuaile againſt vs. And becauſe we cannot as wee ought performe this holy dutie with reuerence and attention, faith and feruency of ſpirit, let vs in the beginning of our prayers craue the aſſiſtance of Gods holy Spirit, deſiring him to helpe our infirmities in theſe reſpects, and to inable vs to performe this ſeruice vnto God in ſome good and acceptable manner. (And if notwithſtanding ſometimes, nay often, we receiue a foile, let it be an occaſion to moue vs to take the more paines, and to make a double requeſt vnto God, not only that hee will grant vnto vs thoſe things which wee deſire, but alſo that for Chriſts ſake hee will pardon our ſinnes and infirmities in that we haue begged them ſo coldly negligently.

Sect. 5.
our s and in-ities in er ſhould make vs eſt this exerciſe.

Laſtly, whereas our ſpirituall enemy taketh occaſion altogether to diſcourage vs from vndertaking theſe ſpirituall exerciſes, becauſe therein wee bewray notable corruptions, and cannot though we ſtriue neuer ſo much, performe them as we ought; let vs in no caſe yeeld vnto this tentation, but ſtrongly arme our ſelues againſt it. And to this end let vs conſider, that if Satan can perſwade vs to deſiſt from performing thoſe duties altogether, which wee cannot performe as wee ought, but with great weakneſſe, corruption and imperfection, wee ſhall doe nothing at all which God requireth of vs. For example, the Lord commandeth vs to loue him with all our hearts, and with all our ſoule, and with all our ſtrength, which duty of loue we performe with great weakneſſe, and exceeding coldly; but becauſe we cannot doe it as God requireth and as wee ought, ſhall wee not therefore doe it at all? God forbid. So the Lord commandeth vs to truſt and to put our whole affiance in him, but wee are readie to reſt and relie vpon the arme of fleſh and inferiour meanes, either in whole or at leaſt in part, and when they faile vs, our truſt in God is very weake & mingled with much diffidence and doubting: but ſhall we therefore put no affiance in God at all, becauſe we cannot doe it ſo perfectly as hee requireth? be it farre from vs. So in the very like manner, the Lord expreſly chargeth and commandeth vs to call vpon his holy Name, which dutie oftentimes we performe coldly and negligently, hauing our mindes carried away with wandring thoughts and worldly imaginations: but ſhall Satan working vpon our corruptions, therefore perſwade vs altogether to deſiſt from this holy exerciſe? no in no caſe let vs not yeeld to this tentation. For it is not left vnto vs at our owne choice as a thing indifferent to pray, or not to pray, but it is a notable part of Gods worſhip and ſeruice, and a ſingular duty which the Lord expreſly enjoyneth vs to performe, whereunto he hath adjoyned moſt comfortable promiſes which depend not vpon our worthineſſe, and the excellencie of our prayers, but on his owne free mercie and goodneſſe, and the merits and interceſſion of our Sauiour Chriſt. So Pſal.50.15. Call vpon mee in the day of trouble, ſo will I deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie mee. And Matth.7.7. Aske and it ſhall be giuen you. And Iohn 16.23. Verily, verily I ſay vnto you, whatſoeuer you ſhall aske the Father in my name, he will giue it you. 24. Aske and yee ſhall receiue, that your ioy may be full. And the Apoſtle Paul chargeth vs, that we pray continually. Seeing therefore the Lord expreſly requireth this dutie at our hands; though our infirmities and corruptions be neuer ſo great, let vs labour continually to performe it, aſſuring our ſelues, that if in obedience to his commandement wee call vpon him, and labour and ſtriue againſt thoſe corruptions, which ſhew themſelues vnto vs in this holy action, he that hath enjoyned vs this dutie will alſo giue vnto vs his holy Spirit, if wee will attend his leaſure, which will teach vs how to pray according to Gods will with ſighes and grones, which cannot be expreſſed; whereas on the other ſide, if our infirmities and corruptions wholly diſcourage vs from performing this dutie, we ſhall grieuouſly ſinne againſt God in tranſgreſſing his commandement, and in robbing him of a chiefe part of his worſhip and ſeruice, and alſo wee ſhall plunge our ſelues into a moſt deſperate eſtate, adjoyning our ſelues vnto the number of thoſe wicked Atheiſts, of whom the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, who call not vpon God, Pſal.53.4.

Of the ſecond kind of ſenſible hardnes of heart.

And ſo much for anſwering thoſe tentations, which Satan and our corruption do ſuggeſt to diſcourage vs from the ſeruice of God, which haue their occaſion and ground from our hardneſſe of heart, and drowſie dulneſſe, and deadneſſe in performing theſe holy exerciſes. The other kind of ſenſible hardneſſe of heart is ſeuered from the vſe of theſe holy meanes; for ſometimes it commeth to paſſe eſpecially in the ſpirituall combate of tentation, that euen Gods deare children are ſo beſotted and aſtoniſhed, through the violence of the tentations of Satan, and huge waight of their owne corruptions, that they cannot endeuour in any ſort to vſe theſe meanes, whereby they might be comforted and releeued in this wretched eſtate, as the hearing of the word, calling vpon Gods Name, meditating in the Scriptures, and holy conferences; yea theſe holy exerciſes ſeeme for a time odious and loathſome vnto them, vntill it pleaſe the Lord by his owne good Spirit to awaken and raiſe them vp out of this ſpirituall trance, and to giue vnto them againe the feeling of his grace and fauour, and good motions and abilities to ſerue him, and reape comfort vnto themſelues, by theſe holy duties. In the meane time ſuch are to ſupport themſelues from falling into vtter deſperation, by calling to their remembrance their ſtate and condition in times paſt: for if euer they haue had any delight in the holy exerciſes of Religion, Prayer, hearing the Word and godly conferences, if euer they could diſcerne in themſelues any faith by the true fruits of ſanctification they may take comfort thereby, aſſuring themſelues that they ſhall againe be reſtored vnto their former eſtate, for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance, and thoſe whom hee hath once loued, hee loueth vnto the end. An example hereof wee haue in David, who being troubled and full of anguiſh in his ſpirit, his ſoule refuſing all comfort, and being ſo aſtoniſhed that hee could not ſpeake, yet hee conſidered the dayes of old, & the yeeres of ancient time, hee called to remembrance his former ſongs in the night, occaſioned by the great benefits which the Lord had beſtowed vpon him, and ſo knowing that the Lord was vnchangeable in his mercie and goodneſſe, he relieued his poore ſoule, which was ready to faint vnder the heauie waight of preſent afflictions. And thus alſo Iob being brought through the violence of thoſe heauy croſſes which the Lord laid vpon him, euen to the brinke of deſperation, ſo that he ſpared not to vtter in the bitterneſſe of his ſoule, fearefull curſes and moſt impatient ſpeeches comming neere vnto blaſphemy, oftentimes comforteth himſelfe by calling to mind his former integritie and righteouſnes: whoſe example if the poore humbled ſoules will follow, they may raiſe themſelues with true comfort, when they are ſunke downe vnder their heauy burthen of preſent corruptions.

How the weake Chriſtian may bee aſſured that his repentance is true and vnfained.

§. Sect. 1. Of the ſignes of true repentance, and firſt of the ſeuerall degrees thereof.

AND ſo much for anſwering Satans tentations, drawne from hardnes of heart, whereby he laboureth to perſwade poore humbled ſinners that they are vtterly deſtitute of repentance: but if hee faile of his purpoſe, then he will endeuour to make them beleeue, that though they haue ſome ſhew of repentance, yet it is not ſuch as God requireth. For either he will affirme that it is hypocriticall and diſſembled, rather for feare of puniſhment then for hatred of ſinne or true loue of God; or if it be true, yet it is not ſufficient, as being in very ſmall meaſure, and in no proportion anſwerable to their hainous ſinnes. Againſt both which tentations, it behooueth the humbled ſinner to arme himſelfe that hee may repell them, when they are ſuggeſted; and to this purpoſe that he may proue his repentance true and vnfained, hee is to take a true ſearch of his owne heart and conſcience and to examine his repentance according to ſome vndoubted ſignes which may ſerue as touch-ſtones to diſcouer whether it bee true and vnfained, or diſſembled, and hypocriticall. The firſt vndoubted ſigne of vnfained repentance is, when wee can obſerue in our ſelues the ſeuerall degrees or parts thereof, as they haue beene wrought in vs by Gods Spirit; for from the enumeration of all the parts, weemay conclude that we haue the whole. The firſt degree is, that by the Law wee come to the knowledge, and acknowledgement that wee are hainous and grieuous ſinners, who haue broken and tranſgreſſed all Gods Commandements. Secondly, from this knowledge and acknowledgement of our ſinnes, proceedeth a true ſenſe and feeling of them, and the puniſhments due vnto them, and an apprehenſion and applying to our ſelues of the anger of God, the curſe of the Law, and eternall condemnation due vnto vs for our ſins. Thirdly, from this ſenſe of our miſerable eſtate, there ariſeth in our conſciences feare and horrour of being ouer-taken and ouer-whelmed of thoſe iudgements of God, and fearefull puniſhments which hang ouer our heads for our ſins. Fourthly, from this feare and anguiſh of mind, proceedeth ſorrow and bitter griefe, becauſe wee haue thus hainouſly ſinned, and made our ſelues obnoxious to all theſe euils; and alſo in the ſame reſpects a true hatred of ſinne which ſtill hangeth vpon vs, and an earneſt deſire to bee freed from it. Fiftly, this hatred of ſinne and deſire to bee freed from it, maketh vs earneſtly to ſeeke and inquire after ſome meanes whereby we may attain vnto our deſires, that being freed from all thoſe fearefull euils which oppreſſe our conſciences with the waight of them, we may obtaine Gods loue and fauour and the aſſurance of our ſaluation. Sixtly, thus inquiring and ſearching wee find by the preaching of the Goſpell, that our gracious God hath ſent his Sonne into the World, to the end that hee might ſaue and deliuer vs out of this miſerable eſtate, if wee beleeue in him, and alſo hath commanded vs to beleeue. Which being made effectuall by the inward operation of Gods holy Spirit, we haue true faith begot in vs, whereby we are aſſured of Gods mercie in Ieſus Chriſt, and of the full remiſſion of all our ſinnes; the conſideration whereof doth comfort and raiſe vs vp from falling into deſperation and vtter deſtruction. Seuenthly, after this aſſurance of Gods loue, and of the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, there followeth firſt a true hatred of ſinne, becauſe it is ſinne, and vnfained ſorrow, not ſo much in regard of the puniſhment, which by our ſinnes we haue iuſtly deſerued, as that becauſe wee haue offended our ſo gracious a God and tender louing father. Secondly, this ſorrow will not ſuffer vs to hide, excuſe, or extenuate our ſins, but moueth vs in all humilitie to proſtrate our ſelues before Gods mercie ſeate, and in griefe of ſoule to confeſſe them, acknowledging that confuſion and condemnation is due vnto vs, which by no meanes we can eſcape but by Gods mercie, and the merits and righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt. Thirdly, being aſſured of the pardon don for our ſinnes paſt, we labour and ſtriue for the time to come to leaue and forſake them, and to mortifie the fleſh and corruptions thereof, whereby we are led captiue vnto ſinne, and alſo wee endeuour with a feruent zeale of Gods glory to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, that ſo by our godly liues we may glorifie him and expreſſe our thankfulneſſe for all his ineſtimable benefits. Fourthly, if at any time beſides or contrary to our purpoſe, we be ouer-taken by our corruption, and fall into ſinne, there followeth in vs an holy anger and indignation with our ſelues, becauſe we did not more carefully looke to our wayes; which godly anger proceedeth to the taking of a holy kind of reuenge, to the end that thereby our ſinnes may be ſubdued, and our corruptions mortified. For example, hee that hath offended through gluttonie and drunkenneſſe, being truly penitent and angrie with himſelfe for his ſinne, will alſo tame the fleſh by puniſhing the ſame through faſting and abſtinence. Hee that hath offended by vſing exceſſiue pride in apparell, being angry with himſelfe vpon his true repentance, doth withdraw from himſelfe ſuch coſtly attire, as otherwiſe in reſpect of his calling hee might lawfully weare.

And thus may wee come to the aſſurance that our repentance is true and vnfained, if we can find theſe degrees thereof and theſe effects and fruits in our ſelues. The ſecond ſigne of vnfained repentance is, that it bee whole and intire, and that both in reſpect of the ſubject, and alſo the object thereof. In reſpect of the ſubject or of him in whom it is, it is required that it be not of any part alone, or yet of all parts ſauing one, but it muſt be intire and totall of the whole man and of euery of his ſeuerall parts. It muſt be a reformation in the forſaking of ſinne, and imbracing of righteouſneſſe, not in the body or ſoule alone, but of them both, and of all their ſeuerall faculties and powers; it muſt not onely be of the outward actions, but alſo of the inward affections and cogitations, it muſt not only be of the tongue & hand, but alſo of our wils & hearts, according to that, Iames 4.8. Draw neere vnto God, and hee will draw neere vnto you: clenſe your hands yee Sinners, and purge your hearts you wauering minded. Otherwiſe, if wee doe not turne vnto the Lord withall our hearts, with all our ſoules, with all our bodies, and euery facultie and part of them; if wee willingly entertaine ſinne, and purpoſely ſuffer it to lurke in any ſecret corner of vs, our repentance is hypocriticall and not acceptable in Gods ſight. And hence it is that Dauid ſaith, that if hee ſhould regard wickedneſſe in his heart, the Lord would not heare him. Pſal. 66.18. Secondly, it muſt be whole and intire in reſpect of the object: for it is not ſufficient that wee performe obedience vnto ſome of Gods Commandements, if wee endeuour not to ſhew our obedience vnto all. It is not enough if wee forſake ſome of our ſinnes, if we willingly and with delight entertaine and nouriſh others, neuer ſtriuing againſt them, nor labouring to mortifie them: but if we would approue our repentance to bee ſincere and vnfained, both vnto God and our owne conſciences, we muſt deſire and endeuour to performe obedience, as well to thoſe Commandements which ſeeme hard and moſt vnpleaſant vnto vs, as vnto thoſe which are more eaſie and delightfull; we muſt not only forſake thoſe ſinnes which are not ſo pleaſing vnto vs, but euen thoſe which otherwiſe are as deare vnto vs as our right hand or eye; for hee that truly repenteth of one ſinne, repenteth of all; hee that repenteth not of any one ſinne, repenteth of none as he ought. Hee that wittingly and aduiſedly neglecteth any one commandement, will in time neglect all, whatſoeuer outward reformation may ſeeme to bee in him; he that willingly entertaineth any one ſinne, and nouriſheth it as his deare darling in his boſome, will in the end make conſcience of none; for a little leauen leaueneth the whole lumpe, and euen ſmall ſinnes if they be not mortified, will make roome for thoſe which are greateſt and moſt hainous.

The third ſigne of true repentance is, when our conuerſion from ſinne vnto God is not deferred in whole, or in part from time to time, but preſently vndertaken: neither is it ſufficient to vow repentance vnto God, or to purpoſe it for the time to come, but wee muſt preſently endeuour and labour in it. It is not enough that wee ſubdue ſome ſinnes now, and performe obedience vnto ſome of the Commandements, purpoſing to labour after more perfection when wee haue better opportunitie, but wee muſt preſently labour and endeuour to performe obedience not to ſome, but to all Gods Commandements, and wee muſt out of hand ſet vpon all our ſinnes, and labour to mortifie all our corruptions. For if the whole bodie of ſinne be not beaten downe and ſubdued together, that which ſtill liueth in vs, will giue life againe vnto that which is mortified; that which is ſtill retained in the heart, will open a wide doore to let in that which is expelled. And ſo we ſhall but take in hand an endleſſe and fruitleſſe worke, if wee doe not ſet aſide all excuſes, and inſtantly labour to deſtroy the whole bodie of ſinne, breaking thorow all difficulties and impediments; for wee ſhall neuer want hindrances in theſe holy actions, and excuſes for want of fit occaſion and conuenient opportunitie will continually offer themſelues vnto vs. And therefore hee that will not turne wholly vnto God, till he haue a cleere paſſage and plaine way free from all

§. Sect. 3.
The third ſigne when it is preſently vndertaken.

The third ſigne of true repentance is, when our conuerſion from ſinne vnto God is not deferred in whole, or in part from time to time, but preſently vndertaken: neither is it ſufficient to vow repentance vnto God, or to purpoſe it for the time to come, but wee muſt preſently endeuour and labour in it. It is not enough that wee ſubdue ſome ſinnes now, and performe obedience vnto ſome of the Commandements, purpoſing to labour after more perfection when wee haue better opportunitie, but wee muſt preſently labour and endeuour to performe obedience not to ſome, but to all Gods Commandements, and wee muſt out of hand ſet vpon all our ſinnes, and labour to mortifie all our corruptions. For if the whole bodie of ſinne be not beaten downe and ſubdued together, that which ſtill liueth in vs, will giue life againe vnto that which is mortified; that which is ſtill retained in the heart, will open a wide doore to let in that which is expelled. And ſo we ſhall but take in hand an endleſſe and fruitleſſe worke, if wee doe not ſet aſide all excuſes, and inſtantly labour to deſtroy the whole bodie of ſinne, breaking thorow all difficulties and impediments; for wee ſhall neuer want hindrances in theſe holy actions, and excuſes for want of fit occaſion and conuenient opportunitie will continually offer themſelues vnto vs. And therefore hee that will not turne wholly vnto God, till he haue a cleere paſſage and plaine way free from all thornie diſtractions which pull him backe, and worldly incumbrances, which like blockes lying before him hinder him in his journey, may as well reſolue to ſit ſtill and neuer returne vnto God by vnfained repentance.

§. Sect. 4.
The fourth ſigne, when it is continuall and conſtant.

The fourth ſigne of true repentance is, if it bee continuall from the firſt day of our conuerſion vnto the end of our liues; for it is not ſufficient to ſerue God by fits, or that our Religion ſhould take vs like a tertian ague but euery other day. It is not that which God requireth, that wee ſhould diuide our time betweene him and the World, or hauing begunne in the ſpirit wee ſhould end in the fleſh; but after wee are gone out of this Sodome of ſinne, we muſt goe forward in our journey of holy obedience, and neuer like Lots wife looke backe with a deſire to enjoy the pleaſures thereof againe. Wee muſt ſo runne this ſpirituall race that wee may obtaine: now we know that runners of a race, as they doe not ſtand ſtill after the watchword is giuen, but labour with all ſpeed to ſet forth with the firſt: ſo they doe not ſit downe in the middle way, much leſſe runne one while backward, and another while forward, but they ſtill haſten on till they come to the Goale and obtaine the garland: and ſo it behoueth vs to runne ſpeedily to the Lord by vnfained repentance, and not to deſiſt in this our race till the end of our liues, if wee purpoſe to receiue that Crowne of glory which the Lord hath promiſed vs. Our life therefore muſt bee a continuall repentance, and ſo long as we liue, ſo long muſt we grieue for our ſinnes paſt and preſent, and ſtriue after newneſſe of life, and a greater meaſure of ſanctification. And of this wee haue an example in Dauid, who after his ſinne was forgiuen, profeſſeth that it was euer before him, Pſal. 51.3. that his teares were his meat day and night, Pſal. 42.3. that hee mourned all the day long, Pſal. 38.6. And all the night made his bed to ſwimme, and watered his couch with his teares, Pſal. 6.6.

§. Sect. 5.
The fifth ſigne, when it proceedeth from faith.

The laſt ſigne of vnfained and true repentance is, if it be mixed with faith: for true repentance is a fruit of faith, and they are neuer diſioyned the one from the other, neither can wee euer ſorrow for ſinne as wee ought, till we haue ſome aſſurance of Gods mercie and loue in Ieſus Chriſt. For otherwiſe though our ſorrow be neuer ſo great, yet it is not ſo much for ſinne as for the puniſhment thereof; not ſo much becauſe we haue thereby diſpleaſed God, as for thoſe torments of conſcience which wee preſently endure, and the torments of Hell, which for the time to come we feare. And therefore this deſperate ſorrow is it ſelfe to bee ſorrowed for, as being ſeuered from faith, and therefore ſinfull, and not proceeding from any loue of God, or hatred of ſinne, but from the feare of puniſhment and condemnation.

But it may bee demanded, why amongſt the ſignes of true repentance, I haue not numbred teares and weeping for our ſinnes. To which I anſwere, becauſe howſoeuer it is a notable fruite of vnfained repentance, vnto which euery Chriſtian with true compunction of heart is to accuſtome himſelfe, yet notwithſtanding it is not an inſeparable propertie thereof; for oftentimes there are teares whereas there is no true repentance, and there is true repentance whereas there are few or no teares. For the firſt, wee may plainly perceiue by continuall experience that teares proceed from diuers other cauſes then from true repentance; ſometimes from exceſſiue joy, whereby the pores and paſſages of the eyes are looſed and opened; and ſometimes from naturall and worldly ſorrow, whereby the ſaid paſſages are conſtringed and ſtraightned; ſometimes from furious anger, and ſometimes from compaſſion and pittie; and in ſpirituall things, ſometimes theſe teares flow from vnfained repentance, ſometimes from deſperate ſorrow, conceiued vpon the apprehenſion of Gods horrible wrath, or of the fearfull torments and eternall condemnation prepared for them. Whereof it commeth to paſſe that in the abundance of their teares, they vtter from a heart full of raging malice, horrible blaſphemies againſt God. An example hereof we haue in Eſau, who in the middeſt of his weeping and houling comforted himſelfe, with the remembrance of his fathers death, and of that moſt wicked murther which he intended vnto his innocent brother, Gen. 27.41. So the rebellious Iſraelites being diſcouraged with the newes which the Spies brought who were ſent to ſearch the Land, are ſaid to haue cried and wept, and yet in the midſt of their lamentation to haue murmured againſt God and his ſeruants Moſes and Aaron. So that ſimply teares are not a ſigne of true repentance vnleſſe they iſſue from a broken heart and contrite ſpirit, from a true hatred of ſinne, and from heartie ſorrow conceiued becauſe wee haue offended our gracious God. On the other ſide, if we be in ſinceritie of heart truly ſorry for our ſins in theſe reſpects, becauſe we hate them and loue God, and are diſpleaſed with our ſelues, becauſe we haue diſpleaſed our gracious Father, endeuoring to forſake our ſinnes, and to leade a new life in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, then though wee can ſeldome or neuer ſhed teares, which is the caſe of ſome of Gods deareſt children, yet our repentance is true and vnfained; for in this action the broken and contrite heart is more to be reſpected then the blubred eies, howſoeuer oftentimes they goe together.

Numb.14.1.

§. Sect.
The forme point furt proued.

But for the better clearing of this point, let vs further conſider, that true repentance conſiſteth in the conuerſion of the whole man vnto God, and is chiefly exerciſed, and by exerciſe approoued and manifeſted in the conuerſion of the chiefeſt faculties of the ſoule. As in the changing and renewing of the mind, when being freed from ignorance it conceyneth and vnderſtandeth ſpirituall things; of the judgement, when it doth approue that which God approueth, and doth diſallow that which hee diſalloweth, and being inlightened by Gods Spirit is enabled to diſcerne betweene things that differ, truth and falſhood, right and wrong, good and euill. But chiefly it conſiſteth in the conuerſion of the heart vnto God, and in the renewing and ſanctifying of the will, when as it refuſeth and ſhunneth that which the vnderſtanding and judgement doe preſent vnto it as euill and ſinfull, and contrariwiſe thirſteth after and imbraceth that which they approue as good and lawfull. From whence it deſcendeth vnto the inferiour faculties, namely, the paſſions and affections, cauſing vs to loue that which God loueth, and to hate that which hee hateth; to rejoyce in well doing, becauſe it is pleaſing vnto God, and to ſorrow and grieue when by our ſinnes we haue diſpleaſed him; the which ſorrow is ſometime expreſſed outwardly by our teares, proſtrating of the body, beating of the breſt, faſting and externall humiliation. So that if our vnderſtanding bee inlightened with ſauing knowledge, if our judgements be ſanctified and inabled to diſcern betweene things that differ; eſpecially if our hearts and wils be changed, being now auerſe vnto that euill vnto which formerly they inclined, and forſaking that ſinne, which they before naturally imbraced; then may we be aſſured that we are ſoundly conuerted and haue truly repented, and that our affections and paſſions which are ruled and ordered by thoſe ſuperiour faculties are alſo changed and ſanctified, though it doth not as yet appeare in the outward ſhedding of teares; ſeeing theſe are chiefe faculties of the ſoule in which our repentance is principally exerciſed and approued. Neither in truth are teares any part of our repentance, no not of vnfained ſorrow for our ſinnes; but only outward expreſſions and ſignes of it, which are not infallible (for they may be where true repentance is not, and not be where it is) but only probable and likely. Neither doe they ſo much follow the habit and diſpoſition of the ſoule, as the conſtitution and temperature of the bodie, flowing eaſily and amaine from moiſt braines, as from a full fountaine; and hardly preſſed and wringed from a braine which is naturally dry, and therefore yeeldeth no ſuperfluity of moyſture; euen as a fountaine cannot ouerflow which hath not water enough to fill into the brim. Whereof it is that children are more apt to weepe then thoſe that are of ripe age, and women then men, and old men more, then when they were in their full ſtrength, becauſe they want naturall heate, to digeſt and conſume their vnnaturall moiſture. And yet no man will hence conclude that children, women and old men doe more ſeriouſly and ſoundly repent of their ſinnes then men of ripe age and in their ful ſtrength. Finally, extraordinary acts doe produce extraordinary paſſions and expreſſions; whereof it is that men truly conuerted, and falling through frailtie, beſides their purpoſe into great and grieuous ſinnes, are apt to entertaine great ſorrow, and to manifeſt it to themſelues and others with ſutable and proportionable expreſſions of teares, afflicting of the body and externall humiliation. And this wee ſee in the example of Dauid, the waight of whoſe ſinnes preſſed out of him ſuch ſtreames of teares that hee mingled his bread, and watred his couch with them. And in Peter who hauing denied and forſworne his Maſter expreſſed his deepe ſorrow with bitter weeping. And in Mary Magdalene who hauing beene a grieuous Sinner expreſſed her ſorrow vpon her conuerſion by powring out ſuch ſtreames of teares, that therewith ſhee waſhed the feet of her bleſſed Sauiour, whoſe hands and feet, and ſide being pierced with her ſinnes, became a fountaine of bloud to purge her ſoule and body from all ſinne and vncleannes. Whereas they who being aſſiſted and vpholden with Gods gracious Spirit, and carefully keeping the Chriſtian watch, haue alwayes their ſpirituall armour faſt buckled vnto them, are preſerued from ſuch fearefull fals, and walke with God in the integritie and vprightnes of their hearts. And conſequently hauing no ſinnes to bewaile but humane frailties and infirmities, they are not apt to entertaine ſuch bitter and extraordinary ſorrow, nor to teſtifie it by ſuch paſſionate expreſſions of teares; becauſe renuing daily their repentance they haue a pardon of courſe ſealed in their conſciences, and their hearts fraughted with much peace, comfort and joy in the holy Ghoſt, which cauſeth them to rejoyce and to ſing for joy, euen in the midſt of afflictions and perſecutions, in the aſſurance of the remiſſion of their ſinnes, the ſenſe of Gods loue and fauour, ſhining vnto them as a cleere light in the darkeſt and deepeſt dungeon, and the infallible hope of their eternall happines in Gods Kingdome. And ſo much concerning the ſignes of true repentance, which if after due examination wee can find in our ſelues, wee may be aſſured that wee are truly penitent; yea, I will ſay more, for the comfort of all humbled ſinners, if after diligent ſearch they find not in their owne ſenſe and feeling theſe ſignes of true repentance in them at all, or at leaſt in very ſmall meaſure, yet if they earneſtly deſire and ſincerely en-deuour to attaine vnto true repentance, vſing thoſe good meanes ordained of God for this purpoſe, they may aſſure themſelues that they haue truly repented in the ſight of God, who accepteth of the will for the deed, and of the affection for the action, as before I haue ſhewed.

§. Sect. 8.
That the aſſurance of the remiſſion of ſinnes dependeth not on the dignitie of our repentance.

And thus may wee repell the tentations of Satan, and receiue comfort vnto our owne ſoules, when he laboureth to perſwade vs that our repentance is not true and vnfained but falſe and hypocriticall. But if the tempter cannot thus preuaile, in the next place hee will tell vs that our repentance though it be true, yet it is not ſufficient, neither is there any proportion betweene our ſmall repentance and our great ſinnes, as Gods iuſtice doth require. To which we muſt anſwere, that the remiſſion of our ſinnes and reconciliation with God, dependeth not vpon the dignitie or quantitie of our repentance, but vpon the righteouſneſſe and full ſatisfaction of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt. Neither doe we repent to the end that thereby wee may in whole, or in part ſatisfie for our ſinnes; for though it could be imagined that the whole ſubſtance of our bodies ſhould be reſolued into teares, yet would they not all of them ſatisfie and appeaſe Gods wrath for one breach of his Commandements; neither is it the water of our eyes, no nor yet the bloud of our hearts wounded deeply with ſorrow, which will purge vs from our ſinnes, either in reſpect of the guilt, puniſhment, or corruptions themſelues; but it is the water and bloud which flowed from our crucified Lord, which clenſeth our guiltie ſoules from the filthy ſpots of ſinne, being applied vnto vs by a true and liuely faith. And therefore let vs not with the Popiſh rabble, fooliſhly imagine that we can by our repentance merit any thing at Gods hand, or ſatisfie his iuſtice for our ſinnes, for ſo ſhall we rob our Sauiour Chriſt of the glory due vnto him for our ſaluation, and ſpoile our ſoules of all true comfort; but let vs repent and vnfainedly turne vnto God in obedience to his Commandements, and to the end that thereby we may approoue our faith before God, the world, and our owne conſciences to be true by this liuely and vndoubted fruit thereof. For it cannot bee if wee haue attained to the aſſurance of Gods loue and the remiſſion of our ſinnes, for the merits and ſatisfaction of Chriſt, but that wee will loue God againe; and this loue cannot be idle but will ſhew it ſelfe in a feruent zeale of Gods glory; and this zeale will make vs abhorre ſinne whereby our gracious God is diſhonoured, and loue righteouſneſſe, whereby his holy name is glorified, and euen ſorrow with bitter griefe when as wee are ouertaken with our corruptions and fall into ſin, ſeeing our Sauiour Chriſt hath not ſpared his precious bloud to purge vs, when as nothing elſe could make vs cleane. Seeing therefore our repentance doth not ſatisfie Gods iuſtice nor purge away any ſinne, let vs not bee perſwaded by Sathan that reconciliation with God, and the remiſſion of our ſinnes dependeth on the dignitie or quantitie of our repentance, but let vs aſſure our ſelues that it is only the bloud of Chriſt applied vnto vs by a liuely faith, that purgeth vs from all our ſins, and maketh full ſatisfaction vnto Gods iuſtice. And therefore though our repentance bee but in ſmall meaſure; yet ſo it be true & vnfained it is a certaine fruit of a liuely faith, and he that beleeueth is made partaker of Chriſt and all his benefits.

Laſtly, Sathan will obiect, that many who haue more bitterly ſorrowed then wee, and haue ſhewed more notable ſignes of exceeding repentance, haue notwithſtanding beene reiected and condemned. To which wee are to anſwere, that though ſuch haue ſhewed more ſorrow, yet they haue had no true repentance, in that their ſorrow hath beene deſtitute of faith, and not ſo much for any hatred of ſinne or loue of God, or vnwillingneſſe to diſpleaſe him, as for horrour of conſcience, and deſperate feare of eternall condemnation. And therefore, though notwithſtanding ſuch ſorrow, they haue beene condemned, yet we may be aſſured that vpon our true repentance, whereby on the one ſide, we looke vpon our ſinnes, and are grieued for them, and on the other ſide behold Gods mercifull and gracious countenance in Ieſus Chriſt by a liuely faith, we ſhal haue the pardon of our ſinnes, and bee made partakers of eternall ſaluation. For the promiſes of the Goſpell are not made to thoſe who afflict themſelues with a deſperate ſorrow, without any hope or deſire of Gods mercie in Chriſt Ieſus, but vnto thoſe who turne vnto him by vnfained repentance, which is ioyned with a true faith and aſſurance of the remiſſion of our ſinnes and euerlaſting life.

ANd ſo much for anſwering thoſe tentations of Sathan, whereby he laboureth to prooue that wee haue no repentance, or at leaſt a falſe and inſufficient repentance, and conſequently that the ſweet and gracious promiſes of the Goſpell doe not belong vnto vs. Now wee are to produce and anſwere ſuch tentations as he alleageth and ſuggeſteth into the minds of thoſe who are effectually called againſt their faith. And theſe are of two ſorts: the firſt whereby he laboureth to perſwade them that they haue no faith; the ſecond, that their faith is ſo weak, ſo imperfect, & ſo mixt with doubting, that it is altogether inſufficient for their ſaluation. For the firſt, he wil thus frame his tentation: Though thou boaſteſt much of thy faith, and thereby preſumeſt that thou ſhalt attaine vnto ſaluation, herein thou mayeſt much deceiue thy ſelfe, and altogether faile of thy purpoſe. For there may be in many ſhewes and ſhadowes of faith, and yet nothing in them but infidelitie; there are alſo many kinds of faith, and yet but one iuſtifying and ſauing faith, there is a generall or hiſtoricall faith; there is a faith of working miracles, which Iudas had as well as Peter; there is a temporary or hypocriticall faith; there is alſo carnall preſumption, wherewith many who haue made goodly ſhewes haue beene bewitched and deceiued to their perdition; ſeeing then there are many falſe faiths, for one which is true, it is likely that thine is one of the greateſt number, and conſequently no true faith. And therefore doe not flatter and deceiue thy ſelfe in thy fond preſumption, by applying the ſweete promiſes and gracious conſolations of the Goſpell, for they appertaine only vnto thoſe who are indued with a liuely faith, of which thou art altogether deſtitute.

And thus Satan endeuoureth to perſwade the Chriſtian exerciſed in the combate of tentations that he hath no faith, to the end that he may deſtroy it, and if it were poſſible bring it indeed to nothing. To which tentation we may firſt anſwere thus generally, that Sathans teſtimonie is no ſound argument to proue that we haue no faith, nor to be beleeued of vs, ſeeing he is not only a malicious murderer, who continually ſeeketh our deſtruction; but alſo a falſe liar from the beginning, who hath not feared to belie men only, but euen God himſelfe, accuſing him of vntruth, enuie, and want of power in that tentation, wherewith hee aſſailed and ouercame our firſt parents. And therefore if he be ſo audaciouſly impudent, as that he durſt belie God himſelfe, we may aſſure our ſelues he wil make no ſcruple of belying vs. Seeing thē Satā is a malicious liar, who deſireth nothing more then our deſtruction, let vs not doubt of our faith becauſe of his teſtimony, yea rather becauſe he ſaith we want faith, we may aſſure our ſelues that we are endued therwith: for that he may worke our finall ouerthrow, it is his vſuall cuſtome to tell the true beleeuing Chriſtian that he is deſtitute of faith, & contrariwiſe the vnbeleeuing worldling, that he hath a ſtrong faith, whereas in truth there is nothing in him, but ſecure preſumption. And therefore let it ſuffice vs, that we know we haue a liuely faith by the teſtimonie of Gods Spirit, and by trying and examining our faith by the touchſtone of Gods Word, for on theſe our faith dependeth, and not on Satans teſtimony.

§. Sect. 3.
How we may know the former tentation to be the ſuggeſtion of Satan; and may diſcern it from the teſtimony of the ſpirit.

Yea, but when this thought or perſwaſion is put into our minds that wee haue no faith, how may we know, that it is the ſuggeſtion of Satan, & not the teſtimonie of the Spirit, or our owne well grounded opinion, ſeeing it is true, that many want faith who are ſo perſwaded? I anſwer, that as there are diuers differences betweene them, ſo theſe two eſpecially. Firſt, becauſe the teſtimonie of the Spirit and our owne true iudgements agree with the word, perſwading vs that we haue a true faith when wee haue the vndoubted ſignes, and bring forth the inſeparable fruits thereof, for the Spirit ſealeth vs in the aſſurance of that truth of which wee are inſtructed in the Scriptures. As for example, when we haue a loue of vertue and obedience, and an hatred of impietie and ſinne, a delight in the ſocietie and fellowſhip of the godly; and an irkſome and tedious diſlike of their company who are lewd and vicious, when wee haue an earneſt deſire of pleaſing God, ioyned with an heartie endeauour of vſing all good meanes whereby wee may be enabled hereunto; and a heartie ſorrow when contrary to this deſire and endeuour we fall into ſinne and diſpleaſe God; and finally, when as wee bring forth the fruits of faith in the workes of holineſſe towards God, and of righteouſneſſe, mercie and compaſſion towards our neighbours. So that the teſtimony of the Spirit, and a well grounded iudgement doe cleerely and demonſtratiuely conclude that, we haue a liuely faith, by euidence of truth, and ſuch vndoubted ſignes & fruits thereof, as are ſpecified in the Booke of God; or contrariwiſe that we haue no faith when theſe fruits and ſignes are wanting. Neither is this concluſion ſuddenly and raſhly inferred, but vpon mature deliberation and examination, whether we can approue our faith by theſe euidences or no; whereupon it followeth that the party is perſwaded that hee hath a true faith, and comfortably reſteth, and reioyceth in this perſwaſion, when after examination hee findeth theſe fruites and ſignes in him; or is throughly conuinced that he is yet in the ſtate of infidelitie, when after ſearch he ſeeth them wanting. But Satans ſuggeſtions, as they are for the moſt part vngrounded, ſo are they alſo raſh and ſudden. For as he telleth the ſecure worldling that hee hath a ſtrong faith, when it is nothing elſe but a ſtrong preſumption, which is vtterly deſtitute of all thoſe holy ſignes and fruites; ſo is hee ready to perſwade the true Chriſtian, that he hath no faith at all, when as hee hath euident ſignes thereof, whereby he might eaſily demonſtrate it both to himſelfe and others, if hee were brought to the touchſtone of Gods Truth, and would but examine his workes and wayes according to this vnpartiall rule which neuer erreth. And hereof it is that becauſe theſe tentations haue no gronnd and footing in the Scriptures, therefore Sathan in his malicious policy thinketh it not fit deliberately to alleage his teſtimonies and reaſons to prooue that either the Worldling hath faith, or that the Chriſtian wanteth it; but ſuddenly caſteth into their minds ſuch conceits; confirming them rather by his forcible injections, and often iteration of them, than by any euidence of reaſon or teſtimony of Scripture. And therefore though his tentations bee ſtrong enough in the children of vnbeliefe, becauſe their corrupt fleſh joyning with him, deſireth to be thus perſwaded, that they may goe on in their ſinnes with ſecurity and delight; yet doe they not leaue any ſetled perſwaſion in the children of God, that they are deſtitute of faith; but onely for a time trouble and vexe them with feare and doubting; with which the Lord ſuffereth them for a while to be turmoyled, that they may vſe all good meanes with more diligence to ſtrengthen their faith, and make their election ſure, and to labour that thoſe ſignes and fruits may be ſo manifeſt in them, that they cannot be called into queſtion.

2.*Cor.*1.22.

§. Sect. 4.
That Satan out of all premiſes inferreth damnable concluſions.

The ſecond difference whereby wee may diſcerne them, is the vſe which is inferred of this concluſion; for if the good Spirit of God vpon the want of thoſe ſignes and fruits, concludeth in our conſciences that wee haue no faith, then doth hee moue vs hereupon to vſe all good meanes whereby wee may attaine vnto it. Thou ſeeſt (will hee ſay) that thou art deſtitute of faith, becauſe all thoſe ſignes and fruites which are mentioned in the Scriptures are wanting; and therefore let neither Sathan nor thine owne fleſh deceiue thee, by cauſing thee to miſtake and reſt in a fond preſumption, in ſtead of a firme aſſurance; but conſidering that without faith there is no ſaluation, therefore (it being a matter of ſuch neceſſitie, and ſo well worth thy labour) vſe all diligence in the vſe of the meanes whereby thou mayeſt haue true faith wrought in thee, as the hearing of the Word, reading of the Scriptures, Prayer, holy conferences and ſuch like; and neuer be at reſt till thou, not onely haue a juſtifying faith, but alſo till by the infallible ſignes and inſeparable fruits thereof thou canſt prooue and demonſtrate it to thine own conſcience. But contrariwiſe Sathan out of this concluſion inferreth another vſe. Thou (will hee ſay to the weake Chriſtian) art deſtitute of a liuely faith, and therefore thou art not the child of God, nor heire of Heauen, but thou art a wicked reprobate reſerued to deſtruction. Thou haſt no faith, and therefore deſpaire of thy ſaluation ſeeing thy ſtate is deſperate, and no longer trouble thy ſelfe in vaine by vſing any meanes to attain vnto life eternall, for hee that beleeueth not is condemned alreadie; but rather comfort thy ſelfe in thy diſcomfort, by following thy worldly pleaſures and contentments; reſting in this perſwaſion, that either thoſe who want faith may be ſaued, and ſo thou among the reſt, or that thou canſt not be ſaued, ſeeing thou wants it. And thus may we diſcerne the teſtimony of the Spirit, from the ſuggeſtions of the Tempter, ſeeing the one proueth and demonſtrateth, the other barely auoucheth and affirmeth: the one perſwadeth the Chriſtian, the other only vexeth and troubleth him; the one by enforcing the ſame concluſion draweth men vnto God, the other driueth them from him. Finally, the one mooueth them thereby to labour more earneſtly in the vſe of the meanes whereby they may attaine vnto faith, that ſo alſo they may be ſaued, the other draweth them vnto doubting and deſpaire, that ſo they may be damned.

Iohn 3.18.

tentation, whereby Sa perſwadeth that we ha
no faith.

Now when by theſe ſignes we doe cleerely perceiue that this ſuggeſtion, to wit, that we haue no faith, is the tentation of Sathan, we muſt in the next place arme our ſelues againſt it. And to this purpoſe we muſt vſe all good meanes with greater diligence, whereby our ſmall ſparke of faith may grow to a great flame, that ſo it may ſhine vnto vs in its owne light, and warme our hearts with true comfort; and then it will not eaſily bee hidden from vs with the aſhes of Satans tentations, and much leſſe extinguiſhed with feare and deſpaire. As alſo wee muſt labour to haue in vs plentifully all thoſe ſignes and fruites of faith, euen the reſt of Gods ſauing Graces, Sanctification, and Holineſſe of life, and hatred of all ſinne becauſe it is diſpleaſing vnto God, and a loue of all religious duties, joyned with an earneſt endeuour of approuing our holineſſe towards God, by the workes of righteouſneſſe, mercy and compaſſion towardes our Neighbours. And then when Satan telleth vs that we haue no faith, wee may boldly according to the Apoſtles rule, Try and examine whether wee be in the faith or no; and finding in our ſelues the infallible ſignes and vndoubted fruits thereof, we may eaſily reject Satans tentation, giuing more credit to our own demonſtrations grounded vpon Gods Word, than vnto his bare ſuggeſtion and aſſertion. In the meane time if by reaſon of the weakneſſe of our faith we haue not theſe euident ſignes and fruits, whereby we may demonſtrate it, and by reaſon hereof are continually moleſted with this ſuggeſtion, that we are deſtitute of faith, and therefore in the ſtate of condemnation, the beſt way to be freed from it, is out of this aſſertion of Satan, to inferre the Holy Ghoſts conſequence and concluſion; and when hee telleth vs that wee haue no faith; let vs conclude hereupon that therefore wee will with more care and diligence vſe the meanes appointed by God for the working of true faith in vs; or when he affirmeth that, if we haue any faith at all, it is weake and inſufficient for our ſaluation, let vs inferre from hence that therefore wee will more conſcionably heare the Word, receiue the Sacraments, vſe reading, meditation, and holy conferences, and with all zeale and feruencie of ſpirit beg a greater meaſure of this grace at the hands of God, that ſo our faith being by all thoſe good meanes ſtrengthened and increaſed, may more certainly aſſure vs that wee ſhall be ſaued. And as wee account it an abuſed manner of arguing in earthly things, if any ſhould thus reaſon with vs; thou art hungry and emptie, and therefore thou muſt bee content to periſh for want of ſuſtenance; thou art ſicke, and therefore reſolue to die; thou haſt no wealth, and therefore thou muſt needes end thy dayes in want and penurie; ſeeing euery mans knowledge of his hunger, ſickneſſe and pouertie, maketh him reſolue and conclude, that hee will therefore vſe all good meanes to attaine vnto meate, phyſicke and riches, that ſo his bodie may bee nouriſhed, his health recouered, and his ſtate bettered and repaired: ſo let vs eſteeme it alike fooliſh and ridiculous that wee ſhould be moued by the ſenſe of our ſpirituall wants idly to lie downe, deſpaire, and periſh; ſeeing the Lord hath ordained ordinary means for the begetting and increaſing of his graces in vs; which if we will vſe we may be aſſured, that wee who are beggerly and poore in theſe ſanctifying gifts, ſhall haue them multiplied and increaſed in vs, vntill at laſt wee ſhall haue plentie and abundance, for if wee bee not wanting in our labours and endeuours, the Lord will neuer be wanting in bleſſing them ſo with his holy Spirit, that we ſhall haue a good iſſue, and find our ſelues much inriched with theſe ſpirituall graces. And if we will thus reſiſt Satan he will flee from vs, if we make this vſe of his ſuggeſtions, wee ſhall foile him with his owne weapons; and profiting in grace by his trials and tentations, and growing more ſtrong by his more aſſaulting, we ſhall vtterly diſcourage him, and make him weary of ſuch a fight which he findeth ſo beneficiall to vs, and diſaduantageable to himſelfe. And thus much for ſome generall meanes, whereby wee may be ſtrengthened againſt this ſuggeſtion of Satan, whereby hee endeuoureth to perſwade the weake Chriſtian that he hath no faith.

Now let vs after a more eſpeciall manner arme our ſelues againſt this tentation; and to this purpoſe it behoooueth vs, firſt, that wee proue againſt Sathans falſe ſuggeſtions, that we haue faith: and ſecondly, that wee arme our ſelues by all good meanes with the ſhield of Faith, ſeeking daily more ſtrength and increaſe thereof, vntill at laſt wee attaine vnto that fulneſſe of perſwaſion, which will fill our ſoules with true peace and comfort, & alſo beate backe all the violence of Sathans ſubtill and fierce tentations. For the firſt: we may proue that we haue a true iuſtifying faith by diuers arguments, as firſt by the degrees thereof, from which we may thus reaſon; Whoſoeuer can truly finde in himſelfe the ſeuerall degrees of a liuely faith, hee may certainly be aſſured that he is indued therewith: but I (may euery Chriſtian man ſay) doe truly, howſoeuer in weake meaſure, find theſe degrees of a liuely faith in mee, and therefore I am aſſured that I am indued therewith.

The firſt degree of true faith, the illumination of the minde.

The firſt degree vnto true faith, is the illumination of our darke and ignorant minds, with the knowledge of the Goſpell, or with the maine principles thereof, wrought in our minds by the outward means ordained of God, and the inward operation of his holy Spirit; whereby wee giue our aſſent to that truth of God, in which the vnderſtanding is informed. And of this, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1. Tim. 2.4. where hee ſaith, that it is the will of God, that all men ſhould bee ſaued, and come to the acknowledging of the truth, that is, to the knowledge of the truth of God, and aſſenting thereunto.

1. Tim. 2.4.

The ſecond degree, a perſwaſion that our ſinnes are pardonable.

The ſecond degree is an aſſurance that our ſinnes are pardonable, which is wrought in vs by the knowledge and due conſideration of Gods infinite mercie, and Chriſts invaluable merits and indefinite promiſes of the Goſpell, made without exception to all repentant and beleeuing Sinners; from whence alſo ariſeth a generall hope that wee ſhall receiue the pardon and remiſſion of our ſinnes, which hope is nouriſhed and increaſed by this conſideration, that the Lord hath placed vs in his Church, and graciouſly granted vnto vs the outward meanes, whereby wee may bee brought vnto vnfained repentance, and haue a liuely faith wrought in vs, euen the miniſtery of the Word and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, vpon which onely condition, the couenant of grace, and all the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell are made and aſſured vnto vs.

§. Sect. 7.
The third degree, an hungring deſire after grace.

The third degree is a hungring deſire after grace, that is, not onely to bee made partakers of Gods mercie, and Chriſts merits and righteouſneſſe, by which wee are iuſtified, reconciled vnto God, and receiue the pardon and remiſſion of all our ſinnes; but alſo after the meanes and inſtrumentall cauſes, whereby the aſſurance of Gods mercie and Chriſts merits is deriued vnto vs, namely, true faith, and vnfained repentance, and the reſt of the graces of Gods ſanctifying Spirit. The which deſire of grace is the beginning of grace, neither can wee deſire it, till in ſome meaſure it be wrought in vs. For regeneration and ſanctification is begun at the ſame time in all the parts & faculties of our bodies & ſouls, ſo that hee who is truly regenerate in any facultie or part, is alſo regenerate in the whole man. And therefore whoſoeuer hath his will renewed and ſanctified to deſire that which is good, is alſo ſanctified and renewed in his vnderſtanding, affections, and in all the powers and faculties of bodie and ſoule. Moreouer (as before I haue deliuered at large) our deſire of grace, faith, and repentance are the graces themſelues which wee deſire, at leaſt in Gods acceptation, who accepteth of the will for the deed, and of our affections for the actions. And therefore if we earneſtly deſire to repent and beleeue, we doe repent and beleeue in Gods ſight: and the Lord hath made the like gracious promiſes to this earneſt deſire of grace, which hee hath made to thoſe who finde themſelues plentifully endued with the graces themſelues. So Matth.5.6. Bleſſed are they which hunger and thirſt for righteouſneſſe, for they ſhall be filled. So the Virgin Marie ſaith in her ſong, That the Lord filleth the hungry with good things, and ſendeth away the rich emptie. And our Sauiour Chriſt calleth vnto him ſuch as thus hunger and thirſt: promiſing that he will ſatisfie them: Iohn 7.37. *Reuel.*21.6. and 22.17. Laſtly, whoſoeuer feeleth this deſire in him joyned with a carefull and continuall vſe of the meanes whereby his deſire may be ſatisfied, hee may aſſure himſelfe that the Lord who hath wrought in him the will to deſire, will alſo in his good time worke in him abilitie to performe, and the graces which hee ſo earneſtly deſires; for he will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him: hee will alſo heare their cry and will ſaue them. As it is, *Pſal.*145.19. So *Pſal.*10.17. Lord, thou haſt heard the deſire of the poore: thou prepareſt their heart, and bendeſt thine eare vnto them. And therefore if in the midſt of our afflictions and grieuous tentations we can cry out with the Prophet *Dauid, Pſal.*38.9. Lord, I powre my whole deſire before thee, and my ſighing is not hid from thee; we may be aſſured how miſerable ſoeuer we are in our owne ſenſe and feeling, that we are in the ſtate of grace, and ſhall haue our deſires ſatisfied, for hee that hath begun this good worke in vs, will alſo in his good time finiſh and perfect it: as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, *Phil.*1.6.

The fourth degree, an approching to the throne of grace.

The fourth degree is an approching vnto the throne of mercy, that we may in all humilitie confeſſe our ſinnes, and acknowledge that we are guiltie of death and condemnation, and alſo that we may in the name and mediation of Chriſt obtaine the pardon and remiſſion of them. And of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, *Heb.*4.16. Let vs therefore goe boldly vnto the throne of grace, that wee may receiue mercy, and find grace to helpe in time of need. And the Prophet *Hoſea, Chap.*14.2. O Iſrael returne vnto the Lord thy God, for thou haſt fallen by thine iniquitie. 3. Take vnto you words, and turne vnto the Lord, & ſay vnto him: Take away all iniquitie, and receiue vs graciouſlie, ſo will we render the calues of our lips. An example herof we haue in the Prophet *Dauid, Pſal.*32.5. Then (ſaith he) I acknowledged my ſinne vnto thee, neither hid I mine iniquitie: for I thought I will confeſſe my wickedneſſe vnto the Lord, and thou forgaueſt the puniſhment of my ſinne. So likewiſe the prodigall ſon hauing attained vnto the ſight of his ſinne, and to a deſire of forgiueneſſe reſolueth to goe vnto his father, and to ſay; Father, I haue ſinned againſt heauen, and before thee; and am no more worthie to bee called thy ſonne; make me as one of thy hired ſeruants, Luke 15.18.19.

The fifth de-

The fifth degree, is a ſpeciall perſwaſion wrought in vs by Gods ſpirit, whereby wee particularlie applie vnto vs the ſweete promiſes of the Goſpell, and are aſſured of Gods loue and fauor, and of the remiſſion of our ſinnes for the merits, righteouſneſſe, and obedience of Ieſus Chriſt, reſting vpon him alone for our ſaluation. An example whereof wee haue in the Apoſtle Paul. Gal.2.20. Thus (ſaith he) I liue, yet not I now, but Chriſt liueth in mee: and in that I now liue in the fleſh, I liue by faith in the ſonne of God, who hath loued me and giuen himſelfe for me. And this perſwaſion ought to goe before ſenſe and experience: for firſt we beleeue, and are perſwaded of the truth of Gods promiſes, and reſiſt diffidence and doubting, and afterwards followes ioyfull ſenſe and experience of Gods mercy, truth & goodnes towards vs. And hence it is that the Apoſtle defineth faith to bee the ground of things which are hoped for, and the demonſtration or euidence of things not ſeene, Heb. 11.1. And to this purpoſe our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith to Thomas, Iohn 20.29. Thomas, becauſe thou haſt ſeene me, thou beleeueſt: bleſſed are they which haue not ſeene, and haue beleeued. An example heereof wee haue in the Canaanitiſh woman, who though ſhee had no experience of Gods truth in his promiſes, yea though ſhee had many repulſes, yet beleeued, and afterwards to her comfort had ioyfull experience of them: *Matth.*15.27.

*Gal.*2.20.
*Heb.*11.1.
Iohn 20.29.
*Mat.*15.27.

And theſe are the degrees of faith, which whoſoeuer findeth in himſelfe, he may bee aſſured that hee hath a true, liuely and iuſtifying faith, notwithſtanding all the tentations of Sathan. If therefore hauing heard the Goſpell, wee haue attained vnto ſome meaſure of knowledge of the chiefe principles thereof; if we haue giuen our aſſent vnto this truth in which our vnderſtandings are informed; if hereby wee haue attained vnto this aſſurance, that our ſinnes are pardonable, and haue conceiued ſome hope in conſideration of Gods infinite mercie and Chriſts merits, that we ſhall be forgiuen and pardoned; if we haue an hungring deſire after grace and mercie, and highly eſteeme the merits and righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt, ſo that wee wiſh nothing more then to bee made partakers of them; if by this deſire we haue beene moued to flee vnto the throne of grace, and there humbly acknowledging our ſins, haue earneſtly deſired pardon and forgiueneſſe: laſtly, if at any time wee haue diſcerned in our ſelues a perſwaſion of Gods loue, and of the pardon and remiſſion of our ſinnes, and that wee haue, or doe reſt vpon the alone merits and obedience of Chriſt Ieſus for our iuſtification and ſaluation, then may we be aſſured that wee are indued with a true iuſtifying faith.

Gods ſpirit.
15.26.

The ſecond argument to proue that wee haue a true and a liuely faith, is the teſtimony of Gods Spirit: for as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh *Rom.*8.15. We haue the ſpirit of adoption, whereby we crie Abba Father. 16. And the ſame ſpirit beareth witneſſe with our ſpirit that we are the children of God: and Verſe 26. Likewiſe the ſpirit alſo helpeth our infirmities: for wee know not what to pray as wee ought, but the ſpirit it ſelfe maketh requeſt for vs with ſighes which cannot be expreſſed, &c. Whoſoeuer therefore haue this teſtimonie in their hearts and conſciences that they are the children of God; whoſoeuer at any time feele or haue felt the Spirit of God powerfull in them, in powring out their ſoules in hearty prayer with ſighes & grones which cannot bee expreſſed, they may be aſſured that they haue receiued the ſpirit of adoption, and conſequently are indued with true faith; for the ſpirit and the fruits thereof (amongſt which, faith is one of the chiefe) are neuer ſeuered. Moreouer, the Apoſtle ſaith, 1.*Cor.*2.12. that we haue not receiued the ſpirit of the world, but the ſpirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are giuen to vs of God. That is, not onely his ſpirituall graces in this life, in which number faith is one of the greateſt, but thoſe excellent ioyes in Gods Kingdome in the life to come, of which alſo wee haue ſome knowledge and taſte by the illumination of the ſame ſpirit. Laſtly, the Apoſtle affirmeth, 2.*Cor.*1.22. That God hath ſealed vs, and hath giuen the earneſt of the ſpirit in our hearts: and *Epheſ.*1.13. he telleth the Epheſians, that after they had heard the Goſpell and beleeued, they were ſealed with the holy ſpirit of promiſe, which was the earneſt of their inheritance, vntill the redemption of the poſſeſſion purchaſed vnto the praiſe of the glory of God. Whereſoeuer therefore this teſtimonie of the ſpirit is, which as an earneſt or ſeale aſſureth them that they are the children of God, there alſo is faith; for as the Apoſtle witneſſeth; after that wee beleeue wee are thus ſealed.

§. Sect. 11.
The third argument is the fight betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit.

The third argument to prooue that wee haue faith, is the conflict and fight which euery Chriſtian feeleth in himſelfe betweene the ſpirit and the Fleſh, the World and the Deuill, and the Combat which is betweene faith and doubting. For ſo long as wee are deſtitute of the ſpirit, and a liuely faith, we are wholly ouer-ſwayed with the fleſh, and Satan like a mightie Tyrant holdeth vs captiue peaceably and without any reſiſtance; but when we haue receiued the ſpirit of God, and haue faith wrought in our hearts, then beginneth a fierce battell, which neuer endeth till by death our ſpirituall enemies get a finall ouerthrow. Though therefore this fight be moſt ſharpe, and exceeding troubleſome to the poore Chriſtian, yet hee may thereby gather vnto himſelfe ſound comfort, and certaine aſſurance that he is indued with the Spirit of God, and a liuely faith. For when he diſcerneth that he is aſſaulted with Sathan and his owne corrupt fleſh, hee may be aſſured that Sathan is diſeaſed of his quiet poſſeſſion by a ſuperiour power, which can be no other but the power of Gods Spirit. Secondly, by his aſſaulting, it manifeſtly appeareth that hee findeth ſome reſiſtance, ſo as hee cannot peaceably re-enter. Thirdly, that howſoeuer our faith ſeeme vnto vs neuer ſo weake, yet it is ſo ſtrengthened continually by vertue of Gods Spirit, that Sathan and all the power of Hell cannot preuaile againſt it: for otherwiſe how could ſuch weakneſſe withſtand ſuch might? Laſtly, being aſſured that it is the Spirit of God which aſſiſteth and inableth vs to withſtand Satan, we may alſo be aſſured that in the end we ſhall obtaine victory, vnleſſe wee would fondly imagine that the Deuill is ſtronger than God, and the violence of his tentations more forcible to deſtroy vs, than the Spirit of God to protect and defend vs. For now they haue ioyned battell, and either the one or the other muſt get the vpper hand, either the Spirit of God muſt thruſt out Sathan, or Sathan the Spirit of God. And therefore how can we doubt of conqueſt, ſeeing we are aſſured that God cannot take the foile, for his power is omnipotent, and with a word of his mouth, hee is able to deſtroy Sathan and all his adherents? and of his will wee need not to make any queſtion; for it will not ſtand with his glory to receiue a repulſe by giuing Sathan place, after he hath taken vpon him our protection.

§. Sect. 12.
How wee may know that this combate is fought betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit.

Yea (will the Tempter ſay) but how wilt thou know that this battell is fought in thee? How canſt thou be aſſured that it is the Spirit of God which fighteth in thee againſt thy ſpirituall enemies, and not rather thine owne tumultuous paſſions and perturbations, and diuers tentations ſuggeſted by the ſame Deuill? To which it is eaſie to make anſwere, Math.12.25.

for neither doth the fleſh fight againſt Sathan, nor Sathan againſt the fleſh, nor either of them againſt themſelues, for ſo their Kingdome being diuided could not poſſibly ſtand, as our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe hath taught vs, Matth.12.25,26. And therefore it muſt needs be ſome other force that cauſeth this oppoſition, which can proceed from nothing elſe but the Spirit of God. But this will more manifeſtly appeare, if we conſider the contrary affections and actions which plainly ſhew themſelues in this battell. For wee finde our faith aſſaulted with doubting and infidelitie, and theſe alſo againe beaten backe after they haue gotten ſome ground and ſubdued with the ſtrength of faith; wee diſcerne alſo our affiance in God ſhrewdly ſhaken with diffidence and diſtruſt, and afterwards this diſtruſt vanquiſhed againe by affiance, ſo as after we haue vttered through the violence of tentation ſome diffident and impatient ſpeeches, yet at the length wee grow to Iobs reſolution, Though he kill mee, yet will I truſt in him. We may alſo diſcerne our zeale ſometime ſo hot in Gods ſeruice, that it expelleth coldneſſe and the fruit thereof dulneſſe and drowſineſſe of ſpirit, and ſometimes by them it is cooled and in outward appearance quenched; and the like may be ſaid of all the other fruits of the fleſh and the ſpirit. Beſides which fight and ſtriuing betweene them and their fruits, the Chriſtian may obſerue in himſelfe a miſliking of the corruptions of the fleſh, great griefe and vexation of minde, becauſe hee is ſtill ſubiect vnto them, and an earneſt deſire to be freed from them, joyned with an holy endeuour in the vſe of the meanes which are ordained of God for this purpoſe, and howſoeuer through the violence of Satans tentations and his owne corruptions, he be ſometimes led captiue into ſin, yet afterwards he is grieued for it, he hateth and abhorreth it, and earneſtly deſireth and endeuoureth for the time to come to leaue and forſake it, and to ſerue the Lord in newneſſe of life. Now whence doth all this oppoſition & contrarietie proceed? ſhall we ſay from the fleſh? why it is againſt all reaſon; for as the Apoſtle Iames diſputeth, Iam.3.11. Doth a fountaine ſend out at one place ſweet water and bitter? Can the fig-tree bring forth Oliues, or a Vine figges? or rather as our Sauiour Chriſt reaſoneth, Matth.7.16. Doe men gather grapes of thornes, or figges of thiſtles? So may I demand, can the fleſh, in the which, as the Apoſtle affirmeth, dwelleth no good thing, bring forth the fruits of the ſpirit, which are quite contrary to the nature thereof, namely, ſorrow for ſinne, hatred of it ſelfe, and its corruptions, and an earneſt deſire of ſanctification and holineſſe of life? it is impoſſible. And therefore we may conclude, that they are the fruits of Gods Spirit in vs, & conſequently that we are the ſonnes of God who are endued with a true and liuely faith; for as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the ſonnes of God, which priuiledge belongeth onely to the faithfull, as appeareth, Iohn 1.12. As many as receiued him, to them hee gaue the prerogatiue to be the ſonnes of God, euen to them that beleeue in his name. So that whoſoeuer haue the Spirit haue faith alſo, for the Spirit and faith, which is a fruit thereof, cannot be ſeuered.

§. Sect.
The fourth gument from our tification.

The fourth argument, whereby wee may be aſſured that we haue faith, is our mortification and dying vnto ſin, and riſing againe to newneſſe of life. For the bloud of Ieſus Chriſt, which is applied vnto vs by faith, as it doth waſh away the guilt and puniſhment of our ſinnes, ſo doth it alſo clenſe vs in ſome meaſure from the corruptions themſelues; and as his death and obedience hath merited the pardon of our ſinnes, ſo alſo Gods Spirit, by vertue whereof we are more and more freed from the bondage and ſeruitude of ſinne and Satan; and as by his reſurrection, hee hath made way for our ſecond reſurrection, whereby we riſe to euerlaſting happineſſe; ſo alſo for our firſt reſurrection, whereby wee riſe from ſinne to newneſſe of life. If therefore wee can find in our ſelues, that our ſinnes and corruptions are by little and little mortified, and that wee ſtriue and endeuour after holineſſe and righteouſneſſe of life; if our vnderſtandings be ſomewhat inlightned in the knowledge of Gods truth, and our ſtubborne wils inclined to holy obedience; if we diſcerne that our affections are in ſome meaſure changed and renewed, then may we be aſſured that wee are endued with a true and liuely faith, which hath applyed vnto vs Chriſt Ieſus and his bloudſhed, death and merits, by vertue whereof this worke of regeneration is begun in vs.

§. Sect.
The laſt ment ta from the rall fruits ſanctifica

Laſtly, wee may be aſſured that wee haue faith by the ſeuerall fruites of ſanctification and regeneration which proceed from it. For example, when we can ſorrow & grieue for our ſinnes paſt, not for any worldly loſſe or feare of puniſhment, but becauſe thereby we haue offended God; when as we hate our preſent ſins and corruptions, eſpecially thoſe which ſticke faſteſt vnto vs, and are moſt pleaſing to our corrupt nature; when as wee endeuour and ſtriue to forſake and mortifie all ſinne, though our carnall affection bee much indeared to it, by reaſon of ſome great pleaſure or profit which it bringeth with it, auoiding with no leſſe care, thoſe ſins which bring worldly benefit, then thoſe which are accompanied with ſhame and puniſhment; when as wee loue God euen when hee afflicteth vs, and in obedience to his commandement, performe ſuch holy duties, and embrace ſuch vertues, not onely which are commendable in the world, but alſo thoſe which are accompanied with ſhame and reproch; when as we loue our brethren, yea euen our enemies, and ſhew this our loue by giuing vnto thoſe who want, and forgiuing thoſe who offend vs; and when more eſpecially we extend this loue and the fruits thereof to thoſe who are of the houſhold of faith, and amongſt theſe principally to Gods Miniſters, who are inſtruments appointed of God for our conuerſion and ſaluation; when as we can ſubmit our ſelues vnto Gods will, and reſt contented in al eſtates with his good pleaſure; when as we loath this life, and the vanities of the world, and deſire our diſſolution, that wee may be with Chriſt, and be freed from our ſinnes; when as wee are patient in afflictions, and in the middeſt of them haue ſome hope of taſting Gods mercie and goodneſſe, grounding our hope vpon Gods promiſes and our owne former experience; when as wee delight in the hearing and meditating in Gods Word, and continue conſtant in the profeſſion and practice of his truth, not only when our obedience is good cheape, but alſo when it is deare and very coſtly, and as well when it is accompanied with loſſe, as when we are in hope to gaine thereby. Theſe and many other the branches of ſanctification are the vndoubted ſignes of a true and liuely faith, and therefore whoſoeuer after due examination, finde that they are endued with them, may alſo be aſſured (notwithſtanding all Sathans ſuggeſtions to the contrary) that they haue faith; for this is the root from which theſe fruits ſpring, and they cannot be ſeuered.

But here the Tempter will take occaſion to ſhake and weaken the faith of thoſe that are but Babes in Chriſt, by telling them that theſe fruits of ſanctification are wanting in them. Yea, that they ought not to beleeue, nor to apply Chriſt and the promiſes of the Goſpell till they can diſcerne them; or if they doe, that they beleeue an vntruth and ſinne againſt God through fond preſumption. To which I anſwere, that if they can wholy denie themſelues in the worke of ſaluation, and acknowledge that there is no name vnder Heauen by which they may be ſaued but by Chriſt alone; if they receiue him giuen vnto them of God, as their only Sauiour, and abandoning their owne merits doe reſt wholly vpon Gods mercies, making his free couenant of grace in Chriſt the only ground of their faith and hope; then may they beleeue, yea ought to bee perſwaded that Chriſt is their Sauiour, and that in and through him they ſhall attaine vnto ſaluation. Neither is it left at libertie to beleeue or not beleeue, but a thing expreſly required, according to that of the Apoſtle Iohn; This is his Commandement that we ſhould beleeue on the name of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt, with whom the Apoſtle Paul agreeth whereas he ſaith, that it is not only a faithfull ſaying in it ſelfe, but worthy to bee accepted and applyed to euery ones particular vſe, that (Chriſt Ieſus came into the world to ſaue Sinners, which by our Sauiour himſelfe is preſſed vpon all vnder the penaltie of euerlaſting condemnation for their vnbeliefe. He (ſaith he) that beleeueth not ſhall be damned. Secondly, I anſwere that this is a diſorderly proceeding (which in many weake Chriſtians ſhaketh their faith and hindreth their progreſſe in ſanctification) when as they thinke themſelues bound firſt to find in them the fruits of holineſſe, and then to beleeue. For this is to make the effect to goe before the cauſe, and the fruit before the tree and root; whereas we muſt firſt beleeue and then bring forth the fruits of our faith in ſanctification and newneſſe of life. Firſt, we muſt receiue Chriſt as our Sauiour, and be ingrafted into him by a liuely Faith, and then through the ſap of grace, receiued from him, we ſhall be inabled to bring forth the fruits of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. Neither muſt wee in our firſt entrance into Chriſtianitie examine our fruits that we may beleeue, (for this were to ground our aſſurance of ſaluation rather on ſomething in our ſelues then on Gods free grace and Chriſts alſufficient merits and ſatisfaction) but to beleeue firſt, that afterwards we may be fruitfull. Nor muſt we firſt receiue Chriſt vpon the finding of any abilities in our ſelues, but vpon Gods vndeſerued grace and free gift. It is true that we cannot attaine vnto further and higher degrees of faith or full aſſurance vnleſſe we firſt bring forth the fruits of it in ſanctification and true holineſſe; nor haue the comfortable ſenſe and feeling of our faith, vnleſſe we can approue it by theſe ſignes and effects. But the firſt act notwithſtanding in Chriſtianitie is to beleeue, and receiue Chriſt by faith, and therefore if we will not beleeue till wee ſee thoſe fruits, wee ſhall neuer ſee them becauſe we doe not beleeue. For till we beleeue wee are in Chriſt, and without him we can doe nothing, as himſelfe hath told vs. Iohn 15.5. whereas on the other ſide if by true faith we receiue Chriſt, and are ingrafted into him, then haue we an inward principle of life begot and begun in vs, which will kindly and naturally ſet vs on working as the ſoule doth the bodie, and will neceſſarily exerciſe it ſelfe in ſpirituall motion, and bring forth fruits without compulſion, as the impe doth that is grafted into a liuing ſtock. When as wee beleeue that God in Chriſt loueth vs, then will wee loue him againe (for we loue him becauſe he loueth vs firſt, as the Apoſtle Iohn teacheth vs) and this loue will make vs carefull to pleaſe and fearefull to diſpleaſe him, and willing to glorifie him by the ſhining light of our godly liues; if wee beleeue that Chriſt is our Sauiour, who hath

CHAP. XLV.

Satans tentations grounded vpon our want of ſenſe and feeling of faith, anſwered.

§. Sect. 11. Satans tentation, whereby he perſwadeth vs that wee haue no faith, becauſe wee feele it not.

WE haue ſhewed the ſignes by which euery beleeuer may bee aſſured that hee hath a true and liuely faith: which howſoeuer they bee to be obſerued in euery faithfull man, yet not at all times, for oftentimes it commeth to paſſe, that the beleeuing Chriſtian doth neither feele his faith nor the fruits thereof, eſpecially in the infancie of faith, and in the combat of tentations, which giueth occaſion vnto Satan of ſuggeſting into his mind a dangerous tentation. Thou braggeſt much (will hee ſay) of thy faith, and thou confirmeſt this thy perſwaſion, that thou art endued therewith with many ſignes and fruits which haue accompanied it; but if now thou examine thy ſelfe aright, thou ſhalt find in thee no ſuch matter; and not to ſtand vpon other arguments, I appeale vnto the teſtimony of thine owne conſcience, whether at this preſent thou haſt any ſenſe or liuely feeling of faith, or canſt diſcerne thoſe fruits thereof, which before thou haſt ſpoken of; if not, then doe not flatter thy ſelfe in vaine with a fond perſwaſion, for though thou wilt not beleeue me, yet at leaſt beleeue thine owne ſenſe and feeling, which plainly telleth thee, that either thou neuer haddeſt any true faith indeed, or if thou haddeſt, yet that now it is quite loſt and periſhed. For the anſwering of which tentation wee muſt diſtinguiſh betweene the habit of faith, and the act of faith; or betweene faith it ſelfe and the work and function thereof, which is to apprehend and apply Chriſts merits & Gods mercie and louing fauour, with all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell. As it is an habituall facultie of the minde, it alwayes continueth and abideth in Gods children, after it is once wrought in them by the Spirit of God; but in reſpect of the function, act or work thereof it hath many intermiſſions, and oftentimes ſeemeth to bee caſt (as it were) into a dead ſleepe. Now we are to know that wee cannot ſenſibly diſcerne faith, as it is an habituall vertue or facultie of the minde, although we haue it in great meaſure in vs, but only ſo farre forth as it manifeſteth it ſelfe in its actions, workes and fruits. And therefore it is an vnſound and falſe manner of reaſoning, to inferre, becauſe we doe not ſenſibly feele and diſcerne that wee haue faith, therefore we are deſtitute thereof; for the habit of faith, or faith it ſelfe may be in vs, and yet for a time may bee ſo hindered by outward accidents, that it cannot ſhew it ſelfe in his actions and fruits, by which alone it is ſenſibly diſcerned.

The anſwere to the former tentation.

§. Sect.2 The former anſwere plaine by ſi litudes,

But I will make this more cleere and manifeſt by ſome familiar ſimilitudes and examples. We know that in the ſickneſſes and diſeaſes of the bodie nature is ſo infeebled and ouercome, that ſometimes the partie affected falleth into a dead ſwound, wherein he is depriued for a time, not only of the vſe of the vnderſtanding, reaſon and memory, but alſo of his ſenſes, motion and vitall functions, ſo that in reſpect of ſenſe and outward appearance, hee is quite depriued of all his vitall, ſenſitiue and intellectuall faculties; but yet a while after by reaſon of ſome outward meanes vſed, or by the ſecret power of nature working in him, hee is reſtored to the vſe of all againe, and liueth, feeleth, moueth and vndeſtandeth as in former times, becauſe he had not loſt theſe faculties, but onely by ſome grieuous impediment was hindred of the vſe of them in their actions and functions: ſo that heere this manner of reaſoning appeareth abſurd and falſe, theſe faculties of the ſoule cannot be ſenſibly diſcerned, and therefore he is quite deſtitute of them. And thus alſo it is in reſpect of our faith, and other habituall vertues, oftentimes through the ſickneſſe of the ſoule in ſinne or the outward violence of Satans tentations it ſeemeth caſt into a ſwound, and depriued of all the ſpirituall faculties and vertues thereof, faith, loue, zeale, hope, patience and and the reſt; but yet ſoone after by hearing the word, by godly admonition, inſtructions, reprehenſions and conſolations made effectuall by the inward operations of Gods Spirit it is reuiued, and all the ſpirituall graces thereof ſhew themſelues againe in their wonted ſtrength; ſo that this inference is no leſſe falſe then the other, there is no ſenſible appearance of theſe ſanctifying gifts and graces, and therefore they are quite loſt and periſhed; for the graces themſelues remaine, though for a time they appeare not in their actions and fruits. So in the time of winter the fruitfull trees are ſo nipped with the cold froſts, and ſo weather-beaten with with tempeſtuous ſtormes that they appeare naked and bare, not onely without fruit but alſo leaues; ſo as if we ſhall iudge according to ſenſe and outward appearance, we ſhould falſly conclude that they are dead;

for by experience we know that they liue & ſucke nouriſhment out of the earth, euen when they are moſt ſpoyled of their ſummer beautie; and though they are toſſed with the winds, yet hereby they are not hurt, but rather take deeper root, and ſo are made capable of more nouriſhment; and though they be nipped with cold froſts, yet hereby they are not made barren, yea rather hereby their wormes and cankers are killed, and they prepared and made fit to bring forth more fruit in the time of Summer, when the comfortable ſpring approcheth, and the ſweet ſhowers and warme Sun-beames fall and deſcend vpon them. And thus it is with the ſpirituall graces in the poore Chriſtian, in the winter of affliction, they are nipped with the cold froſts of feare and doubting, and weather-beaten with the boyſterous blaſts of Sathans tentations, ſo as they ſeeme euen dead at the very root, if wee ſhall judge according to outward ſenſe and appearance: but yet by experience we find that it is farre otherwiſe, for hereby they are not ouer-turned though they be ſhaken, and this ſhaking maketh them to take more deepe root in godlineſſe, and though they be nipped and pinched with feares and doubtings, yet they periſh not, only the canker-worme of pride, fond preſumption, and ſelfe confidence is mortified and killed; and they hereby are prepared & fitted to bring forth more plentifull fruits of holines and righteouſnes, when the ſpring of true comfort commeth, wherin the ſweet ſhowers of Gods holy Spirit diſtill vpon them, and the warme Sun-ſhine of Gods loue and fauour againe appeareth to them. The fire is ſometime ſo couered with aſhes, that it ſendeth forth neither light nor heate, and therefore in outward ſenſe and appearance, it ſeemeth quite extinguiſhed, but when the aſhes are remooued and more wood added to it, it burſteth out into a great flame, and makes all the ſtanders by to perceiue its heat and light: and ſo the graces of Gods Spirit are ſometimes ſo couered with the aſhes of our corruptions, that there appeareth no ſparke of them, nor yet any heat of true comfort; but when our corruptions are remoued with vnfained repentance, and a new ſupply of grace miniſtred vnto them by Gods Spirit, then doth their light appeare vnto vs and warme our hearts with true comfort, and not to vs alone but euen thoſe about vs ſee our ſhining light, and glorifie our heauenly Father. A man hath not alwayes the vſe of his ſenſes, reaſon, and vnderſtanding, as in his ſleepe; but becauſe we cannot ſenſibly diſcerne theſe faculties, ſhall wee therefore conclude that this man who is aſleepe is ſenſleſſe, vnreaſonable, and without vnderſtanding? it were moſt abſurd: for if wee but expect a while till hee bee throughly awakened, our argument will appeare manifeſtly falſe: and ſo ſometime the poore Chriſtian is ouer-taken with the ſleep of drowſie ſecuritie, and is ouer-whelmed for a time with hardneſſe of heart and dulneſſe of ſpirit, ſo as none of thoſe ſpirituall graces which are in him can ſenſibly bee diſcerned by himſelfe or others; but ſhall hee or wee conclude, or beleeue Sathan ſo concluding, that he neuer had them, or now is depriued of them? Why it were as abſurd as the other. For when hee is awaked out of his drowſie ſleepe by the voice of the Lord ſounding in his eares, and by the good motions of his holy Spirit, his faith, loue, zeale and all other vertues and graces ſhew themſelues in their fruits and actions, as manifeſtly as in former times.

That we muſt not conclude that we haue not faith, becauſe wee doe not ſenſibly diſcerne it.

Seeing then thoſe arguments which are taken from ſenſe and feeling ſo often faile, let vs not be perſwaded by Satans tentations, to beleeue that we are deſtitute of faith, and other ſanctifying graces of Gods holy Spirit, becauſe at ſometimes we cannot ſenſibly diſcerne them; for though now our ſoules ſeeme ſo ſicke in the ſenſe of ſinne, that there appeareth no ſigne life, yet the Lord will raiſe vs vp againe, and reſtore vs to perfect health. Though now we ſee no fruits of faith, whileſt we are nipped with the winter of tentations, yet the Lord will water vs with his holy Spirit, and warme our frozen hearts with the liuely beames of his loue and fauour, ſo as we ſhall bring forth abundant fruits in due time and ſeaſon. Though now there appeare not a ſparke of grace in vs, by reaſon all is couered with the aſhes of our corruptions, yet the Lord will ſurely adde a freſh ſupply, and blow vpon vs by his holy Spirit, ſo that our light and heate ſhall appeare to our ſelues and others; and though now our ſpirits bee oppreſſed with drowſie dulneſſe, yet the Lord in his good time will cauſe vs to awake by hearing his voice ſounding in our eares out of his holy Word, and will againe quicken and reuiue vs with his holy Spirit, ſo as after this ſleepe wee ſhall be enabled to follow with cheerfulneſſe, our labours and workes, both which concerne his ſeruice, and thoſe duties alſo which concerne our brethren, only let vs not tempt the Lord in preſcribing him a time, but wait his leiſure, and he will ſurely helpe vs.

Chap. XLVI.

How the weake Christian is to comfort himſelfe, when hee is depriued of the ſenſe of faith, and ſenſibly feeleth the contrarie corruptions.

§. Sect. 1.
That the Christian in the want of preſent ſenſe, muſt comfort

BVt thou wilt ſay, how is it poſſible that my ſoule ſhould receiue any cōfort, or that I ſhould preſerue my ſelfe from falling into vtter deſperation, ſeeing I cannot feele in me any good thing, nor

Rom.11.29.

Philip.1.6.

diſcerne any ſparke of Gods grace? What hope remayneth, when as I plainly diſcerne in ſtead of faith, doubting and infidelitie; in ſtead of the loue of God, hatred & rebellion, in ſtead of zeale, coldnes and drowſie dulnes, and in ſtead of all ſanctifying graces, nothing elſe but a heauie maſſe of filthy corruptions? I anſwere, that when thou haſt no comfort in thy preſent ſenſe and feeling, then thou muſt call to thy remembrance the times paſt, in which thou haſt by faith apprehended Gods loue, mercie and goodneſſe towards thee, and brought forth the fruits of thy faith in the works of holineſſe, appertaining to Gods ſeruice and the workes of Chriſtian righteouſneſſe, belonging to our brethren. For we may aſſure our ſelues, that if euer wee haue truly diſcerned theſe graces of Gods Spirit by the fruits of ſanctification in vs, they are not taken from vs, ſeeing the gifts and calling of God are without repentance. And where he hath begun a good worke, there he will finiſh it and bring it to perfection, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, *Phil.*1.6. Wee know that the woman being with child, feeleth no life or motion of the childe diuers monethes together, after the time of her conception, and after that ſhe hath felt it ſtirre and moue oftentimes, there is an intermiſſion wherein ſhee feeleth not the motion thereof a good ſpace together, and yet notwithſtanding becauſe in former times ſhee hath felt it, ſhee is perſwaded that a liue childe is in her;, and comfortably hopeth to haue happy trauell. And thus it fareth with Gods children oftentimes, after that by the ſeed of the Word, faith is begotten and conceiued in them, they feele no life, motion, nor vndoubted ſignes thereof a long while, and after that they haue the remiſſion of their ſins & are reconciled vnto God, they haue not the feeling & ſenſe of pardon & reconciliation diuers monethes, yea ſometimes many yeeres together, which the Lord in his wiſdom & mercy doth, that hee may moue them hereby vnto more ſerious repentance, and earneſtly to hunger after a greater meaſure of faith, carefully vſing the meanes ordained for this purpoſe; and that they may more eſteeme & be more thankfull for his inualuable benefits after that they haue full aſſurance of them. And after they haue a feeling of faith and other ſpirituall graces by their motions and fruits, oftentimes againe they are depriued of it, either becauſe they haue wounded their conſciences by falling into ſome knowne ſinne, or for that it pleaſeth the Lord to exerciſe their faith, and maniſeſt his power in their weakneſſe, moouing them hereby to denie themſelues, and to reſt wholly vpon him, yeelding vnto him the whole glory & prayſe of their ſaluation. What therefore is to be done in ſuch a caſe? Surely they are not vtterly to bee diſcouraged, nor to ſuffer themſelues to ſinke into the gulfe of deſperation; but as the ſenſe and feeling of their ſtate ought to humble them vnder Gods hand, and to mooue them to enter into a due examination of themſelues, and to a ſerious repentance for their ſinnes, ſo they muſt take comfort vnto themſelues, and prop vp their declining faith, by calling to minde former times wherein the Lord hath ſhewed his mercifull and gracious countenance vnto them, and wherein they in token of thankfulneſſe haue glorified God, by their holines and righteouſneſſe of life. An example whereof we haue in the Prophet Dauid, who being grieuouſly afflicted, could not receiue in his ſoule any true comfort: for howſoeuer he did thinke vpon the Lord, yet hee was ſtill troubled, and though hee prayed vnto him, yet his ſpirit was full of anguiſh. What helpe did he then find in this his preſent diſtreſſe? He telleth vs in the fifth Verſe: Then (ſaith he) I conſidered the dayes of old, and the yeeres of ancient time; I called to remembrance my ſong in the night, namely, his ſongs of thankſgiuing, whereby hee had prayſed God for his great benefits: and I remembred the workes of the Lord, certainly I remembred thy wonders of old. So the holy man Iob apprehending and conceiuing of God as of his enemie, in reſpect of his preſent ſenſe and feeling, and being moued by his friends to doubt of his graces, which hee had receiued, and to condemne himſelfe for an Hypocrite, comforteth himſelfe, and ſtrengtheneth his faith in the middeſt of all theſe grieuous tentations, by calling to his remembrance, his fruits of faith and workes of ſanctification, which hee had diſcerned in himſelfe in former times, as appeareth, Chap. 31. Whoſe example if the children of God in like diſtreſſe will follow, how miſerable ſoeuer they are in their preſent ſenſe and feeling, yet they may receiue vnto themſelues comfort, becauſe Gods gifts and calling are without repentance.

Iob 31.

§. Sect.
That we m diſcerne faith in th fruits th

And as wee are thus to comfort our ſelues with the remembrance of our ſtate in times paſt: ſo for the preſent when wee haue not a liuely ſenſe and feeling of our faith, we muſt examine it in the fruits thereof, which are oftentimes euident and apparant, when as faith it ſelfe from which they ſpring is hidden and ſecret. For as, though wee ſee not the roote of a tree which is couered with the earth, yet when we behold the boughes, and branches, leaues and fruits, wee certainly conclude, that there is a root, which giueth vnto them life and nouriſhment; And as when we ſee the Sun-beames, wee thereby know that it is riſen and ſhineth, though wee doe not, or cannot behold the bodie thereof; and finally as when wee looke vpon the flowing ſtreames, we are aſſured that there is a fountaine from which they ſpring, though it bee re-remote and not ſubject to our view: ſo though our faith, the roote of godlineſſe and fountaine of all grace be hidden from vs, and is not to bee diſcerned by our ſenſe and feeling; yet by the fruits of ſanctification, and by the Chryſtall ſtreames of pietie flowing from vs, both in our words and actions, we may be aſſured, that howſoeuer our faith be couered with the heauy burthen of grieuous tentations, ſo as we cannot comfortably behold it; yet it dwelleth and liueth in vs, ſeeing theſe effects doe neceſſarily ſhew, that their is a cauſe from which they proceed. If therefore we cannot feele faith rooted in our hearts, let vs labour to diſcerne it in its fruits; And firſt let vs conſider, if wee be inflamed with Gods loue; for ſeeing we haue only ſo much loue of God, as we haue aſſurance of his loue towards vs, hereof it will neceſſarily follow, that according to the proportion of our loue, ſuch alſo is the meaſure of our faith, though for the preſent wee haue no ſenſe and feeling of it. And if we be alike doubtfull of our loue, let vs examine it alſo by the fruits thereof; as namely whether we be not deſirous to pleaſe God, and endeuour in ſome poore meaſure, to performe obedience to his Commandements; whether we be not zealous of his glory, and euen grieued and much diſpleaſed, when we ſee or heare, that he is diſhonoured eithet by our ſelues or others; whether wee loue our brethren and take delight in the ſocietie and fellowſhip of thoſe who are good and vertuous, loathing on the other ſide their company who are impious, and profeſſed ſinners; whether we affect a Chriſtian becauſe he is a Chriſtian, and, hauing no worldly reſpects, could be content to performe vnto him all duties of mercy and loue, becauſe he is a ſincere Profeſſour of God true Religion. For if wee haue this Chriſtian loue & charity towards men, wee may hereby bee aſſured that our hearts are poſſeſſed with the loue of God; ſeeing this is the fountaine from which it iſſueth and ſpringeth. So alſo we may examine our faith by the fruits of repentance: for if our ſinnes trouble and grieue vs, euen in this reſpect, becauſe by them we haue offended our gracious God; if euen thoſe ſinnes which heretofore haue beene pleaſant to our carnall appetites, are now ſo loathſome and diſtaſtfull, that we would not be hired to commit them wittingly & willingly with great riches and preferments; If we haue a deſire to be feed from ſinne, not onely in reſpect of the guilt and puniſhment, but alſo in regard of the pollution and corruption, and in loue to God, ſtriue to performe the works of holines, yea (if it were poſſible) to yeeld perfect obedience to the Law of God, then may we hereby be aſcertained that we haue a true & liuely faith, though we cannot ſenſibly diſcerne it, in the act of apprehending and applying the mercies of God, and merits of Chriſt, becauſe it were as impoſſible to haue theſe things in vs without a liuely faith, as it is to find a perpetuall running riuer without a fountaine, or fruit vpon that tree, which neuer had either ſap or root.

That there is a proportion betweene our faith and all other ſauing graces, and between theſe graces one with another.

And as we may by other of Gods ſanctifying and ſauing gifts and graces which are the fruites of faith, bee aſſured that faith it ſelfe is rooted in our hearts: ſo may we alſo by their meaſure and quantitie be certified of the meaſure and quantitie of our faith; for as all our ſauing gifts and graces, ſanctification and new obedience, doe ſpring and iſſue from our faith as from the roote and fountaine, ſo haue they an anſwerable proportion thereunto. So that where there is a large root and plentifull fountaine of a liuely Faith, there are alſo many fruites of grace, and abundant ſtreames of repentance, ſanctification and new obedience. For example, according to the meaſure of our Faith and aſſurance of Gods loue towards vs, ſuch a proportion wee haue of loue towards God, and anſwerable to our loue is our feare to diſpleaſe him, our zeale of his glory, our deſire to doe thoſe things which are acceptable in his ſight, our hatred of ſinne and loue of righteouſneſſe, our ſorrow for our former iniquities, our care and endeauour of future amendment, and our loue of the brethren, yea, euen of our enemies for Gods ſake. And ſo alſo according to the meaſure of our faith, ſuch is the meaſure of our aſſiance, hope, patience and the reſt. Whereupon it followeth, that where there is a ſtrong faith, and full perſwaſion of Gods loue, there is alſo a great meaſure of loue towards God, of zeale to glorifie him, of care to pleaſe him, hatred of ſinne, loue of righteouſneſſe and the reſt: and contrariwiſe where there is a large proportion of theſe graces and fruits of Faith, there alſo is ſtrength of Faith, and fulneſſe of perſwaſion anſwerable thereunto. So as it is impoſſible that wee ſhould haue a great hatred of ſinne, or loue of righteouſneſſe, a zeale of Gods glory, or loue of our brethren, if either wee were deſtitute of faith, or had it but in ſmall meaſure, ſeeing according to the proportion of our faith, wee haue a like quantitie and proportion of all and euery of Gods ſanctifying and ſauing graces.

§. Sect. 4.
With what cautions and limitations it is to be held that there is a iuſt proportion betweene all Gods graces in vs.

Howbeit this which I haue ſaid is to bee vnderſtood with ſome caution and limitation; neither doe I here ſpeake of common gifts of the ſpirit, or of meere morall and ciuill vertues, which being either naturall, or attained vnto by a mans owne induſtry and labour, are imparted to the vngenerate as well as vnto thoſe who are truly conuerted vnto God; all which may bee in diuers meaſures and proportions, either as they are immediatly beſtowed vpon them, or as they more labour for the inriching of themſelues with one rather then with another: but onely of euangelicall, ſanctifying, and ſauing graces, which are ſo proper and peculiar to Gods elect, as that they are imparted to them all, and to no other. Neither doe I ſpeake of the acts and operations of theſe ſanctifying and ſauing graces, by which they are made ſenſible vnto vs, and ſubiect to our feeling & comprehenſion; for in regard hereof they are oftentimes, either all of them ioyntly, or any of them ſeuerally increaſed and diminiſhed; yea ſome of them quite loſt in our ſenſe and feeling, when as the other doe ſtill remaine without any great alteration; by reaſon of ſome outward accidents which further the manifeſtation of ſome graces, or hinder and hide others; ſo as the one ſort are more cleerely ſeene, and the other not diſcerned: but I only vnderſtand it of the inward habits of theſe graces which hold ſtill their proportion, euen when their acts and operations doe moſt differ. And this wee may ſee euen in corporall faculties and their actions and operations; for whileſt the hand is bound ſo as it cannot worke, the eye may ſee, and the foote may walke; whileſt the eye cannot ſee, by reaſon of the darknes, or becauſe it is hudwinckt, the mouth may taſte, and the noſe may ſmell, and all the parts of the bodie feele: and yet at the ſame time when the actions and operations of any of theſe parts are hindred, their faculties doe ſtill remaine in their wonted proportion, the hand hauing his full ſtrength when it is bound, as well as when it is at libertie, and the eye the faculty of ſeeing, euen when it is couered, or in the darke, as well as at noone day, when the vaile is taken away, though for the preſent they cannot exerciſe them in their functions and operations. Whereof it is that wee may truly ſay at the ſame time, that the eye cannot ſee, and that the hand hath no power to worke, ſpeaking of their actions and functions; and that the eye can ſee, and the hand as able to worke as euer before, if we reſpect their faculties and habituall vertues and abilities. And thus alſo theſe ſanctifying and ſauing graces increaſe and diminiſh in their actions and operations, when as the faculties, habits, and graces themſelues doe ſtill keepe the wonted proportion. They increaſe and exceed one another when as being exerciſed they maſter their contrary corruptions, and being tried doe get the vpper hand in the tentation; whereby (like the Sunne in his full ſtrength when all cloudes are vaniſhed away) they ſhine gloriouſly vnto vs in their perfect brightneſſe. And contrariwiſe they are decreaſed & diminiſhed, when they are hindred in their operations, through the violence of our corruptions, and foiled in the tentation, not in their habits, but in their acts, not in themſelues, but in reſpect of our ſenſe and feeling; for in this regard they hold ſtill their owne proportion, euen as the Sunne is alwayes alike light and bright in its owne nature, when it is couered with a cloud, and when the cloud is quite diſpelled, though there bee great difference in reſpect of our ſight and apprehenſion.

§. Sect. The firſt ction agai the equal portion of Gods g made, ſwered.

The which being rightly vnderſtood may enable vs to anſwere diuers objections: for firſt it may bee ſaid, that as there are diuers tentations which generally oppugne all graces, ſo there are ſome which more directly oppoſe againſt ſome one ſanctifying gift, then againſt any other; euen as there is alſo ſome naturall corruption, which ſtriueth and ſtruggleth againſt one grace vnto which it is directly oppoſed, in more ſpeciall & forcible manner than againſt all the reſt; and therefore when in theſe incounters theſe ſpeciall tentations and corruptions doe preuaile, and foile thoſe particular graces which they oppoſe, it muſt needs follow that they are more impaired and abated then other graces which are not thus aſſaulted.

To which I anſwere, that if the habit of one grace could be thus abated (which I doe not hold) the proportion might ſtill continue, ſeeing the other graces might be abated with it, becauſe they are mutuall cauſes of one another, and ſo any one receiuing ſtrength imparteth it to al the reſt; & contrariwiſe. But I rather ſay, that the habits of the graces do ſtill continue in their perfection & proportion; & that the defect and diſproportion which by reaſon of theſe tentations and corruptions, are in one grace more then in another, is not in the habit of this grace, but onely in its act and operation, which for a time is hindred and impaired through the violence of this ſpirituall incounter. For as in a corporall fight the hand and arme being more exerciſed then other parts, are alſo more wearied and become weake and feeble, when as other parts of the bodie retaine their wonted ſtrength; but yet this weakneſſe is only in reſpect of the act and operation, and that only for a time, and not in reſpect of that habituall ſtrength and power which is in the hand and arme, (for this as experience teacheth vs is not abated, but rather increaſed by this exerciſe.) So though that grace which is exerciſed more eſpecially in the tentation, or fighteth againſt ſome ſtrong corruption, in reſpect of the act and operation be weakened and foiled, the reſt retaining their wonted vigour, yet the habit of this grace is not impaired, but rather by this ſpirituall exerciſe ſtrengthened and increaſed. And yet though it increaſeth & waxeth ſtronger in this fight and exerciſe, this growth maketh no diſproportion, nor maketh it exceed the reſt of Gods ſauing graces which are not thus exerciſed and tried, becauſe (as I ſaid) they are mutuall cauſes one of another, and therefore no ſooner is any of them increaſed & ſtrengthened, but it alſo ſtrengtheneth and increaſeth all the reſt. As for example, the ſtronger our faith is in the aſſurance of Gods loue, the ſtronger alſo our loue towardes God waxeth; the ſtronger alſo our hope, affiance, zeale and obedience: the more wee increaſe in loue, the more in repentance, ſorrowing more heartily that wee ſhould by our ſinnes offend one whom we loue ſo much; and more earneſtly endeuouring to doe thoſe things which are acceptable vnto him. And ſo againe the more wee are increaſed in loue, zeale, repentance, and the reſt; the more cauſe we haue to increaſe in faith and in the aſſurance of our election and ſaluation, becauſe theſe things make our election ſure, and they who embrace and doe them ſhall neuer fall, as the Apoſtle telleth vs. And of this mutuall ſtrengthening and increaſing of one grace by another, Saint Paul telleth vs where he ſaith, that, Faith cauſeth peace with God, and this peace and Faith worke patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope, Chriſtian boldneſſe, which ſuffereth vs not to be aſhamed, becauſe the loue of God is ſhed abroad in our harts by the holy Ghoſt which is giuen to vs.

ction ane Scrip-

s one is

Againe, whereas it may be objected that in the Scriptures ſome are commended for one grace more than for an other; yea when as they are diſcommended for their defects in ſome, they are praiſed and approued for their excellency in others; the ſame anſwere may ſerue which I gaue to the other. For in regard that they had ſome one grace more tried than the reſt, when they got the vpper hand in the triall and tentation, and exerciſed their grace to the glory of God who gaue it, it was more manifeſted, and by this occaſion more approued and commended, euen as one Souldier in the band being of equall ſtrength and valour with ſome others, may yet haue more prayſe of theſe vertues, hauing had that occaſion of exerciſing and manifeſting them which the other wanted. And thus Iob is ſpecially commended for his patience, becauſe this was more principally exerciſed by his afflictions, though he had as great a meaſure of faith, hope, affiance, and obedience, as in the Hiſtory plainly appeareth. And ſo Abraham is chiefly commended for his Faith, becauſe it was chiefly exerciſed in the apprehenſion of Gods promiſes, though his loue, obedience, hope and the reſt, were in him in as great a proportion. And thus alſo when one grace more than another was hindered, and foiled in the tentation, their defect and weaknes in this grace is condemned, as more tending to the diſhonour of God and euill example of others, not that the habit was loſt or impaired, but only that it failed in the act and operation, either becauſe God withdrew his ſtrength, or ſuffered it to bee aſſaulted with a more ſtrong and violent tentation. And yet they are ſaid to haue this grace abated, becauſe the operations are hindered and empaired, which alone manifeſt them vnto vs, and make them ſubject to our ſenſe and feeling; though the habit remayne in his wonted perfection. And thus the Angell of the Church of Epheſus is commended for his workes, labour, patience, zeale, wiſdome, perſeuerance, and yet is cenſured for defect in loue, not that theſe graces could be in him, and loue itſelfe, or the habit of loue wanting, for loue is the fountaine of all true obedience; but becauſe his loue by ſome inward corruption or outward tentation was for a time hindered in ſome particular acts and operations, which tended to Gods diſhonour and the offence of others; and therefore afterwards admoniſhing him to riſe from whence hee had fallen, and to repent, he biddeth him not to recouer his loſt loue but to doe his firſt workes, that is, ſuch actions of loue as hee had formerly done, which either through the violence of his inward corruptions, or through the ſtrength of ſome outward tentation hee had omitted and neglected.

Verſe 5.

§. Sect.7.
The third obiection anſwered. How one man ſeemeth to excell in one grace more then in another.

Laſtly, whereas it may bee objected, that one man excelleth in zeale, another in loue, another in meekneſſe, another in patience, and ſo in the reſt; and that they appeare defectiue in ſome graces that excell in others; to this wee may anſwere, that it is not becauſe this proportion of Gods ſauing graces holdeth not; but eyther becauſe mens naturall parts, inclining to one grace more than to another, doe make it ſeeme greater than the reſt; or becauſe ſome naturall corruptions, or ſtrong tentations, doe hide and hinder the operations of ſome one grace more than another, ſo as it cannot appeare in its owne quantitie and greatneſſe. For example, if a man be of an hot and cholericke nature, a ſmall meaſure of true zeale, will ſeeme great and feruent. If a man be of a ſoft and milde diſpoſition, a little true meekneſſe, patience or humilitie, will make a goodly ſhew and ſeeme excellent. And contrariwiſe a great proportion of grace is ſcarce diſcerned, where the naturall corruptions are ſtrong and contrary vnto it. So a great deale of holy loue is hardly perceiued in a man who is naturally of a ſowre and ſullen diſpoſition; an high degree of ſpirituall patience ſcarce appeareth in a cholericke and froward nature, and ſo in the reſt. Whereby it appeareth that notwithſtanding a man may ſeeme rich and excellent in ſome graces in reſpect of his naturall parts inclining to them, and very poore and defectiue in others, vnto which he is naturally moſt auerſe and indiſpoſed, yet theſe ſanctifying gifts and graces in themſelues hold a proportion, both euery one, one with another, and all with faith from which they flow and ſpring.

§. Sect. 8. The conſolation which ariſeth from the equall proportion of Gods ſauing graces in vs.

From whence ariſeth to euery Chriſtian man a ſingular conſolation: for when hee feareth that he is deſtitute of any ſpirituall grace, he is to conſider if he haue any other graces; as when hee cannot diſcerne his faith, hee is to examine himſelfe, what meaſure of repentance, hatred of ſinne, or loue of righteouſneſſe he hath attained vnto; what loue hee hath of his brethren, and eſpecially of Gods Miniſters, what zeale, what feare of God, what patience, humilitie and the reſt; aſſuring himſelfe that though his faith or other graces bee hid from him through the greatneſſe of his corruptions, or violence of tentations, yet they are in him, and hold a proportion with thoſe other graces which he beſt diſcerneth. As therefore though wee cannot ſee the roote of a tree, yet wee may iudge at the quantitie thereof by the bodie and boughes which ſpring from it; and when we haue but one limbe of a man, we may by holding a proportion, geſſe at the quantitie of euery other member, & alſo at the whole ſtature: ſo howſoeuer we can not diſcerne our faith or ſome other grace of God in vs, yet may we know that we haue it, and in what quantitie and proportion it is in vs, by ſome other grace and ſanctifying gift which is more plaine and eaſie to bee diſcerned; ſeeing they are ſo enchained one to another, that he who hath one hath all the reſt, and the linkes of this golden chaine hold a fit and conuenient proportion amongſt themſelues.

§. Sect. 9. That we may haue a true faith though we apprehend Gods wrath, and haue no preſent ſenſe of his loue.

But heere Satan will further obiect, that we are not onely without all ſenſe and feeling of faith, but alſo that we doe ſenſiblie feele the heauie burthen of Gods wrath, and plainely diſcerne his frowning and angrie countenance againſt vs: and therfore howſoeuer thoſe children of God, who are in his loue and fauour, may haue ſome faith in them, although it doe not alwayes ſo ſenſibly appeare, yet it is impoſſible that wee ſhould haue any ſparke thereof, ſeeing wee haue not any ſenſe of Gods loue and fauour; nay do ſenſiblie perceiue the cleane contrarie. To which we are to anſwere, that faith doth not relie it ſelfe vpon our ſenſe and feeling; for as the Apoſtle ſaith, faith is the ground of things (not preſently enioyed, but) which are hoped for, and the euidence or demonſtration of things (not which are ſubiect to the ſenſes, & ſenſiblie diſcerned; but which are not ſeene Heb. 11. 1. And wee beleeue that ſuch ioyes are prepared for vs, as neither eye hath ſeene, nor eare hath heard, nor the heart of man conceiued, as it 1. Cor. 2. 9. And it is a kind of infidelitie to beleeue onely thoſe things which are ſubiect vnto our ſenſes and vnderſtandings; and therefore when Thomas would not beleeue that Chriſt was riſen before it was made manifeſt to his ſenſes, he is reproued for infidelitie, Be not (ſaith he) faithleſſe but faithfull. So that when our ſenſe and feeling ceaſe, then faith beginneth his chiefe worke; and the moſt excellent faith ſheweth it ſelfe moſt clearely when we haue no ſenſe and feeling, or when wee diſcerne and feele the plaine contrarie, for it is an eaſie matter to bee ſtrong in faith, when God ſheweth himſelfe gratious and mercifull; but when hee appeareth vnto vs like an angrie Iudge, when as his wrath flameth out againſt vs, then to behold his loue thorow the vizard of anger, to apprehend by faith his mercie and goodneſſe towards vs, when our ſenſes apprehend nothing but his wrath and diſpleaſure, to grow to Iobs reſolution in the middeſt of our bitter agonies, and grieuous afflictions, though he kill me, yet will I truſt in him, and when wee haue receiued many repulſes and bitter ſnubs, yet with the Cananitiſh woman, to continue our ſuite, argueth ſuch a faith as is hardly found, no not in Iſrael. Our want of ſenſe therefore of Gods loue and fauour doth not argue want of faith, for our faith is not grounded vpon our ſenſe and feeling, but vpon Gods gratious promiſes, immutable goodneſſe, and infallible truth: and if euer wee haue taſted of Gods loue and mercie, whatſoeuer we apprehend in our preſent ſenſe and feeling, faith concludeth that wee are ſtill in his loue and fauour, for hee is without change or ſhadow of change, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Iam. 1. 17. and whom hee loueth, to the end he loueth them, as our Sauiour hath taught vs, Iohn 13. 1. Though then our ſenſe of Gods loue faile, yet may our faith continue ſtrong, as appeareth plainly in the example of Iob, who though he conceiued of God in his ſenſe and feeling that hee had hidden his face from him, and tooke him for his enemy, though he ſeemed to write bitter things againſt him, and made him to poſſeſſe the ſinnes of his youth, yet by a liuely faith he ſtill reſted and relied vpon him, proteſting, that though he ſhould ſlay him, yet he would truſt in him: as appeareth, Iob 13. 15. Yea our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe who could not ſinne through infidelitie, in reſpect of his preſent ſenſe and feeling complaineth that God had forſaken him.

§. Sect. 1 That we are rather to be-leeue Gods word then owne ſenſe feeling.

If therefore Satan goe about to perſwade vs that wee are without faith, becauſe wee preſently apprehend not Gods loue, nor feele the ſweet taſte of his goodneſſe; we are to anſwere, that wee are not to build our aſſurance vpon our owne ſenſe and feeling, but vpon Gods vnchangeable goodneſſe, and gratious promiſes made vnto vs in Chriſt Ieſus. And if at any time our ſenſe and feeling, tell vs one thing (namely, that God hath withdrawne his loue from vs, and will neuer againe looke gratiouſly vpon vs) and the word of God aſſure vs of another thing (to wit, that God will neuer forſake vs, but continue his loue towards vs vnto the end) we are not to giue credit vnto our owne feeling, but vnto Gods word; for otherwiſe what do we elſe but prefer our oft deceiuing ſenſe, before Gods infallible truth, and imagine that we can better diſcerne and iudge of our eſtate then God himſelfe? But the word of God telleth vs, that if we turne vnto the Lord by vnfained repentance, ſorrowing for our ſinnes paſt, hating our preſent corruptions, and deſiring and endeuouring to mortifie the fleſh and the luſts thereof, and to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and newneſſe of life; and if we beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt reſting vpon him for our ſaluation; or though preſently wee feele not this faith and repentance, yet if euer in former time we haue diſcerned them in vs, that then we are receiued into Gods loue and fauour, and therefore ſhall haue his loue continued vnto vs vnto the end, be made partakers of his gratious promiſes, and heires of euerlaſting life; for the promiſes of the Goſpell are not reſtrained to thoſe who feele their faith, but to thoſe that haue faith; not to thoſe who feele that they doe beleeue, but vnto thoſe who doe beleeue.

Sect. 11.
at concluſigrounded our ſenſe, often falſe.

Neither is the not feeling of Gods loue & fauour a good argument to proue that we are out of his loue and fauour; or the apprehenſion of his wrath and anger in our ſenſe and feeling a ſound reaſon to perſwade vs that wee are ſubiect to his wrathfull diſpleaſure; ſeeing the being of a thing, and the ſenſible diſcerning of the thing to bee, are diuers; and therefore howſoeuer at ſometimes they concurre, yet oftentimes they are ſeuered and diſioyned. So that the concluſion which is inferred negatiuely from the ſenſes, to prooue the not being of their obiect, is not onely commonly falſe, but alſo oftentimes, abſurd and ridiculous; For example, ſometimes we ſee not the beames of the Sunne, as in the night ſeaſon, or when it is couered with ſome thicke blacke cloud, but ſhall wee heerehence conclude that the Sunne ſhineth not, nor will euer againe appeare vnto vs? So the bright beames of Gods loue and fauour are ſometimes hidden from vs in the night of tentations, & ſo ſhadowed with the cloud of our grieuous ſinnes, that wee cannot ſenſiblie diſcerne them; but ſhall we hence inferre, that there is no grace and mercie to bee found with God, or that hee will neuer againe make them ſhine vpon vs? The one is as abſurd as the other, and both groſly falſe. Thus ſometimes the Sun is eclipſed by the interpoſition of the Moone, ſo as wee cannot diſcerne his light, or very dimly; but if any man ſhould conclude from hence that it were quite taken away, or that we were depriued vtterly of his life-preſeruing influence, the experience of two or three houres would ſhew the ſottiſh weaknes of his ſenſible argument: and ſo in like manner, Gods fauour and loue are ſometimes ſo eclypſed with the interpoſition of ſome great afflictions, that wee cannot diſcerne them for a time, or but very dimly: but if we ſhal inferre hereof that they are quite taken from vs, and that they caſt forth no comfortable influence on vs, our preſent preſeruation from being ſwallowed vp into vtter deſtruction, and the ſpeedie returne of wonted ioy and conſolation, by the apprehenſion of Gods loue and goodneſſe towards vs, will euidently ſhew that this argument taken from the ſenſes, is void of reaſon.

§. Sect. 12.
That Gods deareſt children haue not at all times ſenſiblie diſcerned Gods loue, and the graces of his Spirit in them.

Laſtly, it appeareth by the examples of Gods children from time to time, that though they haue beene endued with a great meaſure of faith, and in a high degree of fauour and loue with almighty God, yet ſometimes in their owne ſenſe they haue found in them, in ſteade of Faith nothing but doubting, diffidence and infidelity; and for Gods loue and fauour, they haue apprehended nothing in their preſent feeling, but the wrathfull anger of God, and his grieuous diſpleaſure. Looke vpon the holy man Iob, who, by Gods owne teſtimonie was the iuſteſt man vpon earth, and highly in Gods loue and fauour, and you ſhall finde that ſometimes hee ſheweth in his grieuous afflictions no ſigne of Faith, but groſſe doubting, and in outward appearance vtter deſpaire of Gods mercie & loue; for he curſeth the day of his natiuitie, and wiſheth that he had neuer beene borne; he complaineth that God was his enemie, and had made him as a marke whereat hee ſhot venomed arrowes that Gods terrors did fight againſt him, and that hee did hide his louing countenance from him. So the Prophet Dauid, a man according to Gods owne heart, ſheweth plainly that ſometime he hath no ſenſe and feeling of the graces of Gods Spirit in him; as when he deſireth the Lord to create in him a cleane heart, and to renew a ſpirit within him, to reſtore him to the ioy of his ſaluation, and to ſtabliſh him with his free ſpirit; and ſometimes hee apprehendeth in his preſent ſenſe and feeling, in ſtead of Gods loue and fauour, nothing but his wrath and diſpleaſure, and therefore complaineth as one reiected and forſaken of God. So Pſal. 22. 1. My God, my God why haſt thou forſaken mee, and art ſo farre from my health, and from the words of my roaring. 2. O my God I cry by day but thou heareſt not, and in the night and haue no audience. And Pſal. 77. 7. hee thus complai-plaineth, Will the Lord abſent himſelfe for euer? and will he ſhew no more fauour? 8. Is his mercie cleane gone for euer? doth his promiſe faile for euermore? 9. Hath God forgotten to be mercifull? Hath hee ſhut vp his tender mercies in diſpleaſure? 10. And I ſaid this is my death, &c. So Pſal. 88.14. Lord, why doeſt thou reiect my ſoule, and hideſt thy face from me? 15. I am afflicted, and at the point of death; from my youth, I ſuffer thy terrours doubting of my life. 16. Thine indignations goe ouer me, and thy feare hath cut me off. The Prophet Ieremy likewiſe being grieuouſly afflicted in bodie and minde, was for a time depriued of the ſenſe of Gods loue and fauour, apprehending nothing but preſent miſery, and in ſtead of faith, affiance in God, peace of conſcience, and other ſanctifying graces, he bewrayeth his doubting, diffidence and impatiencie, curſing the day of his birth, and euen the man that brought firſt newes hereof to his Father, and wiſhing that his mother had beene his graue, or her wombe a perpetuall conception: as appeareth, *Ier.*20.14,15. &c. The like may be ſaid of the Apoſtle Peter, for where, I pray you, was the ſenſe and feeling of his faith, affiance in God, zeale of his glory, loue, feare, and other ſanctifying graces, when as he ſhamefully denied his maſter, yea forſwore him with bitter curſings. And yet we muſt either grant that Peter at this time was endued with a liuely faith, or elſe that the Prayer of our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt was not effectuall, for he had prayed for him that his Faith might not faile, as appeareth, Luke 22.32. But what ſhould I inſiſt in the examples of theſe the ſeruants of God, ſeeing the alone example of Chriſt himſelfe is ſufficient to cleare this point; for though he were the only begotten, and beſt beloued Son of his heauenly Father, yet in his own ſenſe & feeling he apprehendeth nothing but Gods wrath and grieuous diſpleaſure, and lamentably complaineth as a man abandoned and caſt out of all loue and fauour, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me: which words ſhew both Chriſts affiance in God, and his preſent apprehenſion in his ſenſe and feeling; for in reſpect of his affiance and truſt in God he called him ſtill his God; in reſpect of his ſenſe and feeling he complaineth that he is forſaken. Whereby it is manifeſt, that a man may bee dearely beloued of God, and yet for a time apprehend nothing but his wrath and diſpleaſure; that he may haue faith and affiance in God, and yet at the ſame time be depriued of all ſenſe and feeling of his loue and fauour. And therefore when we are exerciſed in the combate of tentations, let not Sathan perſwade vs that wee are vtterly depriued of the loue and fauour of God, becauſe through the violence of his tentations and grieuouſneſſe of our afflictions we doe not apprehend it; nor that we are deſtitute of faith, and all other ſpirituall graces, becauſe wee doe not ſenſibly diſcerne them in our feeling; for this hath beene the ſtate of the deare children of God from the beginning of the World, and ſhall be to the end thereof.

meanes w by it may increaſed.

AND ſo much concerning thoſe reaſons whereby we may proue that wee haue faith, and alſo anſwere Satans tentations, whereby he laboureth to perſwade vs that we are deſtitute thereof. The ſecond means whereby we may arme our ſelues againſt Satan & his ſuggeſtions, is, that we moſt earneſtly labour & endeuor after we haue found that we haue ſome faith to increaſe therein, and grow vp from faith to faith, vntill we come to that fulneſſe of perſwaſion which will bring ſuch peace of conſcience, as Satan with all his power & malice ſhal not be able to diſturbe. Otherwiſe we ſhall be continually ſubject to feares and doubtings, and exceedingly ſhaken with his tentations. And in truth not without cauſe, if we ſtand ſtill at a ſtay; for howſoeuer Satan and all the power of Hell cannot preuaile againſt the leaſt meaſure of true faith to quench and vtterly deſtroy it; yet this will bring no ſound comfort vnto thoſe which reſt contented with this little quantitie, & neuer labour after increaſe, becauſe this is a ſhrewd preſumption, that their faith is falſe and counterfeit. For aſſoone as the ſeed of true faith is ſown in vs, and hath taken root, it ſprouteth vp, vntill it come to full ripeneſſe; in which reſpect our Sauiour compareth it to a graine of muſtard ſeed, which though it be one of the leaſt ſeeds of the garden, yet it groweth to a great tree. Neither in truth is it poſſible that any who haue taſted of true faith, and of thoſe ineſtimable benefits, which it aſſureth vs of, ſhould content themſelues with a ſmall pittance, & neuer labour after more. For who is it that hauing taſted and eaten a little bit of ſome delicious meate, doth not with a hungring appetite deſire more till hee be filled and ſatisfied? Who is it that hauing any weake title vnto, and aſſurance of ſome goodly inheritance, doth not earneſtly deſire and vſe all good and lawfull meanes whereby his title may be ſtrengthened, and his aſſurance confirmed? And can wee thinke that any haue truly taſted of faith, and the excellent benefits which accompany it, as namely aſſurance of Gods loue, and the remiſſion of our ſinnes, peace of conſcience, joy in the holy Ghoſt, who content themſelues with a little mo-modicum and neuer hunger after more? or can we imagine that we haue any ſmall title or true aſſurance of thoſe vnſpeakable joyes of Gods Kingdome, and that vnualuable patrimonie of euerlaſting glory, if wee neuer vſe meanes to confirme our title; and ſtrengthen our aſſurance? Surely it is impoſſible; and therefore if wee would haue any ſound comfort and peace of conſcience; if we would euer attaine to a certaine perſwaſion that wee haue true faith indeed, let vs vſe moſt carefully and diligently all good meanes, whereby wee may ſtrengthen and confirme our faith, vntill it grow from a ſmall ſeed to a great tree, which will bring forth plentifull fruits of godlineſſe and righteouſneſſe; and vntill it wax of a ſmall ſparke, a great flame which will throughly warme our hearts with true comfort, which are naturally frozen with feare and doubting: for howſoeuer Sathan cannot quench the leaſt ſparke of liuely faith, yet he will ſo couer it with the aſhes of his tentations, that wee ſhall neither diſcerne the light nor feele the heate thereof.

Now the meanes which we are thus carefully to vſe, are of two ſorts: the firſt tending to the increaſing and ſtrengthening of our faith, the other ſeruing to preſerue vs from doubting and deſperation. The meanes to ſtrengthen and increaſe our faith are diuers: the firſt is the frequent and attentiue hearing of Gods Word, for as this is the ordinary meanes, whereby faith is begotten and begun in vs, ſo is it a chiefe meanes to ſtrengthen and confirme it; as it is that liuely ſeed from which Faith doth ſpring, ſo is it that heauenly dew whereby it is watered, and increaſed from a little plant to a great tree. And therefore as it is not ſufficient for a fruitfull harueſt, that the blade or branch ſhould ſprout vp, vnleſſe it be watered continually with ſweet dew and ſhowers from Heauen, and ſo preſerued from dying and withering; ſo if euer we meane to reape the ripe fruits of faith to our euerlaſting comfort, we muſt be carefull that not onely it take rooting, and bring forth a blade of an outward profeſſion, but alſo that it may be watered with this heauenly dew of Gods word; otherwiſe when the ſunne of affliction and perſecution ariſeth, it will die and wither.

medi-Gods

The ſecond meanes to ſtrengthen our faith, is diligently to reade and meditate in Gods Word, eſpecially the Goſpell, wherein is contained thoſe ſweet and gracious promiſes which are made indefinitely vnto all who repent of their ſinnes, and beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt, reſting and relying vpon him alone for their ſaluation. And to this purpoſe our Sauiour willeth the Iewes to ſearch the Scriptures, becauſe they are they which teſtifie of him: Iohn 5.39. And hereby Dauid ſaith, that he was comforted in his troubles and euen quickned when hee was dead, Pſal. 119.50.

Pſal. 119 50
The third meanes, holy conference.

The third meanes is holy conference with our godly brethren; for hereby thoſe which are falling are confirmed, and the wearie hands and weake knees ſtrengthened, as Eliphas ſpeaketh, Iob 43.4. And thoſe who are weake in faith are comforted and eſtabliſhed with the godly inſtructions, profitable exhortations and ſweet conſolations of thoſe who are more ſtrong. And therefore the Apoſtle Paul exhorts thoſe who had attained vnto a great meaſure of faith, that they admit ſuch as were weake into their company to be made partakers of their Chriſtian conferences, to the end that hereby they might be more and more ſtrengthened and confirmed: Rom. 14.1.

Iob 43.4.

Rom. 14.1.
The fourth meanes; the vſe of the Sacraments.

The fourth meanes is the holy vſe of the Sacraments: for the Lord hath added them as Seales to the hand-writing of his couenant of grace, to confirme our faith in the full aſſurance of his promiſes, and to take away all doubting. For whereas the weake conſcience might make ſome ſcruple, in reſpect that the promiſes of the Goſpell in the preaching of the word are deliuered indefinitely and after a generall manner, in the vſe of the Sacraments, they are aſſured vnto them particularly and as it were by name; and that not after ſome obſcure and hidden manner, but moſt familiarly by ſuch common ſignes as are ſubject to the ſenſes, and within the reach of the ſhalloweſt capacitie.

The fift meanes, good workes.

A fifth meanes to confirme our faith, is to be continually conuerſant in good workes, and to bring forth the fruits of holy obedience; for hereby our Faith is exerciſed, and by exerciſe ſtrengthened and increaſed: whereas contrariwiſe the neglect hereof doth wound the conſcience, and ſo quench the liuely heate of faith, that though it bee not quite extinguiſhed, yet it will not ſenſibly be diſcerned. As therefore the ſtrength of the bodie is increaſed by exerciſe, and for want thereof waxeth faint and languiſheth, and as the ſtomacke is by outward exerciſe of the bodie made more fit to performe his duty of concoction; ſo our Faith being exerciſed in good workes is made more ſtrong and fit to performe his dutie in applying Chriſt and the ſweete promiſes of the Goſpell vnto vs, and without this ſpirituall exerciſe it waxeth faint and the ſtrength thereof abateth.

The ſixth meanes, feruent prayer,

The laſt meanes to ſtrengthen and increaſe our Faith is continuall and feruent prayer; for faith is not in our owne power, but it is the free gift of God, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, Epheſ. 2.8. Neither can any man come vnto our Sauiour Chriſt by a liuely Faith except it be giuen him of the Father, as himſelfe ſpeaketh, Ioh. 6.65. And therefore when we ſee the ſmall meaſure of our faith, we are with the Apoſtles to pray vnto the Lord that he will increaſe it, Luke 17.5. And when wee perceiue that it is grieuouſly aſſaulted with doubting and infidelitie, we are in feruencie of ſpirit to cry out with the Father of the poſſeſſed child: Lord I beleeue, helpe my vnbeliefe, Marke 9.24. And then wee may be aſſured that the Lord will heare vs, and ſatisfie our godly deſires making vs to grow vp from faith to faith, till at length wee attaine vnto ſuch a fulneſſe of perſwaſion, that wee ſhall be able truly to ſay with the Apoſtle; I am perſwaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature ſhall be able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God, which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord: as it is Rom. 8.38,39.

§. Sect. 3. Of the meanes whereby wee may be preſerued from doubting and deſperation.

And theſe are the meanes which properly tend to the ſtrengthening and increaſing of our Faith; which whoſoeuer carefully and conſcionably vſe, they ſhall aſſuredly finde them effectuall for this purpoſe. Now wee are to ſpeake of thoſe meanes whereby wee may be preſerued from doubting and deſperation, of which I ſhall not need to ſpeake much, ſeeing the moſt of theſe points are handled before.

The firſt meanes,

Matth. 11.28.

Iohn 3.16.

Matth. 9.13.

Iohn 6.40.

The firſt meanes to preſerue vs from deſperation, is to call continually vnto our remembrance, that the promiſes of the Goſpell are generall and indefinite, excluding none how vnworthy and ſinfull ſoeuer they bee, if they doe not exclude themſelues through their owne infidelitie. So Matth. 11.28. our Sauiour calleth all humbled and repentant ſinners without exception, ſaying, Come vnto me all yee that labour and are heauie laden, and I will eaſe you. And Iohn 3.16. God ſo loued the world that hee ſent his only beloued Sonne, that as many as beleeue in him ſhould not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life. So Matth. 9.13. our Sauiour ſaith, that hee came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance; either then refuſe the name of repentant ſinner, or acknowledge that he came to ſaue thee. And Iohn 6.40. our Sauiour ſaith, that it is his Fathers will who ſent him, that euery man who beleeueth in him ſhould haue euerlaſting life. Seeing therefore God taketh no exception, nor excludeth any, let vs not exclude our ſelues through our infidelitie and want of faith.

The ſecond meanes,

Marke 1.15.

Heb. 6.18.

Secondly, we are to conſider that the Lord hath not only propounded his gracious promiſes vnto vs but alſo hath commanded vs to beleeue them. So Marke 1.15. Repent and beleeue the Goſpell, and 1. Iohn 3.23. This then is his Commandement, that we beleeue in the name of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt, &c. Now to beleeue in Chriſt, is not only to beleeue that he is a Sauiour, for this euen the Deuils beleeue alſo, but to beleeue that he is our Sauiour, and to reſt wholly vpon him for our ſaluation, and to ſay with the Apoſtle Paul, Gal. 2.20. I liue by the faith in the Sonne of God, who hath loued mee and giuen himſelfe for me. And to the end that wee may be armed againſt doubting, and enabled to performe this commandement, it hath pleaſed the Lord to adde vnto his word, his oath, that by two immutable things, wherein it is impoſſible that God ſhould lie, wee ſhould haue ſtrong conſolation, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Heb. 6.18. Yea, he hath alſo vnto his word and hand-writing annexed his Sacraments as Seales, that there might be no place left for doubting. Seeing therefore the Lord hath expreſly commanded vs to beleeue, and vſed all meanes to enable vs to performe his commandement, let vs not now diſpute the queſtion, whether we are worthy to beleeue or no, or whether ſuch grieuous ſinners are bound to this dutie, but ſetting all excuſes aſide, let vs beleeue in obedience to Gods Commandement.

The third meanes.

1.Iohn 2.

Thirdly, wee muſt not alwayes ſet before vs the innumerable multitude and huge waight of our ſinnes, but withall call to our remembrance the infinite mercies of God and merits of Chriſt, who hath offered vnto his Father a propitiatory ſacrifice, and full ſatisfaction for all our ſinnes, and not for ours onely, but for the ſinnes of all the world, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1. Iohn 2.2. Seeing therefore our debt, how great ſoeuer it be, is already diſcharged; and our ſinnes, how outragious ſoeuer they be, are fully puniſhed long agoe in our Sauiour Chriſt, and ſeeing God himſelfe who hath receiued this debt, and taken this puniſhment, is of infinite iuſtice & mercie, why ſhould we now deſpaire of pardon? Yea, why ſhould wee not moſt certainly be aſſured that the roll and reckoning of our ſinnes, how long ſo euer it be, is quite blotted out and cancelled, ſo as they ſhall neuer againe be laid to our charge?

1. Iohn 5.

Fourthly, we are to conſider, that deſperation it ſelfe is a moſt hainous and outragious ſin, for it cauſeth men to deny Gods truth in his promiſes and to account him a liar, as the Apoſtle plainly ſpeaketh, 1. Iohn 5.10. Hee that beleeueth not God, hath made him a liar, becauſe he beleeued not the record, that God witneſſed of that his Son: it maketh them to deny the infinitenes of his mercies, as being ouer-matched with the multitude of their ſinnes, and the ſufficiencie of Chriſts merits, as though they were not a full ſatisfaction for their horrible offences: yea it maketh them to denie Gods iuſtice, in thinking that he will puniſh that ſin againe in them, which hath alreadie beene puniſhed in Chriſt, and exact that debt which hee hath alreadie diſcharged. Now to denie the truth, mercie, and iuſtice of God, is to deny God himſelfe; for his attributes are his eſſence, the truth of God is the true God, the mercie of God is the mercifull God, and the juſtice of God is the juſt God. So that hee who deſpaireth, falleth into the moſt horrible and capitall ſin of Atheiſme, euen the higheſt degree of wickedneſſe, and therefore more hainouſly offendeth God by this ſinne alone, then by all his other ſinnes whatſoeuer, though they appeare neuer ſo monſtrous and abominable in his owne eyes. For example, the ſinne of Cain, in deſpairing of God mercie, was farre more horrible then his monſtrous ſin which he committed in murthering his own brother. The ſinne of Iudas in deſpairing of Gods mercie, was without compariſon greater than his ſinne in betraying his Lord and maſter: in a word, to commit Idolatrie, blaſphemie, murther, adulterie, and ſuch like are hainous ſinnes, but vtterly to deſpaire of Gods mercie is greater than they all. Though then wee haue committed other horrible wickedneſſe againſt the Lord, yet in no caſe let vs deſpaire, for this were to adde ſinne vnto ſinne, and clog our conſciences more with the laſt, then with all the former, till with their intolerable waight they preſſe vs downe vnto hell. You would count him worſe then mad, who being oppreſſed with a heauy burthen, ſhould (in ſteed of vſing other meanes to eaſe himſelfe) adde thereunto a double or treble waight, till he were preſſed downe groueling vnto the earth: but aſſuredly ſuch and greater madneſſe it is when wee feele our conſciences clogged with a heauie burthen of ſinne, in ſtead of ſeeking eaſe by comming to Chriſt by a liuely Faith, to fall into vtter deſperation, and thereby to adde a treble waight to the alreadie intolerable burthen of ſinne, which lieth vpon our conſciences, vntill they bee preſſed dovvne into the torments of hell. Euery one would eſteeme him a moſt deſperate wretch, who hauing offended ſuch a gratious Prince, as would moſt ſurely forgiue him vpon his vnfained ſorrow for his fault, ſhould in ſtead of humbling himſelfe and asking pardon, deſperately refuſe his Princes mercie, and withall denie his truth in his promiſes, his mercy, iuſtice, and euen diſauow him for being a lawfull Prince: but ſuch and much more wickedneſſe doe they deſperatly commit, who hauing offended God by their grieuous ſinnes, who is ſo gratious and mercifull, that he would moſt certainly forgiue them vpon their repentance; in ſtead of humbling themſelues by vnfained ſorrow, doe deſperatly refuſe to be partakers of his mercy, and not onely ſo, but denie the infinitnes of his mercy, iuſtice, truth in his promiſes, and conſequently his Godhead and being. And therefore when (the waight of ſinne preſſing vs) Satan perſwadeth vs to deſpaire of mercie and forgiueneſſe, let vs in any caſe reſiſt this tentation, and boldly ſay vnto the tempter; It is enough and too much that I haue offended my gratious God with my other ſinnes, though I doe not adde thereunto this ſinne, which is greater then all the reſt; the waight of my other wickednes is alreadie too too heauie vpon my conſcience, and therefore farre be it from mee to load it with a far more vnſupportable burthen; I haue already too much diſhonoured my good God by my horrible ſinnes, and therefore I will in no caſe more diſhonour him now, than in committing all my other ſinnes; by denying his mercy, iuſtice, truth, and euen the Godhead it ſelfe, for what were this but being alreadie in a burning feuer to caſt my ſelfe into the fire; or being gone ouer the ſhooes in the filthy puddle of ſinne to plunge my ſelfe ouer head and eares, and euen to drowne my ſelfe in the bottomleſſe gulfe of deſperation? yea rather now I will breake off my ſinnes by vnfained repentance and turne vnto the Lord whom I haue offended, aſſuring my ſelfe that his mercies are infinite, and therefore he is readie to forgiue, and the merits of Chriſt a full ſatisfaction for all my ſinnes, though many & hainous, & therefore in him, I may boldly challenge forgiueneſſe as a thing of right appertaining to me. And thus are we to reſiſt Sathans tentations, and though we be often foiled, yet to riſe againe, in no caſe ſuffering him to plucke out of our hand the ſhield of Faith; though he hath diſarmed vs of the breſt-plate of righteouſnes; for if once we be depriued of this part of the ſpirituall armour, we ſhall lie open to all his blowes and thruſts, vntill wee bee wounded to the very death.

Sect. 5. Though the afflicted conſcience abhorreth other ſinnes, yet it eaſily inclineth to deſperation.

But moſt lamentable it is to ſee the grieuous miſerie of poore humbled ſinners, whereunto they are brought through the violence of Satans tentations; for howſoeuer feeling the heauie waight of their other ſins they earneſtly deſire to bee freed from them, howſoeuer being tormented with the grieuous ſmart of their other wickedneſſe they hate and abhorre it, yet they eaſily ſuffer themſelues to bee plunged into deſperation with euery friuolous tentation, and quietly offer their hands to bee manacled and bound in theſe gyues of hell without reſiſtance. But let all ſuch ſtirre vp themſelues, and gather their oppreſſed ſpirits all together, ſaying to their owne conſciences, I hate and deteſt from my heart my former wickednes, and ſhall I now entertaine a ſin more horrible then all the reſt? the burthen of my other ſins oppreſſe me, and make me earneſtly to deſire eaſe, and ſhall I adde a loade farre more intolerable to my afflicted conſcience? I am filled with ſhame and confuſion, becauſe by my former ſinnes I haue diſhonoured my gratious God: and ſhall I continue more to diſhonour him by doubting he will increaſe it, Luke 17.5. And when wee perceiue that it is grieuouſly aſſaulted with doubting and infidelitie, we are in feruencie of ſpirit to cry out with the Father of the poſſeſſed child: Lord I beleeue, helpe my vnbeliefe, Marke 9.24. And then wee may be aſſured that the Lord will heare vs, and ſatisfie our godly deſires making vs to grow vp from faith to faith, till at length wee attaine vnto ſuch a fulneſſe of perſwaſion, that wee ſhall be able truly to ſay with the Apoſtle; I am perſwaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature ſhall be able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God, which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord: as it is Rom. 8.38,39.

Of the meanes whereby wee may be preſerued from doubting and deſperation.

And theſe are the meanes which properly tend to the ſtrengthening and increaſing of our Faith; which whoſoeuer carefully and conſcionably vſe, they ſhall aſſuredly finde them effectuall for this purpoſe. Now wee are to ſpeake of thoſe meanes whereby wee may be preſerued from doubting and deſperation, of which I ſhall not need to ſpeake much, ſeeing the moſt of theſe points are handled before.

The firſt meanes.

Matth.11.28.

Iohn 3.16.

Matth.9.13.

Iohn 6.40.

The firſt meanes to preſerue vs from deſperation, is to call continually vnto our remembrance, that the promiſes of the Goſpell are generall and indefinite, excluding none how vnworthy and ſinfull ſoeuer they bee, if they doe not exclude themſelues through their owne infidelitie. So Matth. 11.28. our Sauiour calleth all humbled and repentant ſinners without exception, ſaying, Come vnto me all yee that labour and are heauie laden, and I will eaſe you. And Iohn 3.16. God ſo loued the world that hee ſent his only beloued Sonne, that as many as beleeue in him ſhould not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life. So Matth. 9.13. our Sauiour ſaith, that hee came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance; either then refuſe the name of repentant ſinner, or acknowledge that he came to ſaue thee. And Iohn 6.40. our Sauiour ſaith, that it is his Fathers will who ſent him, that euery man who beleeueth in him ſhould haue euerlaſting life. Seeing therefore God taketh no exception, nor excludeth any, let vs not exclude our ſelues through our infidelitie and want of faith.

The ſecond meanes.

Marke 1.15.

Secondly, we are to conſider that the Lord hath not only propounded his gracious promiſes vnto vs but alſo hath commanded vs to beleeue them. So Marke 1.15. Repent and beleeue the Goſpell, and 1. Iohn 3.23. This then is his Commandement, that we beleeue in the name of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt, &c. Now to beleeue in Chriſt, is not only to beleeue that he is a Sauiour, for this euen the Deuils beleeue alſo, but to beleeue that he is our Sauiour, and to reſt wholly vpon him for our ſaluation, and to ſay with the Apoſtle Paul, Gal. 2.20. I liue by the faith in the Sonne of God, who hath loued mee and giuen himſelfe for me. And to the end that wee may be armed againſt doubting, and enabled to performe this commandement, it hath pleaſed the Lord to adde vnto his word, his oath, that by two immutable things, wherein it is impoſſible that God ſhould lie, wee ſhould haue ſtrong conſolation, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Heb. 6.18. Yea, he hath alſo vnto his word and hand-writing annexed his Sacraments as Seales, that there might be no place left for doubting. Seeing therefore the Lord hath expreſly commanded vs to beleeue, and vſed all meanes to enable vs to performe his commandement, let vs not now diſpute the queſtion, whether we are worthy to beleeue or no, or whether ſuch grieuous ſinners are bound to this dutie, but ſetting all excuſes aſide, let vs beleeue in obedience to Gods Commandement.

Galath.2.

Heb.6.18.

The third meanes.

1.Iohn 2.

1. Iohn 5.

Fourthly, we are to conſider, that deſperation it ſelfe is a moſt hainous and outragious ſin, for it cauſeth men to deny Gods truth in his promiſes and to account him a liar, as the Apoſtle plainly ſpeaketh, 1. Iohn 5.10. Hee that beleeueth not God, hath made him a liar, becauſe he beleeued not the record, that God witneſſed of that his Son: it maketh them to deny the infinitenes of his mercies, as being ouer-matched with the multitude of their ſinnes, and the ſufficiencie of Chriſts merits, as though they were not a full ſatisfaction for their horrible offences: yea it maketh them to denie Gods juſtice, in thinking that he will puniſh that ſin againe in them, which hath alreadie beene puniſhed in Chriſt, and exact that debt which hee hath alreadie diſcharged. Now to denie the truth, mercie, and juſtice of God, is to deny God himſelfe; for his attributes are his eſſence, the truth of God is the true God, the mercie of God is the mercifull God, and the iuſtice of God is the iuſt God. So that hee who deſpaireth, falleth into the moſt horrible and capitall ſin of Atheiſme, euen the higheſt degree of wickedneſſe, and therefore more hainouſly offendeth God by this ſinne alone, then by all his other ſinnes whatſoeuer, though they appeare neuer ſo monſtrous and abominable in his owne eyes. For example, the ſinne of Cain, in deſpairing of God mercie, was farre more horrible then his monſtrous ſin which he committed in murthering his own brother. The ſinne of Iudas in deſpairing of Gods mercie, was without compariſon greater than his ſinne in betraying his Lord and maſter: in a word, to commit Idolatrie, blaſphemie, murther, adulterie, and ſuch like are hainous ſinnes, but vtterly to deſpaire of Gods mercie is greater than they all. Though then wee haue committed other horrible wickedneſſe againſt the Lord, yet in no caſe let vs deſpaire, for this were to adde ſinne vnto ſinne, and clog our conſciences more with the laſt, then with all the former, till with their intolerable waight they preſſe vs downe vnto hell. You would count him worſe then mad, who being oppreſſed with a heauy burthen, ſhould (in ſteed of vſing other meanes to eaſe himſelfe) adde thereunto a double or treble waight, till he were preſſed downe groueling vnto the earth: but aſſuredly ſuch and greater madneſſe it is when wee feele our conſciences clogged with a heauie burthen of ſinne, in ſtead of ſeeking eaſe by comming to Chriſt by a liuely Faith, to fall into vtter deſperation, and thereby to adde a treble waight to the alreadie intolerable burthen of ſinne, which lieth vpon our conſciences, vntill they bee preſſed dovvne into the torments of hell. Euery one would eſteeme him a moſt deſperate wretch, who hauing offended ſuch a gratious Prince, as would moſt ſurely forgiue him vpon his vnfained ſorrow for his fault, ſhould in ſtead of humbling himſelfe and asking pardon, deſperately refuſe his Princes mercie, and withall denie his truth in his promiſes, his mercy, iuſtice, and euen diſauow him for being a lawfull Prince: but ſuch and much more wickedneſſe doe they deſperatly commit, who hauing offended God by their grieuous ſinnes, who is ſo gratious and mercifull, that he would moſt certainly forgiue them vpon their repentance; in ſtead of humbling themſelues by vnfained ſorrow, doe deſperately refuſe to be partakers of his mercy, and not onely ſo, but denie the infinitnes of his mercy, iuſtice, truth in his promiſes, and conſequently his Godhead and being. And therefore when (the waight of ſinne preſſing vs) Satan perſwadeth vs to deſpaire of mercie and forgiueneſſe, let vs in any caſe reſiſt this tentation, and boldly ſay vnto the tempter; It is enough and too much that I haue offended my gratious God with my other ſinnes, though I doe not adde thereunto this ſinne, which is greater then all the reſt; the waight of my other wickednes is alreadie too, too heauie vpon my conſcience, and therefore farre be it from mee to load it with a far more vnſupportable burthen; I haue already too much diſhonoured my good God by my horrible ſinnes, and therefore I will in no caſe more diſhonour him now, than in committing all my other ſinnes; by denying his mercy, iuſtice, truth, and euen the Godhead it ſelfe, for what were this but being alreadie in a burning feuer to caſt my ſelfe into the fire; or being gone ouer the ſhooes in the filthy puddle of ſinne to plunge my ſelfe ouer head and eares, and euen to drowne my ſelfe in the bottomleſſe gulfe of deſperation? yea rather now I will breake off my ſinnes by vnfained repentance and turne vnto the Lord whom I haue offended, aſſuring my ſelfe that his mercies are infinite, and therefore he is readie to forgiue, and the merits of Chriſt a full ſatisfaction for all my ſinnes, though many & hainous, & therefore in him, I may boldly challenge forgiueneſſe as a thing of right appertaining to me. And thus are we to reſiſt Sathans tentations, and though we be often foiled, yet to riſe againe, in no caſe ſuffering him to plucke out of our hand the ſhield of Faith; though he hath diſarmed vs of the breſt-plate of righteouſnes; for if once we be depriued of this part of the ſpirituall armour, we ſhall lie open to all his blowes and thruſts, vntill wee bee wounded to the very death.

Sect. 5. Though the afflicted conſcience abhorreth other ſinnes, yet it eaſily inclineth to deſperation.

But moſt lamentable it is to ſee the grieuous miſerie of poore humbled ſinners, whereunto they are brought through the violence of Satans tentations; for howſoeuer feeling the heauie waight of their other ſins they earneſtly deſire to bee freed from them, howſoeuer being tormented with the grieuous ſmart of their other wickedneſſe they hate and abhorre it, yet they eaſily ſuffer themſelues to bee plunged into deſperation with euery friuolous tentation, and quietly offer their hands to bee manacled and bound in theſe gyues of hell without reſiſtance. But let all ſuch ſtirre vp themſelues, and gather their oppreſſed ſpirits all together, ſaying to their owne conſciences, I hate and deteſt from my heart my former wickednes, and ſhall I now entertaine a ſin more horrible then all the reſt? the burthen of my other ſins oppreſſe me, and make me earneſtly to deſire eaſe, and ſhall I adde a loade farre more intolerable to my afflicted conſcience? I am filled with ſhame and confuſion, becauſe by my former ſinnes I haue diſhonoured my gratious God: and ſhall I continue more to diſhonour him by doubting of and denying his mercy, iuſtice, and truth in his promiſes? I haue heretofore with Iudas betraied my Sauiour Chriſt vnto the death, yea, & with my ſinnes I haue whipped, mocked, and crucified him, and now hee hauing made full ſatisfaction for my ſinnes, and called mee vnto him that he may eaſe me of this intollerable burthen; ſhould I with Iudas refuſe to come, deſperately caſt off all hope of mercy, and become mine owne hangman? be it farre from me, nay as I hate all other ſin, ſo let mee hate this aboue all the reſt, as being more hainous then all the reſt; as I deſire to be eaſed and freed from the heauy burthen of other my wickedneſſe, ſo I will with all my power reſiſt Sathan when he ſeeketh to loade mee with this loade of deſperation, as being farre more intollerable; heretofore I haue diſhonoured God by my ſins, but now I will giue him glory in beleeuing and acknowledging his infinit mercy, goodneſſe, iuſtice, and truth in his promiſes; and ſeeing by my ſins, I haue crucified the Lord of life, I will not adde hereunto this outragious wickedneſſe, to trample his precious blood vnder my filthy feet, as a thing vnholy and of no worth, neither will I through my vnbeleefe, make it to bee ſpilt in vaine; but now with all care and conſcience I will gather it vp as a moſt precious balme, and with the hand of Faith applie it to thoſe grieſlie gaſhes and deepe wounds which ſinne hath made in my ſoule and conſcience, and with this ſpirituall lauer I will waſh my polluted ſoule, till it bee throughly purged from all vncleanneſſe. And ſeeing I haue deprived my ſoule of that inherent righteouſneſſe, wherewith it was indued by creation, now I will applie thereunto a farre more excellent righteouſneſſe by the hand of Faith, euen the righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt God and man, wherewith being adorned, I may boldlie offer my ſelfe into the preſence of my heauenly Father, and receiue the bleſſing of euerlaſting happineſſe.

Laſtly, wee are to conſider, that as deſperation is a ſinne in it owne nature moſt grieuous, ſo alſo it is vnto our ſelues moſt pernicious: for whereas other ſinnes make vs worthie of the torments of hell and eternall condemnation, this, as it aboue all the reſt intitleth vs vnto the right of this helliſh inheritance, ſo alſo it entreth vs into the moſt certaine and preſent poſſeſſion thereof, euen whileſt wee liue vpon the earth. For what are the torments of a deſpairing conſcience, but the flaſhings of hell fire? and what are their blaſphemies which they vtter againſt God, and their impatient curſings of their accurſed ſelues, but the yelling cries of damned ſoules? And therefore if wee would not caſt our ſelues into the iawes of hell, if we would not whileſt wee liue begin to die an euerlaſting death, let vs in no caſe ſuffer our ſelues to be plunged with the violence of Sathans tentations into this bottomleſſe pit of vtter deſperation.

§. Sect. 7. That we hope againſt hope, and be leeue againſt beleefe.

Yea, will the afflicted ſoule ſay, But how ſhould I auoid it, ſeeing I am forciblie preſſed into it with the intollerable waight of my ſins, & with the ſenſe of apprehenſion of Gods fearful wrath, & diſpleaſure, feeling no comfort nor aſſurance that euer I ſhall receiue pardon? To which I anſwer, that yet in no caſe they are to deſpaire, but to hope againſt hope, and to beleeue againſt beleefe, and as it were from the bottom of hell, to caſt vp the eye of Faith into heauen, laying hold vpon Gods mercies and Chriſts merits: knowing that Faith is of things not ſeene, neither with the bodily eye, nor with the eye of reaſon, and that the Lord ſeemeth often to hate thoſe, whom in truth he dearely loueth. For ſo long as we beleeue Gods promiſes, and haue ſome hope that our ſinnes are either pardoned, or at leaſt pardonable, there is certaine comfort: but when as all hope is caſt off, and that wee reiect all Gods promiſes through vnbeleefe, and fall into vtter deſperation, there nothing remaineth, but moſt certaine deſtruction. When ſinne lieth vpon vs, it no queſtion exceedingly vexeth vs with the torments of conſcience, but if we deſpaire, we preſently in ſtead of obtaining eaſe caſt our ſelues into the torments of hell; the pangs of conſcience cauſed by the ſenſe of the heauie burthen of ſinne, are a good meanes to bring vs to Chriſt, that we may be eaſed of this burthen; but deſpaire ſtaieth vs in the mid way, and vtterly debarreth vs from euer being partakers of Chriſt, or any of his benefits. And therefore though the burthen of ſinne be neuer ſo irkeſome and grieuous, yet let vs bee contented to beare it till we come vnto Chriſt for eaſe: let vs beware in any caſe that wee doe not faint through impatiencie and want of hope and ſo fall into deſperation, for ſo ſhall wee but increaſe the waight of our ſinnes in exceeding meaſure, which already wee thinke an intollerable burthen and conſequentlie our horror of conſcience; ſo ſhall wee bring our ſelues from a doubtfull, or rather hopefull ſtate, to moſt certaine and preſent deſtruction; ſo ſhall wee change our temporarie griefe for that which is euerlaſting, and the terrors of conſcience for the torments of hell. So ſhall that which wee moſt feare and flee, preſently ouertake and ouerwhelme vs: for whileſt in an horrible manner wee feare the paines of hell, we caſt our ſelues into them by falling into vtter deſperation; as if men for feare of death ſhould cut their owne throate; or for feare of hanging ſhould drink ſome deadly poiſon, whereby they are preſently tormented with that which they fearefully abhorred, and chuſe rather to bee oppreſſed with the euill they feared, then any longer to indure the feare it ſelfe. Which howſoeuer it may carrie ſome ſhew of reaſon in vndergoing a momentany and temporarie death, wherein oftentimes the feare is more intollerable then the paine feared; yet it is extreame madneſſe to plunge a mans ſelfe bodie and ſoule into the eternall torments of hell, rather then for a time to indure the horror thereof, ſeeing this horror and feare is but a ſmall flea-biting in reſpect of thoſe helliſh puniſhments, and as it were but a ſmoke of that eternall fire.

CHAP. XLVIII.

Satans tentations concerning ſmalneſſe and weakeneſſe of faith, anſwered.

Sect.1.

AND ſo much for anſwering thoſe tentations, whereby Satan laboureth to perſwade afflicted Chriſtians that they haue no faith; wherewith if hee cannot preuaile, in the next place hee will tell them that their faith is ſo ſmall, if it bee any at all, ſo ouerwhelmed with doubting, ſo vnfruitfull, and ſo mixt with imperfections, that it will not be effectuall and ſufficient for their ſaluation. Which tentation if wee would withſtand, wee muſt not dreame or imagine, that to haue a true Faith, is to haue a perfect Faith, which is neuer aſſaulted with doubting nor ſhaken with any tentations, for there is no ſuch Faith to bee found in any of Gods children, ſeeing the moſt perfect are partly fleſh, and partly ſpirit; and as the fruit of the ſpirit is Faith and affiance in God, ſo the fruit of the fleſh is doubting and infidelitie, and theſe continually aſſault and fight one againſt another. Againe, we are to know, that there are diuers degrees of true Faith, and that all the children of God haue it not in the like meaſure. For ſome haue attained to a ſtrong and great meaſure of Faith, as thoſe who are indued with much knowledge, and firmely aſſent vnto that which they know, and are moſt certainely perſwaded of their ſaluation in Chriſt, and that all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell doe belong vnto them, ſo as nothing in the world ſhall bee able to ſeparate them from the loue of God which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord: others are weake and indued with a ſmall meaſure of Faith, as thoſe who haue little knowledge, weake aſſent and perſwaſion, being yet but babes in Chriſt, and growing vp from Faith to Faith, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, till at length they attaine to that fulneſſe of perſwaſion, of which mention is made, Heb. 10.22. Now wee are to hold firſt, that this ſmall and weake meaſure of Faith is notwithſtanding a true Faith, and therefore ſufficient for the ſaluation of thoſe who are indued therewith, neither are the promiſes of the Goſpell made to thoſe onely who haue a ſtrong Faith, but to thoſe who haue a true Faith; Ioh. 1.12. As many as receiued him; hee gaue to them prerogatiue to be the ſonnes of God, euen to them that beleeue in his name. And Iohn 3.18. Hee that beleeueth ſhall bee ſaued. In which and ſuch like places there is no meaſure of Faith propounded, but the promiſes are made indefinitely to all that beleeue, how ſmall and weake ſoeuer their faith bee in reſpect of the quantitie and apprehenſion, ſo that in regard of the qualitie it be true and liuely.

That a weake and ſmall faith may by a true and liuely faith.

That a weake and ſmall meaſure of Faith is a true and liuely Faith, it is manifeſt both by reaſon and alſo plaine teſtimonies of the Scripture. For the firſt, diuerſitie of degrees in quantity of a thing doth not take away and annihilate the exiſtence and true being thereof. For example, a ſmall drop of water, is as well and truly water as the whole Ocean; a little ſparke is true fire, both in reſpect of ſubſtance and qualitie, as well as a mighty flame; a little man is as truly a man as a great Giant: and ſo a little Faith is as well a true Faith as a full perſwaſion; neither doth the ſmall quantitie take away the being, nature, and truth thereof. Secondly, this alſo manifeſtly appeareth by the Scriptures, whereas many are ſaid to haue Faith and to beleeue, who hearing the doctrine of Chriſt, and ſeeing his miracles beleeued, & acknowledged him to be the true Meſſias and their Sauiour, though at the ſame time they had attained to an exceeding ſmall meaſure of knowledge, and were ignorant of many of the chiefe principles of Chriſtian religion, becauſe they nouriſhed not this their ignorance, but reſolued to vſe all thoſe good meanes of increaſing in knowledge which God hath ordained for this purpoſe. And thus many of the Samaritans are ſaid to haue beleeued for the ſaying of the woman, and becauſe of his owne word: Iohn 4.39.41. Thus a certaine ruler and all his houſehold are ſaid to haue beleeued, when they ſaw the miracle which our Sauiour wrought in curing the rulers ſonne of his feauer onely with his word, verſ. 52. Yea, the Apoſtles themſelues, whoſe Faith our Sauiour Chriſt fitly compareth to a firme rocke, againſt which the gates of hell ſhould neuer preuaile, were notwithſtanding indued with a weake and ſmall meaſure of Faith, before the aſcenſion of our Sauiour, and ſending of the holy Ghoſt. For they were ignorant euen of the maine principles of Chriſtian religion, and of diuers articles of Faith, and conſequently could not beleeue, aſſent or bee perſwaded of of thoſe things which they did not vnderſtand. For example, howſoeuer they knew and acknowledged that our Sauiour Chriſt was the promiſed Meſſias, yet they were ignorant that hee ſhould redeeme mankind by his death; for when he foretold that he ſhould bee deliuered into the hands of the Gentiles to be crucified, it is ſaid that they vnderſtood none of thoſe things, Mat. 20.18. Luke 9.45. So alſo they knew not that being dead, hee ſhould riſe againe the third day, as the Euangeliſt ſheweth, Matth. 9.32. And when they heard thereof by the women, they thought it a fained thing, as it is Luk. 24.11. They were ignorant alſo of his Aſcenſion, as appeareth Iohn 13.36. and 14.5. and of his Kingdome, for they dreamed of an earthly Kingdome, and of worldly preferments which they were to haue by him, as we may ſee, Acts 1.6. Marke 10.37. By all which it plainly appeareth, that though the Apoſtles were indued with a true faith, yet their faith was exceeding weake and ſmall, as alſo it is moſt euident in that reprehenſion vſed by our Sauiour when they were in ſome appearance of danget: Matthew 8.26. Wherefore are yee fearefull, O yee of little faith?

That all the power of Hell cannot preuaile againſt the ſmalleſt meaſure of true faith.
Phil. 3.12.

And therefore though wee find our faith to bee weake and ſmall, yet let not Sathan perſwade vs that for this cauſe it is falſe and counterfeite, or that wee ſhall eaſily bee ouercome of euery tentation, and neuer perſeuere vnto the end that wee may bee ſaued; ſeeing a weake and ſmall faith may bee a true faith, againſt which, how weake in it ſelfe ſoeuer it be, yet the gates of Hell ſhall neuer preuaile againſt it; for the weaker our faith is, the ſtronger ſhall wee find Gods power in ſuſtaining and preſeruing vs; the more that Sathan laboureth to winnow vs in the ſieue of his tentations, the more effectually will our Sauiour Chriſt make interceſſion for vs, that our faith faile not; the feebler our faith is in apprehending Chriſt, the more powerfull will his ſpirit be in apprehending vs, and in joyning vs inſeparably in a holy communion with him. But yet wee muſt not content our ſelues with a ſmall and weake meaſure of faith, but earneſtly labour after more perfection, and to grow from faith to faith, till we attaine vnto fulneſſe of perſwaſion. Otherwiſe we ſhall make it manifeſt, that we deceiue our ſelues with a ſhew and ſhadow of faith, and that as yet we haue no true faith indeed, which as it reſembleth the graine of Muſtard ſeed in reſpect of the ſmalneſſe at the beginning thereof, ſo alſo in the growth and increaſe; and therefore if euer we would attaine vnto peace of conſcience, and aſſurance that wee are indued with a true and liuely faith, wee muſt earneſtly labour in the vſe of thoſe meanes ordained of God for the increaſe of faith, and feruently pray vnto God, that hee will not only ſow the ſeed of faith in our hearts, but alſo that he will ſo water it with the dew of his grace and holy Spirit, that it may grow from a ſmall ſeed to a great tree, and that hee will neuer ceaſe blowing this ſmoking flaxe with the breath of the ſame his holy Spirit, till it increaſe from a little ſparke to a mightie flame, whereby our hearts being warmed with true comfort, may with feruent zeale ſeeke to glorifie his holy Name by our Chriſtian and holy conuerſation.

Matth.

Secondly, we are to know, that how weak and ſmall ſoeuer our faith bee, ſo it bee true, the Lord will not reject it, nor vs in regard of it, for he will not breake the bruiſed reed, nor quench the ſmoking flax till he bring forth iudgement vnto victory as himſelfe hath ſpoken, Matth. 12.20. Hee will not contemne the leaſt meaſure of his owne grace which he hath beſtowed vpon vs; for though it be in neuer ſo ſmall a quantitie, yet if it be true, it is his owne gift, and his gifts are without repentance, neither doth hee euer contemne that which himſelfe hath giuen, nor take it away after it is once beſtowed, yea rather to him that hath ſhall be giuen vntill hee haue abundance: he that receiued fiue talents ſhall receiue fiue more, yea, and he that hath but one, if hee doe not hide it, but vſe it to his maſters glory, ſhall be accepted and haue his talent doubled. Wee reade in the Scriptures that Chriſt reprooued ſome for their ſmall faith, but yet we neuer read nor heard that hee rejected and caſt off any, though their faith were neuer ſo weake if it were true, no not him who cried out in the ſenſe of his own weakneſſe; Lord, I beleeue, helpe thou my vnbeliefe. And therefore if with him, wee find a true faith in vs, at leſt in ſome meaſure, and though it be exceedingly mingled with doubting and aſſaulted with infidelitie, yet if wee can with this man earneſtly pray the Lord to helpe our vnbeliefe, and with the Apoſtles heartily cry out: O Lord increaſe my faith, the Lord will accept of our hearty deſire, and grant our requeſt which is made by his owne ſpirit in vs, and that according vnto his owne will.

Thirdly, wee muſt vnderſtand that Faith doth not juſtifie and saue vs by it ſelfe, as it is a vertue or facultie of the mind and heart, or in reſpect of it owne excellencie, quantitie, and worthineſſe, (for what were this but to imbrace againe the doctrine of the Papiſts which wee haue rejected, and to ſeeke for juſtification in our ſelues, and for our owne merits and worthineſſe?) but as an inſtrument, whereby we lay hold of, and apply vnto our ſelues Chriſt Ieſus, with his righteouſnes and merits, by which onely we appeare juſt before God; now a weake faith as truly, though not ſo powerfully, doth apprehend and apply Chriſt Ieſus, and all his merits and obedience, as a ſtronger Faith; euen as a ſmall and weake hand if it be able to reach vp the meate to the mouth, doth as wel performe its dutie for the nouriſhment of the body as one of greater ſtrength; becauſe it is not the ſtrength of the hand, but the goodneſſe of the meate which nouriſheth the bodie: So a weak faith laying hold of Chriſt, and applying him and his benefits to the beleeuer, is ſufficient to nouriſh him to euerlaſting life, as well as a ſtronger, becauſe it is not the worthineſſe or excellency of the inſtrument, but of Chriſt which it apprehendeth, that is effectuall for our juſtification and eternall ſaluation. So in like manner, as a ſmall and weake hand is able to receiue an almes as well as a ſtronger and greater; and as a little eye doth ſee the whole body of the Sunne, or ſome great mountaine as well as a bigger: ſo our faith though weake and ſmall, doth apprehend Chriſt as truly & effectually for the ſaluation of the Beleeuer, as the greateſt and moſt ſtrong. Our Sauiour Chriſt compareth himſelfe to the brazen Serpent, and the beleeuing Chriſtian ſtung with the ſting of ſinne to the Iſraelites which did behold it, to the end they might be cured: now wee know that all of them were not alike ſharp-ſighted, but ſome were pur-blinde, ſome bleare-eyed, ſome ſaw it but exceeding weakly and dimly, but yet notwithſtanding as many as looked on it were cured and healed, though they were neuer ſo weake-ſighted; ſo whoſoeuer being ſtung with ſinne doe looke vpon Chriſt with the eye of Faith, reſting vpon him alone for their ſaluation, though they be neuer ſo weake-ſighted, yet they ſhall be reſtored to health and be eternally ſaued, becauſe it is not in their ſight, but in the object thereof, Chriſt Ieſus, to juſtifie before God, and to purchaſe for them eternall ſaluation.

CHAP. XLIX.

Other tentations concerning faith, anſwered.

ANd thus may we anſwere Sathans tentations, which he groundeth vpon the ſmall quantitie and weakneſſe of our faith: beſides which he ſuggeſteth diuers others; as firſt, that true juſtifying faith is a firme, certaine and conſtant perſwaſion; whereas ours (if we haue any at all) is weake and feeble, inſtable, inconſtant and wauering, and that it is not only continually aſſaulted, but alſo often foiled and ouercome with doubting and infidelitie, and therefore that it is but a ſhadow of faith, and not true faith indeed. The which tentation we may eaſily anſwer, if we but remember that which already hath beene deliuered; namely, that the beſt cannot attaine in this life vnto ſuch perfection of faith as is quite freed from all infirmities and corruption; that there are diuers degrees of true juſtifying faith, ſome weaker, ſome ſtronger, ſome in greater, and ſome in ſmaller quantitie, ſome like ſmoking flaxe, and a graine of Muſtard ſeed; and ſome like a bright burning flame which giueth light, and the liuely heat of true comfort to thoſe who are indued therewith, and of as high growth as the greateſt tree in the Garden; and yet all true faith is ſufficient for ſaluation: that ſo long as wee continue in this life, our knowledge is but imperfect, and vailed with much darkneſſe and ignorance, for wee know but in part, as euen the Apoſtle ſpeaketh in his owne perſon, 1.Cor.13.12. And therefore our aſſent & perſwaſion muſt needs be imperfect, but in part, and often aſſaulted with much doubting: that howſoeuer faith and doubting are oppoſed in their owne nature, yet notwithſtanding they may be together in the ſame ſubject in reſpect of diuers parts. For we are partly fleſh, & partly ſpirit, & theſe two with their ſeuerall fruits do continually fight one againſt the other, and ſomtimes the fleſh, ſomtimes the ſpirit with their ſeuerall fruits get the vpper hand; in the mean time both retaining their owne nature and properties, howſoeuer they doe not ſo euidently appeare, nor ſo powerfully worke their ſeuerall actions, when the aduerſe part preuaileth, and hath put them to the foile. For example, Faith which is a fruit of the ſpirit, is continually aſſaulted by doubting, which is a fruit of the fleſh and proceedeth from the root of infidelitie, and ſometime Faith preuaileth, and ſometime it receiueth the foile; but yet at the ſame time howſoeuer wee cannot ſenſibly diſcerne it, nor the actions thereof, yet it retaines its owne nature and properties, neither is it depriued of its firmeneſſe, conſtancie and certaintie, howſoeuer they bee for a time couered and hid out of our ſight, like the fire vnder the aſhes, or the Sunne vnder a cloud, as before I haue ſaid. Though therefore wee find in vs much inconſtancie and doubting, yet let not Sathan perſwade vs that theſe are of the nature and properties of our faith, and that therefore our faith is not true, but temporarie, falſe and counterfeit; for this inconſtancie and doubting proceedeth not from faith, and from the ſpirituall and regenerate part, but from the fleſh and the part vnregenerate; and therefore howſoeuer it is aſſaulted, and ſometimes foiled by them, yet in its own nature it is true, certaine and conſtant.

nually moſt notable fruits thereof, and were not ſubject to ſuch infirmities and doubtings as wee feele in our ſelues. To which wee anſwere, that this tentation is full of vntruth, and hath no ſound part in it: for firſt, we are to aſſure our ſelues, that they fell into manifold doubtings, and were ſubiect vnto innumerable infirmities and corruptions, which are not ſpecified in the Book of God: neither was it fit or expedient that it ſhould be a regiſter of all humane infirmities, and of their manifold falls, but onely that ſome ſhould be recorded for our warning, that wee might more warily watch ouer our ſelues, leſt we ſhould fall into the like ſinnes; and for our comfort alſo when we are fallen, in that our caſe is common with Gods deareſt children; in which reſpect the Scriptures are not wanting. Looke vpon Abraham, the Father of the Faithfull, whoſe faith was ſo ſtrong, that hee aboue hope beleeued vnder hope, and you ſhall ſee that his faith notwithſtanding, was ſometimes ſhaken with diffidence and doubting; as when diſtruſting Gods gracious promiſes made vnto him, and not reſting vpon his Almightie power, hee was content to take vnto him Hagar his maid, and commit ſinne with her, that ſo by his owne deuice hee might make good Gods promiſe, and obtaine the bleſſed ſeed; as though God could not performe that which he had ſpoken, vnleſſe he helped him by ſuch vnlawfull meanes. So where was the ſtrength and conſtancie of Moſes faith when he diſhonoured God before the people in not beleeuing his Word, and by ſhewing his impatiencie? Numb. 20. 10, 11. Where was the ſtrength and conſtancie of Dauids faith, when he complaineth that he was forſaken, that God had failed in his promiſes, that hee had forgotten to be mercifull, and had ſhut vp his tender mercies in diſpleaſure? *Pſal.*22.1. and 77.8,9. Or of Iobs faith when hee curſed the day of his birth, and accounted God his enemy, who had ſet him vp as a marke, againſt which he ſhot poyſoned Arrowes? Or of Ieremy, when he likewiſe wiſhed that hee had neuer been born, and bewrayeth great impatiency. Ier. 20. Or of Ionas when he rebelled againſt Gods Commandement, and fled from his preſence; or when after his miraculous deliuery, he murmured and vttered impatient ſpeeches euen againſt God himſelfe, for the loſſe of a poore gourd which kept him from the heat of the Sunne; and when the Lord mercifully and mildly reproued him, ſaying, Doeſt thou well to bee angry for the gourd, he ſtubbornly anſwered; I doe well to be angry vnto the death, Ion.4.9. Or of the Apoſtles themſelues when they fled away & forſooke their Lord and Maſter Ieſus Chriſt for feare of worldly puniſhment, and when after his death they would not beleeue the women reporting that hee was riſen againe, vntill their owne eyes had ſeene him? Laſtly, though it bee euident that diuers of the Saints mentioned in the Scriptures had a far greater meaſure of faith, and brought forth much more plentifull fruits than we can diſcerne in our ſelues, yet this is no good reaſon to proue that our weaker and ſmaller faith is no faith, or vneffectuall for our ſaluation. For this is an abſurd conſequence, the Moone giueth much leſſe light than the Sunne, therfore it giueth no light at all; one hand is far greater than another, therefore the leſſer is not a true hand; this man excelleth another in the vſe of reaſon, and therefore the other is vnreaſonable; becauſe the diuers degrees in the quantitie of things doe not take away the truth of their being and exiſtence, ſo long as they bee of the ſame nature and qualitie. Beſides, as the Holy Ghoſt hath ſet downe examples of moſt ſtrong Faith in ſome of Gods ſeruants, ſo hath he made mention of ſome who haue had but weake and little faith, to the end that we ſhould ſo labour to attaine vnto the higheſt degree, as that in the meane time wee bee not vtterly diſcouraged with the loweſt. For example, as he hath remembred the faith of Abraham, who beleeued aboue hope vnder hope; ſo hee hath not forgotten his weake faith who cried, I beleeue, Lord helpe thou mine vnbeliefe. As he hath mentioned the faith of Iob who grew to this reſolution; Though hee kill mee, yet will I truſt in him; ſo he hath expreſſed alſo the faith of Nicodemus, in knowledge weake and ſimple, and in practice and profeſſion cowardly and fearefull. As hee hath ſet downe the ſtrong faith of Paul, who grew to this fullneſſe of perſwaſion, that nothing ſhould be able to ſeparate him from the loue of God in Ieſus Chriſt; ſo he hath not left out the little and weake faith of Thomas, who would not beleeue further than he ſaw and felt. Yea, the Lord in his Word hath reuealed vnto vs the diuers degrees of faith in the ſame men in reſpect of diuers times; at one time like a graine of muſtard ſeed, at another time like a great tree; at one time like a little ſmoke, and ſoone after burſting out into a great flame; now like a weak reed wauering and declining with the ſmalleſt blaſt of any triall, and within a while like an immoueable rocke which beateth backe huge billowes, and euen a whole Sea of violent tentations. In a word, it ſetteth out to our view, as it were portraied in a freſh and liue picture, the diuers ages of a Chriſtian as he is in his conception and preparation to grace, and as he is in his new birth and firſt conuerſion; as he is a babe, and as he groweth from his infancie to greater age & ſtrength, till he come to ripe yeeres, and to be a ſtrong man in Chriſt. Beſides, it ſheweth vnto vs his diuers relapſes through ſinne,

All which is ſet downe to this end that wee ſhould not make our infancie our ἀκμὴν, and full growth, but labour to increaſe in grace till wee become of babes ſtrong men in Chriſt: as alſo that finding our ſelues as weake as little infants, wee bee not vtterly diſcouraged; for if we ſucke the breaſts of our ſpirituall mother the true Church, and receiue from her the milke and ſtronger meate of the word and ſacraments, wee ſhall aſſuredly grow vp from grace to grace, and ſtrength to ſtrength, till of babes wee become ſtrong men in Ieſus Chriſt; and that though wee haue many great ſickneſſes of the ſoule, and relapſes into ſin, whereby our ſpirituall growth for a time is hindred, and our ſtrength in Gods graces much abated, yet if wee often feed vpon the comfortable food of Gods word, and vſe this ſpirituall phyſicke preſcribed by God himſelfe, we ſhall not only againe recouer our former ſtrength and health, but alſo find a great increaſe of Gods graces in vs.

Sect.3.
Satan
pre-againſt weakeſt

Laſtly, Satan will ſuggeſt that though our faith be true, yet it is ſo exceeding ſmall and weake, that with the violence of his tentations, and huge maſſe of our owne coruptions, it will eaſily be ouerthrowne and turned into infidelity. To which we are to anſwer, that though hereby our faith may bee ſhreudly ſhaken, yet it can neuer be ouerturned; though it may bee couered with the aſhes of our corruptions, yet it can neuer be vtterly quenched; though through our grieuous foiles and fals in the combate of tentations, it may be as it were brought into a trance, ſo as wee cannot ſenſiblie diſcerne any action, motion or life of faith, yet the habit and grace it ſelfe, after it is once giuen of God, is neuer taken away, neither is it poſſible, that it ſhould be quite deſtroyed by all the power of hell. And this may appeare by diuers reaſons; firſt, becauſe faith is not of our ſelues, but the free gift of God, as it is Epheſ. 2.8. And whatſoeuer ſanctifying and ſauing grace the Lord giueth, that hee neuer taketh vtterly away; for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom. 11. 29. Secondly, whoſoeuer truely beleeueth, he is truly knit and vnited vnto the body of Chriſt, and is made partaker of his holy ſpirit, which as it begetteth and beginneth all ſanctifying and ſauing graces in vs, ſo alſo it nouriſheth, ſtrengtheneth and confirmeth them, ſo as they can neuer vtterly faile, for whatſoeuer good worke hee beginneth, that will he alſo perfect and accompliſh, Phil. 1. 6. Thirdly, whoſoeuer truly beleeueth, he is truly iuſtified; and whoſoeuer is iuſtified is elected, called, and ſhall be glorified, for theſe inſeparably goe together Rom. 8.30. and conſequently, he that hath true faith, whereby he is iuſtified, can not fal away, ſeeing his iuſtification is as certaine as the eternall decree of Gods election.

*Phil.*1.6.

*Rom.*8.30.

§. *Sect.*4.
That God both can and will vphold the weakeſt beleeuer.

Laſtly, God both can & wil ſtrengthen and confirme all thoſe who are weake in faith, till they attaine vnto the end of their Faith, euen the ſaluation of their ſoules; and therfore it is impoſſible that they which once truly beleeue ſhould fall away and be condemned. Concerning Gods power no man can make any queſtion, ſeeing it is omnipotent and almighty; and for his will he hath fully reuealed it both by his word & works, namely, that hee will not take away that grace which he hath once giuen, but rather increaſe it til it be perfected & accompliſhed. For the firſt, the Lord ſaith that hee will comfort his Church and people, as the woman comforteth her Child, Eſai. 66.13. Now wee know that the mother doth not abandon her child, nor depriue him of that comfort which ſhe can giue him becauſe he is ſicke and weake, but rather the ſicker and weaker hee is, the more is her care and diligence in relieuing him in his diſtreſſe; when hee is not able to digeſt ſtrong meat, ſhee prouideth for him comfortable food of light digeſtion; when hee is ſo weake, that he cannot goe, ſhee carieth him in her armes, or otherwiſe ſupporteth him, when he is ſo ſicke, that hee falleth downe to the ground in a ſwoune, ſhee raiſeth him vp, and neuer reſteth till ſhee hath recouered life in him. Is this loue in a naturall mother? then ſurely much more ſhall wee find in our heauenly Father: for though a mother may forget the fruit of her wombe, yet will the Lord neuer forget vs, as he hath promiſed, Eſay 49. 15. And therefore the greater our weakenes is in grace and the more grieuous our ſickneſſe is through ſinne, and the noiſome humours of our corruptions, the more carefully will hee watch ouer vs with the eye of his prouidence, and ſupport vs with his almighty power in our greateſt weaknes; the more tenderly will he pittie vs, and in louing compaſſion will prouide for vs, ſuch comfortable food, as will be fit to nouriſh vs, and repaire our decaied ſtrength; when we cannot goe, hee will with his almighty hand vphold vs; and when wee fall into a dead trance, hee will not reſt till hee hath againe reuiued and quickened vs with his holy ſpirit. Moreouer our Sauiour hath ſaid, that he will not breake the bruiſed reed, nor quench the ſmoking flax, *Matth.*12.20. but he will ſupport our weakneſſe with his almighty power, ſo that though like the reed wee bee borne downe to the ground, with the boiſterous blaſts of Satans tentations, yet wee ſhall bee raiſed vp againe, according to that Pſal. 37. 24. Though hee fall he ſhall not bee caſt off, for the Lord putteth vnder his hand; and hee will blow vpon vs with the breath of his holy ſpirit, till hee turne our ſmall ſmoke to a great flame, which ſhal neuer be quenched by al the malice of our ſpirituall enemies. So *Mat.*13.12. our Sauiour Chriſt hath promiſed, that whoſoeuer hath, to him it ſhall be giuen, and he ſhall haue abundance. Neither doth he limit or define any quantity leſſe or more but indefinitely promiſeth abundant encreaſe euen vnto the leaſt, ſo farre is he from taking away that which hee hath once beſtowed. And whereas wee through our weakneſſe and fraileneſſe are eaſily caſt downe and fall away, and therefore haue good cauſe if wee ſhould onely looke vpon our infirmities to doubt and deſpaire of perſeuerance, yet in reſpect of Gods omnipotent power, watchfull prouidence, and promiſed aſſiſtance, we may confirme our ſelues in Faith, hope, and certaine aſſurance of continuing vnto the end; for the Lord vpholdeth all that are falling, and lifteth vp thoſe who are already downe, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh. Pſal. 145. 14. The power of God is manifeſted in our weakeneſſe, his riches in our beggerlineſſe, his mercy and goodneſſe in our frailneſſe and manifold corruptions; and with his holy ſpirit, hee helpeth our infirmities, as it is Rom. 8. 26. Wee haue not an high Prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all things tempted in like ſort, yet without ſinne; and therefore hee is able ſufficiently to haue compaſſion on them that are ignorant and out of the way, becauſe that hee alſo was compaſſed with our infirmities, as the Apoſtle reaſoneth: Heb. 4. 15. and 5. 2.

Secondly, it appeareth manifeſtly by Gods works, adminiſtration and practiſe, that hee will not depriue any of that ſanctifying grace which hee hath once beſtowed, though the meaſure therof be neuer ſo ſmall; neither can wee obſerue either by our reading the whole booke of God, or by our owne experience, that any man hauing receiued the leaſt graine of true Faith hath vtterly beene depriued of it, and reiected of God. Euen the Diſciples themſelues when they were reproued for their little Faith, were by him ſtrengthened and confirmed, ſo that all the power of hell could not preuaile againſt it: and though Satan endeauoured to ſift them as wheat, yet Chriſts prayer was more mighty to defend them, then the diuell to deſtroy them, and his interceſſion a ſtronger prop to vphold them, then the waight of Satans tentations to ouerthrow and bring them to ruine: ſo hee who cried out, I beleeue Lord, helpe thou my vnbeliefe; though his Faith vvas weake, yet it periſhed not, but rather receiued a greater encreaſe. Yea, he reiected not Thomas in his wilfull doubting and obſtinate incredulity, but offered all occaſions of confirming his weake Faith, and neuer ceaſed till he had fully aſſured him of his reſurrection. In a word, all the Saints of God at one time or other haue had experience of this mercy, power, and goodneſſe of God in ſupporting their weakneſſe, vpholding them in their great infirmities, and in raiſing them when they were fallen to the ground; and to this end, our Sauiour was anointed by Gods ſpirit vnto the office of his mediation, that hee ſhould preach the Goſpel vnto the poore, heale the broken hearted, that he ſhould preach deliuerance vnto captiues, and recouery of ſight to the blind, and ſet at liberty them that are bruſed, *Luk.*4.18. To this end hee had familiar ſociety with the fraile and weake, with thoſe who had little Faith, that hee might increaſe it, and no Faith, that hee might beget it, with publicans and ſinners and men full of infirmities; that he might bring them vnto God by true repentance. To this purpoſe he calleth ſuch as thirſt and hunger, feeling their owne emptineſſe of grace, and earneſtly deſiring to be filled and ſatisfied, and ſuch alſo as labour, and are heauy laden with the vnſupportable waight of their corruptions, promiſing that he will eaſe them. Laſtly, to this end hee hath ordained the miniſtery of the word and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, not onely to beget faith where it is not, but to nouriſh and increaſe it where it is weake and feeble. And therefore though our faith be neuer ſo weake and ſmall, let not Satan perſwade vs that therefore it ſhall bee ouerthrowne and turned into infidelitie: for the Lord hath aſſured vs both by his gratious promiſes in his word, and alſo by the performance thereof in his works from the beginning to this day, that where he hath giuen the leaſt meaſure of faith, or any other ſanctifying grace, there he will alſo increaſe, ſtrengthen and confirme it; and where hee hath begun any good worke, there hee will finiſh and perfect it, notwithſtanding our fraile weakneſſe, and the forcible violence of all our ſpirituall enemies.

Of our iuſtification.

§. Sect.
Of the ent ca our i tion.

And ſo much concerning thoſe tentations of Satan which hee ſuggeſteth to the end that hee may fruſtrate our effectual calling ling. The next ſubordinate cauſe and meanes of our ſaluation is our iuſtification, for whomſoeuer the Lord effectually calleth, thoſe alſo hee iuſtifieth, as it is Rom. 8. 30. In ſpeaking whereof I will firſt ſhew what it is, and afterwards anſwere ſuch tentations of Satan, as he ſuggeſteth into our mindes, to the end that he may infringe the doctrine of iuſtification, and make it vaine and vnprofitable vnto vs. For the firſt, iuſtification is an action or worke of the whole Trinitie, the Father, Sonne and holy Ghoſt, whereby God gratiouſly and freely imputing vnto euery faithfull man the righteouſneſſe and obedience of Chriſt the mediator, doth accept of him, and pronounce him to be iuſt and righteous, for the glory of his name and ſaluation of the beleeuer. The efficient cauſe of our iuſtification is God alone, as appeareth by manifeſt teſtimonies. Eſa. 43. 25. I euen I am hee that putteth away thine iniquities for my owne ſake, and will not remember thy ſinnes. So Ezech. 16. 8. the Lord thus ſpeaketh to his Church and people: I ſpread my skirts ouer thee, and couered thy filthineſſe. 9. Then I waſhed thee with water, yea I waſhed away thy blood from thee, and anointed thee with oyle. 10. I clothed thee with broydred worke, &c. Whereby he ſignifieth that hee purged it with the blood of Chriſt from all ſin, and adorned it with the rich robe of his righteouſneſſe. The Apoſtle likewiſe ſaith, that it is God who iuſtifieth him, who in himſelfe was vngodly. Rom. 4. 5. and 8. 33. It is God who iuſtifieth, who ſhall condemne? The reaſon hereof is manifeſt, becauſe it is the Lord againſt whom we haue ſinned, as Dauid ſpeaketh, Pſal. 51. 4. It is his law which wee haue tranſgreſſed, and hee alone is our ſupreme Iudge, who hath authority to abſolue or condemne vs, and therefore he onely can giue vnto vs the pardon and remiſſion of our ſinnes, and accept of vs as juſt and righteous. And this worke is not peculiar vnto any one perſon, but in common to the whole Trinitie. For God the Father being fully ſatisfied by the full ſatisfaction, righteouſneſſe, and obedience of Chriſt the ſonne, applied vnto vs by the holy ſpirit, doth pardon and forgiue vs all our ſinnes, and pronounceth and accepteth of vs as innocent, and indued with perfect righteouſneſſe. The motiue or impulſiue cauſe, which mooued the Lord thus to iuſtifie vs, was not any thing in vs or out of himſelfe; but of his meere mercy and free good will, wherewith hee hath loued vs from the beginning, as it manifeſtly appeareth Rom. 3. 24. Where the Apoſtle ſaith, that wee are iuſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Chriſt Ieſus. And Tit. 3. 5. 7. Not by the workes of righteouſneſſe which we had done, but according to his mercy he ſaued vs, by the waſhing of the new birth and renewing of the holy Ghoſt. 7. That being iuſtified by his grace, wee ſhould bee made heires according to the hope of eternall life. The inſtrumentall cauſes are of two ſorts: firſt on Gods part, the word and the Sacraments, whereby the Lord offereth, conueigheth, ſealeth, and aſſureth vnto vs his mercie and grace, Chriſt Ieſus with his merits, righteouſneſſe, and obedience, the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and euerlaſting life. Secondly, on our part a true and liuely Faith, whereby we receiue and apply vnto our ſelues the mercy of God, Chriſt Ieſus and all his benefits, reſting vpon him alone for our ſaluation.

§. Sect. 2.
The materiall cauſe,
Rom. 3. 25.

The materiall cauſe of our iuſtification is the actiue and paſſiue righteouſneſſe and obedience of Ieſus Chriſt, his inherent holineſſe, his fulfilling of the law, his death, ſacrifice, and full ſatisfaction. So that we are not iuſtified by the eſſential righteouſnes of the Godhead, nor by our owne workes ioyned with Chriſts merits, nor by any inherent righteouſneſſe infuſed of God through the merits of Chriſt, or by any other thing in our ſelues, or any other meere creature, but by the alone righteouſneſſe of our mediatour Ieſus Chriſt God and man, which is out of our ſelues and in Chriſt as the proper ſubiect thereof, and not belonging to vs, till by the ſpirit of God and a liuely faith it be applied vnto vs and ſo becommeth ours. The formall cauſe of our iuſtification actiuely taken is a reciprocall imputation or tranſmutation of the ſinnes of the beleeuer vnto Chriſt, and of his righteouſneſſe vnto the beleeuer: whereby it commeth to paſſe, that the faithfull man hath not his ſins imputed vnto him, nor the puniſhment due vnto them inflicted on him, becauſe Chriſt hath taken vpon him the guilt and puniſhment, and by making full ſatisfaction vnto his fathers iuſtice, hath obtained the pardon and remiſſion of all his ſins. And alſo is clothed with the glorious robe of Chriſt Ieſus righteouſneſſe, and ſo appearing before God both free from all ſin, and indued with perfect righteouſneſſe, hee is iuſtified, reconciled, and eternally ſaued. And of this imputed righteouſnes the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Rom. 4. 5. But to him that worketh not, but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly, his faith is counted for righteouſneſſe. 6. Euen as Dauid declareth the bleſſedneſſe of the man vnto whom God imputeth righteouſneſſe without works, ſaying. 7. Bleſſed are they whoſe iniquities are forgiuen, and whoſe ſinnes are couered. 8. Bleſſed is the man vnto whom the Lord imputeth not ſinne. And 2. Cor. 5. 19. For God was in Chriſt and reconciled the world vnto himſelfe, not imputing their ſinnes vnto them, &c. 21. For hee hath made him to be ſinne for vs which knew no ſinne, that wee ſhould bee made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. And the Apoſtle affirmeth, 1.Cor.1.30. That Ieſus Chriſt is made vnto vs of God, wiſdome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification and redemption. So that now Chriſts righteouſneſſe is our righteouſneſſe, his obedience our obedience, his merits our merits, as certainly, perfectly and effectually, euen as if wee our ſelues had beene moſt innocent, fulfilled the Law, or made full ſatisfaction to Gods juſtice. By which it appeareth, that in reſpect of our ſelues we are juſtified freely of Gods meere mercy and grace, without any reſpect of our owne righteouſneſſe or worthineſſe; but yet through Chriſt, and for his righteouſneſſe and obedience imputed to vs, both which are ſignified by the Apoſtle, Rom. 3. 23, 24. where hee ſaith that all in themſelues are wretched ſinners without difference, & therby are depriued of the glory of Gods Kingdom. 24. And are iuſtified freely of his grace, through the redemption which is in Chriſt Ieſus. The forme of our juſtification paſſiuely taken, is the application of Chriſts righteouſnes by faith, whence it is, that faith is ſaid to be our righteouſnes, becauſe it alone applyeth Chriſts righteouſnes to vs, & no other grace.

§. Sect. 3.
The finall cauſe.

Rom.3.24. and 5.21.

Epheſ.2.5,6,7.

The finall cauſe of our juſtification is two fold, the chiefe and principall is the glory of God: for hereby the Lord hath moſt notably manifeſted his infinite juſtice and mercie; his juſtice, in that hee would rather puniſh our ſinnes in his onely begotten Sonne, then he would ſuffer them to go vnpuniſhed; his mercy, in that for our ſakes he ſpared not his beſt beloued Sonne, but gaue him to ſuffer death, yea, the death of the Croſſe, that by his one oblation, hee might make full ſatisfaction for our ſinnes, and purchaſe for vs euerlaſting life; and alſo in that hee vouchſafeth vnto vs the outward meanes of his Word and Sacraments, and the inward aſſiſtance of his holy Spirit, whereby we are vnited vnto Chriſt and haue a liuely faith begotten in vs, which apprehending Chriſt his righteouſnes and merits, we are thereby juſtified, ſanctified, and eternally ſaued. And this end is ſignified by the Apoſtle, *Rom.*3.24,25. where he ſaith that God hath iuſtified vs freely by his grace, through the redemption which is in Chriſt Ieſus, to declare his righteouſneſſe by the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, and might ſhew himſelfe iuſt by iuſtifying him, who is of the faith of Ieſus. And *Chap.*5.21. hee ſaith, that as vnder the Law ſinne had raigned vnto death ſo now grace raigneth by righteouſneſſe vnto eternall life through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. So *Epheſ.*2.5,6,7. hee affirmeth that God hath quickned vs in Chriſt who were dead in our ſinnes, and hath raiſed vs vp in him; that he might ſhew in the ages to come the exceeding riches of his grace through his kindneſſe towards vs in Chriſt Ieſus. The inferiour and ſubordinate end is, that our ſaluation may hereby bee firmely aſſured vnto vs, for now our ſaluation is not in vs, but in the hands of God, and is grounded, not on our owne workes and worthineſſe, but vpon the righteouſneſſe and obedience of Ieſus Chriſt, which is a moſt certaine and firme foundation which will neuer faile vs. And this the Apoſtle ſheweth, *Rom.*4.16. whereas he ſaith, that the couenant of grace whereby we are aſſured of euerlaſting ſaluation is made by faith, that it might come by grace, and the promiſe might be ſure to all the ſeed.

§. Sect.4.
Of the pa of our iuſti
cation.

Rom.4.6,7.

That Ch
actuall obe ence, wh he fulfill law, is imp vnto vs.

The parts of our juſtification are two, the remiſſion of our ſins, and the imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe. For as in euery naturall man, there is the corruption, guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, and the abſence or priuation of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; ſo in Chriſt we haue a remedy for both: for the firſt by his paſſion and ſuffering: for the other by his actual obedience and perfect fulfilling of the Law. And this is manifeſt, *Rom.*4.6,7. where the Apoſtle diſtinctly maketh mention of the righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt imputed without workes, and of the forgiueneſſe, couering and not imputing of ſinne. Neither was it ſufficient for the obtaining of euerlaſting life and happineſſe, that our Mediatour ſhould by his death make ful ſatisfaction for our ſins, both of commiſſion, and alſo omiſſion, but alſo that hee ſhould clothe vs with his actiue obedience, whereby we might appeare perfectly righteous before God. The truth hereof may further appeare, if wee conſider firſt that our Sauiour Chriſt was not bound to fulfill the Law for himſelfe, becauſe hee was from the firſt moment of his conception aſſumed into the hypoſtaticall and perſonall vnion with the ſecond perſon in Trinitie, and conſequently was not only man but God alſo, and therefore not bound to any Law, neither needing any legall righteouſneſſe being already indued with a farre more excellent righteouſneſſe, euen the righteouſneſſe of God. So that either our Sauiour performed obedience to the Law to no purpoſe, or elſe to this end that he might impute it vnto vs, and thereby indue vs with ſuch a moſt perfect and euerlaſting righteouſneſſe as might giue vnto vs the right of eternall life. For whereas ſome ſay, that Chriſt fulfilled the Law for himſelfe, that hee might be an holy High Prieſt, and an holy Sacrifice: I anſwere that this needed not ſeeing he was perfectly ſanctified in the wombe by the holy Spirit, and by vertue of the Hypoſtaticall vnion indued with the righteouſneſſe of God; and therefore needed not to be made righteous by this legall obedience. Secondly, if onely our ſinnes were pardoned and we not made partakers of Chriſts actiue righteouſneſſe, our imputed righteouſneſſe, ſhould not excell the righteouſneſſe of Adam before his fall, for he neither committed ſin of omiſſion nor commiſſion, till he tranſgreſſed Gods Commandement in eating of the forbidden fruit; but we are made partakers of a more excellent righteouſneſſe by faith, then wee loſt in Adam, euen the righteouſneſſe of God by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, *Rom.*3.22. which conſiſteth not onely in the abſence of euill and ſinne, but in the preſence alſo of actuall holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. Thirdly, and laſtly (becauſe it is my purpoſe onely to touch this point by the way, as not ſo properly belonging to this Treatiſe) wee are vnited vnto Chriſt Ieſus, and he is become our Head and we his members, by reaſon of which vnion as hee communicateth himſelfe vnto vs, ſo alſo that which belongeth vnto him as he is our Mediatour, and conſequently not onely his paſſiue obedience, whereby hee hath made full ſatisfaction for our ſinnes, but alſo his actuall righteouſneſſe, whereby he perfectly fulfilled the Law. And thus it appeareth that our juſtification conſiſteth of two parts, the firſt the remiſſion of our ſinnes for the full ſatisfaction of Chriſt, by his death and ſufferings, the other the imputation of his habituall & actiue righteouſneſſe. The remiſſion of ſins is the firſt part of juſtification, whereby God forgiueth for the death and full ſatisfaction of Chriſt, all our ſinnes both originall and actuall, both in reſpect of the guilt and puniſhment, ſo as they ſhall neuer bee imputed to our condemnation, neither in this life, nor in the life to come. And of this the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, *Pſal.*32.1. Bleſſed is the man whoſe wickedneſſe is forgiuen, and whoſe ſinne is couered. 2. Bleſſed is the man vnto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquitie. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that God was in Chriſt, and reconciled the world to himſelfe, not imputing their ſinnes vnto them, 2.*Cor.*5.19. The imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe is the other part of our juſtification, whereby God imputeth vnto euery Beleeuer the righteouſneſſe of the Mediatour Ieſus Chriſt, as if it were properly their owne and performed by them, that being clothed therewith they may bee perfectly righteous in Gods ſight, and ſo obtain right vnto euerlaſting life and happineſſe. And of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, *Rom.*4.6. Euen as (ſaith he) Dauid declareth the bleſſedneſſe of the man vnto whom God imputeth righteouſneſſe without workes. And *Rom.*9.30. The Gentiles which followed not righteouſneſſe haue attained vnto righteouſneſſe, euen the righteouſneſſe which is of faith. So *Phil.*3.8,9. The Apoſtle ſaith, that he accounted all things loſſe, and judged them to be dung, that he might winne Chriſt, and might bee found in him, not hauing his owne righteouſneſſe which is of the law, but that which is of the faith of Chriſt, euen the righteouſneſſe which is of God through faith. *Ier.*23.6. Now this righteouſneſſe of Chriſt is twofold; his habituall and inherent holineſſe and innocencie, whereby hee was free from all corruption and ſinne both originall and actuall; and indued with all holineſſe & puritie of nature, from the firſt moment of his conception. And of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 2.*Cor.*5.21. He that knew no ſinne, was made ſinne for vs. And 1.Pet. 2.22. Who did no ſinne, neither was there any guile found in his mouth. So *Heb.*4.15. he is ſaid to be without ſinne; And 1.*Pet.*1.19. hee is called the Lambe vndefiled and without ſpot. And himſelfe challengeth the Iewes, Iohn 8.46. Which of you can rebuke mee of ſinne? And this holineſſe being imputed vnto vs, is oppoſed to our originall ſinne and naturall corruption. The other is his actuall righteouſneſſe, whereby he performed perfect obedience vnto the Law in all his thoughts, words, and deeds, throughout the whole courſe of his life. And this being imputed vnto vs, and becomming ours by reaſon of that vnion which is betweene Chriſt and vs, is oppoſed vnto our actuall tranſgreſſion, whereby we haue broken the whole Law of God, in omitting the duties commanded, & in committing the vices & ſins forbidden.

§. Sect. 5.
Of the ſubiect and time of Iuſtification.

The perſons who are thus juſtified are all the faithfull, and they only who doe apply the righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt vnto themſelues by a true and liuely faith. And thus the Apoſtle doth limit and reſtraine it: Rom. 3.21,22. where he ſaith, that the righteouſneſſe of God is made manifeſt without the law; to wit, the righteouſneſſe of God by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt, vnto all and vpon all that beleeue. And 4,5. To him that worketh not but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly, his faith is counted for righteouſneſſe. And our Sauiour hath promiſed, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhall not come into iudgement, but hath paſſed from death to life; Iohn 5.24. The time when wee are thus juſtified is firſt in this life, as ſoon as true faith is begot in vs by the miniſtery of the Word, whereby wee particularly apply vnto our ſelues Chriſt Ieſus and all his benefits, reſting and relying vpon him alone for our juſtification and ſaluation; the which ſhall be fully perfected at the day of Iudgement, when as our Sauiour Chriſt ſhall pronounce the ſentence of abſolution, ſaying, Come yee bleſſed of my Father, take the inheritance of the Kingdome prepared for you from the foundation of the world, *Matth.*25.34.

CHAP. LI.

That we are not iuſtified by our workes and merits.

§. Sect. 1.
Satans tentations concerning iuſtifica-

HAuing ſhewed briefly the doctrine of Iuſtification: Wee are now to ſpeake of and to anſwer ſuch tentations as are ſuggeſted tion of two ſorts.

by our ſpirituall enemy, to the end that hee may perſwade vs that wee are not juſtified, or that hee may mooue vs to ſeeke for juſtification where it is not to be had, and ſo in the meanetime neglect it where only it is to be found, and the alone meanes whereby it is to be enjoyed. In ſpeaking whereof I ſhall not need to handle things ſo largely as thoſe points which went before, partly becauſe our juſtification doth inſeparably follow our effectuall calling, and therefore hee that is aſſured of the one needs not to doubt of the other, partly becauſe the moſt of thoſe tentations which Sathan ſuggeſteth to impugne and make void our aſſurance that we are juſtified, are already anſwered, namely, thoſe which concerne the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and true faith in Ieſus Chriſt; and partly becauſe thoſe tentations which Satan ſuggeſteth into the minds of afflicted Chriſtians, are the ſelfe-ſame which the limbes of Satan the Antichriſt of Rome and all his Apoſtaticall Synagogue doe hold and defend: and therefore I ſhal not need to intreat hereof at large becauſe theſe points in controuerſie haue beene already and will be hereafter ſo copiouſly, learnedly, & religiouſly handled by others of greater abilities, and farre more excellent gifts. But let vs come to the matter in hand. The tentations of Sathan concerning this point are of two ſorts: the firſt tend to perſwade vs to labour after and to reſt vpon an imperfect and maimed righteouſneſſe for our juſtification, whereby we can neuer be juſtified in Gods ſight, and ſo in the meane time hee cauſeth vs to neglect the al-ſufficient and moſt perfect righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt, by which alone we are juſtified before God and eternally ſaued: the other tend to make vs doubt of our true juſtification, that ſo hee may either make this gracious worke of God fruſtrate in vs, or elſe at leaſt depriue our ſoules of that true conſolation and peace of conſcience, which dependeth vpon the aſſurance of our juſtification.

For the firſt, hee will labour to perſwade vs that it is not the righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt, imputed vnto vs by God and apprehended and applied vnto vs by faith, whereby we are juſtified in Gods ſight, for this imputatiue righteouſneſſe is but meerely putatiue and imaginary, but by that inherent righteouſneſſe which is in our ſelues. For Chriſt (will hee ſay) did not fulfill the Law and die, that this his righteouſneſſe and obedience ſhould become ours by imputation, but he died to the end hee might merit for vs the Spirit of God, which ſhould infuſe into vs an inherent righteouſnes, and he ſhed his bloud to the end that our good workes being dipped and died therein, might become perfect and ſo juſtifie vs in Gods ſight; and therefore that wee are not juſtified by faith alone, but by our other graces and vertues alſo, and our good workes proceeding from them; neither by faith at all as it is an inſtrument which applieth Chriſt and his benefits vnto vs, but as it is a grace or vertue infuſed into our ſelues. Againſt which tentation it behooueth vs moſt carefully to arme our ſelues, as being moſt dangerous and pernicious. For it robbeth God and our Sauiour Chriſt of the whole glory of our juſtification and ſaluation, and deriueth ſome, yea the greateſt portion vnto our ſelues, as being chiefly juſtified by our owne meanes; and alſo it depriueth our ſoules of all true comfort and full aſſurance that wee are juſtified and ſaued, by taking out of our hands the ſtrong ſtaffe of our ſaluation, the perfect righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt, and by putting into them the weake reed of our owne workes, which will preſently breake and faile vs, when we moſt reſt vpon it. And ſo we ſhall vnrecouerably fall into the horrible pit of deepe deſperation, when as we are abandoned of our chiefe hope, that is, when on the one ſide the huge waight of our grieuous ſinnes, and on the other ſide the great imperfection of our moſt perfect righteouſneſſe, and the filthy pollution of our moſt glorious workes appeare vnto vs. And to the end that wee may be the better inabled to reſiſt this dangerous and damnable tentation, I will firſt ſhew that we cannot be juſtified before the Tribunall of Gods judgement by our inherent righteouſneſſe and good workes; and ſecondly, that wee are juſtified by faith alone, as it only applieth vnto vs Chriſt Ieſus his righteouſneſſe and obedience.

§. Sect. 3. That wee not iuſtified our wor proued by Scripture,

That wee are not juſtified by our owne workes and righteouſneſſe, it manifeſtly appeareth both by plaine teſtimonies of holy Scripture, and ſtrong arguments which are grounded vpon them. For the firſt, the Apoſtle plainly ſaith, that *by the workes of the Law ſhall no fleſh be iuſtified in his ſight, for by the Law commeth the knowledge of ſinne: but now is the righteouſnes of God made manifeſt without the Law, hauing witneſſe of the Law and the Prophets; to wit, the righteouſneſſe of God, by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt, vnto all and vpon all that beleeue. Rom.*3.20.21, 22. So *Phil.*3.9. Hee diſclaimeth his owne righteouſneſſe, and reſteth vpon the alone righteouſneſſe of Chriſt Ieſus, which is made ours by faith, for his juſtification and ſaluation. I haue (ſaith he) *counted all things loſſe, and doe iudge them to bee dung that I may winne Chriſt, and might be found in him, not hauing mine owne righteouſneſſe, which is of the Law, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, euen the righteouſnes which is of God through faith: Phil.*3.9. And Gal. 3.10, 11. he affirmeth, that as many as reſt in the workes of the Law, are vnder the curſe; and

and that no man is iuſtified by the Law in the ſight of God, it is euident, becauſe the iuſt ſhall liue by faith. So *Rom.*4.5. To him that worketh not, but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly, his faith is counted for righteouſnes. And our Sauiour Chriſt teacheth vs to ſay and acknowledge when wee haue done all to our vttermoſt power which is commanded vs, that wee are ſtill vnprofitable ſeruants, *Luk.*17.10.

places are vnder-d of the es of the all law, and of the ce-niesonly.

But vnto theſe and ſuch like manifeſt places, it is anſwered that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of the workes of the morall law, but of the ceremonies only. To which againe wee reply, that no ſuch friuolous diſtinction can bee gathered out of the Apoſtles words, nay, the plaine contrary euidently appeareth, by his maine ſcope and drift in his whole diſcourſe of our iuſtification, and alſo by ſome particular places. His chiefe ſcope is to beate downe the pride of all, both Iewes and Gentiles, to the end that the whole glory and praiſe of our iuſtification and ſaluation might be aſcribed to the free mercy, grace, and goodneſſe of God alone. Now it is moſt certaine that the morall duties are in themſelues farre more excellent then the ceremoniall, and conſequently more fit to puffe vs vp with a ſpirituall pride, and to make vs to reſt in our ſelues for our iuſtification, aſcribing at leaſt, ſome part of the praiſe vnto our owne works and vertues: ſo that if the Apoſtle had only ſpoken of the works of the ceremoniall law, mans pride ſhould not bee beaten downe, neither ſhould God haue the whole praiſe of our ſaluation, and ſo his diſcourſe ſhould be vaine, as not tending to proue and inforce that, for which end and purpoſe hee chiefly vndertakes it. Againe this ſhould nothing concerne either the Gentiles in former times or any true Chriſtians ſince the comming of Chriſt, foraſmuch as they did not, nor doe not, neither were, nor are bound to obſerue the ceremoniall law, and conſequently could neuer once dreame of obtaining righteouſneſſe by fulfilling the ceremonies; but they would rather aſcribe the glory of their iuſtification to their morall duties, to which they found themſelues bound by the Law of nature written in their hearts, or doe find themſelues bound by the morall Law of God written in his word; and therefore it was neceſſary for the beating downe of their pride, and that they might aſcribe the whole glory vnto God of their iuſtification and ſaluation, that the Apoſtle in this diſcourſe ſhould proue that they were not iuſtified, either by obſeruing the Law of nature written in their hearts, or yet the morall Law of God reuealed in his word. Whereby it manifeſtly appeareth, that howſoeuer the Apoſtle excludeth the workes of the ceremoniall Law from being cauſes of iuſtification, yet not them alone, but the workes of the morall Law alſo.

§. Sect. 5.
The former point proued by particular teſtimonies.

But this may more manifeſtly appeare by particular places wherin the Apoſtle plainly ſheweth that hee ſpeaketh not onely of the ceremoniall Law, but of the morall Law alſo. In the ſecond chapter of the Epiſtle to the Romanes, hee plainely diſputeth as well of the Law of nature, to the obedience whereof the Gentiles were obliged, as of the Law giuen by Moſes Chap. 3.19.20. hee ſaith that all the world are made culpable before God, and therefore by the workes of the Law ſhall no fleſh be iuſtified in his ſight. Now if this conſequence bee good, he he ſpeaketh not onely of the ceremoniall, but of the morall duties, for the former belonged not to the Gentiles, and therefore the neglect of them did not make them culpable, nor debarre them of being iuſtified by their owne workes. Secondly, Rom. 10.5.6. and Gal. 3.11.12.21.22.24. the Apoſtle putteth a plaine difference betweene the righteouſneſſe which is by the Law, and the righteouſneſſe which is by faith, and maketh a flat oppoſition in the act of iuſtification, not betweene morall and ceremoniall duties, but betweene doing & beleeuing, faith and workes. Thirdly, he ſaith, Eph. 2.8.9. that we are ſaued by grace through faith, not of our ſelues, nor of works, leſt any man ſhould boaſt himſelfe. If he had ſpoken only, of workes they might (though fooliſhly) haue wreſted it to ceremonies onely, ſeeing the Epheſians were not bound to the ceremoniall Law, as being ſtrangers to the common wealth of Iſrael, as himſelfe ſpeaketh, verſe. 12. but when he ſaith alſo not of our ſelues, he excludeth all whatſoeuer is in vs from being the cauſe of our ſaluation, not only ceremoniall but alſo morall duties. So writing to Titus he ſaith, *Tit.*3.5. Not by the workes of righteouſnes which we had done, but according to his mercy he ſaued vs: in which place wee are neceſſarily to vnderſtand the workes of the morall Law; for Titus being a Grecian was not bound to obſerue the ceremoniall Law, and therefore hee was not ſo much as circumciſed, as the Apoſtle plainly affirmeth, *Ga.*2.3. Fourthly, Paul ſpeaketh of that Law by which we come to the knowledge of ſin, as appeareth Rom. 3.20. and 7.7.8.9. But the knowledge of ſin came eſpecially by the Morall law, & therefore of this Law the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Laſtly, the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the works of the law, alleageth theſe ſentences: Gal. 3.10. As many as are of the workes of the Law are vnder the curſe: for it is written, Curſed is euery man that continueth not in all things which are written in the booke of the Law to doe them. So that he ſpeaketh not of the ceremoniall Law alone, but of the whole Secondly, it is anſwered that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh onely of the workes of thoſe who are not regenerate nor indued with Faith, and not of the regenerate and faithfull. Which ſhifting cauill the Apoſtle cleerely taketh away, not onely by applying his ſpeeches vnto all men without any limitation, but eſpecially in that example of Abraham which hee bringeth for this purpoſe; who though hee were long before regenerate, indued with faith and exceeding plentifull in good workes, yet hee flatly excludeth all his workes from being any cauſes of his iuſtification. So Rom.4.2. If Abraham were iuſtified by workes, he had herein to reioyce, but not with God. And verſe 3. Abraham beleeued God, and it was counted vnto him for righteouſneſſe. 4. Now to him that worketh, the wages is not counted by fauour, but by debt. 5. But to him that worketh not, but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly, his faith is counted for righteouſneſſe.

Rom.8,1.33.34.

And ſo much concerning the teſtimonies of Scripture, which manifeſtly prooue that wee are not iuſtified by our workes. The reaſons which may bee brought to the ſame purpoſe are exceeding many; but I will will briefly touch ſome few only. Firſt, iuſtification is manifeſtly oppoſed to condemnation: and they are both iudiciall wordes vſed in Ciuill Courts, and therefore to bee vnderſtood both iudicially and not after a diuers manner. But to condemne ſignifieth not to infuſe any fault or crime into the perſon condemned; but to pronounce him guilty and faultie: and therefore to iuſtifie ſignifieth not to infuſe righteouſnes into the perſon iuſtified; but to declare, pronounce and repute him as iuſt and righteous. Secondly, by the ſame meanes whereby wee obtaine the remiſſion of our ſinnes, wee are alſo iuſtified and made righteous; but wee obtaine the remiſſion of our ſinnes, not for our workes or inherent righteouſneſſe, or any vertue that is in our ſelues, but by and for the alone merits, obedience, and full ſatiſfaction of Chriſt, apprehended and applied vnto vs by a liuely faith, as appeareth Rom. 3. 25. And therefore by this meanes alone we are alſo iuſtified. Thirdly, whoſoeuer are iuſtified freely by grace, they are not iuſtified by their owne merits, workes, or inherent righteouſnes: but the Scriptures teſtifie that all the faithfull are iuſtified freely by Gods grace; as appeareth Rom. 3. 23. 24. All haue ſinned and are depriued of the glory of God. 24. And are iuſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Chriſt Ieſus. So Eph. 1. 7. By whom we haue redemption, through his blood, euen the forgiuenes of ſinnes according to his rich grace, And 2. 8. By grace are you ſaued through faith, and that not of your ſelues, it is the gift of God. And Tit. 3. Not by the workes of righteouſneſſe which we had done, but according to his mercie he ſaued vs, &c. 7. That we being iuſtified by his grace, ſhould be made heires according to hope of eternal life. And therefore none are iuſtified by their owne merits, workes, or inherent righteouſneſſe. Laſtly, the Apoſtle Paul himſelfe gathereth many abſurdities which would follow this doctrine of iuſtification by works. Firſt, that our faith ſhould be vaine, and the promiſe of God void, Rom.4.14. Secondly, that Chriſt Ieſus ſhould die in vaine if we haue righteouſneſſe by the law, Gal. 2. 21. Thirdly, that wee ſhould haue cauſe of boaſting and glorying in our ſelues, Epheſ. 2. 9. for if a man were iuſtified by his owne inherent righteouſnes, hee ſhould haue whereof to glorie, and ſo God ſhould be robbed of the whole praiſe of our ſaluation, Rom.4.2. But the Lord of purpoſe hath iuſtified vs freely of his grace, and not for our workes and inherent righteouſneſſe, that all glorying in our ſelues might be excluded: as appeareth, Rom.3.27. Epheſ.2.9. Fourthly, it would follow hereupon that wee ſhould ſtill bee vnder the curſe of the Law, which is denounced againſt all who continue not in all that is written in the booke of the Law to doe it, as the Apoſtle reaſoneth Gal. 3. 10. Fifthly, that the obedience and ſatisfaction of Chriſt ſhould bee maimed and imperfect, vnleſſe it were patched vp with our owne righteouſnes: the contrary whereof the Apoſtle affirmeth, Heb. 7. 25. namely, that he is able perfectly to ſaue all them, who come vnto God by him. Sixthly, hereupon it would follow that wee ſhould continually wauer and doubt, in reſpect of our manifold corruptions and imperfect righteouſneſſe, and ſhould haue our ſoules depriued of that peace of conſcience which followeth iuſtification by faith, as it is, Rom. 5. 1. Laſtly, with the Iewes wee ſhall bring our ſelues into moſt certaine danger of being reiected and caſt off, from being the people and Church of God, if with them wee goe about to ſtabliſh our owne righteouſnes, in the meane time not ſubmitting our ſelues to the righteouſnes of God, which is of faith in Ieſus Chriſt, as it is Rom. 10. 4. 6.

Sect. 1.
is to be ſtood faith aiuſtifieth.

AND thus much concerning the firſt point, namely, that we are not iuſtified by workes. The ſecond is, that wee are iuſtified by faith alone: whereby wee are not to vnderſtand that faith by its owne vertue, or as it is a faculty, habit, worke or action in vs, doth iuſtifie vs, but as it is the alone inſtrument, whereby we doe apprehend and applie vnto vs Chriſt Ieſus, his righteouſneſſe, and obedience, by which only righteouſnes, which is out of our ſelues, in Chriſt, as the proper ſubject thereof, being offered in the word and Sacraments, and applied by faith, wee are iuſtified in Gods ſight, as appeareth Phil.2.9. Secondly, whereas wee ſay that faith alone iuſtifieth, we do not vnderſtand ſuch a faith, as is alone without workes, charitie, and other ſanctifying graces, which were nothing elſe but imaginarie, dead, and but as it were a carkaſe of faith which breatheth not; but that among all other graces, vertues, and faculties of the ſoule faith alone, and not any of them, is the inſtrument, whereby we applie Chriſt Ieſus vnto vs, who being thus applied doth iuſtifie vs. Otherwiſe we affirme that other graces of Gods Spirit, and euen good works which are a fruit of them all, doe neceſſarilie accompanie our juſtification, not as inſtruments or cauſes therof, but as inſeparable effects and fruits. So that howſoeuer wee exclude workes from the act of juſtifying, yet wee neceſſarily require them in the ſubject or perſon iuſtified; we affirme that faith alone iuſtifieth, but we denie that ſuch a faith which is alone doth iuſtifie vs; we maintaine that wee are juſtified by faith alone without workes, but withall wee affirme that faith which is without workes doth not juſtifie vs, as being dead, falſe and imaginarie. This may bee made plaine by ſome ſimilitudes. To the being of an honeſt man, there is neceſſarily required honeſt actions, not as cauſes but as effects, neither are his honeſt actions the cauſe of his honeſtie, but his honeſtie the cauſe of his honeſt actions. To a liuing man there is neceſſarily required as wel breathing which is an action or effect of life, as the ſoule which is the cauſe thereof; and ſo to a iuſtified man there is neceſſarily required, as well good works which are the effects of iuſtification, as faith which is the inſtrumentall cauſe thereof; for faith and workes are neuer ſeuered in the ſubject or partie juſtified, although they are diſioyned in the act of juſtifying. So the eye onely ſeeth and not the forehead; but yet the eye ſeuered from the forehead ſeeth not, becauſe it is but a dead eye; the hand writeth & not the body, but the hand ſeuered from the body writeth not, becauſe it is a dead hand. The foot goeth and not the head or heart, but the foot which is ſeuered from the head or heart goeth not; & ſo faith only juſtifieth, and not hope, not charitie, not workes, but the faith that is ſeuered from hope, charitie and workes, iuſtifieth not, becauſe it is but a dead faith. As therefore when wee ſay the eye onely ſeeth, the hand onely writeth, the foot onely walketh, our meaning is not, that theſe parts being alone, and ſeuered from the reſt, ſee, write and walke; but that amongſt all other parts, the action or function of ſeeing belongeth peculiarly vnto the eye, writing to the hand, walking to the foote; ſo when we ſay that onely faith iuſtifieth, our meaning is not that the faith which is alone, and ſeuered from other graces, and the fruits of them, good workes, iuſtifieth; but that amongſt all other graces, this act of iuſtifying peculiarly and properly belongeth vnto faith, and not to any other grace, vertue or workes.

Teſtimonies to proue that faith alone iuſtifieth vs. Rom.3.28. and 4.5.

Now that faith alone, in this ſenſe vnderſtood, juſtifieth, appeareth plainely, both by teſtimonies of Scripture and apparent reaſons. For the firſt, it is manifeſt, Rom.3.28. where after long diſputation concerning this point, the Apoſtle expreſſely concludeth thus: Therefore wee conclude, that a man is iuſtified by faith without the workes of the Law. And Chap. 4. verſe. 5. To him that worketh not, but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly, his faith is counted for righteouſneſſe. So Galath.2.16. Know that a man is not iuſtified by the workes of the Law, but by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt; euen we I ſay haue beleeued in Ieſus Chriſt, that we might be Iuſtified by the faith of Chriſt, and and not by the workes of the Law, becauſe by the workes of the Law, no fleſh ſhall be iuſtified. So Chap. 3. 11. And that no man is iuſtified by the Law in the ſight of God, it is euident: for the iuſt ſhall liue by faith. 12. And the Law is not of faith. And hence it is that the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, whereby wee are iuſtified, is called the *righteouſnes of faith, Rom.9.*verſ.30. becauſe faith is the onely inſtrument, which apprehendeth and applieth this righteouſneſſe vnto vs, for our iuſtification.

The reaſons to prooue that faith alone juſtifieth are diuers. Firſt that which alone applieth vnto vs Chriſt Ieſus and his righteouſneſſe, that onely juſtifieth vs: but faith alone applieth vnto vs Chriſt Ieſus and his righteouſneſſe, and not hope, charitie, or any other grace: and therefore faith alone juſtifieth. Secondly, that which only maketh the promiſes of the Goſpell firme and ſure vnto vs, that alone juſtifieth vs: but faith alone reſting vpon Gods mercy and Chriſts merits, maketh the promiſes of the Goſpell firme and ſure vnto vs (which would be moſt vncertaine if they ſhould depend on the condition of our workes and worthineſſe; ſeeing they are moſt imperfect, and wee moſt corrupt and vnworthy of Gods leaſt mercy; as the Apoſtle plainly ſheweth, Rom.4.16. Therefore it is (namely the couenant of grace) by faith, that it might come by grace, and the promiſe might be ſure to all the ſeed:) and therefore faith alone iuſtifieth vs. Laſtly, our Sauiour Chriſt, Iohn 3.14,15. maketh this compariſon: As Moſes lift vp the Serpent in the wilderneſſe, ſo muſt the Sonne of man be lift vp, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh, but haue eternall life. From which wee may thus reaſon: as the Iſraelites who were ſtung with fiery Serpents, were cured not by any outward meanes of Phyſicke and Surgerie, or any thing in themſelues, ſaue onely by looking vpon the brazen Serpent, which for this purpoſe was ſet vp by Gods Commandement; ſo we being ſtung of the olde Serpent with the ſting of ſinne, cannot be cured by any meanes without or within our ſelues, but by beholding the true ſubſtance Chriſt Ieſus, ſignified by this ſhadow, with the eye of faith. And thus haue I proued, firſt, that we are not iuſtified by our workes, and inherent righteouſneſſe; and ſecondly, that we are iuſtified by faith alone: not as it is the chiefe and principall cauſe, for in this reſpect God iuſtifieth; nor as it is the matter or meritorious cauſe of our iuſtificatiō; for in this reſpect, the merits & righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt iuſtifieth vs; but as it is the alone inſtrument and only cauſe in vs which applieth that meritorious cauſe vnto vs, whereby alone we are iuſtified in Gods ſight.

§. Sect.4.
That the imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe is not putatiue and imaginary.

Secondly, the tempter will obiect, that this imputed righteouſneſſe wee ſpeake of, is but imaginary, and a vaine phantaſie; as if a man who were defiled with dirt ſhould be reputed cleane by the imputation of anothers cleanneſſe, or as if a begger ſhould bee eſteemed rich, by imputation of anothers wealth. To which we are to anſwere, that the imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe vnto vs, is no imaginarie dreame, but a matter plainly expreſſed in Gods Word, as alſo the not imputation of our ſinnes is therein ſpecified. In the fourth of the Romans, this word is vſed by the Holy Ghoſt an eleuen times. So Verſe 3. Abraham beleeued God, and it was imputed vnto him for righteouſneſſe. And Verſe 4. To him that worketh not, but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly, his faith is imputed for righteouſneſſe. And Verſe 6. Euen as Dauid declared the bleſſedneſſe of the man vnto whom God imputeth righteouſneſſe without workes. And Verſe 8. Bleſſed is the man to whom the Lord imputeth not ſinne, &c.

Rom.4.3,4.

§. Sect.
That no owne bu Chriſts r teouſneſ imputed vs for our ſtification

Yea will the tempter ſay, it is true that we are iuſtified by imputed righteouſneſſe; but not by the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, which is out of our ſelues; but our faith which is formed and perfected with Charitie, and other graces, and good workes, is imputed for righteouſneſſe: or more plainly, God accepteth of the workes of the faithfull, and their inherent righteouſneſſe, though imperfect and vnworthy in themſelues, for, and through Chriſt, for ſuch righteouſnes which may iuſtifie vs in his ſight. For the anſwering of which obiection, wee are to know, that this word imputing, or imputation, is taken two wayes in the Scriptures: firſt, when as the thing imputed is in our ſelues, and ſo it is ſaid, Pſal.106.31. that the fact of Phinees was imputed vnto him for righteouſneſſe; ſo Rom.5.13. But ſinne is not imputed while there is no Law. Secondly, when as the thing imputed is out of our ſelues; and of this, mention is made, Leuit.17.4. and Numb.18.27. And in this latter ſenſe the word is to be vnderſtood in the doctrine of iuſtification, and not in the former. For our ſinnes were imputed vnto Chriſt, when hee offered himſelfe to ſtand in our place, to pay our debt and to make full ſatisfaction to his Fathers iuſtice, by ſuffering thoſe puniſhments and manifold afflictions which wee by our ſinnes had deſerued; in which reſpect the Scriptures ſay that hee was reputed amongſt the wicked, Marke 15.28. and that he was made ſinne for vs, 2.Cor.5.21. not by infuſion of our ſinnes and corruptions into his moſt holy nature, but by imputation only. And contrariwiſe, wee are made iuſt or iuſtified, not by infuſion of inherent righteouſnes into vs, but by imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, when as beleeuing in him, notwithſtanding that our nature is ſtill defiled with ſinne and manifold corruptions, through the meere mercie and free grace of God for the merits and obedience of Chriſt, we are reputed iuſt, as though we had neuer committed ſinne, and had performed perfect obedience vnto Gods Commandements, and ſo adiudged heires of euerlaſting life. So that this imputation conſiſteth not in Gods reputing of vs iuſt, in reſpect of our inherent righteouſneſſe infuſed into vs; but in the free mercy and grace of God, which for Chriſt his ſake couereth our ſinnes, which are indeed inherent in vs, ſo as they ſhall neuer bee imputed vnto vs for our condemnation, and imputeth vnto vs the righteouſnes which is not in vs but in Chriſt, wherewith being fully poſſeſſed, he reputeth of vs, as moſt innocent and perfectly righteous.

§. Sect.6.
The former point proued by the teſtimonies of the Scriptures.

Now, that imputation is to be vnderſtood in this latter ſenſe, it is moſt manifeſt where the Apoſtle Paul ſetteth downe the word in both theſe ſenſes, denying that in this doctrine of iuſtification, it is to be vnderſtood of the former, and affirming it of the latter. To him (ſaith he) that worketh, the wages is not imputed by fauour, but by debt (namely, becauſe he hath merited it by his owne righteouſneſſe) 5. But to him that worketh not, but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly, his faith is counted or imputed for righteouſneſſe; euen as Dauid declareth the bleſſedneſſe of the man vnto whom God imputeth righteouſneſſe without workes. In which words hee plainly ſheweth, that there is a kind of imputation which hath its ground or foundation in workes and inherent righteouſneſſe, and this hee affirmeth is not of grace. And that there is another kind of imputation, which hath not its ground and foundation in him to whom it is made, but in the free mercy of God juſtifying the wicked without his workes, and therefore not only deſtitute of inherent righteouſneſſe whereby he might be juſtified, but alſo guiltie of inherent corruption and actuall tranſgreſſion, whereby hee might bee condemned if God ſhould enter into judgement with him. So alſo he plainly affirmeth, *Epheſ.*2.8. that wee are ſaued by grace through faith, and that not of our ſelues; it is the gift of God. 9. Not of workes, leſt any man ſhould boaſt himſelfe.

Secondly, this may be prooued by the example of Abraham, vpon which the Apoſtle in the former place inſiſteth; for by that imputed righteouſneſſe whereby he was juſtified, we are alſo juſtified: but the Apoſtle plainly affirmeth that this imputation was not of Abrahams inherent righteouſnes, with the which notwithſtanding hee was plentifully endued; for (as hee ſaith) if Abraham were iuſtified by workes, hee had wherein to reioyce, but not in God; but Abraham beleeued in God, and this was counted to him for righteouſneſſe, as it is *Rom.*4.2,3. and therefore wee are not juſtified by our workes and inherent righteouſneſſe, but by the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt imputed vnto vs.

Thirdly, that righteouſnes which juſtifieth vs, muſt conſiſt in perfect obedience and fulfilling of the Law of God, in that exact manner and meaſure which Gods juſtice doth require: but this cānot poſſibly be done by any righteouſneſſe which is in vs, which is moſt imperfect and mingled with many ſins and corruptions, for in many things we ſinne all, as it is *Iam.*3.2. and he that ſaith he hath no ſinne is a liar, as Iohn ſpeaketh, 1.Epiſt.1.8. and our beſt righteouſnes is like a polluted cloth, as it is Eſay 64.6. but by the alone righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt, which being imputed vnto vs, is ſufficient to anſwere and ſatisfie Gods exact and moſt perfect juſtice. That our righteouſneſſe whereby we are to bee juſtified muſt bee perfect, and ſuch as the Law and exact juſtice of God requireth, it appeareth, *Rom.*3.31. whereas the Apoſtle plainly affirmeth, that when faith is imputed vnto righteouſneſſe, the Law is not made void, but rather confirmed and fulfilled. Doe we then (ſaith hee) make the Law of none effect through faith? God forbid. Yea we eſtabliſh the Law. But this cannot bee done by our righteouſneſſe, which is imperfect and mingled with innumerable ſinnes, but by the alone moſt perfect righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt imputed vnto vs. Againe, the Lord hath commanded and ſtraitly charged, that in our ciuill judgements the righteous ſhall bee juſtified, and the wicked condemned, *Deut.*25.1. And the Wiſeman ſaith, that he who iuſtifieth the wicked, & he that condemneth the iuſt, euen they both are abomination vnto the Lord, *Prou.*17.15. And the Prophet Eſay denounceth a woe againſt them which commit this ſinne, Chap.5. Verſe 23. Now, ſhall the Lord require this of vs, and ſhall we thinke that he whoſe will is the rule of juſtice, will juſtifie any whoſe righteouſneſſe is imperfect, and not according to his Law? No, hee hath told vs, that it is more eaſie that Heauen and Earth ſhould paſſe away, then that one tittle of the Law ſhould fall vnaccompliſhed, Luke 16.17. And therefore let vs not truſt vnto our owne imperfect righteouſneſſe, but wholly reſt vpon the alone righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt by a liuely faith for our juſtification. For hee is the Lord our righteouſneſſe, Ier.23.6. In him we haue righteouſneſſe and ſtrength. Eſay 45.24. Hee is made vnto vs of God, wiſdome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification and redemption, 1.Cor.1.30. By his obedience many are made righteous, Rom.5.19. And that which was impoſſible to the law, in as much as it was weake becauſe of the fleſh, God ſending his Sonne in the ſimilitude of ſinfull fleſh, and for ſinne, condemned ſinne in the fleſh, that the righteouſneſſe of the law might bee fulfilled in vs; as it is *Rom.*8.3,4. In a word, in him alone we haue all our righteouſneſſe, in him we ſhine gloriouſly in the ſight of God, and he is that bright ſhining Sunne of righteouſneſſe, from whom we borrow all our light, without whoſe rayes of holineſſe we ſhould remayne in the darkneſſe of our ſinnes and corruptions. Laſtly, the Apoſtle ſetteth downe the forme of our juſtification, namely, the imputation of our ſinnes vnto Chriſt, and the imputation of his righteouſneſſe vnto vs. 2.*Cor.*5.21. Hee which knew no ſinne, was made ſinne for vs, that wee might bee made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. As therefore Chriſt was made a ſinner for vs, ſo wee are made righteous before God in him: but Chriſt Ieſus was not made a ſinner for vs by infuſion of our ſinnes and corruptions into his nature (for he was alwayes moſt holy, pure, vndefiled and without ſinne, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth of him) but by imputation onely, as being our ſuretie who had taken vpon him to diſcharge all our debt: and therefore in like manner wee are made righteous, not by infuſion of righteouſneſſe, but by imputation only.

§. Sect. 3.
That iuſtification by imputation is not imaginary, but reall and in truth.

Now whereas they obiect, that to be juſtified by imputation is but an imaginary mockery, as if a poore man ſhould be reputed rich: to this we are to anſwere, that it is but a friuolous cauill: for wee doe not teach that God eſteemeth and reputeth vs righteous, being wholly defiled with ſinne and quite deſtitute of all righteouſneſſe; but that hee maketh vs perfectly righteous, by waſhing away our ſinnes with the precious bloud of Chriſt, and by applying and appropriating vnto vs his perfect righteouſneſſe and obedience by vertue of his ſpirit principally, and a liuely faith inſtrumentally, whereby wee are vnited vnto Chriſt and become members of his Bodie, and conſequently we haue right and full intereſt vnto all that which this our Head hath done for vs; and ſo being made partakers of his righteouſnes and merits, God reputeth vs as wee are in truth perfectly juſt and righteous. If a man being poore and farre in debt, ſhould be accounted and reputed exceeding rich and nothing indebted, it were indeed but a meere imagination: but if another of great ſufficiencie ſhould take vpon him to bee his ſuretie, and not onely diſcharge all his debts, but ſhould beſtow vpon him great ſummes of money and much treaſure, this man whatſoeuer he was before time in himſelfe, may now bee eſteemed rich & out of debt. So if we (as we are far indebted to the juſtice of God and exceeding beggerly, yea ſtarke naked of all righteouſneſſe) ſhould be reputed, as we are thus in our ſelues, righteous and nothing indebted, it were but a meere mockery; but ſeeing our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt hath taken vpon him to be our ſurety, who is himſelfe al-ſufficient, and ſeeing he hath perfectly and fully anſwered all our debts, wherein wee were ingaged to Gods juſtice; and not only ſo, but alſo hath communicated and beſtowed vpon vs the infinite rich treaſures of his righteouſneſſe and obedience, giuing vnto vs full intereſt and poſſeſſion hereof, outwardly by his handwriting of the Goſpell, and his Sacraments as Seales annexed thereunto, and inwardly by the vertue and cooperation of his Spirit, applying them vnto vs: and laſtly, ſeeing we alſo haue receiued the full aſſurance of all this heauenly and ſpirituall rich treaſure by the hand of faith, we are in truth quite out of debt, and exceeding rich with his righteouſneſſe which is now become ours, and therefore are ſo reputed and eſteemed in the ſight of God. Againe the faithfull are to be conſidered not as diuers perſons ſeparated from Chriſt, but as they make one myſticall Body with him whereof he is the Head and they his members. By vertue of which vnion they become his and he theirs, and all that belongeth vnto him, as his ſatisfaction, righteouſneſſe, death and obedience. In which reſpect they cannot bee ſaid to be juſt by anothers righteouſneſſe; ſeeing his righteouſneſſe by vertue of this vnion is truly become theirs, euen as the gifts and faculties which are in the Head doe belong to the whole Body and all the members of it for their vſe and benefit. And thus alſo by the vnion of marriage a poore Wife becommeth really and truly rich by the riches of her husband; euen as wee alſo are inriched by vertue of our marriage with Chriſt: whereby he communicateth himſelfe and all the riches of his righteouſneſſe vnto vs. For if Adams ſinne became ours, becauſe being the Head and root of mankind wee ſinned in his loynes; then much more may Chriſts righteouſneſſe be truly reputed ours becauſe of our myſticall vnion, whereby hee dwelleth in vs and we in him, and ſo make but one Body, head and members, both which are therefore by the Apoſtle called Chriſt, 1. Cor. 12. 12.

Chap. LIII.

Sathans tentations mouing the weake Chriſtian to doubt of his iuſtification, anſwered.

§. Sect. 1.
That our fication is plainly re led vnto v the Word o
God.

ANd ſo much for anſwering Sathans tentations, wherby he would perſwade vs to reſt vpon a falſe and imperfect righteouſneſſe for our juſtification: Now we are briefly to ſpeake of thoſe which he ſuggeſteth into the minds of weake Chriſtians, to the end that hee may make them doubt of their juſtification, that ſo hee might (if it were poſſible) make fruſtrate this worke of God, or at leaſt rob their ſoules of all comfort and peace of conſcience, which alwayes accompanieth the aſſurance of our juſtification; for being iuſtified by faith wee haue peace towardes God through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom. 5. 1. First, therefore hee ſuggeſteth that our juſtification is an action of God, and therefore vnknowne to vs; ſo that we cannot poſſibly attaine vnto any certaine perſwaſion that wee are juſtified of God, vnleſſe he aſſure vs hereof by ſome ſpeciall and extraordinary reuelation. For the anſwering whereof, wee are to vnderſtand that this act of God in juſtifying a Sinner, is as cleerely reuealed ordinarily in the Scriptures, as any other thing concerning our ſaluation, and that euery true Beleeuer may as certainly conclude by vndoubted arguments grounded on Gods infallible truth, that hee is juſtified before God, as by naturall reaſon hee hee can proue that hee liueth and breatheth. For firſt our effectuall vocation and juſtification are inſeparably linked together by the Apoſtle, *Rom.*8.30. So that whoſoeuer can prooue that hee is effectually called, hee may alſo moſt certainly inferre that he is juſtified. But euery true Beleeuer may come to the certaine knowledge that he is effectuatly called, (as before I haue ſhewed at large) and that not by any ſpeciall reuelation, but by the will of God, reuealed in his Word, by the inward teſtimony of Gods Spirit, and the vndoubted ſignes of effectuall calling, which he obſerueth in himſelfe; and therefore without any particular reuelation wee may attaine vnto this aſſurance alſo that we are juſtified, that is, that our ſinnes are pardoned for the merits and full ſatisfaction of Ieſus Chriſt, and wee clothed with his righteouſneſſe.

Rom. 5. 1.

Secondly, whoſoeuer can come to the aſſurance that hee hath a true and liuely faith, hee may alſo be aſſured that hee is juſtified: for it is the nature and an inſeparable propertie of true faith, to apply vnto the Beleeuer Chriſt Ieſus and his righteouſneſſe, whereby hee is juſtified before God: and hence it is that the Scriptures plainly affirme that we are juſtified by faith, and not by any thing elſe which is in vs, as before I haue ſufficiently ſhewed. But wee may come to the certaine aſſurance that wee haue a true faith, by the vndoubted ſignes and inſeparable fruits thereof, which wee may diſcerne in our ſelues (as hath beene already plainly proued) though wee neuer haue any ſpeciall reuelation. And therefore without any ſuch particular reuelation wee may attaine vnto the certaine aſſurance that we are juſtified in Gods ſight.

Thirdly, that which the Goſpell aſſureth vs of, wee neede not to make any doubt thereof, or once call it into queſtion: but the Goſpell aſſureth vs, that whoſoeuer beleeue in Chriſt Ieſus, and truly repent them of their ſinnes, ſhall be made partakers of all the gracious promiſes of life and ſaluation therein contained; So Iohn 3.16. God ſo loued the world that he hath giuen his only begotten Sonne, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life. And *Chap.*5.24. Verily, verily, I ſay vnto you, he that heareth my word, and beleeueth him that ſent mee, hath euerlaſting life, and ſhall not come into condemnation, but hath paſſed from death to life. And *Matth.*11.28. Come vnto me all yee that labour and are laden, and I will eaſe you. And therefore whoſoeuer beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt, approouing their faith to the World and their owne conſciences, to be true and vnfained by the fruit thereof, vnfained repentance, hee may aſſure himſelfe of all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell, and conſequently of the remiſſion of his ſinnes, and his juſtification for the merits and righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt. Laſtly, the Lord hath not onely after a generall manner propounded theſe promiſes vnto vs, and left vs to our owne libertie to beleeue or not to beleeue them, but hee hath bound vs to the performance of this dutie by his expreſſe commandement, Marke 1.15. Repent and beleeue the Goſpell. And 1.Iohn 3.23. This is his commandement that we beleeue in his Son Ieſus Chriſt, that is, that wee doe not only after a generall manner beleeue that he is the Sauiour of mankind, but that hee is our Sauiour, who hath redeemed, juſtified, and will moſt perfectly saue vs, and reſt wholly vpon him alone for our ſaluation. And he that thus beleeueth, needeth no other arguments to aſſure him that he is juſtified and ſhall be ſaued; for he hath the witneſſe in himſelfe, euen the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, crying in his heart Abba Father, and bearing witneſſe vnto his ſpirit that hee is the childe of God: and not to beleeue this is to make God a lier, becauſe we will not beleeue the record that he hath witneſſed of that his Sonne, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1.Iohn 5.10. Yea, (as before I haue ſhewed at large) hee hath added vnto the hand-writing of his Word, which containeth alſo his oath, for our better confirmation, his Sacraments; whereby he particularly conueyeth and giueth vnto euery Beleeuer, as it were proper poſſeſſion of Chriſt Ieſus and all his benefits, to the end that there ſhould bee no place left to doubting, nor any need of any particular reuelation, for our further aſſurance.

That we are made iuſt, not by infuſion but by imputation of righteouſneſſe.

Secondly, Sathan will ſuggeſt, that thoſe who are juſtified are made juſt, and thoſe who are made juſt do continually the works of righteouſneſſe; but thou, will hee ſay to the humbled Sinner, continueſt ſtill in thy corruptions, and thy wickedneſſe cleaueth faſt to thee, and compaſſeth thee about; and in ſtead of doing the workes of righteouſneſſe, thou continually heapeſt vp the full meaſure of thy ſinnes; yea, thy beſt actions are ſo ſtained with imperfections and ſo full of infirmities, that they juſtly prouoke Gods wrath againſt thee. To which we muſt anſwere, that indeed whoſoeuer is juſtified is made iuſt, but not by infuſion of inherent righteouſneſſe into our ſelues, but by imputation of Chriſts moſt perfect righteouſnes, as before I haue ſhewed. For hereby our ſins are pardoned, hee hauing taken them vpon himſelfe, and ſatisfied Gods juſtice by ſuffering thoſe puniſhments which wee had deſerued; and alſo hee hath perfectly fulfilled the Law, that hee might make vs partakers of his actiue obedience; and ſo imputing both vnto vs, hath made vs perfectly juſt and righteous in Gods ſight. So that now the Lord doth not require obedience to his Law at our hands, to the end that wee ſhould be juſtified in whole or in part, by our owne righteouſneſſe; neither are we to this end to obſerue Gods Commandements, that wee may offer vnto God our workes and inherent righteouſneſſe, deſiring thereby to bee juſtified; for, as I haue ſhewed, our beſt righteouſneſſe is imperfect, and mingled with manifold corruptions, ſo as it would rather condemne vs, than juſtifie vs, if the Lord ſhould examine it according to the exact rule of his moſt perfect juſtice: but wee offer vnto God for our juſtification, the moſt perfect righteouſneſſe and full ſatisfaction of Ieſus Chriſt, which by his merits and ſufferings hee hath once made for vs, deſiring thereby wholly and onely to be juſtified and ſaued.

As for our workes and inherent righteouſneſſe, they are not cauſes, but effects and fruits of our juſtification; neither is it poſſible that we ſhould doe any good worke acceptable in Gods ſight, till we are juſtified, and reconciled vnto God in Ieſus Chriſt, for our workes cannot pleaſe him, till our perſons pleaſe him, and whatſoeuer we doe, before faith hath purified the heart, it is ſinne and odious in the ſight of God. But as ſoone as we haue faith begotten in vs, preſently it apprehendeth Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, whereby wee are juſtified, and then being juſtified, faith worketh by loue, and bringeth forth in vs the fruits of ſanctification; which though they bee mingled with much corruption, and manifold imperfections, yet God in Chriſt accepteth of them as perfect, and will crowne them with glory, and immortalitie. Neither doth the Lord now require of vs, that we perfectly at once ſhake off all our corruptions, but that we labour as much as in vs lieth, to mortifie and ſubdue them according to the meaſure of his grace, & holy ſpirit, which he hath beſtowed on vs. Hee doth not ſtraitly command that wee ſhould inſtantly baniſh and expell ſinne from dwelling in vs, but that wee doe not ſuffer it to raigne in vs, nor willingly obey the fleſh in the luſts thereof, ſubmitting our ſelues vnto ſinne, as ſeruants and vaſſals to their Lord and Maſter. He doth not enjoyne vs that we ſhould wholly vanquiſh our corruptions, and obtaine a full victory ouer them, but that wee proclaime open warre againſt them, and manfully fight and ſtriue vnder the conduct of his Spirit, againſt the fleſh, and the ſinfull luſts thereof; and when we are taken captiue of ſinne, that we labour to attaine vnto our former freedome, in the meane time ſorrowing and groning vnder the heauy waight of our corruptions, and crying out with the Apoſtle, Wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from the body of this death? And that we confeſſe our miſerable eſtate vnto our Captaine and Leader Ieſus Chriſt, deſiring him to aſſiſt vs with the power of his holy Spirit, that thereby we may be freed out of the hands of theſe our ſpirituall enemies, whoſe bondage and captiuitie is ſo irkſome and grieuous vnto vs. He doth not now exact of vs the obedience of ſeruants, but of ſons, not Legall but Euangelical obedience, conſiſting in the deſire of the heart, and ſincere endeuour of the whole man to doe the will of God in that perfection which hee requireth. Neither doth the Lord now require that we performe abſolute and perfect obedience to his Commandements, but that to will be preſent in vs, that we conſent and approue his Law to be good, and delighting in it concerning the inner man, that we deſire & endeuour to performe that good wee cannot; and forgetting that which is behind, endeuour our ſelues to that which is before, and follow hard towardes the marke, though wee cannot attaine vnto the end of our race, til we come to the end of our liues. Finally, the Lord doth not require of vs a whole harueſt of goodnes and righteouſnes, but the firſt fruits therof; he doth not ſtand ſo much vpon our actions as vpon our affections; vpon the perfection of our works, as vpon the alacritie of our wils, and integritie of our hearts. The righteouſneſſe which he requireth is an humble confeſſion of our vnrighteouſneſſe, a ſincere hatred of our ſinnes, a holy endeauour in the vſe of the meanes to mortifie our corruptions, and to riſe from the death of ſinne, to holineſſe and newneſſe of life; which whoſoeuer can offer vnto God, they may aſſure themſelues that they ſhall bee accepted through Chriſt, as righteous in Gods ſight, notwithſtanding their manifold imperfections & corruptions.

That now the Lord doth not require of vs perfect righteouſneſſe.

Chap. I.

Of Sanctification and the cauſes thereof.

AND ſo much for the anſwering of ſuch tentations of Satan as concerne our juſtification. Now we are to ſpeake of our ſanctification, which is the next effect of Gods election, and inſeparablie ioyned with our juſtification: wherein I will obſerue my former order, firſt ſetting downe the doctrine of ſanctification, and then anſwering thoſe tentations of Satan which doe moſt impugne it. For the firſt, Sanctification is an action of the whole Trinitie, whereby the beleeuer alreadie iuſtified, is by little and little renued according to Gods Image in holineſſe and righteouſnes, by the mortification of the fleſh, with the corruptions thereof, and the quickening of the Spirit. And this is our ſanctification, which is expreſſed in the Scriptures by diuers names and phraſes; for it is called regeneration, the new birth, renouation, the putting off or mortifying of the old man, and the putting on or quickening of the new man and ſuch like. The efficient cauſe of our ſanctification is God himſelfe, who as hee alone juſtifieth vs and freeth vs from the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, ſo he onely ſanctifieth vs and deliuereth vs from the tyrannie of ſinne, ſo that it ſhall no longer raigne in our mortall bodies, freeing vs in ſuch meaſure as pleaſeth him from our naturall corruptions, which heretofore wholly ſwayed vs. And this appeareth by plaine teſtimonies of holy Scriptures: Iohn 1.13. it is ſaid that the faithfull are borne, not of blood, nor of the will of the fleſh, nor of the will of man, but of God. So Epheſ. 2. 10. we are ſaid to be Gods workemanſhip, created in Chriſt Ieſus vnto good workes: which phraſe the Apoſtle vſeth to note vnto vs, that as God onely did create vs, ſo he onely doth renue and regenerate vs. The Lord likewiſe doth appropriate this worke vnto himſelfe as belonging to no other, Ezech. 36. A new heart will I giue you, and a new ſpirit will I put into you, and I will take away the ſtonie heart out of your bodie, and I will giue you an heart of fleſh. And hence it is that the Apoſtle deſiring the ſanctification of the Theſſalonians beggeth it at Gods hand, 1. Theſſ. 5. 23. The very God of peace ſanctifie you throughout. And Dauid finding the want hereof in himſelfe, hath his recourſe vnto God, Pſalme 51. 10. Create in me a cleane heart, O God, and renue a right ſpirit within me. So that as God doth begin in vs this worke of ſanctification, ſo likewiſe he doth accompliſh and finiſh it. And therefore as we are wholly to aſcribe vnto God our election, vocation & juſtification, ſo alſo our ſanctification, that hee may be all in all in the worke of our ſaluation. For as hee only formed formed vs, ſo he only can reforme vs, as he is the author of our naturall generation, for by his bleſſing wee haue our being, ſo alſo of our ſpiritual regeneration, for by his ſpirit onely we are renued. Neither muſt we imagine that it is in mans power to renue himſelfe, no more then to beget himſelfe: for as well may the Blackmoore change his skin, or the Leopard his ſpots, as we doe good who are accuſtomed to doe euill, Ierem. 13. 23. yea, as eaſily may the dead man raiſe himſelfe to life, as wee may raiſe our ſelues from the death of ſinne to newneſſe of life, Eph. 2. 1. It is only the water of Gods Spirit that can waſh away our Ethiopian blackneſſe, and turne our ſpotted vncleanneſſe into ſnowie whiteneſſe; it is only the God of life that can make vs riſe from the death of ſinne to newneſſe of life. But heere it may bee demanded, that if ſanctification be wholly the worke of God, and not in our owne power, why do the Scriptures exhort vs to ſanctifie our ſelues, to mortifie our ſinnes, and to walke in newneſſe of life? I anſwere, that though ſanctification be wholly from God, yet theſe exhortations are neceſſarie; for he worketh this worke in vs, not as in ſtockes and ſtones, but as in reaſonable creatures of whom hee requireth conſent of will, deſire and endeuor in the vſe of the meanes ordained of God, for the beginning and perfecting of this worke of ſanctification in vs. And although this will, deſire, and endeuour, bee his worke likewiſe, yet theſe exhortations to godlineſſe are to good purpoſe: for with the exhortation God ioyneth the operation of his Spirit, and whileſt he commandeth vs, hee giueth power alſo to performe that which he commandeth, whileſt hee exhorteth vs to ſanctification, he himſelfe ſanctifieth vs with his Spirit.

§. Sect. 2. That the worke of ſanctification is common to the three perſons in Trinitie. Titus 3. 5. Epheſ. 2. 4. 5. Hebr. 9. 14.

Now further we are to know, that as all other workes of God which hee exerciſeth towards his creatures, ſo this worke of ſanctification likewiſe is common vnto the three perſons in the Trinitie. For firſt God the Father ſanctifieth vs by giuing vs his Sonne and ſending his Spirit, and therefore this worke is aſcribed vnto him, Tit. 3. 5. Eph. 2. 4. 5. God the Sonne ſanctifieth vs, mortifying our ſinnes by vertue of his blood, purging our conſciences from dead workes, that we may ſerue the liuing God; and by vertue of his reſurrection raiſing vs alſo from the death of ſinne to newneſſe of life: and laſtly, by his death hath merited for vs Gods Spirit, and riſing againe hath ſent him vnto vs, whereby wee are regenerate: and therefore he alſo is ſaid to haue ſanctified vs, and God is ſaid to haue ſanctified vs in him, Epheſ. 5. 26. 1. Cor. 2. 11. God the holy Ghoſt alſo ſanctifieth vs, by applying the vertue of Chriſts death and reſurrection vnto vs, and ſo immediately beginneth, continueth and perfecteth this worke in vs, and therefore moſt vſually in the Scriptures this worke is aſcribed vnto him, Ioh. 3. 5. 6. Act. 11. 16. Titus 3. 5. And thus it appeareth that God himſelfe is the principall and onely efficient cauſe of our ſanctification; vpon which point I haue the longer inſiſted, to the end that wee ſhould not in this worke reſt vpon our owne ſtrength, for then wee ſhall bee ſubiect to many diſcouragements, and lie open to innumerable tentations, grounded vpon our ſmall meaſure and ſlow progreſſe in our ſanctification, as alſo vpon the great difficulties and manifold diſcouragements, which both ſtay vs in the birth, and hinder our ful growth in true godlines; all which in reſpect of our owne power proue this worke not onely hard, but euen impoſſible for vs to be perfected and accompliſhed: But rather that wee relie our ſelues vpon the Lords infinite power and gracious promiſes: whereby we are aſſured, notwithſtanding our owne exceeding weaknes, that hee will not only begin, but alſo finiſh and perfect this good worke in vs.

§. Sect. 3. The motiue cauſe, Gods ſole mercie.

And thus much concerning the principall efficient cauſe of our ſanctification. The motiue cauſe which mooued the Lord to ſanctifie vs, was his own mercie and Chriſts merits. The firſt is expreſſed by the Apoſtle, 1. Pet. 1. 3. whereas it is ſaid, that God according to his abundant mercie hath begotten vs againe, &c. The other is implied by Paul, Epheſ. 2. 5. where hee ſaith, that God hath quickened vs in Chriſt, who by his death merited not onely the remiſſion of ſinne for vs, but alſo Gods Spirit, whereby we are ſanctified. So that it was not any good inclination vnto holineſſe in vs, or any thing elſe wherein wee excelled others, which mooued God to ſanctifie vs, for we were all alike the children of wrath, and dead in our ſinnes, but onely his owne boundleſſe mercie and the al-ſufficient merits of Chriſt our Sauiour, were the onely cauſes which moued the Lord to giue vs his Spirit, whereby wee are regenerate and raiſed from the death of ſinne to holineſſe and newneſſe of life. And therefore let vs not arrogate the praiſe of our ſanctification in whole or in part vnto our ſelues, but aſcribe all the glorie to God who is the ſole author and finiſher of it.

The inſtrumentall cauſes of our ſanctification, are either externall, or internall; the externall are firſt the word of God, of which our Sauiour ſpeaketh, Ioh. 15. 3. Now are you cleane through the word which I haue ſpoken vnto you. And Chap. 17. 17. Sanctifie them with thy truth: thy word is truth. So the Apoſtle Iames, Chap. 1. 18. Of his owne will begate he vs with the word of truth, &c. immortall by the word of God, &c. The word of God therefore is an inſtrumental cauſe of our ſanctification. In which reſpect alſo the Miniſters, by whoſe miniſtery wee are conuerted and regenerate, are ſaid to bee our ſpirituall Fathers who haue begotten vs vnto God: as appeareth, 1.*Cor.*4.15. and Philem. verſ. 10. In both which places Paul challengeth this title vnto himſelfe. Another externall cauſe of our ſanctification are the Sacraments, eſpecially the Sacrament of baptiſme, whereof it is that Ananias ſaith vnto Paul, Act. 22.16. Ariſe and bee Baptiſed, and waſh away thy ſinnes. So Eph. 5.26. it is ſaid that Chriſt gaue himſelfe for his Church, that hee might ſanctifie it and cleanſe it by the waſhing of water through the word. The which places as they are to bee vnderſtood principally of the waſhing of Iuſtification, whereby we are purged from the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne; ſo alſo of the waſhing of Sanctification, whereby we are cleanſed from the ſinnes and corruptions themſelues. The internall inſtrument of our Sanctification, is a liuely faith, without which, the other outward inſtruments are vneffectuall, in thoſe who are of yeeres; neither muſt we thinke that the bare action of hearing, or the outward waſhing, take away our ſinnes and corruptions, vnleſſe the word and things ſignified in the Sacraments bee applied vnto vs by a true faith. For the word which we heare profiteth not, vnleſſe it be mixed with faith in thoſe that heare it, *Hebr.*4.2. And vnleſſe thoſe that are capable of faith, beleeue with all their heart, it is to no purpoſe to be baptized, Act. 8.37. and therefore vnto the other wee muſt ioyne this inſtrument of a liuely faith, if we would attaine vnto true ſanctification. For faith purifieth the heart, and is fruitfull in the workes of loue, as the Scripture ſpeaketh.

how our
wrought.

And thus haue I ſet downe the efficient cauſes of our ſanctification. In the next place let vs conſider of the manner how this worke is wrought in vs. For the vnderſtanding whereof wee are to know, that wee being vnited vnto Chriſt, principally by Gods Spirit, and inſtrumentally by a liuely faith, and ſo made members of his myſticall body, do participate the vertue of his death, buriall and reſurrection, whereby not only our iuſtification, but alſo our ſanctification is deriued vnto vs. For firſt, by vertue of his death our ſinnes, are mortified, and our corruptions crucified together with him: as appeareth, *Rom.*6.6. Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the bodie of ſinne might bee deſtroyed, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerue ſinne. Secondly, by vertue of his buriall, this death of ſin is as it were further continued, and thereby our ſinnes and corruptions are more and more ſubdued and kept vnder, that they cannot riſe and rebell againſt the ſpirit. And of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, *Rom.*6.3. where he ſaith, that we are buried with Chriſt into his death. Thirdly, by vertue of his reſurrection there is a quickening power deriued into vs, whereby wee are reuiued, and raiſed vp from the death of ſin to holines and newnes of life. And of this mention is made, Coloſſ. 2.12.13. where it is ſaid, that as we are buried with Chriſt, ſo likewiſe we are raiſed vp and quickened together with him: and Rom. 6.4. the Apoſtle ſaith, that we are buried with him by baptiſme into his death, that like as Chriſt was raiſed vp from the dead by the glory of the Father, ſo wee alſo ſhould walke in newneſſe of life.

§. Sect. 6.
Of the ends
of our ſanctification.

And this is the manner according to which God worketh ſanctification in vs. Now we are briefly to ſpeak of the other cauſes, as they lie in order. The material and formall cauſes of our ſanctification may beſt be conſidered in the parts thereof. The finall cauſe is twofold: Gods glorie, which is the chiefe and principall cauſe of our ſanctification; and the eternall ſaluation of thoſe who are ſanctified, which is ſubordinate to the other. For the firſt, that Gods glory is the end of all our good actions and holy conuerſation, it appeareth, Matth. 5.16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good workes, and glorifie your Father which is in heauen. So 1.Pet. 12. Haue your conuerſation honeſt among the Gentiles, that they which ſpeake euill of you as of euill doers, may by your good workes which they ſhall ſee, glorifie God in the day of their viſitation. And the Apoſtle Paul willeth vs, that we do all things whatſoeuer to the Glory of God. 1.Cor. 10.31. For the other, we are therefore ſanctified that wee may be ſaued, and alſo bee aſſured of our ſaluation. And this wee may gather out of the Apoſtles words. Tit. 3.5.7. where hee ſaith, that God hath ſaued vs by the waſhing of the new birth, and renuing of the holy Ghoſt, that we ſhould be made heires of eternall life. Neither can wee euer enioy euerlaſting happineſſe, vnleſſe we bee regenerate, according to that *Iohn.*3.3. Except a man be borne againe, he cannot ſee the kingdome of God. So the apoſtle ſaith that fleſh and blood cannot inherit the kingdome of God, neither doth corruption inherit vncorruption, 1.*Cor.*15.50. And Apoc. 21.27. it is ſaid that no vncleane thing ſhall enter into Gods kingdome. And therefore the Apoſtle, vſeth this as an effectuall argument to moue vs to embrace ſanctification, becauſe without this holineſſe no man ſhall ſee the Lord. On the other ſide if wee bee regenerate and ſhew the fruits thereof in a holy conuerſation, by dying to ſinne, and riſing againe to newneſſe of life, then may we be certainly aſſured of our ſaluation: and therefore the Apoſtle willeth vs by theſe

Chap. II.

§.Sect.1. Of the effects of our ſanctification.

The principall effects of our ſanctification, are a deteſtation of our former ſinnes in which wee haue taken our pleaſure and delight, and an heartie loue of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, which before our regeneration were loathſome and vnpleaſant vnto vs; when notwithſtanding our infirmities and often falles, wee can ſay with the Apoſtle Paul, that we would faine doe that good wee doe not, and hate that euill which wee doe: and howſoeuer we cannot performe perfect obedience to all Gods Commandements, yet we delight in the Law of God in the inner man, Rom.7.15.19.22. Secondly, from theſe affections of louing good and hating euill; there ariſeth an earneſt deſire to embrace the one and flie the other, and from this deſire proceedeth a ſetled purpoſe of heart, and a carefull endeuour to mortifie our fleſh with the corruptions thereof, and for the time to come to frame our liues according to the rule of Gods word: the which purpoſe and endeuour is ioyned with the diligent vſe of all good meanes, whereby we may attaine vnto our deſire. Thirdly, when as this deſire and endeuour to leade a godly life is hindred by our ſpirituall enemies, the fleſh, the world and the diuel, there followeth in the man regenerate a ſpirituall combate, wherein he ſtrugleth and ſtriueth to withſtand their tentations, and to goe forward in his courſe of holy obedience. And if hee preuaile and foile his ſpirituall enemies, then there followeth peace of conſcience and ioy in the holy Ghoſt; but if he bee ouercome and led captiue vnto ſin, through the violence of their tentatious, then doth he not lie ſtill and ſuffer ſinne to raigne in him, but he ſeeketh to riſe againe by vnfained repentance which is accompanied with theſe ſeuen fruits: Firſt, a care to leaue that ſinne into which he is fallen. Secondly, an vtter condemning of himſelfe for it. Thirdly an holy anger againſt himſelfe for his fall. Fourthly, a feare leaſt againe hee ſhould fall into the ſame ſinne. Fiftly, a deſire euer after to pleaſe God. Sixthly, a zeale of the ſame. Seauenthly, reuenge vpon himſelfe for his former offence. And theſe are the effects of true ſanctification, which whoſoeuer can finde in himſelfe, he may be aſſured that hee is ſanctified and ſhall bee ſaued.

Rom.7.15.19.22.

2.Cor.7.11.

§. Sect.2. Of the ſub of our ſanc fication.

The ſubject in which this worke of ſanctification is wrought, is all and euery one of Gods elect, and them only: neither is there any ſanctified but thoſe only that are elected and ſhall be ſaued as appeareth, Epheſ.1.4. Nor is this worke begun in any one part of them alone, but in all the parts, powers, and faculties of ſoule and body, as appeareth, 1.Theſſ.5.23. The God of peace ſanctifie you throughout. The minde is inlightned with the true knowledge of Gods will reuealed in his word, which before was blinded with ignorance. The memorie is inabled to retaine thoſe holy things, which the vnderſtanding conceiueth. The will fleeth that which is euill, and imbraceth that which is good. The affections are purged from their corruptions, and made ſeruiceable to holie reaſon. The body alſo is ſanctified, and made a fit temple for the holy Ghoſt: ſo that whereas heretofore the members thereof were the readie ſeruants of vnrighteouſneſſe vnto ſinne, they are now become the ſeruants of righteouſneſſe vnto holineſſe. Laſtly, the actions and outward conuerſation which heretofore were ſinfull and ſcandalous, are now holy and righteous, ſeruing both for the aduancement of Gods glorie, and the edification of our Chriſtian brethren. In a word, whoſoeuer are trulie ſanctified, they are alſo wholly ſanctified, that is, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, ſanctified throughout, in euery part and facultie of body and ſoule. And therefore whoſoeuer would bee aſſured that hee hath attained true ſanctification, he is to labour to compaſſe and frame the whole man, his minde and imagination, his will and affections, his outward actions, life and conuerſation, according to the exact rule of Gods law: in all of them mortifying the old man, and his inbred corruption, and embracing the contrarie duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. Otherwiſe if our ſanctification bee not of the whole man, and euery part in their ſeuerall meaſure, it will in the end bee vaine and fruitleſſe: for as it is to no purpoſe for citizens being beſieged, to fortifie one place of the wall, and leaue another part vnfortified, or to keep ſtraite watch at ſome of the gates, and leaue others open: ſo it will not auaile vs to fortifie ſome parts againſt the power of ſinne, and to leaue others weake and naked, not to guard ſome of the outward paſſages of the ſenſes, and neglecting ſome other, ſuffer them to lie as an open entrance to let in our ſpirituall enemies, for ſo they will eaſily ſurpriſe vs, and leade vs captiue vnto ſin; but if we would be in any ſafety in this ſtraite ſiege, wee muſt ſet a ſtrong guard, and a carefull watch, ouer euery part and facultie of our bodies and ſoules. The object of our ſanctification about which it is exerciſed, is ſinne and corruption, and holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, that wee may flie the one, and embrace the other, mortifie the fleſh and the luſts thereof, and bee quickned in the ſpirit, that wee may bee conformable in all holy obedience vnto the law of God, auoiding that which he hath forbidden, and labouring to performe that which hee hath commanded.

Sect. 3. he obiect time of ſanctifica-

The time when ſanctification is wrought in vs, is preſently after wee are effectually called and iuſtified; for as ſoone as the vertue and power of Chriſts obedience, death and reſurrection, is applied vnto vs by a liuely faith, it doth not onely free vs from the guilt of ſinne, but alſo mortifie the fleſh with the corruptions thereof, and quickneth vs in the inner man, enabling vs to forſake our former ſins, and to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and newneſſe of life. But howſoeuer our ſanctification bee begun preſently after our conuerſion, yet it is not ſo ſoone finiſhed; but as the ſeede being caſt into the ground, doth firſt take roote, and then is ſcarcely diſcerned, afterwards ſhooteth forth into a blade and ſo ſpringeth vp by little and little, till it bringeth forth an eare, and laſtly, ripeneth and yeeldeth to the ſower plentifull increaſe: ſo when firſt the ſeedes of ſanctification are ſowne in vs, by vertue of Gods ſpirit, they haue a time to take rooting, when as they make little or no ſhew to our ſelues or others, but afterwards they ſend forth as it were a blade of a holy profeſſion, & the ripe fruite of godlineſſe. Notwithſtanding theſe fruites in this life are not purely cleane, and without mixture; but as in the faireſt field, there is amongſt the cleaneſt wheate ſome tares and cockell: ſo in thoſe that are moſt ſanctified, there are many corruptions of the fleſh, mixed with the good fruits of the ſpirit, the which the Chriſtian is ſtill in weeding and plucking vp by the rootes ſo long as hee liueth, but yet can neuer ouercome this great worke; till the winter of death wholly nippeth and killeth theſe weeds of ſinne. Wee muſt not therefore preſently after our conuerſion, dreame of a perfection in ſanctification; no nor yet at the firſt, eſtimate the trueneſſe thereof by the greatneſſe of the meaſure: for as it is in the naturall generation and growth of the bodie, ſo alſo in ſpirituall regeneration; all is not finiſhed at the firſt, but perfected by degrees. As ſoone as wee are conuerted, wee are but babes in Chriſt, and in reſpect of our infancie in knowlege, faith and other graces, ſuch as haue neede rather of milke, than of ſtrong meate: in the reſt of our life we grow vp from ſtrength to ſtrength, till we come to mans eſtate, vnto which age wee cannot properly be ſaid to haue attained, till by death wee wholly lay aſide the old man, and the corruptions thereof. And laſtly, we attaine to our conſummation and full perfection, when at the latter day wee ſhall riſe againe, and both in body and ſoule bee indued with perfect holineſſe, whereby we ſhall bee enabled to performe obedience to Gods will, in that degree which his iuſtice requireth.

CHAP. III.

Of the parts of ſanctification.

THe parts of ſanctification, are two, mortification, and viuification, the which alſo are ſaid to bee the parts of true repentance, but in a diuers ſenſe: for they are attributed vnto ſanctification, as they are the worke and action of God, who by his holy ſpirit doth mortifie and quicken vs, and is the ſole author and cauſe of our ſanctification; and vnto repentance, as they haue reference vnto vs, who being regenrate and indued with Gods ſpirit, doe labour in the mortification of our corruptions, and endeuour to ſerue the Lord in newneſſe of life; for Spiritu ſancto actiagimus, we being firſt moued and ſet a worke by Gods ſpirit, doe worke together with him. This diuiſion hath its ground and warrant in many places of holy Scriptures, in which it is expreſſed in diuers phraſes and formes of ſpeech. Pſal. 34. 14. Eſchew euill and doe good. Eſa. 1. 16. 17. Ceaſe to doe euill, learne to doe well. Rom. 6. 11. Likewiſe, thinke ye alſo that yee are dead to ſin, but are aliue to God in Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. And verſ. 18. Being free from ſinne yee are made the ſeruants of righteouſnes. Ephe. 4. 22. That yee caſt off concerning the conuerſation in time paſt the old man; which is corrupt through the deceiueable luſts. 23. And bee renued in the ſpirit of your minde. 24. And put on the new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe. So Rom. 7. 4. & 8. 13. 1. §. Sect. 2. Of Mortification what it is, and how it is wrought.

Mortification is the firſt part of ſanctification, wherein the ſpirit of God applying vnto vs the vertue and power of Chriſts death and buriall, doth by little and little weaken, ſubdue, and kill in vs our naturall corruption, the fleſh and the luſts thereof, ſo that they are not ſo powerfull as in times paſt to ſtir vp in our minds euill motions which are contrarie to the will and word of God. In this deſcription is ſet downe, firſt the cauſe of our mortification, which is the vertue and efficacie of Chriſts death and buriall, communicated and applyed vnto vs by

by the ſpirit of God whereby weeare ingrafted into the bodie of Chriſt, and ſo madepartakers of the power and vertue of Chriſts death, which being deriued vnto vs, doth not onely take away the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, but alſo doth mortifie and kill our naturall corruptions, which heretofore wholly ruled and ouerſwaied vs. Secondly, the forme, manner and progreſſe of this worke is heere expreſſed, namely, the weakning, ſubduing, and killing of our corruption by little and little; ſo that this worke is not perfected at once, and in an inſtant, but by degrees. Firſt it is weakned and the power thereof ſomewhat abated, ſo as though it beare ſway in vs, yet it doth not wholly ouer-rule vs without reſiſtance, as it was vſed to doe in the time of our ignorance. Then being further inabled by vertue of Gods ſpirit, working in vs, we preuaile againſt it, ſo that though it often rebell, yet doe we ſubdue it and obtaine victorie. Laſtly, obtaining a greater meaſure of the ſpirit, we mortifie and kill it; that is, though wee doe not vtterly depriue it of life and motion, yet we giue it ſuch a deadly wound, that it neuer recouereth its former ſtrength, but ſtill pineth and languiſheth, till with the death of the body it alſo dieth and is wholly aboliſhed. Now whileſt it is in this conſumption and neere vnto death, hauing a long time before beene weake, oftentimes it ſeemeth to recouer ſtrength, and to offer ſome violence vnto the regenerate part: but this muſt not diſcourage vs, as though now it were on the mending hand, and like to be reſtored to its former health and ſtrength. For as it fareth with thoſe that lie vpon their death-bed; ſo it is with our ſicke fleſh, and the corruptions thereof, after that nature ſeemeth ſpent, and the power thereof wholly decaied, oftentimes falling into ſome grieuous fit, wherein there is a fight betweene life and death, their ſtrength ſeemeth redoubled and farre greater than euer it was: but bee of good comfort, it is no ſigne of health, but a pang of death which neere approcheth. And thus you ſee the death of ſinne and our naturall corruption. Now as in the death of the body there is a certaine progreſſe therein, namely, when the dead carcaſe is alſo buried; ſo alſo there is not onely a death of ſinne, but alſo a buriall, the which is wrought by the vertue of Chriſts buriall applied vnto vs by Gods ſpirit; whereby it commeth to paſſe that ſin which is already ſlaine and dead, doth ſo remaine and continue; ſo that this buriall of ſinne is nothing elſe but the further progreſſe and continuance of our mortification. Of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom. 6.4. We are buried then with him by baptiſme into his death, &c. So Col. 2.12.

§.Sect.
That the worke of tification hard and ceſſarie.

And thus haue I ſhewed what our mortification is, which as it is a worke moſt hard, ſo alſo moſt neceſſarie. The difficultie appeareth by the name which is borrowed from the practiſe of Chirurgions, who before they cut off any member, do firſt mortifie it, that after they may take it away with leſſe ſenſe of paine. And this is implied by our Sauiour Chriſt whereas hee inioyneth vs, if our right hand or eye offend vs, to cut it off and plucke it out: and plainely expreſſed by the Apoſtle Paul, Col. 3.5. Mortifie therefore your members which are in the earth, fornication, vncleanneſſe, the inordinate affection, euill concupiſcence and couetouſneſſe, &c. where calling theſe ſins by the name of members, he intimateth thus much, that they are as deare vnto vs as the members of our body, & alſo that it is as vnpleaſant and painfull vnto vs to forſake our naturall corruptions, as to be depriued of the hand, eye, or foote. But though this worke bee moſt hard, yet it is moſt neceſſarie; for the beſt things that are in the fleſh and vnregenerate part, euen the wiſedome thereof is death and enmity againſt God, becauſe it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can bee, Rom. 8.6.7. neither can wee doe any thing pleaſing vnto God ſo long as wee are in the fleſh, as it is verſ. 8. Laſtly, if we liue after the fleſh, we ſhall die, euen the euerlaſting death of body and ſoule; but if wee mortifie the deeds of the body by the ſpirit wee ſhall liue, euen the life of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe vpon earth, and the life of glorie and eternall happineſſe in Gods kingdome. And therefore if it bee neceſſarie to bee in amitie with God, whoſe louing kindneſſe is better than life; or to performe obedience vnto the Law of God, or to doe any thing pleaſing in his ſight, or to eſcape death and damnation, or to enioy life and eternall ſaluation, then is it alſo neceſſarie to mortifie the fleſh and the luſts thereof, how hard and vnpleaſant ſoeuer this worke ſeemeth vnto vs. So that the difficultie muſt not diſcourage vs, but rather double our diligence: and becauſe it is a paine intolerable to part with our ſinnes, ſo long as they remaine like liuely members of the body of our fleſh, therefore as Chirurgions (to make the paine tolerable to the patient) doe firſt vſe meanes to mortifie the member which they purpoſe to cut off; ſo let vs vſe all good meanes to weaken the ſtrength of ſinne, and to mortifie our carnall affections, and then we ſhall ſuffer them to bee quite cut off and taken from vs without any extraordinarie paſſion or ſenſe of paine.

§.Sect.4
Of Viuifica on what it and the thereof.

And ſo much concerning our mortification. Viuification is the ſecond part of our Sanctification, wherein the ſpirit of God communicating and applying vnto vs the vertue and efficacy of Chriſts reſurrection doth raiſe vs vp from the death of ſinne to holineſſe and newneſſe of life. The cauſe of our viuification is the vertue and efficacie of Chriſts Reſurrection applyed vnto vs by Gods Spirit; the which vertue flowing from his Deitie, was firſt powerfull in his owne fleſh, raiſing it out of graue, and giuing it victory ouer ſinne and death; and being deriued from our Head, and communicated vnto vs who are members of his body, it doth alſo reuiue vs who were dead in our ſinnes, and inableth vs to leade a new life in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, according to the rule of Gods Word. This appeareth, Rom.6.4. where he ſaith, that wee are buried with him by baptiſme into his death, that like as Chriſt was raiſed vp from the dead by the glory of the Father, ſo wee alſo ſhould walke in newneſſe of life. So Paul deſireth not only to bee clothed with the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt applyed by faith for his juſtification, but alſo to know and feele the vertue of Chriſts reſurrection, that by this meanes he might attaine vnto the reſurrection of the dead. And as Paul earneſtly deſired this, ſo alſo he attained vnto it, as himſelfe profeſſeth: Gal.2.20. Thus (ſaith he) I liue, yet not I now, but Chriſt liueth in me, and in that I now liue in the fleſh, I liue by faith in the Sonne of God, who hath loued me and giuen himſelfe for me. Now this efficacy and vertue of Chriſts reſurrection is applyed vnto vs by Gods Spirit, which vniteth vs vnto Chriſt our Head; and therefore vſually in the Scriptures this work is aſcribed vnto him. So Rom.8.11. But if the ſpirit of him that raiſed vp Ieſus from the dead dwell in you, hee that raiſed vp Chriſt from the dead ſhall alſo quicken your mortall bodies, becauſe his ſpirit dwelleth in you.

And thus haue I ſhewed the author of our viuification: the manner how it is wrought followeth to be ſpoken of. Firſt, the Spirit of God diſpelleth the clouds of ignorance, and illuminateth the eyes of our vnderſtanding with the beames of true ſauing knowledge, wherewith being inlightened, wee rightly judge that folly and madneſſe, in which we thought formerly our chiefe wiſdome conſiſted, and approoue that as onely wiſe, which before wee condemned as extreme fooliſhneſſe. Of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Epheſ.1.17. where hee prayeth that God would beſtow vpon them the ſpirit of wiſdome and reuelation through the knowledge of him, that the eyes of their vnderſtanding might be inlightened, &c. After the vnderſtanding is thus inlightened, then alſo the will is changed; and whereas before regeneration it was corrupt, peruerſe, and rebellious, now being ſanctified, it beginneth to hate and auoid that euill which in former times it loued and imbraced, and to like and delight in that good which formerly it lothed & abhorred: ſo that the regenerate man ſaith with the Apoſtle, that to will is preſent with him, though he find no meanes to performe that which is good, and that he is delighted in the Law of God concerning the inner man, though the law of his members warring againſt the law of his minde, leads him captiue to the law of ſinne. Finally, the vnderſtanding being inlightened, and the will reformed, there followeth the renewing of all the affections, the thoughts, imaginations, powers and faculties of the ſoule: and laſtly, the internall parts being quickened, there inſueth the renewing of the body, with the outward actions, life and conuerſation.

§. Sect. 6. That the work of ſanctification is not finiſhed in an inſtant.

And thus haue I ſet downe the manner and forme of our ſpirituall renuing. Now as the worke of mortification, ſo this of viuification, is not perfected and finiſhed in an inſtant, but in continuance of time and by degrees; neither doe wee ſo long as wee continue in this life, receiue any great meaſure thereof, but onely the firſt fruits, which is but as it were a little handfull in reſpect of that large harueſt of godlines, which we ſhal attaine vnto in Gods Kingdome, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom.8.23. Whereas therefore the Church is ſaid to bee perfectly purged from all ſpots of ſinne, Epheſ.5.26,27. it is to be vnderſtood of our juſtification, whereby the faithfull are deliuered from the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, and adorned with Chriſts perfect righteouſneſſe; and not of our ſanctification, which is onely begun in this life, but not perfected till the life to come, as it is notably ſet downe, *2 Cor.*5.1,2,3,4.

Chap. IIII.

Sathans tentations, whereby he laboureth to intice vs to commit ſinne, anſwered.

§. Sect. 1. Of the kinds of Satans tentations, whereby he endeuoureth to hinder our ſanctification.

And ſo much for the doctrine of ſanctification: the right vnderſtanding whereof ſerueth much for the anſwering of all contrary cauils and objections, which are ſuggeſted into our minds by our ſpirituall enemies. Now hauing ſhewed the truth of this doctrine, let vs in the next place propound Satans tentations, which hee commonly vſeth to hinder this worke of ſanctification: to the end that the weake Chriſtian may bee the better inabled to anſwer them in the day of triall. The tentations which Satan ſuggeſteth to hinder our progreſſe in godlineſſe are of two ſorts: either allurements to intice vs to goe aſide out of the narrow path of holineſſe, into the broad way of ſinne and wickedneſſe; or diſcouragements to diſhearten and weary vs, in trauelling this ſpirituall journey. By the firſt, hee ſweetneth the bitter pill of ſin that it may ſeeme pleaſant to our carnall appetites, to the end that we may greedily ſwallow it to our euerlaſting bane; by the other he laboureth to make wholeſome godlineſſe loathſome and altogether vnpleaſant to our ſenſuall taſte. Thoſe he commonly vſeth before we haue ſinned, to cauſe vs preſumptuouſly to fall into it: and theſe after wee haue ſinned and wounded our conſciences, to the end he may mooue vs deſperately to ſurceaſe our labour in the workes of ſanctification, as being not only difficult, but altogether impoſſible.

The firſt ſort of his tentations, whereby he laboureth to draw vs into ſinne, he inforceth by extenuating the ſinne vnto which he allureth vs, by putting vs in minde of the mercies of God, and merits of Chriſt, and by hiding from vs the curſe of the Law, and the puniſhments threatned againſt ſin, both in this life and the life to come. Why (will he ſay) makeſt thou ſuch ſcrupſe of committing this ſinne which is ſo pleaſant or profitable vnto thee: ſeeing it is in its owne nature but very ſmall, and almoſt no offence at all, being compared with the great tranſgreſſions which others haue committed, who notwithſtanding are ſaid euen in the Scriptures to haue been moſt godly and righteous, yea, and highly in Gods loue and fauour; why therfore ſhouldſt thou, who art far inferiour vnto them, ſtumble at this ſmall ſtraw, ſeeing theſe great blocks could not hinder euen the moſt religious from enjoying the pleaſures of ſinne? Conſider alſo the common frailty of mankind, and the naturall corruptions of the beſt, wherby they are ready to fall when the leaſt occaſions are offered, into ſinnes far greater than this which ſo much pleaſeth thee. Remember that thou canſt not bee a Saint in this life; nor freed from that corruption which ſo faſt cleaueth vnto thee; and therefore ſeeing thou muſt needs ſinne; now ſinne when thereby thou mayſt haue pleaſure or profit, for doe what thou canſt, yet thou ſhalt often fall; And why wilt thou not rather bee led with delight, then bee drawne with neceſſitie? Conſider likewiſe that thy God is moſt mercifull, and therefore ſtill ready to pardon thy ſinnes; and the rather, becauſe he knoweth thy fraile weakneſſe in reſiſting ſinne, and inability to performe obedience to his Law; and alſo that Chriſt died, not for the juſt, but the vnjuſt; not for the righteous, but for the ſinner: and therefore be thy ſinnes neuer ſo many, yet applying the merits of Chriſt by faith, neither their guilt nor puniſhment ſhall be imputed vnto thee. Call to minde alſo the gracious promiſes of pardon and forgiueneſſe, which are made vnto thee in the Goſpell; for the obtaining whereof, nothing is required of thee but faith and repentance: now this faith thou haſt already, and this repentance thou mayſt haue hereafter, when thou haſt enjoyed the pleaſure or profit of this ſinne. Neither doth repentance goe before, but followeth the committing of ſinne; ſo that vnleſſe thou firſt ſinne, thou haſt no cauſe of repentance, nor need to repent.

And theſe and ſuch like are Satans baits, wherewith hee allureth vs to intangle our ſelues in the ſnares of ſinne: into which we are more readie to fall through the corruption of the fleſh, which naturally louing ſin, doth, with the euill motions and deſires thereof, further Sathans tentations; and the inſtigation of the world which pricketh vs forward; and draweth vs on into the ſteepe deſcending way of wickedneſſe, into which we are ready to run headlong of our owne accord; partly alluring vs with pleaſures, riches and worldly glory, the deſired objects of our carnall deſires; and partly drawing vs with euill examples, firſt to a liking, and then to the practizing of thoſe ſinnes, which we ſee committed by others.

Againſt all which tentations that we may be the better armed, let vs in the next place propound ſome arguments whereby we may be withheld from falling into Sathans ſnares of ſinne, into which his ſuggeſtions, the worlds allurements, and our owne corruptions lead and draw vs: and then being hereby moued to a true deteſtation of our ſinnes, and an earneſt deſire of hauing a Diuorce ſued betwixt vs and them, I will afterwards ſet downe ſome meanes, by the carefull vſe whereof wee may be inabled to ſtand in the day of tentation, and preſerued from falling into thoſe ſins which we already condemne in our judgements, and diſlike in our affections.

§. Sect. The pre tiues to k vs from f of two ſort

The reaſons whereby we may be perſwaded to reſiſt ſinne are of two ſorts: the firſt, tying vs to holy obedience in the bands of loue: the other, binding vs from falling into ſinne with the cords of feare. Of the former ranke are theſe and ſuch like holy conſiderations.

The firſt re ſon taken Gods loue wards vs.

Firſt, wee are to ſet before vs the infinite loue of God towards vs, baſe and vile creatures, altogether vnworthy of his leaſt fauour by reaſon of our ſinnes; the which his loue as it plainly appeareth in all other his mercies and manifold benefits beſtowed on vs, ſo eſpecially in ſending his onely begotten and dearely beloued Sonne, not onely to ſuffer ſome ſmall miſery, but euen death it ſelfe, yea, that curſed ignominious and cruell death of the Croſſe for vs, who were not his louing friends or faithfull ſeruants, but oppoſed enemies and rebellious traytours, who had renounced his ſeruice, and yeelded our ſelues as ſlaues to Satan readie to doe his will.

will, Seeing therefore our good God hath ſo dearely loued vs, who were altogether vnworthy his loue, and moſt worthy of his anger and heauy judgements, O why ſhould not this flame of his loue towards vs, kindle ſome ſparkles of loue towards him againe, who is in himſelfe the chiefe goodneſſe, and to vs moſt kind and gracious? If for our ſakes, who were his abject enemies, he hath not ſpared his owne Sonne but gaue him to die for vs; ſhould not we for his ſake, who is our chiefeſt friend, bee as willing to part with our ſinnes, and to kill and crucifie all our carnall corruptions? Neither can we by any other meanes ſo cleerly ſhew our loue to God, as by hating ſinne, which aboue all things in the world is moſt hatefull and odious vnto him, and the only cauſe which maketh him abhorre euen his excellent creatures, ſo that though he loued them as being his owne workes, yet he deteſted them being defiled with the filthy ſpots of ſinne. Yea ſo odious is ſinne vnto our righteous God, that he could not chuſe but puniſh it in his dearly beloued Sonne, who bare our tranſgreſſions, and ſuſtained our perſons; and when there was no other way to ſubdue the power of ſin, he gaue it a mortall wound, euen through the bodie of our bleſſed Sauiour; and deliuered him to be crucified, that by this meanes he might alſo kill and crucifie our corruptions. Seeing therefore ſinne is moſt odious and deteſtable in the eyes of God, we cannot better ſhew our loue towards him, which his loue towards vs hath ſo well deſerued, then by hating and flying that which hee ſo much abhorreth.

Sect.5.
ſecond
on, taken Gods bets.

Secondly, let vs call to our remembrance his innumerable benefits, which are the vndoubted ſignes of his loue towards vs. Firſt, he hath elected vs vnto eternall life that we ſhould be holy. And ſeeing hee hath made ſpeciall choice of vs amongſt many who are rejected, therefore let vs exceed others in a holy care of ſeruing him, and auoiding thoſe things which are diſpleaſing in his ſight. He alſo hath created vs to the end wee ſhould worſhip and ſerue him our Lord and Creatour: and therefore ſeeing we haue our being from him, let vs in all our actions ſeeke his glory and auoid ſinne, whereby he is diſhonoured. Yea he hath not made vs the vileſt of his creatures, but reaſonable men according to his owne image and likeneſſe, and therefore let vs not deface this glorious workmanſhip with the filthy ſpots of ſinne. He hath redeemed vs out of the cruell bondage of our ſpirituall enemies, by giuing his Sonne to be the price of our redemption; and therefore ſeeing wee are bought with a price ſo ineſtimable, let vs not wilfully againe make our ſelues the bondſlaues of ſinne and Satan, but glorifie our redeemer in our bodies and in our ſoules, ſeruing him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of our liues. He hath effectually called vs and ſelected vs out of the corrupt maſſe of mankind, and therefore let vs walke worthy our vocation; for God hath not called vs vnto vncleanneſſe but vnto holineſſe. Hee hath freely juſtified vs, imputing vnto vs Chriſts righteouſneſſe, and pardoning all our ſinnes, both in reſpect of the guilt and puniſhment; and therefore being made free from ſinne, let vs no longer liue therein, but now become the ſeruants of righteouſneſſe; and ſeeing he hath forgiuen much, let vs alſo loue much, labouring to manifeſt our loue by the fruits of holy obedience. He hath reconciled vs vnto himſelfe in his Sonne, and therefore let vs not by our ſinnes make him our enemy, nor againe build vp this wall of ſeparation which Chriſt our Sauiour hath broken downe. He hath adopted vs in Chriſt to be his ſonnes and heires of euerlaſting life, and therefore ſeeing wee are the ſonnes of God, let vs yeeld obedience to our heauenly Father, and not liue in our ſins like the ſlaues of Sathan, leſt prouoking his juſt diſpleaſure againſt vs by our rebellious wickedneſſe, wee ſhould be diſinherited of our heauenly patrimony. Hee hath granted vnto vs the peace of conſcience, and joyes in the Holy Ghoſt, and therefore let vs not by our ſinnes diſturbe our peace and wound our conſciences, turning our ſweet joy and comfort into griefe and bitter heauineſſe. Finally, he hath added vnto theſe ſpirituall gifts, innumerable temporary benefits, health, wealth, peace, libertie, food, apparell; and therefore let vs not abuſe his gifts by prophaning them with our ſinnes, but rather vſe them as incouragements whereby wee may bee mooued with all cheerefulneſſe to ſerue ſo bountifull a maſter. In a word, as the gifts of God are infinite which concerne this life and the life to come; ſo are the reaſons drawne from them infinite, which may ſerue to reſtraine vs from ſinne, and containe vs in the courſe of holy obedience. The which if we continually retaine in memory (euen thoſe great and manifold benefits which are common to all true Chriſtians, and thoſe which euery one receiueth in his particular place and calling) wee will not (vnleſſe our vngratefulneſſe be intolerable) eaſily hearken to Sathans tentations, nor for the vaine pleaſures, vncertaine riches, and momentany honours of this wicked world be hired to commit ſinne, which wee know to be diſpleaſing and odious in the ſight of God, who in his endleſſe loue and fauour hath beſtowed vpon vs ſuch innumerable benefits.

The third reaſon, taken from the death and Thirdly, when we are tempted vnto ſinne, let vs call to mind the death and ſufferings of our Sauiour Chriſt, and ſay vnto our owne ſoules, Hath Chriſt my Redeemer paid for my redemption euen his deareſt bloud, and ſhall ſufferings of our Sauiour Christ.

ſhall I ſell my ſoule to ſinne againe for this vaine pleaſure or baſe commoditie? Hath he not ſpared to powre out the full ſtreames of his moſt precious bloud, that in this pure lauer I might be purged and cleanſed from the filthy ſpots of ſinne; and ſhall the world cauſe mee with her Syrens ſongs to leape againe into this filthy puddle? Should he ſuffer himſelfe to be crucified, that by his death he might kill ſinne, and ſhall I now put life into it againe, reuiuing that which hee hath mortified? Did hee in his infinite loue giue himſelfe for mee, and ſhall I trample this precious gift vnder foot, preferring before it the trifling vanities of this wicked world? Should honour allure mee to commit ſinne, ſeeing the glorious Sonne of God hath abaſed himſelfe and vndergone ignominious ſhame to free me from it? Should pleaſures intice me to break Gods Commandements, ſeeing my Sauiour Chriſt left the boſome of his Father, at whoſe right hand there is fulneſſe of pleaſures and joyes for euermore, and indured the griefe and miſeries of a wretched life and curſed death, that thereby he might ſatisfie Gods juſtice for my tranſgreſſions? Should I be perſwaded to commit ſinne, with the baſe hire of vncertaine riches, ſeeing Chriſt hath redeemed mee, not with ſiluer or gold, or any other corruptible thing, but with the ineſtimable price of his moſt precious bloud? Should my ſenſuall taſte and curious palate, mooue mee to ſinne in drunkenneſſe and gluttonie, ſeeing Chriſt to redeeme mee hath hungred and thirſted, and in ſtead of drinke had offered vnto him gall and vineger? Shall I be mooued to ſinne by anger, and to ſeeke vnjuſt reuenge, ſeeing Chriſt being injured opened not his mouth, but like an innocent lambe ſuffered himſelfe to be lead to the ſlaughter? Farre be from me ſuch a deſire; yea, rather becauſe my Sauiour Chriſt hath ſuffered all this for mee, to redeeme me out of my ſpirituall bondage, I will reſolue rather to bee depriued of all worldly benefits, and endure patiently the greateſt miſeries and afflictions, than by wilfull falling into ſinne make my ſelfe againe the ſlaue of Satan. And thus haue I ſhewed how the remembrance of Chriſts Death and Paſſion is a notable corraſiue to kill our corruptions. And as men are accuſtomed to ſhew vnto Elephants the juyce of the Grape or Mulberry, to make them more fierce, and encourage them to a more couragious fight: ſo haue I by offering to our view the precious bloud of this immaculate Lambe, endeuoured to redouble our valour in fighting this battell of tentations againſt our ſpirituall enemies.

§. Sect. 7.
The fourth reaſon, taken from the vnion which is twixt Ch

and vs,

Fourthly, let vs remember the vnion that is betweene Chriſt and vs, whereby hee is become our husband, we his ſpouſe, hee our Head, and we his members. The conſideration whereof may ſerue as a forcible argument to reſtraine vs from falling willingly into any ſinne. For if wee be the Spouſe of Chriſt, farre bee it from vs to behaue our ſelues like Sathans Strumpets, proſtituting our ſoules to ſinne that wee may receiue the gaine of ſome worldly vanities, and to incurre the grieuous diſpleaſure of our moſt louing husband, for the pleaſing of our carnall luſts and ſenſuall appetites. If wee bee the members of Chriſts Body, far be it from vs to make his members the inſtruments of ſinne and ſeruants of vnrighteouſneſſe. For what were this, but as much as in vs doth lie, to draw our holy head into the communion of our ſinnes and wickedneſſe, and to make our Sauiour, who in himſelfe hath wholly vanquiſhed and glorioully triumphed ouer ſinne and Satan, in his members to receiue a foile? Yea, rather ſeeing wee are the Spouſe of Chriſt, let vs labour to adorne our ſelues with the glorious golden garment of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; and though wee haue ſome ſpots of our naturall infirmities in our outward parts, yet let vs in a glorious manner decke our ſelues within, with integritie and vprightneſſe of heart; and ſo the King our heauenly Husband ſhall take pleaſure in our beautie, and place vs at his right hand in his Kingdome of eternall glory. Seeing alſo wee are the members of Chriſts Body, therefore let vs endeuour to conforme our ſelues to the holineſſe of our Head, and by our righteous liues and conuerſations make it manifeſt, that wee are quickened and led by the ſame Spirit.

Laſtly, let vs call to mind that our bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghoſt, which once were polluted and vncleane, but now ſanctified and purged by this our holy gueſt, that they may be fit habitations for himſelfe to dwell in. And then let vs conſider, that it is a moſt horrible indignity againſt the Maieſtie of God, to prophane with our filthy ſinnes the holy temples of his moſt holy Spirit, and to make them more fit to bee ſtyes for filthy ſwine and vncleane ſpirits, than manſion houſes for God to dwell in; that by our ſinnes we vexe and grieue the good Spirit of God, and make his lodging lothſome vnto him, and ſo as much as in vs lieth, we driue him away, and as it were thruſt him out of doores, if not by violence, yet at leaſt by our hard and vnciuill entertainment: yea that by our ſins we doe not only defile, but euen deſtroy the temple of God, and thereby alſo caſt our ſelues headlong into eternall deſtruction. For if any man deſtroy the temple of God, him ſhall God deſtroy, as it is 1. Cor. 3. 16. AND ſo much concerning the firſt ſort of arguments grounded vpon loue. The ſecond ſort whereby wee may bee withdrawne from committing ſinne, may bee taken from that feare and reuerence of God, which ought to be in euery one of vs: vnto which wee may bee moued by diuers effectuall reaſons. As firſt by the conſideration of Gods al-ſeeing wiſdome, and al-filling preſence, whereby he ſeeth euen our moſt ſecret thoughts, and is a preſent witneſſe of all our hidden actions. For this being remembred, who dare in ſuch a glorious preſence commit that wickedneſſe, which hee knoweth hatefull vnto him, before whom he committeth it? He is counted an vngracious child, who will wittingly breake his fathers commandement euen before his face; and he is eſteemed a deſperate malefactor who dares preſumptuouſly offend againſt the Law in preſence of his Iudge; how then can our vngracious impudencie and deſperate preſumption be excuſed, who dare offend and ſinne in the ſight and preſence of a father ſo gracious, and of a Iudge ſo iuſt?

Sect. 2.
ſecond

Gods ex-
ſtice.

Secondly, let vs call to minde Gods iuſtice, which is ſo exact, that rather then he would let ſin goe vnpuniſhed, he puniſhed it in his dearely beloued Son. If therefore thou ſin, thou canſt not corrupt him with bribes, nor pacifie him with faire words, nor overcome him by intreatie, nor ſtop the courſe of Iuſtice, with the interceſſion of friends. For, hath hee not ſpared his Sonne, and will hee ſpare his ſeruants? hath hee puniſhed ſinne in his owne childe, and will he winke at it in a common ſubiect? could neither the intreatie, nor teares, nor grones, nor ſtrong cryes, nor bloudy ſweat of his beſt beloued Sonne, appeaſe his wrath and ſatisfie his iuſtice, but that ſtanding in our place, he muſt needs beare our puniſhment, and being ſuretie for ſinners, he muſt die for ſinne? and ſhal they who are the principals eſcape, who in ſtead of pleading his payment, doe contemptuouſly refuſe it, and as it were tread it vnder foot? It is true indeed that Chriſt ſuffered for vs that we might eſcape, and paid our debt that it might not be required at our hand; but ſeeing all ſinners haue not their part of Chriſt and his merits, but only thoſe that are in Chriſt; and thoſe only are in Chriſt, who walke not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirit; ſeeing alſo thoſe only are partakers of all the gracious promiſes made in him, who approue their faith by the liuely fruit thereof, vnfained repentance; and thoſe only doe truly repent, who ſorrow for their ſins paſt, hate their preſent corruptions, and deſire and endeuour to ſerue God in newneſſe of life; how can wee haue any aſſurance that Gods iuſtice is ſatisfied for vs, and that we haue eſcaped condemnation, if we quench the good motions of Gods Spirit, & obey the fleſh in the luſts thereof, and if ſtill being in loue with our ſins, we reſolue to go forward in our courſe of wickedneſſe.

Rom. 8.1.

§. Sect. 3.
The third reaſon, taken from Gods fierce anger againſt ſinne, ſhewed in his fearefull iudgements executed vpon Sinners.

Thirdly, let vs call to our remembrance Gods fierce wrath conceiued againſt ſinne, and his fearefull iudgements which hee hath executed vpon ſinners, and that not onely particular men, but alſo whole States and Common-wealths. Let vs call to minde the generall Deluge, in which all mankind, ſauing eight perſons, were drowned; the deſtruction of Sodome and Gomorrah by fire and brimſtone; the rooting out of the whole Nation of the Canaanites; the reiection of the Iewes; the ouerthrow and vtter defacing of thoſe famous Churches of the Corinthians, Galathians, Epheſians, Philippians, Coloſſians, Theſſalonians, and the reſt mentioned in the Booke of the Reuelation. And to the examples of former times, adde thoſe which euery man obſerueth in his owne experience; and then conſider withall, that the cauſe which moued the Lord to execute in his iuſt diſpleaſure theſe heauy iudgements vpon mankind, was nothing elſe but ſinne, and it will bee a forcible reaſon to withdraw vs from it. For the Lord is immutable and vnchangeable in his courſe of Iuſtice, and he hateth ſinne now as deadly as in former ages; neither will he ſpare vs more then others, if we liue in our ſinnes without repentance. Nay, certainly as our ſins being agrauated by many circumſtances are more odious vnto him, ſo will the Lord proportionably inflict more heauy iudgements vpon vs then he hath vpon others, whoſe ſins haue not beene ſo great and preſumptuous. For if the Lord giue vs now extraordinary knowledge, or at leaſt the meanes thereof, and we ſinne againſt this knowledge and againſt our owne conſciences; if hee hath in moſt abundant meaſure multiplyed his mercies vpon vs, and wee hereby be made more vnkind and vngratefull; if hee hath giuen vs warning by innumerable examples of his heauie iudgements executed vpon others in former times, & in our owne dayes, yea euen in our own ſight, laieth heauie puniſhments vpon ſuch as haue committed no other ſins then wee our ſelues are guiltie of, and yet wee continue in our ſinnes without repentance, how is it poſſible but that we ſhould prouoke Gods fierce wrath againſt vs, and draw downe violently vpon our ſelues with theſe cartropes of iniquitie, Gods fearefull plagues and heauie iudgements? It is true indeede that God is long ſuffering and ſlow to anger, but if hereby wee take occaſion to continue in our ſinnes, and doe delay our repentance, what doe we elſe but treaſure vp againſt our ſelues wrath againſt the day of wrath, and the declaration of the iuſt iudgement of God? It is moſt certaine that God is not eaſily prouoked to wrath and anger: but let not this incourage vs to continue in our ſinnes; for if it be once inflamed, it is ſo fierce and terrible, that with the heate thereof it drieth vp the ſeas; and ſo powerfull that hee maketh therewith the earth to tremble and the mountaines to melt like waxe in his preſence, and the voyce of his furie doth breake and rent in ſunder the Cedars, yea the mightie ſtrong Cedars of Libanus, as the Scripture ſpeaketh. As therfore fire doth burne more hotly in ſuch ſolid matter as is long in kindling, than in flaxe or ſtraw which is ſoone inflamed, and ſoone extinguiſhed: ſo the anger of God is not eaſily inflamed, but if it be once kindled, it burneth ſo furiouſly that nothing will quench it, but the blood of Chriſt applied by faith, and the ſtreaming teares of vnfained repentance. Seeing then Gods iudgements are ſo fearefull, and his anger ſo terrible, let vs carefully take heed of prouoking his wrath againſt vs by our ſinnes, for it is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of the liuing God.

Rom.2.5.

Heb.10.31.

§.Sect.4.
The fourth reaſon, taken from the day of Iudgement.

Fourthly, let vs meditate vpon the day of iudgement, when as wee muſt giue an account not onely of our words and works, but alſo of our ſecret thoughts, before a moſt iuſt Iudge, who with the all-ſeeing eye of his diuine knowledge ſearcheth and beholdeth the very heart and reines, in the preſence alſo of men and Angels. And this will reſtraine vs from falling into ſinne, though it may bee ſo ſecretly acted, that wee neede not to feare in this life either ſhame or puniſhment. For let it be ſuppoſed that we can hide our ſinnes from the ſight of all men, yet what will this benefit vs, if God, againſt whom wee ſinne, and before whom, as our ſupreame Iudge, wee muſt giue an account, doe looke vpon vs? What will it profit vs though time weare our offences out of mans remembrance, if God keepe a faithfull regiſter of them, and ingraue our reckoning with a penne of iron? What will it helpe vs if by our cunning conueiances, we can hide our ſinnes and auoid ſhame, or with an impudent forehead can face them out without bluſhing, if our nakedneſſe bee diſcouered, and our ſhame proclaimed in the preſence of God and all his Saints and Angels? What will it auaile vs to bee exempted from puniſhment in this life, through our great power and vncontrouleable authoritie, or to eſcape the penaltie of humane lawes by the interceſſion of friends, or by corrupting the Iudge, or by procuring the princes pardon; if againe we muſt bee arraigned before ſuch an vpright Iudge as reſpecteth no perſons, receiueth no rewards; and being found guilty, bee condemned vnto the eternall torments of hell fire? When therefore wee heare the voice of Satans tentations alluring vs to commit ſin, let vs alſo haue the voice of the Archangell ſounding in our eares, Ariſe yee dead and come vnto iudgement. When the world tempteth vs vnto ſin on the one ſide by intiſing promiſes of honours, pleaſures and riches, and on the other ſide, by terrifying threatnings of loſſe, danger, or puniſhment, let vs call to minde the day of iudgement, when either wee muſt heare the ſentence of ſaluation, Come yee bleſſed of my Father and inherit the kingdome prepared for you, &c. or the ſentence of condemnation, Depart yee curſed into hell fire, which is prepared for the diuell and his angels: and then ſhall not the momentanie vanities of the world ſo forcibly draw vs into the ſnares of ſin, as the remembrance of the heauenly ioyes prepared for vs in Gods kingdome will retaine vs in holy obedience; then will not the worlds threats of temporarie miſeries ſo ſtrongly vrge vs to wound our conſciences with the ſting ſin, as the feare to heare the definitiue ſentence of eternall condemnation will reſtraine vs from it.

§.Sect.5.
The fifth taken from manifold of ſinne.

Laſtly, let vs call to minde the manifold euils, which ſin cauſeth both to body and ſoule, in this life and the life to come; and ſo though the vglineſſe of it ſelfe will not make vs to flee from it, yet the miſerable effects which it produceth may moue vs to abhorre it. Conſider therefore that there is no euill vnder the Sunne, in this life or afterwards, which is not a fruit of this curſed roote: it ſubiecteth the bodie to ſickneſſe and diſeaſes, hunger and thirſt, cold and wearineſſe; the mind to ignorance & blindneſſe, the will to peruerſeneſſe, the affections to all prepoſterous diſorder; it ruinateth the eſtate, bringeth a man to pouertie and extreame miſerie; it maketh the whole man obnoxious to the curſe of the Law, the anger of God, and all thoſe innumerable euils, which euer accompanie them. In this world it bringeth the body to death and corruption, and in the world to come both body and ſoule to condemnation, and endleſſe leſſe deſtruction; it depriueth vs of our heauenly inheritance, and the euerlaſting ioyes of Gods kingdome, and plungeth vs into the lake which burneth with fire and brimſtone. In a word, there is no euill to be imagined which doth not proceede from this euill of ſinne, and therefore though it ſeeme neuer ſo ſweete to our carnall appetites, yet being mixed with this gall and wormewood of innumerable euils, let vs loath and abhor it. When the vaine and vncertaine benefits which it promiſeth moue vs to imbrace it, let the miſerable euils which accompany it, and the moſt aſſured and ſurpaſſing ioyes which it depriueth vs of, make vs to auoid it as a deadly ſtinging ſerpent.

CHAP. VI.

Of ſome ſpeciall meanes whereby we may bee preſerued from falling into ſinne.

Sect. 1.
first meas to avoid ccaſions

Theſ. 5. 22.

WEe haue ſhewed the reaſons wherby euery one may bee armed againſt Satans ſuggeſtions, tempting him vnto ſinne; and be moued vnto a Chriſtian reſolution, of poſſeſſing body and ſoule in holineſſe and puritie. Now wee are to ſpeake of ſome ſpeciall meanes, whereby the Chriſtian thus reſolued may be preſerued from falling into ſuch grieuous ſins, as wound the conſcience, and hinder him in the courſe of ſanctification. Firſt, he that would auoide ſin, muſt carefully alſo auoid the occaſions thereof, which are ſtrong inducements to draw him vnto ſinne; for as it is great folly for a man who dreadeth burning to bee alwayes medling with fire and gunpowder; ſo is it no leſſe madneſſe to thinke that wee can preſerue our ſelues from ſinne, and yet intertaine all occaſions thereof, continually ſuffering the ſparkes of Satans tentations to fall (as it were) into the tinder of our corrupt affections. It is not poſſible that he who is inclined to gluttonie and drunkenneſſe ſhould containe himſelfe from theſe ſinnes, if he giue himſelfe to companie keeping, and take his chiefe delight in pleaſing his taſte with the daintieſt meates and drinkes: or that hee who is cholerick, ſhould refraine from anger, and yet thruſt himſelfe into needleſſe controuerſies, and hot contentions; or for him that is laſciuious to abſtaine from vncleanneſſe, and yet frequent vnchaſt companie, reade wanton bookes, view obſcene ſpectacles, vſe filthie communication, and pamper himſelfe in gluttonie and drunkenneſſe. In a word, we cannot auoid any ſin, vnleſſe we alſo flee and ſhun the occaſions and meanes thereof; and therefore let vs bee as carefull and watchfull in the one as the other, or elſe wee ſhall moſt certainely loſe out labours.

§. Sect. 2.
The ſecond meanes, to make conſcience of the leaſt ſinnes.

Secondly, if wee would not fall into greater ſinnes, wee muſt alſo make conſcience of thoſe which are leſſe; and thinke with our ſelues that no ſin is ſmall, ſeeing the leaſt deſerueth the anger of God and euerlaſting death: otherwiſe if we willingly intertaine euen ſmall corruptions, we ſhall at length make no conſcience of hainous tranſgreſſions; and theſe little theeues being let in, will in time ſet wide open the doore of our hearts, that the greateſt and groſſeſt may eaſily enter, and ſo robbe and ſpoile vs of all grace and goodneſſe.

§. Sect. 3.
The third meanes, is continuallie to ſtand vpon our guard.

Thirdly, let vs continuallie ſtande vpon our guard, carefully watching ouer our owne hearts, that we be not ſurpriſed at vnawares; for thouſands are the baites which are laid to intrap vs, and tenne thouſand ſnares doth Satan lay to intangle vs; and therefore it behoooueth vs to looke narrowly to our waies, and to bee alwayes as ready to giue Satan the repulſe, as he to make the encounter. And conſidering that if we doe not aſſault ſin, it will moſt ſurely ſet vpon vs, and at one time or other will giue vs the foile if wee only lie at ward, and neuer offer blow againſt this our enemie; therefore it behoooueth euery Chriſtian ſouldier, not onely to giue ſin a repulſe, but alſo to wound it in the head, and beate it downe, that it may not againe aſſault him, or at leaſt not with wonted power and violence. And foraſmuch as he hath many enemies which cannot at once bee ouercome, therefore hee is to labour to get euery day the maſtery of ſome ſinne, and to bring it in ſubiection, that ſo in continuance of time he may vanquiſh all, and obtaine a full and finall victorie ouer all his corruptions.

§. Sect. 4.
The fourth meanes, to reſt on Gods aſſiſtance, and not on our owne power.

Fourthly, if wee would not fall into grieuous ſinnes wee muſt not ſtand in our owne power, nor truſt in our owne ſtrength, but wholly reſt and relie vpon Gods promiſed aſſiſtance. For if once we robbe God of his glory, and arrogate the praiſe of our victory ouer ſin and Satan vnto our ſelues, the Lord will withdraw his helping hand, and leaue vs vnto our ſelues, till by our grieuous falles we haue learned to acknowledge our owne weakenes; & to reſt wholly in the power of his might. For as all other ſinnes are odious vnto God, ſo eſpecially the ſin of pride, becauſe it maketh vile man corriuall with God in his praiſe and glory, of which he is moſt iealous; and therefore the Lord ſuffereth, euen his owne children, to fall into grieuous ſinnes, that hereby they may bee humbled; and ſo vſeth other ſins as a counterpoiſon to cure pride.

§. Sect. 5.

Laſtly, ſeeing we ſtand not by our owne

The fifth meanes is feruent prayer.

ſtrength but by the power of Gods might, let vs as often as wee ſee our owne weakneſſe and aptneſſe to fall, haue our recourſe vnto God, by feruent and effectuall prayer; crauing his aide and aſſiſtance, that thereby wee may bee enabled to ſtand in the day of tentation. And when by vertue thereof wee haue giuen ſin the foile, and repelled Satans ſuggeſtions; let vs remember to returne praiſe and thankſgiuing to the Lord, by whoſe helpe wee haue beaten backe our ſpirituall enemies: and then wee may bee aſſured that the Lord will vphold vs by the power of his ſpirit from falling into ſinne; or if wee doe fall, hee will ſpeedily raiſe vs vp by vnfained repentance.

Chap. VII.

That in the moſt ſanctified, remaine ſome reliques of ſinne, and the cauſes thereof.

§. Sect. 1. Satans tentation, whereby he diſcourageth the Chriſtian in the worke of ſanctification.

And ſo much for the anſwering of Satans firſt ſort of tentations, wherewith hee laboureth to hinder our ſanctification by alluring vs to commit ſinne. Now we are to ſpeake of the other ſort, whereby he ſeeketh to diſcourage vs in this worke, as being not only hard and difficult, but euen impoſſible. And theſe alſo are of two kindes; the firſt taken from the great maſſe of our naturall corruptions and ſmall meaſure of our ſanctification; the other from ſome actuall ſinnes which we haue committed. Concerning the firſt, he thus frameth his tentations: Thou laboureſt much (will he ſay) & tireſt thy ſelfe in attaining vnto ſanctificatiō, but al in vaine; for doeſt thou not ſee on the one ſide the vnreſiſtable violence of thy naturall corruptions, which continually choake in thee all the good motions of Gods ſpirit, & forcibly draw thee into all ſin and wickedneſſe; and on the other ſide, thy ſmall meaſure of grace & ſanctification, which is exceedingly ſtained with thy manifold imperfections? How therefore can ſuch weakneſſe withſtand ſuch power? And how is it poſſible that thy feeble ſpirit ſhould ouercome thy ſtrong fleſh, eſpecially ſeeing it is aſſiſted with the powerful aides of the puiſſant world, and the mighty power of innumerable diuels? Neither art thou vainely to imagine that God will enable thee to ouercome all theſe difficulties: for hee hath giuen thee ouer to thine owne weakneſſe; otherwiſe if it were his will to make thee one of his holy ones, hee could with the powerfull operation of his ſpirit, long agoe haue perfectly purged thee from all thy corruptions, and giuen vnto thee a great meaſure of ſanctification. Seeing then it is impoſſible in reſpect of thy weakneſſe and thine enemies power to accompliſh this worke which thou haſt taken in hand, and ſeeing thou haſt no aſſurance that God will ſtrengthen thee with his ſpirit, which thou haſt a long time reſiſted and vexed, by quenching the good motions thereof, thou haſt now no ſhew of hope to effect that which thou deſireſt: and therefore it were much better for thee to ceaſe ſtriuing againſt the ſtreame of thy corruptions, and to follow the naturall current of thy deſires: for when thou takeſt all the paines thou canſt, thou art in one day carried further backward toward thine olde conuerſation, than thou canſt in many moneths get forward in the courſe of ſanctification.

And thus doth Satan diſcourage the weak Chriſtian with his falſe ſuggeſtions, to the end he may hinder him from trauelling this way of holineſſe which leadeth to Gods kingdome. For the anſwering whereof we are to know, that the ſanctification of the moſt holy is imperfect, both in reſpect of the reliques of ſin, and corruptions which continually cleaue to them, and in reſpect of the manifold wants and defects of their beſt actions. Neither are wee ſo waſhed in the lauer of regeneration, but that there remaine in vs ſome ſtaines of that ſcarlet-ingrained dye of our corruptions; wee haue not ſo cleerely eſcaped out of our old captiuitie of ſin, but that wee retaine ſtill ſome gaules and bruſes, which make vs to goe haltingly in the waies of righteouſnes: we haue not ſo vanquiſhed this ſpiritual enemie, but that ſtill it will aſſault vs, yea, and often foile vs, though it cannot ſubdue vs. We haue indeed ouercome theſe curſed Canaanites, ſo that they cannot rule and raigne in vs as in former times, but wee haue not vtterly expelled them from dwelling amongſt vs; ſo that doe wee what we can, yet ſtill they will bee as thornes in our ſides to vexe and grieue vs. Heretofore the luſts of our fleſh like tyrannicall Lords did againſt all law and iuſtice ouerrule vs, but now by vertue of Gods ſpirit aſſiſting vs, we haue weakened their force and brought them vnder; yet not ſo, but that ſtill they will rebell againſt the ſpirit, and continually exerciſe vs in the ſpirituall warfare. So that the regenerate man is not wholly ſpirit, as the carnall man is wholly fleſh, but is diuided into two factions or parts, and alwayes is at ciuill warres within himſelfe. For ſo farre forth as he is regenerate he is holy, pure, and vndefiled; but ſo farre forth as he is carnall, he he is ſinfull, corrupt, & full of all pollution. As he is regenerate he wholly loueth & embraceth true holineſſe, & righteouſnes, and abhorreth and fleeth ſin & wickednes; but as hee is vnregenerate hee loueth ſin and the vaine pleaſures thereof, and loatheth righteouſneſſe as irkſome and vnpleaſant. In the ſpirituall part he contemneth the world, and hauing his conuerſation aboue he mindeth heauenly things; but in the carnall part hee loueth the world, and is preſſed downe with the cares and pleaſures thereof, ſo that his mind cannot as it would mount aloft in diuine meditations; in the ſpirit hee ſerueth the law of God, in the fleſh the law of ſinne.

Wee muſt not therefore imagine, that to be ſanctified is to be wholly purged from all corruption, to be endued with perfect righteouſneſſe, and to haue the ſpirit in full meaſure; but to haue the corruptions of ſinne leſſened, and their power abated, ſo that they cannot wholly ouerſway vs as in former times, to haue ſome holy deſires and good endeuours of ſeruing God in holineſſe and righteouſnes, which alſo wee expreſſe in our actions, although in great weakneſſe and imperfection; to haue the firſt fruits of the ſpirit in this life, expecting the whole harueſt in the life to come. Neither let vs yeeld to Satan, ſuggeſting vnto vs, that we are not at al ſanctified, becauſe we haue ſome reliques of our old corruptions and manifold imperfections in our beſt actions; or that therefore our holineſſe which we haue, is ſo ſmall that it is to no purpoſe, and that which wee want ſo great and hardly come by, that it is not poſſible we ſhould euer attaine vnto it; ſeeing theſe ſuggeſtions are ſufficiently confuted, both by the Scriptures and examples of all Gods children. For the Scriptures teach vs that there is not a iuſt man vpon the earth who doth good and ſinneth not Eccleſ. 7. 20. that in many things we ſin all; that if we ſay we haue no ſinne, we deceiue our ſelues, and there is no truth in vs: and therefore becauſe wee continually offend, our Sauiour requireth that as wee aske our daily bread, ſo alſo wee ſhould pray daily for the forgiueneſſe of our ſins. The Apoſtle alſo telleth vs, that there is a continuall fight in euery Christian, the fleſh luſting againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, The one tempting vs vnto ſin, the other ſtirring vs vp to holy obedience. Moreouer, the examples of Gods Saints are pregnant for this purpoſe, neither was there euer any ſo perfectly ſanctified, but there remained in them ſome reliques of their naturall corruptions, which alſo ſhewed themſelues in actuall ſinnes and grieuous tranſgreſſions; as appeareth plainly in the examples of the Patriarches, Dauid, Peter, and all others. But moſt cleerly doth the Apoſtle Paul ſhew this in his owne perſon, propounding himſelfe as a true paterne of a man regenerate; for though he had attained vnto a great meaſure of ſanctification, yet he complaineth of the great force and violence of his inbred corruptions, Rom. 7: for ſo great ſtrength thereof remained in him, that it forced him to abuſe the law of God, taking occaſion thereby to worke in him all manner of concupiſcence, and ſo in ſtead of killing ſin did reuiue it in him, verſ. 8. 9: that it made him to omit the good hee would, and to doe the euill that he hated, verſ. 15. 19. that it warred againſt the law of his minde, and led him captiue to the law of ſin, verſ. 23. that he ſaw no poſſible meanes in himſelfe to ſubdue vtterly theſe corruptions, and therefore ſeeketh for helpe elſewhere crying out, Wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer mee from the body of this death? verſe. 24.

§. Sect. 4. That our wants and corruptions ſhould not diſcourage vs, but redouble our care and diligence.

Seeing therfore this is the ſtate of al Gods children, let not Satan perſwade vs that we are not yet ſanctified, or that it is loſt labour to goe forward in this worke, becauſe of the great power of our corruptions and ſmall meaſure of ſanctification, which is ſtained alſo with manifold imperfections; but rather let the ſtrength of our corruptions redouble our care and diligence that wee may ſubdue them. And conſidering that there are diuers degrees of holines, let vs aſſoone as we haue aſcended one ſtep, neuer reſt ſtriuing till wee haue aſcended a higher, vntill at length wee come to the top of perfection, and the higheſt ſtep of true holineſſe, according to the exhortation of the Apoſtle, Apoc. 22. 11. Hee that is righteous let him be righteous ſtill, he that is holy, let him bee holy ſtill, that is, let him continue and daily increaſe in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe.

Apoc. 22. 11.

§. Sect. 5. That our reliques of ſinne ſhall not be imputed vnto vs.

And to the end that we may not be diſcouraged in theſe our holy indeuours, with Satans tentations drawne from the reliques of our ſinnes, the ſtrength of our corruptions, and the imperfections & ſmall meaſure of our ſanctification; let vs further conſider, firſt, that theſe reliques of ſin ſhall not bee imputed vnto vs, nor come in iudgement before God to our condemnation, becauſe by faith wee are vnited vnto Chriſt, and ſo made partakers of the vertue and merits of his death and paſſion, whereby hee hath ſatisfied Gods iuſtice for our ſins, ſo that they cannot now condemne vs, nor draw vpon vs any puniſhment; and likewiſe wee are made partakers of his perfect righteouſneſſe and obedience to the law, which as a rich robe doth couer and hide our patched ragges of imperfection. So then though wee ſee the reliques of ſinne and our manifold imperfections, let vs not bee diſcouraged hereby from labouring in the worke of ſanctification, but rather ſtriue & endeuour to mortifie our ſins, & aſpire to more & more perfection. And if beſides our purpoſe we be led captiue of ſin, let vs remember that we haue an aduocate with the father Ieſus Chriſt the iuſt,

1. Iohn. 2. 1. 2.

iuſt and that hee is the reconciliation for our ſins; ſo that though they make vs condemne our ſelues in our owne conſciences, yet they ſhall neuer condemne vs before God. And this the Apoſtle Paul ſheweth vnto vs; for hauing in the ſeauenth Chapter of his Epiſtle to the Romans declared, that the faithfull haue remaining in them the fleſh and reliques of their old corruptions, which powerfully hinder them from doing the good they would, and moue them to commit the euill which they would not, leſt any hereby ſhould bee diſcouraged in the ſight and ſenſe of his corruptions, hee preſently addeth in the beginning of the eighth Chapter, that notwithſtanding the fleſh and the corruptions thereof, which before hee had ſpoken of remained in vs, yet there was no condemnation to thoſe who were in Chriſt Ieſus and hee yeeldeth this reaſon, becauſe the law of the ſpirit of life which is in Chriſt Ieſus, had freed them from the law of ſinne and of death, that is, becauſe the power and vertue of the ſpirit of God (which is the the author of life, by vniting vs as members vnto the body of Chriſt in whom we liue, and by ſprinkling our conſciences with his precious blood) had deliuered them from the force and power of ſin and death, ſo that now it could not condemne them, nor oblige and bind them to guilt and puniſhment as in former times. Seing therefore the ſting of ſinne is taken away that it cannot condemne vs, let vs not ſo feare it, as that it ſhould moue vs deſperatly to caſt away our weapons, not daring to encounter it; for though this our enemie may aſſault vs, yet it cannot ouercome vs; though it may wound vs, yet it cannot kill vs; though it may giue vs a foyle, yet in the end wee are ſure of victorie, if wee manfully reſiſt and labour to ſubdue it.

Rom. 8.1.2.

§. Sect. 6. That the Lord in the Goſpell requireth not perfect obedience to the law.

Secondly, let vs conſider that the Lord doth not require of vs vnder the Goſpell ſuch exact and perfect righteouſneſſe as was required vnder the law; which is altogether impoſſible to our corrupt nature, and was neuer to be found in any man (our Sauiour Chriſt excepted) but onely that wee ſtriue and labour to attaine vnto it; hee doth not require of vs that we ſhould at once free our ſelues from the fleſh and the corruptions thereof, but that wee endeuour to mortifie it, according to the meaſure of grace and ſtrength which wee haue receiued from him; hee doth not require of vs that wee bee without ſinne, but that ſinne doe not rule in our mortall bodies, that we ſhould like ſlaues obey it willingly in the luſts thereof; and that alſo wee hating and abhorring it, doe continually make warre againſt it, and ſubdue it by little and little, ſeeing wee cannot at once wholly vanquiſh it. He doth not now require of vs that wee ſhould performe perfect obedience to the law, which Chriſt hath performed for vs, but that wee doe our beſt endeuour, and though we cannot attaine to our deſire, yet at leaſt that wee bee delighted in the law of God concerning the inner man, and conſent vnto it that it is good, holy and iuſt. In a word, this is the Chriſtian mans righteouſnes which God requireth, that hee hate ſin, and loue godlines, that he deſire and endeuour to mortifie the fleſh and corruptions thereof, and labour to lead a new life in holy obedience. And if contrary to his deſire and purpoſe hee doe the euill which he hateth, or leaue vndone the good which hee loueth; that hee ſorrow and grieue for his ſinnes and imperfections, and making confeſſion hereof before the throne of grace, doe implore mercy and forgiuenes in Chriſt Ieſus. And if we offer vnto God this righteouſnes, it will be acceptable vnto him, notwithſtanding our manifold imperfections; for hee meaſureth our deed by our will, and eſteemeth more of our affections than of our actions. He reſpecteth not what we can doe, but what we would do, and that which we would performe and cannot, hee eſteemeth it as though it were performed. Hee reputeth him righteous, who earneſtly deſireth and laboureth to be righteous, and him perfect, who acknowledging and bewailing his imperfections ſtriueth to attaine to more perfection. Wherein he fitly may be compared vnto a tender louing father, who eſteemeth of the leaſt endeuours of his beloued ſonne, more than of the beſt actions of a ſeruant, becauſe he regardeth not ſo much the excellencie of the action, as the perſon and cheerefull will of the agent.

§. Sect. 7. Why the L… accepteth of our imperf… righteou…

Now the reaſons why the Lord being perfectly iuſt, will notwithſtanding accept of our imperfect righteouſneſſe, is firſt becauſe (wee being made members of Chriſts body) our perſons are acceptable vnto him, and therefore our workes alſo (not in their owne worthines, or for their owne merit, but in and for Chriſt) are accepted, the corruptions and ſtaines of them being waſhed away in his blood, and the imperfections of them being couered with Chriſts perfect righteouſneſſe. And thus being adorned in the garment of our elder brother Chriſt Ieſus, we obtaine the bleſſing of our heauenly father. Secondly, our righteouſneſſe and holineſſe doth proceede from the ſpirit of God dwelling in vs; and from hence our workes being imperfect in themſelues doe receiue their dignitie, excellencie, and eſtimation in Gods ſight, as being the fruites of his owne ſpirit, howſoeuer mingled with our corruptions.

Rom. 6.12.

§. Sect. 8. That our… will not… the Lord… reiect vs.

Thirdly, let vs remember that our ſinnes and corruptions which wee hate and labour to mortifie, will neuer moue the Lord to reiect and caſt vs out of his loue and fauour. For he hath made with vs not the Couenant of workes but the Couenant of grace, not on the condition of perfect, obedience, but a liuely faith and vnfained repentance, which if we performe, our ſins cannot hinder vs of his grace and fauour, nor of any ſpirituall and heauenly benefit promiſed vnto vs: ſeeing if we beleeue and repent, it is a branch of this couenant, that hee will be mercifull vnto our ſins, and not impute them to vs vnto condemnation, according to that, Ier. 31. 34. For I will forgiue their iniquitie, and will remember their ſinnes no more. And if we offend, he will chaſtiſe vs with the rod of men, but his mercie ſhall not depart from vs, and the Couenant of peace made with vs ſhall neuer faile, 2.*Sam.*7.14. Eſay 54.7. to the 11. For we are the Lords children, and hee our gracious Father: now wee know that a louing father will not reiect his childe, becauſe he is ſicke, lame, or in miſerable eſtate, but rather he is more tender ouer him, till he be recouered of his infirmities: but what are our ſinnes but the ſickneſſe, wounds and miſery of the ſoule, with which we are vexed and turmoyled whileſt wee continue in this life? And will our heauenly Father, whoſe loue infinitely ſurpaſſeth the loue of the moſt tender mother, caſt vs out of his fauour, becauſes our ſoule are ſicke in ſin, and moleſted with many miſeries which doe accompany it? It is impoſſible; eſpecially conſidering that wee deſire nothing more then to bee cured of theſe diſeaſes, and to bee reſtored to perfect health. The Lord is our heauenly husbandman, and we his husbandry; now wee know that the good husbandman doth not forſake his Land, becauſe it bringeth forth thornes and thiſtles, but rather is ſo much the more diligent and painfull in weeding and tilling it, that it may bee fitted for good ſeed and bring vnto him plentifull increaſe; and ſo the Lord will not caſt vs off, becauſe we naturally bring forth the weedes and thiſtles of ſin and corruption, but in his infinite loue he wil with the operation of his holy Spirit, plow vp the fallow grounds of our hearts, and weed out our corruptions; that ſo we may like good ground, well husbanded, bring forth the ripe fruits of holines and righteouſneſſe.

Fourthly, let vs conſider that the Lord our God, who could eaſily if it had pleaſed him, haue throughly purged vs from all ſin and corruption, and indued vs with perfect righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, hath notwithſtanding left remayning in vs ſome reliques of ſin, and many imperfections in our ſanctification, both for the manifeſtation of his owne glory, and for the furthering of our owne eternall ſaluation. For firſt, hereby it commeth to paſſe, that the Lord hath the whole prayſe of our ſaluation, ſeeing hee ſaueth vs of his meere mercy, and not for our workes and worthineſſe. Whereas if our righteouſneſſe and ſanctification were perfect, we would be ready to ſhare with God; aſcribing part in the worke of our ſaluation vnto our ſelues; and not wholly attribute it to Gods mercie and Chriſts only and alſufficient merits: and therefore the Lord hath left in vs the reliques of ſin and manifold imperfections, that hereby it may appeare that wee are not ſaued for our owne worthineſſe and deſerts, but of his free grace and vndeſerued loue.

Secondly, hee hath left in vs theſe reliques of ſin and manifold imperfections, to the end that there might be continuall matter and a fit obiect, whereupon he might exerciſe, and by exerciſing manifeſt, to the prayſe of his grace, his patience, long-ſuffering, loue, goodneſſe, and infinite mercy, in the pardoning and forgiuing of them; which would not ſo plainly appeare if at once hee had indued vs with perfect righteouſneſſe.

§. Sect. 11. That he might ſhew his power in our weakneſſe.

Thirdly, that hereby he might make way for the manifeſtation of his power in our weakneſſe and imperfections. If wee were perfectly righteous and indued with all grace, it were no wonder if we ſhould withſtand Satans tentations and get the vpper hand in the ſpirituall combat; but ſeeing we are of our ſelues ſinfull, exceeding weake and ful of all imperfections, hereby is the infinite power of God manifeſted, in that we are notwithſtanding enabled, to withſtand Satan and all the power of Hell which oppoſe themſelues againſt vs, ſeeing nothing elſe could vphold ſuch feeble weakneſſe againſt ſuch puiſſant might. Of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 2.*Cor.*12.8,9. for hauing oftentimes beſought the Lord to bee freed from the corruptions of his fleſh, hee receiueth this anſwere, that Gods grace was ſufficient for him, and that his power was made perfect through weakneſſe.

2.*Cor.*12.8,9.

§. Sect. 12. That he might ſtirre vs vp to continuall thankfulneſſe.

Fourthly, hereby the Lord continually putteth vs in minde of his mercie and manifold benefits, to the end that we daily taſting of them, may alſo daily returne vnto him thankes and prayſe. If hee ſhould at once free vs from ſinne, and indue vs with a full meaſure of grace and perfect righteouſneſſe, wee would ſoone be forgetfull of his abundant mercies, and this forgetfulneſſe would worke in vs vnthankfulneſſe, and this vnthankfulneſſe would make vs neglect his worſhip and ſeruice. And therefore he doth not at once inrich vs, but lets vs continue in our pouertie, that ſo we may continually depend vpon him: and like a wiſe houſholder hee doth not ſuddenly aduance vs to our higheſt preferments, for then wee would leaue his ſeruice and betake vs to our eaſe and pleaſure; but he beſtoweth his benefits by little and little, and ſo keeping vs ſtill in expectation of receiuing more, he retaineth vs ſtill in his ſeruice, & euery day increaſing his bountie, he putteth alſo into our mouthes new ſongs of thankſgiuing, and giueth vs daily new occaſion of prayſing his magnificence.

§. Sect. 13.
That he may hereby worke in vs true humilitie.

Secondly, as the Lord hereby aduanceth his owne glory, ſo alſo he worketh our good, and furthereth our eternall ſaluation. For firſt by leauing in vs theſe reliques of ſinne and manifold imperfections, he worketh in vs true humilitie, which of all other graces is moſt acceptable vnto him, and mortifieth our pride, which of all other vices is moſt odious and abominable in his ſight. For when we ſee our manifold infirmities and corruptions of ſin, all cauſe of pride and ſelfe-conceit is taken away, and wee in all humilitie are moued to confeſſe, that it is Gods mercy that we are not conſumed; how much more that notwithſtanding our vileneſſe and vnworthineſſe, he hath made vs his ſonnes and heires of euerlaſting glory? And thus of the fleſh of this Viper Sin, doth the Lord make a ſoueraigne antidote againſt the deadly poyſon of pride. And as good Chirurgions doe not ſuddenly heale vp the wound, but keepe it open till they haue drawne out the core and healed it to the bottome, for otherwiſe it would putrifie and become more dangerous; ſo the Lord wil not at once heale the wounds of our ſins, but leaueth them as it were open and vncured, till hee haue drawne out the core of pride, which being left in vs (though we were healed of all our other ſins) would more indanger vs then all the reſt. Wherein the Lord confirmeth and furthereth vs in the way of ſaluation; for nothing more diſableth vs then pride, nothing more ſtrengtheneth and vpholdeth vs then humilitie, becauſe the ſtrength whereby wee ſtand and repell our ſpirituall enemies is not our owne abilitie, but the power of Gods might, and the Lord withdraweth his aſſiſting hand from the proud, to the end that hee may learne to bee more humble by his grieuous falls; yea he reſiſteth him, and therefore how is it poſſible that hee ſhould ſtand? but contrariwiſe he giueth grace to the humble, and filleth him who acknowledgeth his owne emptineſſe with good things, but the proud, who is full in his owne conceit, hee ſendeth emptie away. To which purpoſe Auguſtine ſpeaketh excellently. Et ideo audeo dicere, &c. And therefore (ſaith hee) I dare bee bold to ſay that it is profitable for proud perſons to fall into ſome open and manifeſt ſin, that thereby they may diſpleaſe themſelues in their fall, who haue falne by pleaſing themſelues too much in their ſtanding. For more profitably did Peter diſpleaſe himſelfe when hee wept, then pleaſe himſelfe whē he preſumed. And this is that which the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh. Fill their faces (O Lord) with ſhame, that they may ſeeke thy Name.

Secondly, he leaueth in vs corruptions and imperfections to the end that wee ſhould not reſt in our owne righteouſneſſe for our iuſtification and ſaluation (which though it were as great as Adams in the ſtate of innocency and integritie, yet it were no ſure ground to reſt vpon) but in the alone righteouſneſſe of Chriſt Ieſus, which is all-ſufficient and a foundation ſo vnremouable, that all the power of hell cannot ouerturne it, nor any that are built vpon it. Vpon which ſure pillar wee would hardly relie, ſo long as we haue in our hand the reede of our owne righteouſneſſe, we being naturally inclined rather to ſeeke for ſaluation in our ſelues then elſewhere.

Thirdly, he leaueth in vs theſe ſpirituall enemies, that wee may exerciſe our ſelues in fighting againſt them, and ſo bee kept from idleneſſe the mother and nurſe of all euill; and as he would not at once caſt out the Canaanites before the Iſraelites, but by little and little, leſt the Land ſhould grow vnto a wilderneſſe, and the wilde beaſts ſhould multiply againſt them: ſo he would not ſuddenly caſt out our ſpirituall enemies, but ſuffereth vs to preuaile againſt them by little and little, leſt giuing our ſelues vnto idleneſſe when there is no oppoſition made againſt vs, there grow in vs as in a wildernes the noyſome weeds and thorns of ſin and the wilde beaſts of all outragious wickedneſſe, which would deuoure and vtterly deſtroy vs. Whereas contrariwiſe when wee are aſſaulted outwardly with the forces of Sathan and the World, and inwardly with the fleſh and our naturall corruptions, we haue enemies againſt whom wee may exerciſe our faith, affiance, hope, patience, courage, and all other graces which we haue receiued, and by exerciſe increaſe them: we fight the Lords battels like his valiant Souldiers, and being aſſiſted by his holy Spirit we obtaine victory, and with our conqueſt a more excellent crowne of eternall glory: as appeareth, *Reuel.*2.26, 27. and 3.21.

§. Sect.
That we

Laſtly, he ſuffereth vs to be moleſted and vexed with the reliques of our ſins, that hereby he may make vs to loath this world and vale of miſerie, wherein we can doe nothing but breake the commandements of our deare louing Father; and may be moued to deſire that heauenly life in Gods Kingdome when hauing laid aſide all corruption, wee ſhall be indued with all perfection, and be fully enabled to performe ſuch obedience vnto God as he requireth. For ſeeing ſinne is not fully vanquiſhed till it be ſubdued by our death, nor we euer at reſt and free from the aſſaults thereof, till wee reſt in the graue; therefore the children of God are content to forſake the world, because they can no otherwiſe forſake their ſins: and deſire rather to indure death, than they would haue ſinne to liue with them, as appeareth in the example of the Apoſtle Paul, Philippians 1. 22,23.

Sect.17.
concluſithe for-point.

And thus haue I ſhewed the wiſdome and power of God, who turneth euen the ſins of his children to their good, which are in their owne nature euill; and therefore though we are continually to bewaile them, and to deſire by all meanes to be freed from them, yet wee are not deſperately to ſinke vnder them, not daring to encounter them, ſeeing now they cannot condemne vs, nay not ſo much as hurt vs, but rather are ſo ordered by Gods al-wiſe prouidence, that they ſerue for the manifeſtation of his glory, and furthering of our ſaluation, ſo that wee doe not with willing delight nor ſlauiſh feare yeeld vnto them, but to the vttermoſt of our power make reſiſtance, and deſire and indeuour to ouercome them.

Sect.18.
laſt con-tion, taken victory aſinne.

Now in the fift and laſt place let vs conſider, that though our fleſh be neuer ſo ſtrong, and the innumerable corruptions thereof ſeeme vnreſiſtable, and though on the other ſide our ſpirituall man ſeeme neuer ſo weake and feeble, yet wee are not hereby to be diſcouraged, ſeeing the regenerate part ſhall moſt certainly obtain the victory in the end, though in the conflict it receiueth many foiles. And though this little Dauid ſeeme in the eyes of a carnall Saul, to bee farre too weake, and altogether vnable to encounter that great Goliah, the fleſh with the powerfull luſts thereof, yet in the end it will moſt certainly preuaile and get the conqueſt; becauſe the ſpirit is the Lords champion which goeth out in the Name of the Lord to fight againſt his enemies; the fleſh the Deuils Souldier who is Gods enemy: That is ſtrengthened and ſupported with the power of God which being infinite is vnreſiſtable; this, by the ſtrength of Satan and the world, whoſe power is infinite, and ſo reſtrained and ouerruled by Gods might, that they cannot ſtirre without his leaue and permiſſion. Vnleſſe therefore we would blaſphemouſly imagine, that the fleſh and its aſſiſtants are of greater power than God himſelfe, or that God will ſuffer this diſgrace, that his champion ſhould be ouerthrowne by his profeſſed enemies; we may moſt certainly aſſure our ſelues that wee ſhall get the day and obtaine a famous victory. And therefore let not Satan diſcourage vs, by ſetting before our eyes our owne weakneſſe, and the mightie oppoſitions which are made againſt vs; but arming our ſelues with the Chriſtian armour, and truſting wholly in the power of Gods might, let vs valiantly incounter our ſpirituall enemies, and neuer giue ouer fighting til by death we haue giuen vnto them a final ouerthrow, and ſo ſhall we be crowned with an vnualuable crowne of immortall glory.

CHAP. VIII.

Satans tentations drawne from our ſlow progreſſe in ſanctification, anſwered.

§. *Sect.*1.
Satans tentation grounded vpon our little profiting in Chriſtianitie.

AND ſo much for anſwering Satans tentations, drawne from the reliques of ſin which remaine in vs, and the ſmall meaſure of our ſanctification. The ſecond tentation whereby he laboureth to diſcourage the weake Chriſtian, from going forward in his courſe of true godlineſſe, he taketh from his ſlow progreſſe and ſlacke proceedings in ſanctification, vpon which occaſion hee thus aſſaulteth him. Thou laboureſt much (will hee ſay) and toyleſt thy ſelfe with intolerable paines that thou mayeſt become a ſanctified man, but all in vaine; for though thou heareſt the word often, and readeſt much, and prayeſt continually, and beateſt thy braines with daily care, to the end that thou mayeſt attaine vnto ſome perfection in Chriſtianitie; yet, doeſt thou not perceiue how little thou profiteſt by al thy labours, ſeeing thy knowledge is ſtill ſmall, thy faith weake, thy charitie cold, thy heart dull and hard, thy good workes few and imperfect, and all thy zealous reſolutions eaſily hindred, and quite ouerthrowne with euery ſmall tentation? Why then doeſt thou ſtriue againſt the ſtreame, and vndertake a taske which is to thee, not onely hard, but euen impoſſible? For doe what thou canſt, yet all will be to little purpoſe, ſeeing this worke is full of great difficulties, thy ſelfe diſabled with manifold corruptions; and thy enemies which oppoſe againſt thee exceeding ſtrong and mightie, as thy ſelfe findeſt by lamentable experience, and thy much labouring and little profiting, doe cleerely proue. Ceaſe therefore thy bootleſſe trauell, and rather imbrace thy pleaſing delights, then turmoile thy ſelfe with vaine labour.

§. *Sect.*2.
That the diſlike of our dulnes and backwardneſſe is accepted of God.

For the anſwering of which tentation wee are to know, that if wee diſlike our owne dulneſſe and backwardneſſe in profiting and growing forward in ſanctification; if wee bee truly ſorrowfull and bewaile our great wants and imperfections, & labour earneſtly in the vſe of the meanes whereby wee may attaine vnto knowledge, faith, and all other ſanctifying graces, & alſo be inabled to bring forth the fruits of holy obedience; then are wee accepted of God, and ſhall in the end moſt certainly obtaine our deſire, though yet we can ſee but ſmall profit of all our labours; neither ſhall all the power of our ſpirituall enemies ſo farre preuaile againſt vs, as vtterly to hinder vs in this worke, but that we ſhall vndoubtedly goe forward, although not ſo ſpeedily as wee deſire. For this holy deſire of profiting in godlines, and this indeuour uour and carefull vſe of thoſe meanes which are ordained by God for this purpoſe, are not naturall, but the worke of Gods Spirit begun in vs; & we are with the Apoſtle to be perſwaded of this ſame thing: that he that hath begun this good worke in vs will performe it vntill the day of Ieſus Chriſt. *Phil.*1,6. We are to aſſure our ſelues with the Prophet Dauid, that the Lord will fulfill theſe holy deſires of thoſe that feare him, *Pſal.*145.19. Wee are vndoubtedly to beleeue that the Lord will not ſuffer vs to bee tempted about our power, but will giue a good iſſue with the tentation. 1.*Cor.*10,13. We are not to imagine, that he will breake this bruiſed reed, nor quench this ſmoking flaxe, ſeeing he hath promiſed the contrary, *Matth.*12.20. And though this little graine of muſtard ſeed for a time lie hidden in the earth, and when it ſprouteth vp, ſpringeth ſo ſlowly that wee cannot ſenſibly diſcerne the growing thereof; yet in Gods good time being watered with the dew of his holy Spirit, it will become one of the greateſt trees in the Lords Garden. For ſeeing hee hath giuen vs this grace, not to bee wanting in the vſe of all good meanes, wee may moſt certainly aſſure our ſelues, that hee for his part will not bee wanting, in giuing his bleſſing and granting the aſſiſtance of his holy Spirit, which hee hath promiſed to thoſe that deſire it.

Secondly, let vs conſider that theſe ſmall beginnings of grace and firſt fruits of the ſpirit, are moſt vndoubted ſignes that he dwelleth in vs: now whereſoeuer he dwelleth, he ſanctifieth his owne lodging, and is not idle till hee haue effected this worke which hee hath vndertaken and begun. Though therefore this worke, in regard of thy ſlow proceedings ſeeme hard, yea, euen impoſſibile, yet conſider, that that which is impoſſible to man, is poſſible to God: though thou ſeeſt many difficulties and mighty oppoſitions by thy powerfull enemies, yet let not this diſcourage thee, ſeeing the Lord who is with thee is almightie, and therefore able to repell the violence of all oppoſers, and to make the moſt heauy and pinching yoke, light and eaſie. Though in thy ſelfe thou art moſt weak and feeble, yet thou art ſtrong in the power of Gods might, and enabled to doe all things through the helpe of Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth thee.

§. *Sect.*4. That the Lord hath as certainly decreed and promiſed our ſanctification as our ſaluation.

Thirdly, let vs conſider, that as the Lord hath decreed our ſaluation, and promiſed vnto vs eternall life: ſo hee hath alſo as certainly decreed and promiſed the meanes tending thereunto, which are the effects of his election and the fore-runners of our ſaluation; but one eſpeciall effect of his election is our ſanctification, and the way to ſaluation is the path of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, and therefore this is no leſſe certainly aſſured vnto vs, that wee ſhall be ſanctified and enabled to walke in this way of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, then that wee are elected and ſhall be ſaued. Though then wee are weake and vnſtable, yet the foundation of God remaineth euer ſure; though in regard of our owne feebleneſſe, and manifold imperfections, the worke of ſanctification ſeeme altogether impoſſible, yet this ſhould not mooue vs to doubting nor diſcourage vs in our courſe, ſeeing it hath not any ground vpon our owne ſtrength, but vpon Gods immutable decree, and neuer failing promiſes. When then our ſmall progreſſe in true godlineſſe, cauſed through the violence of our corruptions and oppoſitions of our ſpirituall enemies diſcourageth vs, making this worke of ſanctification ſeeme impoſſible, let vs call to mind that the Lord hath as certainly decreed that wee ſhould bee his Saints heere vpon earth, as his Saints in Heauen; that hee hath moſt faithfully promiſed, that he will direct vs with his holy Spirit, take away from vs our ſtony hearts and giue vs fleſhy hearts, illuminate our blinde vnderſtandings with true ſauing knowledge, indue vs with a liuely faith, and with all other ſanctifying graces, enable vs to performe in ſome meaſure holy obedience to his heauenly will, mortifying our corruptions, and enabling vs to ſerue him in newneſſe of life; all which gracious promiſes we are as vndoubtedly to beleeue, as thoſe which concerne either the remiſſion of our ſins, or euerlaſting happineſſe. And therefore though our owne dulneſſe, backwardneſſe, and little profiting in ſanctification, ſhould worke in vs true ſorrow, yet this ſhould not diſcourage vs, doubting of the iſſue of all our labours, but knowing that God is alike true in al his promiſes, let vs, ſetting aſide all difficulties, beleeue againſt beliefe, and vndoubtedly perſwade our ſelues that the Lord will finiſh that good worke which he hath begun in vs, though as yet it hath but ſmall proceedings, if we hunger after more perfection, and carefully vſe the meanes whereby wee may attaine to true holineſſe.

Chap. IX.

Satans tentations whereby he aggrauateth our ſinnes in generall, anſwered.

ANd ſo much concerning thoſe tentations of Satan, which he groundeth vpon our naturall corruptions and our ſmall meaſure of ſanctification. Now we are to ſpeake of ſuch as hee ſuggeſteth after we haue committed ſome actuall ſinnes: and theſe are either in reſpect of our ſins in generall, or elſe ſome ſpeciall ſin into which wee haue fallen. Concerning the firſt, when the weake Chriſtian (who hath a tender conſcience, and therefore cannot be perſwaded to lie ſecurely in his ſinne) hath through the ſtrength of his owne corruptions, and violence of his tentations, committed any ſinne againſt his knowledge and conſcience, then doth the tempter (who before his fall exceedingly extenuated and minced his ſin, now after that he is falne into it) out of meaſure aggrauate the grieuouſneſſe and hainouſnes of his offence, partly in reſpect of the nature and qualitie of the ſin it ſelfe, and partly in reſpect of the circumſtances, as being committed after his calling, againſt his knowledge, in ſuch a time or place, and by ſuch a perſon, as God is thereby moſt diſhonoured, and his brethren offended by his bad example. And thus hauing as it were ſtretched out his ſinne vpon the tentars of his tentations, and with the blaſts of his falſe ſuggeſtions made of euery ſmall drop a great bubble, then doth he alſo ſet before him the curſe of the Law, Gods fearefull judgements, the plagues and puniſhments of this life, and euerlaſting death and condemnation in the life to come, continually accuſing and terrifying him as being guiltie of all theſe fearefull euils by reaſon of his ſinnes, to the end that hereby being vtterly diſcouraged, he may deſperatly caſt off all care of continuing in his former courſe of godlineſſe, as if now it were altogether in vaine and to no purpoſe.

The which tentation if we would withſtand in the day of triall, it behooueth vs not to reſt in the remembrance of our former faith and repentance, but as we haue renued our ſin, ſo alſo muſt wee renew our ſorrow for it, bewayling our corruptions, which haue ſo preuailed againſt vs as to mooue vs to tranſgreſſe Gods Commandements, hating and deteſting our ſinne into which wee haue falne, and purpoſing for the time to come to leaue and forſake it, and to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and newneſſe of life. And this our repentance wee muſt approue to bee vnfained by thoſe fruites thereof which the Apoſtle mentioneth, 2. Cor. 7. 9. 10, 11. that is, wee muſt ſtudy and endeuour to amend, confeſſe our ſinne vnto God in all humilitie, and moſt earneſtly craue remiſſion both of the fault and puniſhment, haue a godly indignation againſt our ſelues becauſe we haue ſinned, and a ſonne-like feare, not ſo much in reſpect of the puniſhment, as of offending and diſpleaſing God our moſt gracious louing Father; and an earneſt deſire that wee may be ſo renued, that wee be not againe ſo ouertaken; a more feruent zeale in louing God and keeping his Commandements then before our fall; and laſtly, wee muſt take a holy reuenge of our ſelues, thereby ſo taming our fleſh, that it may not hereafter bee ſo powerfull in vs, as to ouercome and lead vs captiue vnto ſinne. And thus hauing renued our repentance, we muſt alſo renue our faith, by applying vnto our ſelues all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell, concerning life and ſaluation in Chriſt Ieſus, made vnto all repentant ſinners; and by calling to our remembrance that Chriſt the juſt hath borne the puniſhment due vnto vs who were vnjuſt; that by his death and merits he hath fully ſatisfied Gods juſtice, appeaſed his wrath, and waſhed away our ſinnes with his bloud; that he hath fulfilled the Law for vs, and taken vpon him our curſe, that wee in him might bee bleſſed; that by ſuffering for vs, he hath freed vs from all puniſhments of this life and the life to come; that he euer liueth to make interceſſion for vs; ſo that though we ſinne, yet there is no feare of condemnation, ſeeing wee haue an Aduocate with the Father, Ieſus Chriſt the juſt, who is the reconciliation for our ſinnes, 1. Iohn 2. 1, 2.

1. Iohn 2. 1, 2.

§. Sect. 3. Satans tentation perſwading vs that we are ſtill in the fleſh.

But here the tempter will object vnto the weake Chriſtian, that theſe promiſes of the Goſpell can yeeld vnto him no ſound comfort, ſeeing they are reſtrained to thoſe onely who are members of Chriſt Ieſus, in which number are none but thoſe who are regenerate, renued, and gouerned by Gods Spirit, according to that Rom. 8. 1. There is no condemnation to thoſe which are in Chriſt Ieſus, which walke not after the fleſh but after the ſpirit. But thou (wil he ſay) are not in Chriſt, for being ingrafted in this Vine, thou wouldeſt bring forth the Grapes of godlineſſe, whereas there ſpringeth nothing from thee but the briars & brambles of iniquity; neither walkeſt thou after the ſpirit, for then in thy life thou wouldeſt ſhew the fruites thereof, but after the fleſh, which wholly ouerruleth thee and caſteth thee headlong into all ſinne and wickedneſſe.

Rom. 8. 1.

§. Sect. 4. What it is to walke after the fleſh and after the ſpirit.

For the anſwering of which tentation we are to know, that it is not the committing of a ſin or of many ſins, which proueth that wee walke not after the ſpirit but after the fleſh, (for ſo ſhould all the children of God be carnall and not ſpirituall, yea euen the Apoſtle Paul himſelfe, who complained that hee did the euill which he hated, and found no meanes to doe that which was good, but when he would doe good, euill was preſent with him: and that there was a law in his members warring againſt the law of his mind, which led him captiue vnto the law of ſin) but to walke after the fleſh is willingly to obey it in the luſts thereof; to commit ſin with pleaſure and delight; to embrace that which is euill with full conſent of will cheerfully and with all readines; to run headlong into wickedneſſe ſtubbornly, preſumptuouſly and ſecurely; to haue ſin not only dwelling, but alſo raigning in our mortall bodies; to liue therein without repentance, ne-

Rom. 7.

uer grieuing for it, nor endeuouring to forſake it, yea rather greatly louing and making ſuch high account of it, that we had rather part with our liues then be diuorced from our ſinnes. Whoſoeuer therefore through his weakeneſſe and infirmities is led captiue vnto ſinne, and being enthralled by this tyrant earneſtly deſireth libertie, and doth not willingly run but is violently drawne by Satans tentations and his owne corruptions, and hauing ſinned is not therewith delighted, but exceedingly grieued that by his ſinne he hath diſpleaſed God; and ſeeing his owne weakeneſſe and infirmities doth bewaile them, and flieth vnto God by feruent prayer, deſiring the aſſiſtance of his holy Spirit, whereby he may be enabled to mortifie his fleſh and the corruptions thereof which he deadly hateth, and to ſerue God in holineſſe and newneſſe of life; ſuch a one may aſſure himſelfe that he walketh not after the fleſh but after the ſpirit, and that hee is in Chriſt Ieſus, and hath eſcaped condemnation, though through his infirmitie and ſtrength of his inbred corruptions he falleth often into ſinne.

§. Sect. 5. The differẽces betweene the ſinnes of the regenerate man and the vnregenerate.

Though therefore the ſanctified man ſinneth, yet this doth not proue that he is ſtill in the fleſh and vnregenerate; ſeeing there is great difference betweene his ſinnes into which he now falleth, and thoſe which hee committed before he was ſanctified, or thoſe which they commit which ſtill liue in the fleſh. For firſt, the vnregenate man doth continually ſinne, heaping vp one wickedneſſe vpon another, the man regenerate but ſometimes, when hee is ouercome by his corruptions; the wicked man committeth ſinne with greedineſſe, the godly man with ſome kinde of irkſomneſſe and after a ſort vnwillingly; the one drawes ſinne vnto him as it were with cartropes, the other is violently drawne to ſin with the ſtrength of his corruptions; the one hunteth after ſin and the occaſions thereof, the other is hunted by ſinne and Satans tentations, till being out of breath and fainting for wearineſſe he is ouertaken and led priſoner. The carnal man ſinneth with full conſent of will, and with pleaſure and delight, the ſpirituall man doth not yeeld without ſome reſiſtance of the regenerate part, as it were grudgingly and with the miſliking of the ſpirit, hee that is vnregenerate ſuffereth ſinne to raigne in him, and yeeldeth vnto it ſuch willing and heartie obedience as the loyall ſubiect doth to his lawfull King, but the ſanctified man obeyeth it as though it were an vſurping tyrant, repiningly and by conſtraint, rather drawne with force, then moued by any loue or liking. The wicked man committeth ſinne vpon deliberation, aduiſedly and of ſet purpoſe; but the regenerate man for the moſt part ſuddenly, beſides his purpoſe, and contrarie to his reſolution. The vngodly mans heart and conſcience ſeldome or neuer controlls him for his ſin, or if it doe, yet it ſuddenly vaniſheth like a flaſh of lightning; but there is a fight in the heart of the godly man, the carnall part drawing one way, and the ſpirituall part another. When the carnall worldling offendeth hee is in his common way, for he maketh an occupation of committing ſin; but when the regenerate man ſinneth hee is out of his courſe, and is neuer at reſt till hee commeth into his way of righteouſneſſe againe; when the wicked man hath committed one ſinne, that is an argument to moue him to commit another, becauſe iudgement is deferred, and hee hath eſcaped puniſhment; but the true Chriſtian (like one who runneth a race for ſome great wager) if he ſtumble and fall, when hee riſeth againe he doth more carefully looke to his feete, and ſtriueth to runne the more ſwiftly in the way of righteouſneſſe, that ſo he may redeeme with more then vſuall ſpeed the loſt time wherein hee was hindred by his fall. Finally, the vnregenerate man being fallen into the puddle of ſin, doth wallow therein with pleaſure and delight, and neuer ſtriues to riſe againe by amendment of life: but the man regenerate though hee fall, yet hee riſeth vp againe by true repentance and neuer reſteth till hee haue throughly waſhed his polluted ſoule with the blood of Chriſt applied vnto him by a liuely faith. The one remembreth his ſins which he hath committed, with gladneſſe and reioycing, yea bragging and boaſting of his outragious wickedneſſe, the other neuer thinketh vpon them but with griefe and ſorrow, neither is there any thing in the world whereof hee is more aſhamed than of his ſinnes. Seeing therefore there is ſuch great and manifold differences betwene the ſinnes of the ſanctified and thoſe who are vnſanctified, let not Satan perſwade vs that wee are ſtill in the fleſh and vnregenerate, becauſe will wee nill wee, wee often fall into ſin, if in our manner of ſinning wee can finde theſe differences, which we neuer diſcerned in former times.

Eccl.8.11.

Chap. X.

Satans tentations taken from particular ſinnes into which we haue fallen, anſwered.

§. Sect. That ſinn committed after repẽ tance vs not fro pardon.

ANd ſo much cõcerning thoſe tentations which Satan ſuggeſteth in reſpect of our ſins in general. Now wee are to ſpeake of ſuch as concerne particular ſins, and theſe are of two ſorts; for either Satan ſeeketh to ouerthrow our faith, and to diſcourage vs from going forward in our courſe of godlineſſe, by ſetting before vs and exceedingly aggrauating thoſe ſins which indeed wee haue committed, or by perſwading vs falſely that we haue committed ſuch ſinnes, as being vnpardonable are not incident to the child of God. The former ſort of tentations are taken either from ſome hainous ſin once committed, or from the often falling into the ſame ſin. Concerning the firſt, he aggrauateth the ſins of the faithfull two eſpeciall wayes, either becauſe they haue beene committed after repentāce, or voluntarily againſt knowledge and conſcience. In the former reſpect he is ready to ſuggeſt, that the children of God do not commit any ſin after they haue truely repented of it; and if any doe, either he neuer truly repented, or if he did, yet after his fall there is no place to a ſecond repentance, nor hope of Gods mercie. For anſwering whereof we are to know, that howſoeuer the ſtate of thoſe who thus ſinne is ſomewhat dangerous, and they more hardly recouered then others (euen as thoſe diſeaſes are perillous and hardly cured, into which wee fall by a relapſe after the recouerie of health) yet this is incident to the children of God who haue truly repented, and notwithſtanding this grieuous kinde of falling they are not debarred of Gods mercie in Chriſt Ieſus. And this appeareth partly by reaſons, and partly by examples. For firſt, the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell concerning the remiſſion of ſins, are indefinite & without limitation of time, or ſins, whether committed before or after repentance. So Matth. 11.28. Come vnto me all yee that labour and are heauie laden, and I will eaſe you and 1. Iohn 2.1. 2. If any man ſinne, wee haue an aduocate with the Father, &c. In which and in many other places, the Lord aſſureth vs that he will receiue to mercy all repentant ſinners of what nature and qualitie ſoeuer their ſins are. Secondly, in the Law were ſacrifices appointed for the ſins of the people, not onely thoſe who were newly receiued into the Lords couenant for their ſins paſt, but alſo for thoſe ſins which were daily committed, after that they had long beene therein. Thirdly, the Lord enioyneth vs that we forgiue our brother ſeuentie times ſeuen times, if ſo often hee offend vs and repent of his fault; and therefore himſelfe much more, whoſe mercy is infinite, and more exceedeth ours than the whole ſea a little droppe, will pardon vs, if as wee often ſin, ſo alſo wee often turne vnto him by vnfained repentance. This alſo manifeſtly appeareth by examples: for did not the Prophet Dauid after his true conuerſion fall grieuouſly by committing murther and adultery, the Apoſtle Peter by denying his Lord and Sauiour, Noah by drunkenneſſe, Lot by inceſt? and yet afterwards they truly repented againe and were receiued to mercy. So that this point is cleere and manifeſt, that the deare childe of God, after his true conuerſion and vnfained repentance may fall into grieuous ſins, and yet truly repenting of them, may haue them remitted, and bee receiued againe into Gods wonted loue and fauour.

§. Sect. 2.
An obiection anſwered.
Heb. 6.4.5,6.

But heere the tempter will obiect that the Apoſtle affirmeth Heb. 6. 4.5. 6. That it is impoſſible that thoſe who haue beene once inlightned, &c. if they fall away, ſhould be renewed by repentance: ſeeing by ſo ſinning, they crucifie againe to themſelues the Sonne of God, and make a mocke of him. And therefore whoſoeuer ſinneth after his true conuerſion, can neither repent nor receiue mercie. To which wee muſt anſwere, that the Apoſtle in this place doth not ſpeak of euery falling into ſin, for ſo he ſhould be contrary to the other Scriptures before alleaged, but of a generall falling away by apoſtaſie, and of a malicious perſecuting of the knowne truth, which is the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, and is ioyned with continuall impenitencie, and therefore cannot be pardoned. And this appeareth manifeſtly by the words of the text; for hee doth not ſimply ſay, if hee fall into ſin, but if hee fall away, namely, by a generall and malicious apoſtaſie: and againe, hee ſheweth of what manner of falling hee meaneth in the words following, whereas he ſaith, that ſuch as thus fall away, crucifie vnto themſelues the ſon of God, and make a mocke of him. Now they are ſaid to crucifie Chriſt againe, who with an vnplacable hatred doe ſcorne and deride Chriſt crucified, renouncing all part and hope in his death and ſufferings, as did ſome of the malicious Iewes, and as ſome apoſtates doe in theſe dayes. And therefore this place maketh nothing againſt the repentance and receiuing to mercie of ſuch as fall through infirmitie into ſome particular ſinnes, though neuer ſo hainous.

§. Sect. 3.
That all ſins of knowledge are not preſumptuous.

And ſo much for anſwering Satans tentations drawne from our ſinnes committed after repentance. The ſecond ſort are taken from ſinnes committed voluntarilie againſt our knowledge and conſcience; which if we haue fallen into, he preſently ſuggeſteth that wee haue ſinned preſumptuouſly againſt God, and therefore cannot be reckoned in the number of Gods Children, nor conceiue any hope of pardon and forgiueneſſe. For the anſwering of which tentation, wee are to know theſe two things, firſt, that all ſins committed againſt knowledge and conſcience, are not preſumptuous: ſecondly, that though wee ſhould fall into preſumptuous ſinnes, yet wee may bee the children of God, who are neither debarred of true repentance, nor of Gods mercie. For the firſt, we are to know that not the hainouſneſſe of the ſinne committed maketh it to be preſumptuous, but the manner of the fact, and the minde of the offender; for howſoeuer Peter fell grieuouſly, yet wee cannot ſay that he fell preſumptuouſly becauſe he ſinned through infirmitie and feare of danger, whereas to ſin preſumptuouſly, is to ſin of a ſtubborne wilfulneſſe, either through the neglect of Gods iuſtice and iudgements, or through the abuſe of his mercy and benefits. In the firſt reſpect they offend, who hauing diuers times themſelues ſinned, and yet eſcaped puniſhment, or hauing ſeene others in the like caſe, doe take occaſion thereby to ſinne againe, hoping to eſcape as in former times: and of ſuch the Wiſe man ſpeaketh, Eccleſ. 8.11. Becauſe ſentence againſt an euill work is not executed ſpeedily, therefore the heart of the children of men is fully ſet in them to doe euill. In the other reſpect, ſuch offend as take occaſion vpon Gods mercy and long ſuffering to fall into ſinne, preſuming before they commit it, that God vpon their repentance will in his infinit mercy forgiue them: and thus they abuſe Gods mercie and goodneſſe which ſhould leade them to repentance, as an argument to make them more deſperately to run into all wickedneſſe. So that to ſin preſumptuouſly, is not to ſin vpon knowledge, and againſt a mans conſcience onely, vnleſſe there bee ioyned therewith a preſumptuous hope to eſcape puniſhment, or that notwithſtanding the ſinne committed, he ſhall receiue pardon in reſpect of Gods infinite mercie. Now many of Gods children may fall againſt their knowledge and conſcience, and yet not preſume either to eſcape Gods iudgements, or to be partakers of his mercy, as namely thoſe who are carried headlong into a ſinne without any time of deliberation through the violence of their corruptions, or ouercome by feare of ſome preſent danger, or ſome other vnruly paſſion.

What it is to ſin preſumptuouſly.

*Eccleſ.*8.11.

*Rom.*2.4.

§.*Sect.*4.
That ſinnes of knowledge are pardonable.

But heere the tempter will obiect, that though theſe ſinnes againſt knowledge and conſcience bee not preſumptuous, yet they are vnpardonable, ſeeing the committers of them haue no part in Chriſts ſacrifice, and conſequently can hope for no mercie at Gods hands. And this he will endeuour to prooue by that ſaying of the Apoſtle, Heb. 10. 26. For if wee ſinne willingly after that we haue receiued the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſinnes, but a fearfull looking for of iudgement, &c. For the anſwering whereof, we are to know, that the Apoſtle in his doctrine is not contrary to our Sauiour Chriſt: but he hath taught vs, that not onely ſins againſt knowledge are pardonable vnto thoſe who are truly repentant, but euen horrible blaſphemies againſt the Maieſtie of God, yea, all ſinnes whatſoeuer, ſauing the ſin aganſt the holy Ghoſt, Matth. 12.31.32. Secondly, we know by experience, that both Dauid & Peter fell grieuouſly againſt their knowledge and conſcience, wittingly, and in a ſort willingly, and yet they both repented and were receiued to mercie. And therefore the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of all kinde of voluntarie falling, but firſt of ſinne committed with full conſent of will, pleaſure and delight: the which kinde of ſinnes are neuer committed by Gods children after their true conuerſion: for as they are in part carnall and vnregenerate, ſo are they in part ſpirituall and regenerate, which is to bee vnderſtood, not onely of the vnderſtanding part, but alſo of the wil and affections. So farre forth therefore as their will is regenerate, they doe not will nor yeeld vnto ſin; and though they conſent vnto ſinne, yet this conſent is not abſolute and intire, but with ſome diſlike, grudging, and reſiſtance of the ſpirituall part; the which diſlike and reſiſtance, though ſometimes it cannot eaſily be diſcerned in the very act of ſinne, whereas the weake motions of the ſpirit are violently ouerborne, through the raging ſtrength of their naturall corruptions, and ſo ouerſhadowed by the cloudy miſts which their vnruly paſſions caſt before their vnderſtanding, that they cannot at all perceiue any diſlike or reſiſtance againſt the tentation: yet after the ſinne is committed, and they are by the good motions of the ſpirit againe reuiued out of their deadly ſwound, then do they hate and deteſt that ſinne which before ſeemed pleaſant vnto them, and earneſtly deſire with the Apoſtle to be freed from it. Laſtly, the Apoſtle in that place doth not ſpeake of euery particular ſin committed with ful conſent of will, for ſo alſo the elect offend before their conuerſion, but of a generall & malicious apoſtaſie from the knowne truth, and a ſcornfull reiecting of the ſacrifice of Chriſt once offered for ſinne. So that the ſenſe is thus much, that if wee wilfully and maliciouſly ſinne, by renouncing the ſacrifice of Chriſt offered for ſinne, we cannot hope to be ſaued by any other ſacrifice,, but are to expect iudgment and condemnation, ſeeing ſuch tread vnder foote the ſon of God, and count the blood of the teſtament an vnholy thing, and euen deſpite the ſpirit of grace, as hee explaneth himſelfe in the verſes following.

*Heb.*10.26.

*Mat.*12.3

And ſo much concerning the firſt queſtion. The ſecond is whether the Chriſtian man may fall into preſumptuous ſinns; and if hee doe, whether they bee pardonable or no. For the firſt, though it muſt needs bee confeſſed that it is a fearefull caſe, to neglect

Gods iuſtice and iudgements becauſe of his longſuffering, or to take occaſion vpon the abundance of Gods mercies and readineſſe to forgiue, to prouoke him continually by our ſinnes; yet it cannot be denied, but that a true Chriſtian, through the ſtrength of his inbred corruptions, may fall into theſe preſumptuous ſinnes; neither is there any priuiledge in the holy Scriptures to exempt them from any ſinne whatſoeuer, but that either before or after their conuerſion they may fall into it, ſauing only that vnpardonable ſinne which is committed againſt the holy Ghoſt. Moreouer, Dauid prayeth the Lord to keepe him from preſumptuous ſins, and that he would not ſuffer them to raigne ouer him, Pſalme 19. 13. where firſt hee ſheweth that of himſelfe hee was apt to fall into ſuch ſinnes, if the Lord did not preſerue him from them; and ſecondly hee implieth, that the Lord might for good cauſes known vnto himſelfe, ſuffer him to commit theſe ſinnes of preſumption, and therefore hee further prayeth that if hee ſhould fall into ſuch ſinnes, it would pleaſe the Lord to raiſe him by true repentance, and not ſuffer them to rule and raigne in him. Wherby it appeareth that a true Chriſtian may fall into theſe ſinnes: now, that hauing fallen hee may riſe againe by true repentance, and receiue pardon and forgiueneſſe, it is likewiſe manifeſt. For if once the Lord receiue vs into the couenant of grace, and acknowledge vs for his children, nothing in the world, no not the moſt grieuous ſinnes which wee can fall into, can ſeparate vs from the loue of God which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh Rom. 8. 38. 39. Secondly, our Sauiour telleth vs, that euery ſinne and blaſphemie ſhall be forgiuen vnto man, vpon true repentance ſauing onely the blaſphemie againſt the Spirit, which is alwayes ioyned with finall impenitencie, Matth. 12. 31. 32. Thirdly, the promiſes of the Goſpell are generall and indefinite, excluding no ſorts of ſinnes whatſoeuer, ſo they performe the condition of faith and repentance. And therefore alſo preſumptuous ſinners, repenting and beleeuing, are aſſured of mercie and forgiueneſſe. Laſtly, if Dauid might fall into theſe ſinnes; then Dauid alſo might repent and receiue pardon, ſeeing hee was truly iuſtified, ſanctified, and a choſen veſſell of the Lord, elected to euerlaſting life.

It is a

And ſo much concerning the tentations which are taken from thoſe ſinnes which are once committed. Now wee are to ſpeake of them which he ſuggeſteth vnto the weak conſcience, after the committing of one and the ſame ſinne diuers times. Vpon which occaſion hee is ready to perſwade the weake Chriſtian, that hee neuer truly repented, otherwiſe hee would neuer againe fall into the ſame ſinne; and that howſoeuer the child of God may fall into diuers ſinnes, through want of care and experience, yet it is not incident to any of this number to fall againe and againe into the ſame wickedneſſe, after they haue had warning and ſufficient knowledge of the euils thereof. For the anſwering whereof wee are to know, that in truth it is a grieuous and fearefull caſe to be thus ouertaken, and to be ſo beſotted with the pleaſures of ſinne, that neither inſtruction, nor our owne experience can make vs to ſee the euils of it, and worke in vs a care to auoide and ſhunne it. The burnt childe (as the prouerbe is) dreadeth the fire; he that hath beene deceiued and thereby much indamaged, is afterwards more warie; he that hath caſt himſelfe into any grieuous diſeaſe through ſome vnwholeſome meates, is euer after more careful of his diet: hee that hath once beene aſſaulted by his enemie at vnawares, and hath receiued grieſly wounds, will after hee is cured goe better armed and furniſhed, that hee may not againe be ouertaken of the like danger. And therefore ſeeing experience of all other euils doth teach vs to auoid them, what a lamentable thing is this, that no warning will make vs take heed of ſinne, which is the greateſt euill and cauſe of all the reſt? that hauing drunke this deadly poyſon and beene grieuouſly ſicke thereof in our conſciences, wee ſhould being recouered be inticed with the pleaſant taſte thereof to ſwallow it downe againe? and that hauing receiued grieuous wounds, wee ſhould after take no better heede and goe no better armed and prepared to make reſiſtance, but for want of care and watchfulneſſe expoſe our ſelues againe to the like danger of our ſpirituall enemies? Adde alſo heereunto that the cure of theſe relapſes is difficult and full of daunger, and will require much paines and labour, many ſalt teares and bitter groanes. To which purpoſe one ſaith that by the wounds & fractures of the body and bones wee may gueſſe at the infirmity and diſeaſes of the ſoule: For if a mans hand or foot bee broken it is not reſtored to its former abilities without much labour. But if the part bee often broken in the ſame place, your Charitie may eaſily conceiue with how bitter griefe ſuch wounds are cured, and yet after long and many troubles hardly can the members bee recouered to their wonted ſtate: And the like reaſon wee muſt beleeue there is in curing the wounds and fractures of our ſoules. But yet we are to know that this ſometimes, through our great frailty and corruption, may bee the eſtate of a true Chriſtian and faithfull ſeruant of God, to fall againe and againe into the ſame ſinne, neither doth any thing pri-

That the child of God may fal often into the ſame ſin, and yet be receiued to mercy uiledge them from committing that ſinne againe which they haue once committed. For firſt, the ſame inbred corruption ſtill dwelleth in them, and is readie againe to giue them the foile and to leade them captiue into the ſame ſinne, if the Lord vphold them not, ſo that in reſpect of their owne ſtrength they may fall againe as in former times. Secondly, the ſame cauſes ſtill remaine which may mooue the Lord to leaue them to themſelues, and ſuffer them to fall, namely that hereby they may be more humbled, and more ſeriouſly bewaile their corruptions, that they may more earneſtly implore his mercie, and he more manifeſt it in pardoning their Sins to the prayſe of his glory. Thirdly, howſoeuer this is not vſuall with the children of God, to fall diuers times into a Sin which is great and grieuous, yet euery one findeth in his owne experience that hee often committeth ſuch ſins as are not ſo hainous, through infirmitie and weakneſſe; as to heare the word negligently and careleſly, to be diſtracted with wandring thoughts in prayer, to fall into vnjuſt anger, to lie and vſe idle communication and ſuch like, of which notwithſtanding repenting hee is receiued vnto mercie. So that it is not the often falling into the ſame Sin, that excludeth vs out of the number of Gods children, or debarreth vs of pardon, ſo that we often repent and lay hold vpon Chriſt with a liuely faith. Neither doe the Scriptures limit and reſtraine Gods mercy, and the vertue of Chriſts merits, to the pardoning and taking away of diuers Sins, once committed, but extend them alſo to the ſame Sin committed diuers times, yea to all Sins whatſoeuer of which we truly repent.

§. Sect. 7. Of the examples of the faithfull who haue relapſed into the ſame ſins, & of the differences betweene their relapſes and thoſe of the wicked.

Againe the examples of the Scriptures doe manifeſtly ſhew, that the faithfull themſelues and deare children of God, may oftener than once fall into the ſame Sinnes, although it be not ordinary with them, eſpecially in great Sins committed in fact; where they haue any time of deliberation, or of arming themſelues againſt them. Thus Abraham twice denied his wife and affirmed her to be his Siſter. Ioſeph diuers times ſwore by the life of Pharaoh. Iob often falls into the Sin of impatiencie. Dauid into the Sin of lying and diſſembling; and Ionas into turbulent paſſions, anger and diſcontent. But here the tempter will ſuggeſt that if the faithfull and the wicked fall alike into the ſame Sins, yea, are both alike ſubject to relapſe often into them, then there is no difference betweene them, and therefore no great reaſon why any ſhould too much trouble themſelues when they fall againe, and againe into their beloued Sins, ſeeing it is incident to the beſt as well as to the worſt. To which I anſwere that though the faithfull may fall oftener then once into the ſame Sins, yet there is great difference betweene their falls and the relapſes of the wicked. For firſt they differ in the cauſes, ſeeing the godly fall through negligence and want of care in keeping the ſpirituall watch: the wicked, who only abſtaine from their beloued Sins, out of carnall feare of loſſe or puniſhment, or worldly hope of gaine and aduantage, doe deſire to commit their Sinnes againe out of their loue vnto them, watching for all opportunities when they may return vnto their euill courſes, without any danger of their feares, or prejudice to their hopes.

Secondly, they differ in their manner of falling into the ſame ſins. For the faithfull herein finde in themſelues ſome reluctancie and conflict, whileſt the Spirit oppoſeth and luſteth againſt the fleſh, the one approuing, the other diſallowing, the one willing, the other nilling; the one louing and delighting in, the other hating and loathing the ſin into which they are falling or already falne: whereas a wicked man hath no ſuch conflict but falleth into his ſinne againe and againe with full conſent of will, and with much pleaſure and delight; or if there bee in him any conflict at all, it is not in the ſame faculties, as the judgement againſt the judgement, the will againſt the wil, the affection againſt the affection, as it is alwayes in the conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit: but betweene diuers faculties, as the vnderſtanding and the will, the conſcience and the paſſions and carnall concupiſcence. Againe, the godly fall ſuddenly, being ſurprized before they bee aware, by ſome ſudden paſſion which tranſporteth them out of their vſuall way, and for the time maketh them to be not themſelues, like one taken captiue of the ſame enemy by ſome cunning ſtratagem or ſecret ambuſhment; but the wicked vpon ſerious deliberation wherein they preferre the pleaſures or profits of the ſin which they intend to commit, before the hurt and diſaduantage. Finally, it is no common practice of the godly to fall often into the ſame ſinnes which are hainous in fact, howſoeuer being full of imperfections in their ſanctification, they cannot but faile many times in their beſt actions, and fall often into many ſinnes through frailtie and infirmitie: But the wicked doe commonly and ordinarily fall into the ſame ſinne, which they finde pleaſant or gainfull, and do walke in it as in their vſuall and common way.

Thirdly, there is great difference in them in reſpect of the effects; for firſt though the godly may diuers times commit the ſame ſinne, yet they doe not lie in it, but as often as they fall, ſo often alſo they riſe againe, by vnfained repentance, taking occaſion thereby to renew their couenant with God, as they haue renewed their ſins: But the wicked falling often do ſecurely liue in their ſins without ſhame or ſorrow, or purpoſe of amendment, vnleſſe they bee rowſed out of it; by ſome heauier iudgement, or the terrour of ſome approching euill.

Secondly, the faithfull though they may fall diuers times, yet they alwayes get ground of their ſinnes and make aduantage by their fals, both for the weakning of the fleſh and ſubduing of their corruptions, and the ſtrengthening of the ſpirit, and their ſpirituall graces. For they conceiue of ſin as of their mortall enemy, and therefore the more often that they are ſurpriſed and led captiue by it, the more they hate it, the more carefully they keepe their Chriſtian watch, that they be not againe ouertaken by it; and if they bee, they take occaſion thereby of doubling their repentance as they haue doubled their ſins; the more conſcionable and diligent, they are in the vſe of the meanes whereby they may be armed againſt it, as applying preſeruatiues out of the word which will ſtrengthen them againſt the infection of ſuch a ſin, as hath ſo often tainted them, frequent and feruent prayers vnto God againſt it, and ſuch like: by all which holy exerciſes, as their corruptions are weakned, ſo the graces of Gods Spirit are much increaſed in them. And as a man that hath bin diuers times cheated with a coſener, will thereby grow the wiſer, ſhun his company and all dealing with him, or at leaſt more carefully watch ouer him that hee be not againe deceiued: ſo will the Chriſtian deale with that ſin, with the deceitfulneſſe whereof he hath beene often ouer-taken. Whereas a wicked man by frequent committing the ſame ſinne and not repenting of it, doth grow into familiar acquaintance and friendſhip with it, and by many acts groweth to an habit and cuſtome, which is as preualent as a ſecond nature; it being the nature of ſin to leaue alwaies a ſtaine and poyſonous taint behind it, which will daily more and more defile and mortally infect the Sinner, vnleſſe it be waſhed and purged out by true and vnfained repentance: So that in him corruption by his fals getteth ground daily in him, and the more hee ſinneth the more hee may ſin, vnleſſe it bee ſuch ſinnes as forſake him through debilitie of nature and want of meanes and opportunities, and then only he is hindred in the acts, but not purged from the loue of them. All power of reſiſtance is more and more weakned, yea all will to reſiſt is taken away; and whereas at firſt hee committed the ſinne with ſome conflict and pangs of conſcience, after he hath often falne, hee beginneth to excuſe, then to defend and iuſtifie his ſin, and ſoone after to commend and glory in it. And from hence wee may obſerue the laſt ſigne of difference betweene them; In that the godly man relapſing into the ſame ſin, miſliketh what he doth, and himſelfe for doing it, and therefore is neuer at reſt till hee haue recouered out of it, like a man who being forcibly led captiue by an enemy doth hate his bondage and him that cauſed it, being neuer at quiet till he be freed from it. Neither is it poſſible that hee ſhould willingly continue in this captiuitie, becauſe hee hath a naturall loue and propenſitie to his libertie, nor that hee ſhould abide in it if he recouer his ſtrength, whereby he is enabled to ouercome his enemy, as wee ſee in the example of Sampſon, who choſe rather to die with the Philiſtims, then to liue in bondage with them: And ſo the child of God neither will nor can liue in that ſinne which hath led him captiue vpon ſome diſaduantage, for with the Apoſtle, he doth the euill which he would not, yea which he hateth, neither can he continue in his Sin, becauſe there is a ſeed of ſpirituall grace and ſtrength which oppoſeth and ouercommeth his corruptions, and an inward principle of life which conquering his diſeaſe will bring him out of the ſwound of ſin, ſo as he cannot die in it: whereas a wicked man relapſing into ſin approueth what he doth, and ſo willingly continueth in it; he loueth and liketh his priſon and iaylour, and therfore deſireth not his liberty, nor to come out thraldome. Yea if by force or feare he be compelled to leaue it, yet ſtill it hath his heart, and hauing a naturall inclination to ſinne and auerſeneſſe to all goodneſſe, hee may directly contradict and inuert the ſpeech of the Apoſtle, and ſay, that he doth the good he hateth, and leaueth vndone the euill which hee loueth.

Chap. IX.

How Sathan laboureth to hinder and diſcourage the weake Chriſtian in the courſe of ſanctification, by caſting into his minde blaſphemous ſuggeſtions.

§. Sect. 1. Of the tentation of blaſphemies.

AND thus haue I anſwered Sathans tentations, drawne from thoſe ſins which the weake Chriſtian hath indeed falne into; but if he cannot ſo preuaile, then will hee falſely and maliciouſly accuſe them of thoſe ſins, which they neuer committed, or at leaſt not in that manner and meaſure as hee chargeth them. And theſe are principally of two ſorts; the firſt are impious ſuggeſtions, and horrible blaſphemies, directly againſt the Maieſtie of God himſelfe; the other is that vnpardonable Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt. Concerning the former; when as Sathan cannot ouercharge the conſcience of the weake Chriſtian, by ripping vp and aggrauating thoſe ſins which he hath in truth committed, nor cauſe him deſperately to deſiſt from going forward in the courſe of ſanctification; then he ſuggeſteth into his minde horrible blaſphemies againſt Gods Majeſtie, and continually turmoileth him with moſt impious thoughts, that hereby he may diſtract his minde from holy meditations, and vtterly diſcourage him in all Chriſtian exerciſes. And as the King of Moab when hee could not breake through the forces of the Iſraelites nor make them ſurceaſe their victorious fight, preſented vnto their view an horrible & abominable ſpectacle, ſacrificing vnto his Idols vpon the wall his deare Son and heire of his Kingdome, that being not able to indure ſuch an inhumane murther they might flee the ſight thereof, & giue ouer their victorious courſe; ſo when the Prince of darkneſſe is foiled in the ſpirituall fight, by our reſolued proceeding in the courſe of godlineſſe; for his laſt refuge he vſeth this Deuilliſh policie, to preſent vnto our cogitations moſt odious and helliſh blaſphemies, that ſo he may poſſeſſe our minds with horrour and feare, and may cauſe vs to make a ſtay in our Chriſtian race, and to turne our backes in the ſpirituall fight, that ſo wee may auoide theſe horrible ſuggeſtions, and moſt inhumane impieties.

Now theſe his helliſh ſuggeſtions, are of two ſorts; firſt, ſuch as ſeeme to haue ſome ground in corrupted reaſon, for the ſuggeſting whereof hee oftentimes vſeth our ſinfull fleſh as his wicked inſtrument. And theſe ariſe ſometime from ouer great proſperitie, whereby men are not onely brought to forget and neglect the Lord; but euen like pampered horſes to kicke againſt their Maſter who hath ſo bountifully fed them: ſometimes from the grieuouſnes of afflictions, whereby men are moued to murmur againſt God, and to repine againſt his judgements: ſometimes from ſome offence vnjuſtly taken from Gods Word or Workes; as namely from the ſimplicitie of the Scriptures, the fooliſhneſſe of the Goſpell preached, the vnequall adminiſtration both of Gods benefits and puniſhments; from whence ariſe ſuch tentations as theſe; that there is no God, or if there bee, yet no particular prouidence; that hee hath not eyes to ſee all things, nor power to rule them; that he is not juſt in his judgements, but an accepter of perſons; that his Word is not true either in his promiſes or threatnings; that he maketh little account of vertue to reward it, or of ſin to puniſh it; neither yet hath prouided either a Heauen for the godly, or a Hell for the wicked: that let men take what courſe they will, yet in the end either all or none ſhall be ſaued, and a thouſand ſuch like.

§. Sect. 3. How we are to reſiſt the former kind of blaſphemous ſuggeſtions.

For the withſtanding of which tentations we are to take this courſe, firſt we are as ſoone as they are ſuggeſted to reject them as abominable, ſaying in our hearts, God forbid that I ſhould entertaine ſuch a blaſphemous conceit of the moſt mightie, wiſe, juſt and moſt gracious God of Heauen and Earth; eſpecially hauing no reaſon to perſwade mee hereunto but the falſe ſuggeſtion of the Deuill, who is a liar from the beginning, and by his lies ſeeketh my deſtruction, or the ſinfull imagination of mine owne corrupt fleſh blinded and miſlead with Satan, whoſe ſlaue it is. But if wee cannot be thus rid of theſe tentations, let vs flee vnto the Lord by earneſt Prayer, deſiring him to inlighten our minds with his Spirit, that we may cleerely diſcerne his truth, and the impious falſhood of Satans blaſphemous ſuggeſtions; and that he will incline and rule our hard hearts that wee may ſubmit our judgement to his truth, and reiect Satans damnable lies. And for as much as the Lord regardeth not the prayers of the idle, but of ſuch as vſe all good meanes to attaine vnto their deſires; wee muſt in the next place endeauour, to enrich our minds with ſuch a meaſure of knowledge, as may enable vs to anſwer all Satans cauils. To this end wee are diligently to ſtudie and meditate in the holy Scriptures, which are all-ſufficient to make vs wiſe vnto ſaluation, and ſufficiently skilfull to confute all Satans cunning ſophiſtrie. And if he impudently call this truth of God in queſtion, let vs ſeeke to confirme our faith in the full aſſurance thereof by all thoſe reaſons which I haue before alleadged. To theſe wee may adde thoſe arguments which haue their ground on the light of nature: for howſoeuer through our fall it bee much darkened and corrupted, yet the ſmall ſparkes which remaine doe ſufficiently diſcouer the palpable falſehood of Satans blaſphemies, and teach vs to conclude that there is a iuſt God who made heauen and earth, and to thinke reuerently of him who vpholdeth all things with his power and goodneſſe. With this light of nature we may alſo ioyne the light which we haue attained vnto by our owne experience, and out of the diligent obſeruation of Gods workes, and the adminiſtration of his mercies and iudgements, both in reſpect of others and eſpecially our ſelues, wee may eaſily be perſwaded not onely of Gods being, but alſo of his infinite wiſdome, power, iuſtice, mercy, truth, goodneſſe, al-ruling prouidence, and the reſt of the diuine attributes. Or if we be not able through our ignorance and ſimplicitie, or becauſe our minds are aſtoniſhed or diſtracted through the violence of Satans blaſphemous ſuggeſtiõs, to vſe the means before ſpoken of; then are wee to lay open our eſtate to ſome able friend, who may teach vs how to confute theſe tentations; and when we cannot find any eaſe by our owne meanes, we are to diſcouer our infirmities to the ſpirituall phyſitions of our ſoules, who may teach and apply vnto vs ſpeciall remedies for euery particular tentation, when our Lib.1.cap. 11.12.

our own weakneſſe will not ſuffer vs to take and vſe them. And in any caſe let vs take heed of that fooliſh baſhfulneſſe which maketh men to keepe the Deuils wicked counſailes to their perdition for feare of ſhaming themſelues by diſcouering of them, knowing that it is no ſhame to be ſubject to theſe tentations which are incident to Gods deareſt children, or though it were, yet it is better to indure ſuch a ſhame as ſhall be recompenced with a glorious conqueſt, than to be foyled by concealing theſe tentations, and ſo be in danger of eternal ſhame and confuſion at the day of Iudgement.
